It is true the Christian enjoys social life, but it is found on a different plane and sought by different rules. It is also quite true that the Spirit of the gospel often inspires earnest words, with full tone; but these always tend to increase intelligent thoughts of heavenly things, bringing our Lord Jesus Christ nearer and more vividly to view.

We do most earnestly desire that our Christian friends will contemplate these principles, and lay them to heart; and when you go to the coming campmeetings, flee from the sensational, and cling to the spiritual and holy, which alone will prepare us for the kingdom of God. J. C.

PROPHETIC TIME.

The reckless and rash dogmatism of speculating interpreters, who have evinced more zeal than wisdom, in computing the 2300 days, should not lead any to repudiate this mis-interpreted measurement of Heaven, nor to … church, only fit to be shunne… …urement is just as good now a… mistakes had ever been made conce… No truth should be abandoned, even if its mistaken friends may have abused it. Then why treat this God-given theme differently?

It has been foolishly argued that if this measurement was ever to be of service to the church, the inspired apostles would certainly have commented upon it. But this would militate against the revealed fact that this theme belongs to the "sealed" instruction given to the church, to be opened only in a specified chronological attitude, not reached in the apostles' days. Besides, it is not true that inspired men are inspired to understand all themes, instead of special themes, else one vision would be enough for one prophet for a life-time. Daniel was inspired on many themes, but not concerning the time of the captivity, for he "understood by books the number of years whereof the word of the Lord came unto Jeremiah the prophet that he would accomplish seventy years in the desolations of Jerusalem." Dan. 9: 1, 2. Different inspired men do not necessarily receive light on the same topic.

"Hope deferred maketh the heart sick"; but let all be careful about throwing away or perverting Heaven's reckoning. Light now begins to shine more clearly. W. S.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS.

BY R. W. TURNER.

To the Editor of the Crisis and your many Readers:—For several months I have been receiving the Crisis, which found its way to me through the agency of my esteemed Bro. Joseph Prichard, of Crockett, Texas, and I have been reading this paper with an increasing interest; and though a member of the Missionary Baptist Church, I am constrained to say that I find there are many new ideas which have presented themselves to my mind, and I have not only referred them to my own court of reason, but have compared them with God's own teachings, and I find the key fits the lock. I am constrained to believe th… …ough this key has been covered long … sand, yet it bears unquestionable … of having come from the same S… which has emanated all truth. … …iving really in a progressive age, i… …h new and astonishing facts are bein… …loped; and though these developm… …citing controversy, the most… …broad contradiction, seasoned w… …sion (which is the natural argument o… …hose who would oppose the truth), old … …d long-established titles, the lawful poss… …ion of which has not been questioned f… …r generations, are being dislodged, and truth is rearing her massive walls upon that ground upon which error has long and uninterruptedly flourished. Yes, mountains are falling, rivers are being turned, the great have suddenly become small, and the small have become great; and that power which the giant has failed to exert has been made manifest in the form of a child. The Lord is in it. The Lord hath wrought it.

The wheels of progress, which have hitherto been rolling in the long-established groove of popular sentiment, are now being transferred to the smelting furnace, to meet the demands of progress. Old implements, which, though they once bore the brands of X. L. C. R., are being put up at the world's sale, and sold at a nominal price; and it is only those who have no equipage that are the purchasers.

In conclusion I will add, that I consider that we have reached the sunset period of this world's history; the clock strikes five, and the last vessel of wrath is soon to be poured out upon the prosperity of this world; and though there may ring out voices of merriment, and peace and happiness may seem to have taken up their abode with the kings and princes of this world, yet soon, very soon, there will be heard the sad wails and lamentations—"Woe, woe is me, the day of my glory has departed."

A DARK OUTLOOK IN THE EAST.

The aspect of affairs in the East grows daily more troubled. The Albanian "insurrection" which has been fomented by the Turks, and strengthened both with men and arms by the connivance of the Constantinople authorities, has attained such proportions that Montenegro can secure no part of the territory allotted to her except by fighting for it as if for a fresh conquest. The Bulgarians are conspiring for the longed-for union with Eastern Roumelia, and the Bulgarian Assembly at a recent sitting voted a sum of money for Eastern Roumelia, which will be used for agitation and equipment. The Christian population of Armenia are regularly preyed upon by Kurdish brigands, for whose suppression no forces are available, and large sections of Asiatic Turkey are swept by famine, the disastrous results of which are concealed, as far as possible, by the Turkish authorities. The finances of the Empire are wrecked beyond recovery; its army is a mass of unpaid soldiery, many of whom have kept themselves alive only by beggary and plunder; and everywhere, on both sides of the Bosphorus, there is the same dreary spectacle of misgovernment and confusion, obstinacy and impotence. To these elements of disintegration there is now added the imminent probability of a war between Greece and Turkey. The boundary line suggested by the Berlin Supplementary Conference has been contemptuously rejected by the Turks, and the apathy long prevailing at Constantinople is broken by unmistakable preparations for war. Soldiers are being recruited, equipped and sent forw… to the Greek frontier with all the rapid… consistent with the shattered finances an… …moralized administration of the Empire, …or the famous non possumus policy … …te, which has been pretty persi… …ained since the first Berlin … …here is to be substituted a … and forcible resistance … …ntest, but if they are left … will make little headway … who even in their present … …ore than a match for them. There … alternatives open, in this emergency, … great Powers of Europe. They can w… and let things take their course, and … a while, when there have been mutual …cheries between the Greeks and Turks, the Montenegrins and Albanians, the Mussulmans and Christians, they can interfere to put a stop to them. Or by prompt, decisive and harmonious action they can avert the threatened strife and bloodshed and take the affairs of Turkey under their own administration. There are difficulties which are formidable enough, in either case, but the policy of immediate intervention is more dignified, more humane, and probably less costly than the other. It is not a question of intervention or no intervention, but of intervention now to avert the catastrophe, or by-and-by after the catastrophe has occurred. Granted that the dissolution of Turkey, and any scheme that can be suggested for its partition or administration, Europe face to face with dangerous problems arising from the conflicting aspirations of the Powers; these problems will not become less dangerous but more so by delay. All parties are agreed that Turkey will accept no advice, and will act on no suggestion that is not backed by a display of force. Mr. Goschen, the new British Ambassador at Constantinople, expresses the same opinion as Sir Henry Layard, his predecessor, that nothing whatever can be looked for from Turkey in obedience to the wishes of Europe, unless Europe is prepared to enforce its demands by arms. The whole course of Turkey since the Berlin Treaty, her shiftings and evasions, and her failure to surrender any territory or make any reforms, supports this view, and all European statesmen are agreed in holding it. If fresh scenes of massacre and bloodshed and outrage in Turkey and the adjacent countries are to be averted, it will be necessary for the Powers to make an immediate demonstration of force. The present indications are that nothing short of this can prevent a bloody and distressful war, the issues and extent of which are shrouded in doubt.—Boston Journal.

QUESTIONS.

1. What does Ezekiel mean (4: 5) by the three hundred and ninety days of the iniquity of the house of Israel, seeing they only lived from the revolt under Jeroboam to their captivity—two hundred and fifty-four years?

2. What does he also mean by the forty days (4: 6) of the iniquity of Judah?

3. What time is denoted by the seven times, which would be two thousand five hundred and twenty years? How are they reckoned?

Please answer and oblige one in search of truth. T. R. COMSTOCK.

BRO. G. W. KETCHUM, of Iowa, writes:—"Bro. Couch,—In regard to flesh and blood inheriting the kingdom of God, I would say, Taking Bro. Cunningham's line of proof, it is conclusive in respect to blood; but what that is which I should be pleased to have explained is relative to the flesh. The same is said of the flesh as of the blood. My view has always been that we do not inherit the kingdom through the goodness or worthiness of self, but through Christ."

Obituaries.

NEAL. In Winsted, Conn., June 14th, 1880, of catarrhal consumption, Bro. Ira T. Neal, aged seventy-one years.

The subject of this notice was originally a member of the Methodist Church in Burlington, where for some years he was engaged in the manufacture of clocks. He embraced the Advent doctrine in 1842, and ever after with unabating zeal he maintained that uniformity of Christian life and character that made him an ornament to the cause he espoused. In 1851 he removed to Winsted, where he continued in mechanical business with success. Becoming united with the interests of the Adventist body in this place, he labored incessantly for the maintenance of the gospel of Christ in their midst. Being a man of marked decision and rare energy, he never became discouraged at slight reverses, but, believing most unwaveringly in the promises of God, he ever labored to encourage the church to faithfulness and hope, in view of the fact that the conflicts of this life would soon terminate in a final triumph over all earthly foes, and the enjoyment of endless peace and fruition amid the unfading glories of an immortal life in the Paradise of God. His sufferings were such, at times, that he repeatedly requested his brethren to cease their prayers for his recovery (believing that they hindered his departure), and let him lie down in death and rest. And yet they could not give him up, but clung to him to the last, two of them watching with him alternately until the vital spark went out and he slept the sleep of death. Bro. Neal believed that his rest in the grave would be but brief, and that the coming of Christ was nearer than many were wont to believe. The deceased leaves a wife and two daughters, to mourn the loss of a kind husband and father, whose counsels will not soon be forgotten. May the grace of God sustain them in this hour of trial, and bring them to a happy reunion in the morning of the resurrection. An afflicted church and community deeply sympathize with them in their bereavement, but they sorrow not as those who have no hope. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from 1 Thess. 2: 19.

I. B. POTTER.

LIBBY. In South Hiram, Me., June 5th, 1880, of paralysis, Bro. Randall Libby, aged sixty-five years.

Death came suddenly and unexpectedly to our dear brother, but he has left a good evidence that … solation to his grief-stricken family and the sorrowing church in this hour of their bereavement. Stricken with paralysis, he lingered only about three days in an unconscious state, and then this life ceased. Bro. Libby was a firm believer in the great truths which constitute and distinguish us as a Christian people, and a leading member of our combined church of Freedom, Porter, and South Hiram. Having been reclaimed several years since from a backslidden state, he soon after followed Christ in baptism, together with his companion and others; and when our church was organized, he was among the first to become a member thereof, and as such he has proved a worthy and faithful brother in the Lord, whose words of cheer and counsel to us in our meetings, and admonition to the unsaved, have been of great benefit to all, as well as the liberal aid in other things given to promote the cause of Christ in our midst. May this deep affliction be blest of God to the good of the companion and children of the deceased, and finally they all meet in that land where no sadness or pain shall ever be known. C. H. HURD.

WEBB. In Upper Providence, Montgomery Co., Pa., June 21st, 1880, Bro. Robert L. Webb, in the fortieth year of his age.

Our dear brother sleeps in Jesus. His faith in God's Word was settled and fixed. He was an outspoken witness to the truth of man's mortality and utter dependence upon Jesus Christ for life eternal. For a number of years he loved the Lord, and finally fell asleep in the faith once delivered unto the saints. A few days prior to his decease he requested that the writer of this notice should preach his funeral sermon. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn his loss. We expect to meet our brother again in the kingdom of God. J. DAVISON.

HAYES. In New Durham, N. H., June 12th, 1880, of paralysis, Sister Hannah Hayes, wife of Wentworth Hayes, in her eighty-second year.

Our sister embraced the Saviour about 1842, and united with the Free-will Baptists, but for about thirty years she has been associated with those looking for the return of our blessed Lord. FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC NEWS.

Paris, July 7. A telegram from Ragusa reports that the Montenegrins are abandoning all their positions near Dulcigno and marching on Tusi and Podgoritza, which they intend to attack without delay. It is said they have resolved to gather the crops in the fields belonging to the Albanians as they advance.

London, July 8. A Pera dispatch says: "Great hesitation prevails in the counsels of the Porte in regard to its attitude in view of the Conference decision.

St. Petersburg, July 11. Orders have been received at Nicolaieff to prepare as soon as possible four of the best torpedo boats belonging to the Black Sea fleet, to be sent to the Pacific. Several vessels have been chartered in foreign ports for transport service. The iron-clad Peter-the-Great has left Reval for sea. The cruiser Europe has sailed for Cronstadt.

A dispatch from Constantinople reports a rupture in the relations between the Porte and Montenegro.

There was a semi-panic on the Berlin and Paris Bourses recently, owing to an uneasy feeling in regard to the attitude of the Porte.

Terrific boiler explosion, nine men killed and six wounded at Dunkirk, Ohio.

Thirty buildings were burned at Tyrone, Pa., recently; loss about $150,000.

A severe gale in Brownsville county, Virginia, July 6th, demolished several buildings and ruined a large crop of tobacco.

A careful estimate of the losses to the farmers in Illinois, occasioned by the breaking of the Mississippi levees, fixes the amount at half a million dollars.

A very severe rain storm, accompanied by a high wind, visited some portions of Iowa July 6th, doing a good deal of damage.

The invasion of the Indian Territory by white adventurers is assuming large proportions, and if an attempt is made by the United States authorities to drive off the squatters, a severe conflict will probably ensue.

In the district of Laubau, near Breslau, Prussia, fifty-six persons perished in the recent rain torrents.

NOTICE.

Boston, Concord and Montreal R. R. Tickets for Alton Bay via. Wiers good until Sept. 2nd. Round trip, two dollars and fifty cents ($2.50.) Anybody can have them by addressing me at Concord, N. H., and sending the above amount. Also those on the line of said road wanting to go before the regular tickets are issued, will have a return pass given them on the Camp-ground.

E. D. CLOUGH.

NOTICE.

All persons desirous of selling Bibles, books, pamphlets, tracts, papers, or taking subscriptions for same on Alton Bay Camp-ground at the coming Campmeeting, must first obtain permission of the Committee for the sale of such. Application should be made one week before the meeting commences. W. H. MITCHELL, Secretary.

NOTICE.—All persons who have tents upon the Alton Bay Camp-ground, and wish to rent them, will please write Joseph T. Langley, Pittsfield, N. H., and state to him their location, and the amount of rent they wish for them. Also all per[sons who] want to hire tents, will please write to [Bro. Lang]ley, and state to him how large and [what kind] of a tent they would like, and how [much they w]ant to pay for the same. Will those [illegible] attend to this at once and oblige.

[illegible Ca]mpmeeting will be held in Bis[illegible] Lawrence, Kansas, by order [of the Quarterly] Meeting Conference of the Dis[trict] [illegible] 7th to the 13th. This meeting is intended to be State and National. Less than one-half railroad fare is guaranteed. The ground contains a Tabernacle that will seat three thousand people, and one hundred small family tents, at moderate rent. Eld Miles Grant is expected to be with us, and other able ministers. Dear brethren and friends, rouse yourselves and come prepared to camp and stay. We hope to see a great gathering from Kansas and Missouri. This will be the most favorable time for those out of the State to visit us. By vote of the Quarterly Conference of the A. C. Church, E. Z. CHAPMAN. H. H. JOHNSON.

NOTICE.—The next session of the California A. C. Conference will be held in Vallejo, commencing Wednesday evening, July 14th. We trust the church will be prompt in the preparation for this meeting. The Master has appointed a work for all; then let us share it together. We expect delegates and members from all the churches on the coast. Let every one give their encouragement and prayers, that this meeting may be attended with special blessings. Come, brethren, from all parts of the State. The brethren of the church are anticipating a good meeting, and will do all they can to make it such.

A. J. YOUNG, Secretary.

NOTICE.—The Annual Quarterly Meeting of the Northwestern Evangelical District No. 2 of Kansas will be held with the A. C. Church at Palmer, Washington Co., Kansas, commencing on Thursday evening, August 12th. This is a meeting of vital importance—the election of officers and the selection of delegates to the State Conference. We want a full report from each church in the District, that we may have our full voice in the State Conference. A word to the wise is sufficient. T. R. COMSTOCK, Dist. Evangelist.

NOTICE.—The Gospel Tent will be pitched in Lynn, Mass., July 10th, in the grove opposite Bro. Asa Fogg's, near Jackson street, near the Eastern Railroad station, and near the Boston and Swampscott horse car railway. Those coming from Boston and vicinity, can come very near the grove by horse cars. Come, all lovers of [illegible] help rescue the perishing. Let us all [illegible] effort to convince men of the [illegible]bation, and the necessity of a [illegible] for the coming judgment. [illegible] H. S. Clark, and others, are ex[pected to be prese]nt to preach the Word.

[In] consequence of Elder Frank Burr [having resign]ed his pastoral charge over the Sec[ond Advent] Christian Church in Philadelphia, this [church is n]ow without a stated pastor. Any preach[er] wishing to preach for them must first correspond with James Davison, Secretary of Ministerial Committee, 1116 Spring Garden St., Philadelphia, Pa.

NOTICE.—Let the calls still come in for the Iowa Mission Tent, as I have not yet sold it. If I do not, I wish to have it used. Those desiring Tent Meetings please write soon. Address P. S. W. Deyo, Strawberry Point, Iowa.

NOTICE.—The Advent Christian Church at North Springfield, Vt., have engaged Eld. Geo. F. Earle to supply the pulpit for one year, to whom all correspondence should be addressed.

Committee—D. S. Dutton, F. A. Snell.

NOTICE.

The members of the Advent Christian Publication Society are hereby notified that there will be a meeting of the Society held at the Office of the World's Crisis, Tuesday, August 17th, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon. Let all members be present. H. K. CHOATE, President.

S. A. C. CONFERENCE OF MASS.

An adjourned meeting of this body will be held on Springfield Camp-ground on Wednesday, P. M., Aug. 11th, at 4 o'clock, to which time and place its Annual Meeting was adjourned.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE Second Advent Christian Association.

The Annual Meeting of the S. A. C. Association will be held in Chelsea, Mass., at the Heard Street Chapel, on Tuesday, August 17th, at two o'clock P. M. Delegates should be careful to bring proper credentials. A full attendance is desired. Notice has been given to the Secretary of an intention to change the Constitution of the Association. E. A. STOCKMAN, President. C. E. BARNES, Secretary.

NOTICE To Secretaries of Advent Christian Conferences.

The Secretary of the Second Advent Christian Association desires to call attention to the following facts:

First, the Constitution of the Association provides (Art. V.) that "Each Conference represented by delegates in this Association shall send, annually, by its first delegate, to the Secretary of this Association, a statement of the number of its churches, the number of their membership, and their location."

Second, this rule heretofore has been greatly disregarded, and I would respectfully urge upon Conference Secretaries the importance of providing their delegates with such a statement. The reason for it is obvious. Each Conference is entitled to one delegate, and an additional delegate for every three hundred members of the churches belonging to said Conference. In order that the Association may know that each Conference is rightly represented, it must have a list of the membership of each Conference. Some delegations always bring their proper certificate, while others do not. If the Secretaries will be so kind as to comply with the above quoted rule, they will expedite the business of the Association, and confer a favor upon

C. E. BARNES, Sec. of the S. A. C. A.

Campmeeting at Tremont, Mass.

The Second Advent Campmeeting at Tremont will be held as usual, commencing Monday, July 19th, and holding over the following Sabbath. All persons interested and desiring to be profited are cordially invited. Board and lodging provided for all who desire it. Fare from Fairhaven to Tremont and return, 50 cts. From Mattapoisett to Tremont and return, 30 cts. From Marion to Tremont and return, 20 cts. Tickets good to July 31st. Campmeeting tents, baggage, etc. (at the owner's risk) carried and returned free.

B. HITCHCOCK, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—The Wolfborough Campmeeting will commence August 14th, and hold over two Sundays, closing Monday, Aug. 23d. Particulars hereafter. JASPER STONE.

NOTICE.—The Dedication of the Olive Branch Church, Mich., will take place July 18th. Sister M. J. Janes will preach the sermon. An invitation is extended to all to attend. JAS. FERRISS.

NOTICE.—The Annual Meeting of the Piedmont A. C. Conference will be held at Mumpford's Cove, McDowell Co., North Carolina, beginning at 11 o'clock on Friday before the third Sunday in August next. The place is twelve miles southwest from Marion. The Conference was organized in August, 1879, and is intended for the cooperation of the friends of the Advent cause in the western counties of the State, and adjoining portions of South Carolina and Tennessee. We earnestly ask the churches to represent by full delegation, and all the friends who can to attend with a spirit of prayer and work. The success of the Advent cause here is truly encouraging, but there is great need for more and more efficient labor for the spread of truth and the salvation of those who are ready to perish.

G. D. SHERRILL, President.
J. J. HARSHAW, Clerk, Collettsville, No. Carolina.

NOTICE.—A Tent Meeting is to commence Thursday, July 15th, in the village of Wolcott, Wayne Co., N. Y., holding over two Sundays, and longer if thought best. M. R. MILES. B. P. STEVENS.

DISTRICT MEETING.—The District Meeting of the Hatley District will be held (D. V.) at "Way's Mills," P. Q., commencing Thursday evening, at 7 P. M., July 22nd, and holding over the Sabbath. Three services on Saturday, and A. M. and P. M. on the Sabbath. Our District Meetings are important. Let all ministers and laymen attend who can, or report by letter. Let united, fervent and believing prayer be offered to God for His blessing. Come to remain till the meetings close. Our brethren and others in the vicinity will entertain you. Do not fear.

C. P. DOW, President of Conference.
L. C. MCKINSTRY, Pres. of District.

NOTICE.—All letters for Elder E. A. Stockman should be sent to "Crisis" Office, 144 Hanover Street, Boston, till further notice.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass.—Meetings at Central Hall Sundays at 10 30 A. M. Sabbath School at 12 M. Preaching at 2.30 and 7.30 P. M. Service of song at 7 P. M. Prayer meetings Tuesday and Thursday evenings. H. A. KING, Pastor.

NOTICE.—The Second Advent Church in Danbury, N. H., have re-organized, and chosen Cyrus Nelson Elder, Cyrus Rowe first Deacon, S. F. Leavitt second Deacon, Moses S. Roby Secretary, Abel Ford Corresponding Committee.

MOSES S. ROBY.

NOTICE.—The Mission Tent of the Northwestern Evangelical District No. 2 of Kansas is now in the field. Any one wishing our services and the Tent will please address me at Burr Oak, Jewell Co., Kansas, care of W. P. Kelch.

T. R. COMSTOCK.

Special Notice.

Any of the Preaching Brethren desiring to send appointments to Lynn, Mass., will please correspond with the following Committee before sending their appointments: Geo. W. Sederquest, H. Q. Staples, J. G. Burnham.

NOTICE.—The Maine Conference have appointed me as their Tract and Mission Agent. All who want my labors in new places can write to me at Bowdoinham, Maine, Box 103. All who have pledged money will please send it, as soon as convenient, to H. G. Smiley, of Augusta, Me., Treasurer.

H. S. MITCHELL, Tract and Mission Agent.

NOTICE.—I will preach in Ashland, Michigan, once in four weeks. Also in Bangor once in two weeks. This leaves one Sunday in each four weeks for missionary work. Let those wishing help take notice. Address me at Muskegan, Mich., Box 581. M. J. JANES.

NOTICE.—All ministering brethren wishing to preach in either of the two places—Friendship, Me., and Monhegan Islands, are requested to correspond with the Pastor of the two named places.

HORACE M. YORK, Pastor.

ANY church wishing my services for one or more Sabbaths, please address me at Scitico, Ct.

BENJ. FINNEY.

Appointments.

☞ Appointments must be received as early as TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon), to insure insertion for the coming week.

Resolved, That no appointments be published in the "Crisis" henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given.

Resolved, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister or ministers of the information received, as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquital.

☞ All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—OZIAS GOODRICH, Boston, Mass.

THE TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, held at its rooms, 144 Hanover Street, Boston, on the 5th of September, 1876, it was voted that the Society make diligent effort to raise the sum of TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund. This is one of the most important departments of our field of labor, and the Society intend to make more earnest efforts than ever before to publish the soul-stirring message of Christ's speedy second advent, and the precious truths connected therewith. To this end the Society solicits the aid of its friends and sympathizers, and hopes that donations to this object may be prompt, liberal and hearty.

C. E. BARNES, Sec. Adv. Chris. Pub. Soc.

☞ Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, OZIAS GOODRICH, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the "Crisis" Office.

A SERMON IN RHYME.

If you have a friend worth loving,
Love him; yes, and let him know
That you love him, ere life's evening
Tinge his brow with sunset glow.
Why should good words ne'er be said
Of a friend until he's dead?

If you hear a song that thrills you,
[illegible] by any child of song,
[illegible] it; do not let the singer
[illegible] deserved praises long.
[illegible] one who thrills your heart,
[illegible] you may impart?

[illegible] prayer that moves you
[illegible], pleading tone,
[illegible] let the seeker
[illegible] God alone.
[illegible] your brother share
[illegible] "two or three" in prayer?

[illegible] tears falling
[illegible] brother's eyes,
Share them; [illegible], by sharing,
Own your kinship with the skies.
Why should any one be glad
When a brother's heart is sad?

If a silvery laugh goes rippling
Through the sunshine on his face,
Share it; 'tis the wise man's saying—
For both grief and joy a place.
There's health and goodness in the mirth
In which an honest laugh has birth.

If your work is made more easy
By a friendly, helping hand,
Say so; speak out brave and truly
Ere the darkness vail the land.
Should a brother workman dear
Falter for a word of cheer?

Scatter thus your seeds of kindness,
All enriching as you go;
Leave them. Trust the Harvest-Giver,
He will make each seed to grow.
So, until its happy end,
Your life shall never lack a friend.

FROM ALABAMA AND TENNESSEE.

TO THE A. A. MISSION SOCIETY.

Dear Brethren:—As I was unable to ride twenty miles to my appointment to-day (June 13th), I will improve the time by writing a brief report of my labor in the vineyard since my partial recovery from my late illness.

As soon as I was able to travel, I started for Ooltewah, Tenn., and tried to preach the fourth Sunday in April. A Methodist minister very kindly preached on Saturday, and on Sunday, there being no one to relieve me, I spoke one hour, which caused great pain in my head. On Wednesday night following, in McMahan's Cove, not feeling strong enough to stand, I sat in my chair and spoke to the people, who seemed very glad to see me able to be out among them once more. The first Sunday in May, at my home church, I met my neighbors for the first time in three months, and preached to them as long as I was able to stand. Then received one member.

On Friday before the second Sunday I was too sick to rise from my bed till nine o'clock, and then went twenty miles to meeting at Shilo. I saddled my horse and started without any money to pay my ferriage across the Tennessee river. When I mounted I felt impressed to go round the farms, making about one mile farther than the usual route. On my way, just at the corner of the farm, I met a wicked man, who, without knowing my circumstances, handed me a dollar. I told him how the Lord had led me that route just to meet him, and get money for my ferriage. I then gave him a brief exhortation to trust in the God that I try to serve, and rode on. I crossed the river, ascended Sand mountain, and by five o'clock had gone within four miles of the church without tasting food that day. I stopped at the house of a good Baptist family who had heard I was dead. I was so weak and tired I could scarcely dismount. I went into the house and laid down and slept sweetly until supper was prepared, when I was awakened and ate something, which refreshed me much. That night I slept but little. Next morning went to the church, and was glad to find Bro. J. J. Cor[illegible] pre[illegible] for me. At night he [illegible] house, and [illegible] sleep. [illegible] church, [illegible] "Men's hea[rts] [illegible] for looking [illegible] things which are coming on the [illegible] because; on a[illegible]

On [illegible] Sunday in [illegible] I went to [illegible] Switch, to preach the [fu]neral sermon of two children of Bro. B. Tower, who has recently moved into the community. I stopped with Bro. Tower and preached in his house on Saturday night. The people gave good attention to the man about whom so much had been reported.

Sunday morning a large crowd gathered in a pleasant cedar grove to hear the funeral sermon. I spoke one hour and thirty minutes, and the people listened to the strange things concerning the sleep of the dead and the hope of the resurrection with the best attention. I had my valise as full of tracts as it could hold, and they were all [illegible] and [illegible] could [illegible] as [illegible]. My head pained [illegible] so much [illegible] during the afternoon. At [night] the house and hall of Bro. Tower's dwelling was full of eager listeners to hear me on the transfiguration. They seemed so interested, and I was so filled with the blessed scene, that I forgot that I had been sick, and preached till I could talk no more. At the close [illegible] invited me home with them, but I was [illegible] exhausted and immediately retired. The people there, in what is called Cany Cove, are a set of industrious, kind-hearted farmers. I shall long remember the pleasant meetings and the kind invitations to return. Bro. Tower gave me [illegible] for my ticket, which I had [illegible] rep[illegible] [illegible]ngs, but Bethel, I enjoyed [illegible] some [illegible] saints around the [illegible] they [illegible] o'clock at Ewing's [illegible] present. Two Baptist preach[ers] [illegible] of. A. [illegible] with an attentive crowd. [illegible] in May, in Doran's Cove, [illegible] the close, some who had [illegible] for years publicly invited [illegible] Sunday in June, at [illegible] church, I had a heavy heart on account of some church [illegible]; but God helped me to preach [illegible] And so it goes, nothing but labor, toil, pain and privation, with here and there a blessing to cheer us on our way to the kingdom. Many have kindly admonished me to stop working and take a long rest. This would indeed be pleasant, but this is the world for work. The resting-time is soon coming. Praise the Lord.

I am now engaged to take the census in my township, six miles square, but I always stop for meetings. I hope in this way to make a few dollars for my wife and children. I have done but one day's labor since I was taken sick in January, and I feel it duty to do what I can to gain a little for food and raiment, with which to be content. Pray for me and mine, that we may be brought through all our trials into the kingdom at last.

RELIGION AND POLITICS.
SHOULD THEY MINGLE?

BY A. T. GORHAM.

Once in every four years this great republic has a universal cleaning-day, as it were, Political mops and brooms are flourished vigorously, and a great amount of political dust kicked up. Old office tenants are ejected—new ones move in, and faction and froth rule the hour. Now, as Christians, and particularly Adventists, expecting the speedy coming of the Lord, have we any right to participate in these stirring events? Some say, yea; some nay, and act accordingly.

The main objection seems to be that if we mingle with these scenes, we get mentally excited, wrought up, and perhaps lose our temper, and with it more or less grace and Christian spirit. This plea is good in some points, but weak in others. Personally, I think I have the right to ballot for my rulers, always provided I perform that act like everything else, to the glory of God. He gives me a home and a country, and it is my duty to try to preserve it—peacefully, mark you—as long as compatible with the Divine will. I am not to squabble with my opponents on street corners, shout myself hoarse in torch-light processions, or dance like a wild aborigine around blazing tar-barrels. My duty is to march quietly to the polls, deposit my ballot, keep my mouth shut, and go home. My religion makes this a duty to my country and my fellow-men; others might see differently. We are to live up to our light. If I am wrong, I desire very much to be righted.

But, if a brother feels that he has no lot nor part in the matter—if he feels that he would commit sin, and thereby lose Christian enjoyment by participating in the choice of the men that are to rule over him, why let that brother avoid the temptation. God works His will through earthly instruments; such as are best fitted to accomplish that will He allows to be chosen. The lines were mapped out from the beginning, and they reach, sans break or interruption to the end.

I wish that some of our able writers would give their views expression in this matter. Perhaps Bro. Couch could treat it editorially. The subject is one of importance just now, and no doubt many would like to hear the pros and cons. As I said before, if I am wrong, I desire to be set aright.

"HOW TO INCREASE A CONGREGATION."

Bro. Couch:—The following article from the "Illustrated Christian Weekly," of Feb. 22d, 1879, is so full of truth and may be of benefit to some of our readers of the Crisis. I send it for publication with your approval. God help us to be faithful over a few things. Amen.

GEO. A. STREETER.

"About this time," as the old almanacs used to say, you may look for the annual meetings of church-committees, consistories and sessions, anxiously debating how to increase the congregation. Perhaps the funds are low, or the success of a neighbor excites to friendly rivalry, or the spirit of aggression has taken hold of the people, and an earnest desire is felt to fulfil the responsibility towards the community in which the church is placed. But somehow this question periodically presents itself.

And various are the expedients for reaching the desired result. "Popular" preaching, if not something worse, attractive music, an elegant edifice, and other such inducements, may collect and retain a crowd. On [the] other hand, it has been said that the [illegible] way is to have a revival; that when [illegible] descended on the day of Pentecost, [illegible] came together," and that the [illegible] now work the same effect. [illegible] meaning to question the truth [illegible] this view of the subject, we [illegible] thought it might be advan[tageous to sta]te it in a more definite and [illegible]. The surest way for a church [to have a l]arger congregation is to be faith[ful to t]he one it has, however small. Some persons—a mere handful, perhaps—who are impenitent, are yet disposed to visit the place where the church meets for worship. Here now is an opportunity, not for the minister alone, nor for him in special partnership with the office-bearers, but for the church as a whole, and in every one of its members to do good. So also strangers should be welcomed, and in every department of church work there should be opportunity for the exercise of [illegible]. Charles Wesley is reported [illegible] to have revealed the secret of the success of the early Methodist churches in the expression, "All at it and always at it." Just so, if every church, without envy of its neighbors, would sit down to the faithful cultivation of the field it has, that field will speedily be enlarged.

A readiness to do some great thing is not peculiar to Naaman the Syrian. It is intensely American. There are many ministers and many churches that can never find a place large enough to do their duty. They must needs strain after great changes, and their works must utter themselves by a loud report. The hurtfulness of mistakes here is of course very great. Trying always to do great things, to have extraordinary occasions every day, or to produce extraordinary results at once, when small ones and ordinary ones are quite as much needed, ends in defeat and dissipation.

Right in the line of our thought, how many ministers and churches have learned to their sorrow that a crowd is not a congregation. It seems a grand success for the spiritual force of the church, and when the excitement is over, or the attraction withdrawn, or the novelty has become stale, the crowd scatters. After all, they were not drawn to the church, and they have no special [illegible] for the [illegible], and the body is left weaker than ever. A crowd is not a congregation. Many of our churches have yet to learn that lesson.

And returning to our first thought, how often are we taught that the servant who is faithful over a few things will be made ruler over many things. A church that does its duty faithfully, prayerfully, earnestly, perseveringly, to a small congregation, may reckon on drawing a larger one. But if the members conclude that these persons, once drawn within the walls of the sanctuary, are sufficiently cared for, and that the minister must do the rest; if they think that a few vague and general prayers for the salvation of sinners generally, for a "blessing on the word preached," for "the building up of the church in numbers as well as in graces," and such like exhaust their duty and privilege of prayer, they will have no reason to wonder if they continue to have a small congregation. They do not exhibit a fitness to be intrusted with a larger one. The more souls that come under so equivocal an influence, the more are placed in danger of perdition. This is strong language, and we should hesitate to use it except in a hypothetical case. Such a church being supposed, can less be said with truth? But the question is, Are there such churches? He who walks among the golden candlesticks can alone decide.

John Brown, of Haddington, said to a young minister who complained of the smallness of his congregation: "It is as large a one as you will want to give account for in the day of judgment." The admonition is appropriate, and not to ministers alone.

A FEW WORDS TO TOBACCO-USING CHRISTIANS.

In this I do not wish to rebuke, but rather entreat. But if the words which I quote from Scripture rebuke you, its the Lord's work; and is it not better to regard Bible reproof in time to turn from an evil, than to continue in it, and be judged accordingly? Solomon says, "He that regardeth reproof is prudent. You may think I am taking strong ground. Well, all I ask is that you bear with me, and carefully consider the subject.

In the first place I will notice a few objections, and what you may term excuses. You say the Bible does not directly forbid its use. Before we get through we will see how it stands in the light of the Bible. It seems almost superfluous to prove that it is not consistent for a Christian to use tobacco; but we know how tenaciously tobacco-users cling to the weed. I have no doubt it is hard to give it up. This I think is the great and only real reason why they continue in its use; for how many, think you, would take up the habit after conversion, had it not been formed before? Would they undertake to argue that it is "no harm," or would they claim that the virtue which some say it has to protect against disease is sufficient to justify them in forming the habit, which is a disease in itself? The strength of the few last remarks rests on the supposition that few acquire the habit after conversion unless they become backslidden in heart.

Of course the Bible does not directly mention tobacco, but there is Scripture in abundance that will exclude the use of it. "Abstain from all appearance of evil. 1 Thess. 5: 22. Now in the light of this, if tobacco has any appearance of evil, we should abstain from it. Can tobacco-using Christians conscientiously take their smoking or chewing materials, or both, lay them on the table, and ask God's blessing upon them, believing that God will sanctify them to their good?

Can they use it in the light of the following Scriptures. "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." 1 Cor. 10: 31. "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh." 2 Cor. 7: 1. "Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness." James 1: 21. "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." James 1: 27. Is not the use of tobacco a spot from the world?

In this I have not considered the point of economy. Those who use tobacco know best themselves how much it costs. I have just touched briefly on a few points. There is a great deal to be said against tobacco, while but very little, if anything with a foundation, can be said in its favor.

REPORT OF CONFERENCE.

The fourth Quarterly Conference of the Winona District, Minn., commenced at the Vowels school-house, near Utica, Friday evening, May 14th. Ministers present—Elds. C. Mitson and P. Ramer, and Sisters H. M. Ramer and Ruth M. Rowell.

Conference convened in due order, the President in the chair. Reports of the Winona, Viola and Utica churches received. Proceeded to the election of officers. Elder P. Mitson was elected President for this District, a[illegible].

It was requested by friends [illegible] section that the next Quarterly Conference be held with the Viola church.

During this meeting Eld. Mitson baptized three young ladies, daughters of Des. Tabbots of this place. They started to serve God more than a year ago, and have lived their religion, turning not to the right hand or left, but giving evidence to all that they had been with Jesus, and were living devoted, consecrated lives. It was a beautiful sight to see them go down into the water following in the footsteps of their blessed Saviour, and thus publicly putting the seal to their profession of faith. After being thus buried with Christ in baptism, as they rose up from their watery burial, it brought most vividly to my mind the words of the poet—

"And when all dripping from that flood
She rose like lily's stem,
Methought that spotless brow might wear
An angel's diadem."

"Blessed are they that do His commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

Meeting closed Sunday evening with deep feeling, after an earnest and heartfelt discourse by Eld. Mitson.

RUTH M. ROWELL, Secretary.

THAT is not the best sermon which makes the hearers go away talking to one another, and praising the speaker; but that which makes them go away thoughtful and serious, and hastening to be alone.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From Sr. L. Case.

Bro. Couch:—According to appointment, Bro. Grant began meetings in Belvidere, Ill., April 18th, continuing them six weeks, using his chart to prove the Bible to be a divinely inspired book, both prophecy and history agreeing perfectly, showing the prophecies to have been mostly fulfilled, and that we are right in the time of the end, near the second coming of Christ. It seemed that every candid person must have been convinced that these things are so. Quite a number are, who are so fully baptized with the Holy Spirit, that they are willing to stand up for the truth in the face of all opposition; others see it who are not willing to acknowledge it, for fear of losing reputation. May God pity such. As for the practical part, it was very evident it was not the intention "to heal the hurt of this people slightly, crying, Peace, peace, when there is no peace"; but to declare the "whole counsel of God"; to hew to the line, regardless of who were hit. The result is, pure and undefiled religion is being revived among us. We have a band of Christian workers organized, who are alive to God, standing up for Jesus on all pr[oper] occasions. Give us your prayers th[at we] may grow up into Christ our livin[g head,] get ourselves and others ready to [meet th]e Bridegroom in peace, and be pr[esented] faultless before the throne.

The week our meetings closed, one of our orthodox minist[ers] [no]ticed in our papers that the next [Sunday he] would preach on the Immortality [of th]e Soul, in reply to Eld. Grant's teachin[g]—No Immortality out of Christ. Of course we were especially invited, and we accepted. We were surprised when the text was announced as being 2 Tim. 1st chap., last clause of the 10th verse—"Who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." This is one of our strong texts to prove we are mortal. He also quoted Job 32: 8—"But there is a spirit in man; and the Inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding." Not another word of Scripture was used. The strong point was, that the instinct in us which longed after God, was conclusive evidence that we are immortal.

These things are in our favor, causing thinking men to look into the subject. The more these points are agitated, the more will they be examined; and an influence has started from these meetings which will go on till Jesus comes. The little leaven will work. The seed sown is germinating, and will spring up. It is not all lost. The fallow ground of some hearts is broken up.

Ours is a hard field to cultivate; so many stumbling-blocks; so much sham religion; so much hypocrisy, making such a host of infidels. The dividing line between the church and world is torn down. But a few are hunting for the old land-marks. Will there ever be a time when the Word will take effect as formerly? Only a few years ago such powerful preaching would have caused sinners to cry for mercy, and tremble like Belshazzar when he saw the hand-writing on the wall. Can there be much more done than to strengthen the things that remain, and help the bride to get ready? Some ministers in our place are telling us that the world is growing better. But we fail to see it.

Belvidere, Ill.

From Bro. W. McBroom.

To the Editor and Readers of the Crisis, Greeting:—I write to tell you of my labors, and the prosperity of the cause of truth in these parts. April 8th I visited the church at Rockbridge, Hocking Co., and labored with them for two weeks. Found the church holding her ground, and some of them desiring the Lord's return. I baptized one believer while there, and took in one member. On the 23rd of April I went to the Rodman settlement, near the county seat. Here I spoke four times, baptized four, and organized a little church. There is a good prospect for more to be added to their numbers soon. The truth has taken deep root in this place. Since that time I have visited the church at Fort Washington, Tuscarawas county. Think this a good field for labor.

Held a discussion with I. W. Shreves, an Independent Lutheran. Had a large attendance and a good interest, and the debate resulted in good for the truth. Propositions: First, "Do the Scriptures teach that man is mortal and unconscious from death until the resurrection"? Second, Do the Scriptures teach that the wicked will be burned up, root and branch? I affirmed both. After the debate I buried nine in the liquid grave, in likeness of Christ's death, and raised them up to walk in newness of life.

At my next appointment four more have asked me to baptize them, and there are scores of others w[ho] believe the truth, while some oppose [i]t. The Lord is for us. My way has alwa[ys bee]n to be kind to all, to speak th[e truth in lov]e, but kindly, and the Lord [has bless]ed [and] given us the victory [illegible] we may handle the [illegible] meekness and fear, [illegible] [Lo]rd's return with joy.

[illegible]

From [illegible]tt.

Dea[r] [illegible]—[illegible] have felt for some time [illegible] can [illegible] to say a few words [illegible], and [illegible] brethren and sisters [illegible] I have been thinking what a change there has been among us since '43–4. God called us out to be a separate people, and to wait for His Son from heaven. The Lord was with us in power. We believed what we professed and lived it out before the world. We were a humble people. We gave all for Christ. We were known by our works and by our dress. We laid aside our jewelry. We could not wear it because it was not according to God's Word. Women adorned themselves in modest apparel, with shame-facedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array. We did not want the honors of the world, nor instrumental music in our houses of worship, nor towers, nor bells. We were humble as they were then, there would be a different state of things in the church. But because iniquity abounds the love of many waxes cold. The power of God is not in the church as it used to be. It has grown up into pride till it has utterly been our ruin. We have become like Samson when shorn of his locks; lost our strength. No wonder we are weak in faith. We are mixing up with the world. Some are joining secret societies. It seems that their trust is not in God as it used to be. It is a sad state of things every where. I often think of what Bro. Couch said on the camp-ground. He said the time would come when the church would cry mightily for deliverance. I believe it. Some have got tired of the way, and gone back where they came from; others are crying out for union.

I do not want to go back with the enemies of our faith. I can unite only with those that love the appearing of Christ. I expect He will soon come and take His weary bride home. O ye proud ones, what will you do in that day? It will surely come. The appointed hour makes haste. May we be ready to go in to the marriage supper of the Lamb. O ye tried and tempted ones, ye sick ones, who have been on beds of languishing and suffering for years, take courage. Death that has laid his icy hand upon our loved ones, and taken them from us, is soon to be destroyed. Only a little time and He that is to come will come, and will not tarry. Blessed thought! May we be able to say in that day, Lo, this is our God.

Dover, N. H.

From Sr. A. C. Spear.

My Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—By permission of Bro. Couch I would like to say a few words through our much loved Crisis. I have studied its pages for twenty-five years, and am not tired of its teachings, for it has helped me in the first place out of Giant Despair Castle, and has by the blessing of God unlocked the truths of God's Word to my understanding, which has enabled me to be settled in the hope of the gospel, and though separated from those with whom I used to meet, I still wish to be numbered with and remembered by all my tried and tempted brothers and sisters in Christ.

It is almost two years since I heard a sermon, only what I read in the Crisis, but I can truly say the Lord is my Shepherd and Teacher. I am trying daily to walk with God, and be pure and holy, for no others can enter the kingdom. I am glad to know the blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin. May we all who profess to love Jesus, be faithful, and never give over until we meet in that blessed land where parting will be no more. Oh, I long to be with the redeemed host. I shall never be satisfied until I awake in Christ's likeness. Yours in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

From Bro. J. H. Strong.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—I have often felt greatly impressed to write my experience for the benefit of others through our much loved Crisis. I was converted in Hebron, N. Y., under the labors of Dr. Mathewson, and I believe I had the witness of the Spirit that I was adopted into the family of God. Soon after I came West. Little by little I began to lose my hold on Christ, until I was completely backslidden. If I could get up an argument with some one I was then in my element. I would go to the M. E. Church, and there present my views, not having them seasoned with grace, which brought discord in their church. I soon saw that I was lost, was without hope in the world. I longed for something I did not have. I had a name to live, but was dead. O the agony of soul that I suffered, for I saw that without holiness no man should see the Lord. I got in earnest for full salvation, but I found I must lay down these weapons of war, crucify the lusts of the flesh, and put on Christ. I sought until I found perfect peace with God. O the fulness there is in Christ!

My brethren and sisters, let us examine ourselves, and see if we are not wanting in the great essential to our salvation, which is true holiness unto God. Let us seek a fresh baptism of the Holy Ghost, so that we can have more power with God, and lead sinners to Christ. The great trouble with the church is, we have a name to live, but are dead. We are looking for our preachers to do that which we ought to do ourselves. We want less theory and more Holy Ghost religion. May God help us to get on the whole Christian armor. If we have not got this fulness, let us get it now. Nothing else will save us. God will not look upon sin with any degree of allowance. We must be holy. May God save us now, is the prayer of one that has been washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb, and is looking for the glorious appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ.

From Sr. O. A. Lanfair.

Dear Friends and Readers of the Crisis:—After thinking of it a long time, I have made up mind to say a few words for the cause of Christ and to comfort the dear children of God. Many a time I have thought I would like to write a few words for this paper, although I am a stranger to you all, and never have taken the paper; but I have read it, and it comforts my heart. I feel to thank the Lord for it and for the blessed truths that are in it. I am a strong believer in the soon coming of our Saviour, am trying to do His will, and mean to be found waiting and watching for Him when He comes, by His grace helping me. I experienced religion about two years ago, and found peace with God. I have found Jesus a dear friend. I have had earthly friends and earthly comforts, but never found a friend so faithful and true, one that never would leave nor forsake me until I found Jesus, or until Jesus found me.

"I was lost, but Jesus found me;
Taught my heart to seek His face;
From the dark and lonely desert,
Brought me to a fold of grace."

O that men would praise God every where, for His wonderful works to the children of men. I praise God for what He has done for me. How gladly I accepted Christ as my Saviour, not boastingly, but thankfully, for I felt utterly friendless.

I was converted under Bro. Kingsley's preaching. Often I ask God to bless and prepare him for the kingdom, for I want to meet him there and all the dear ones. I do, and I love to think of the time when we shall meet to part no more. I would ask the prayers of all godly children, that I may be faithful to the end. I have many trials and afflictions to pass through, and have to fight hard to keep the faith. Many times the way seems dark as He leads me along, but following Jesus I cannot go wrong.

QUARTERLY MEETING REPORT.

The Quarterly Meeting of the Advent Christian Churches of Sanilac Co., Mich., held with the Lexington church, commencing June 18th and holding over Sunday, is among the things over which we have sweet reflections. Never in our Christian experience did we enjoy so good and blessed a gathering. The number present was quite large from the first, the different points being well represented; and the dear Lord smiled on us by giving us beautiful weather. The only minister present was W. M. Brown, who has come among us and gone to work, we believe, in answer to prayer.

Friday evening preaching on the thousand years of Revelation 20, showing it to be in the past. Saturday morning, Bible class and social meeting; a good time. In the afternoon, preaching; continuation of previous subject. In the evening there was preaching from Matt. 32: 33, showing that the Jewish nation cannot be restored. Sunday morning, from 9½ to 10½, love feast, about one hundred participating. It was a heavenly feast. At 10½ preaching from Col. 3: 2–4. Subject—Eternal life. It was an able discourse. In the afternoon we had preaching from Isaiah 8: 13, 14,—the two houses of Israel; the gathering of the second house the work of the gospel.

The reports from the different points was cheering; all keeping up prayer meetings.

It was voted to hold the next Quarterly Meeting with Port Sanilac church. From seventy-five to one hundred gathered at the table to partake of the emblems of the dear Lord's broken body and spilled blood. It was a heart-searching time. We sang, "Will Jesus find us watching?" We parted with tears. It may be the last meeting till Jesus comes. O may we be kept by the power of God unto salvation, ready to be revealed at the last time.

OLIVER YAKE, Secretary.

FEAR NOT, LITTLE FLOCK.

Fear not, little flock,
For the Shepherd is by,
The wolf cannot hurt,
For the sheep-fold is nigh.

The Lord knows his own,
And the sheep hear his voice,
Fear not, little flock,
But the rather rejoice.

No foe can destroy,
And the thief cannot steal,
For the Shepherd is by,
His own love to reveal.

BY FAITH WE SEE THE KINGDOM.

BY DANIEL ROWE.

"These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication."—ACTS 1: 14.

Here and there in this neighborhood are scattered a few Adventists, as true and firm as any in the land. Without exception they are worthy citizens, and command the respect and esteem of their neighbors. Still, some of them have had to contend manfully against the ridicule and prejudice of former associates. Coming out as some of them did from the churches, they found themselves "in hot water," and they have been followed with cutting oppression. But, thank God, they stood on the Rock of true faith, and they have not been moved one jot or tittle.

When the writer came to this place, the people were nearly all strangers to him; and when he found there were a few here of "like precious faith," you may rest assured he was pleased. It does not take an Adventist long to find out an Adventist, and after the lapse of three months we find ourselves pretty well acquainted with nearly all for miles around. Social prayer-meetings have been established, and all intend to "fight it out on this line" until the Master comes. This afternoon (the last Sunday in June) we have had an excellent meeting. There were twenty-three present, not counting Him who is "mighty to save." We trust good was done.

Brothers and sisters in Christ, the Adventists in this section are full of hope. They have got their lamps trimmed and burning, with faith for oil, and soon with you they expect to hear the voice of the Bridegroom calling them to the bridal chamber. God grant we may all be ready. Pray for us.

Chase's Mills, Me.

HOLINESS.

Holiness is symmetrical. It cannot be fragmentary—it cannot be partial. When Paul preached holiness, he reasoned first, of righteousness; secondly, of temperance; and thirdly, of judgment to come. Holiness comprehends the full, round complement of Bible truth, in experience and practice. It is not one-sided, it is not partial; it is "all the counsel of God." It is not going out of the world, and yet, it is separation from the world. It is having one will with God's will, leaning steadfastly on His promises for strength, and obediently walking in His statutes. It is making the Word of God the only rule of life. When God talks repentance, the saved one talks repentance also, and what God says, he says. If repentance comes into disrepute, or men should be perishing for the lack of it, the saved one would testify loudly and persistently of repentance. As God's witness and mouth-piece he must do this. Holiness in the life gives especial prominence to the doctrine of entire sanctification now, because the churches so largely reject it. If they were to reject justification by faith or temperance or future punishment, holiness must then speak out and give no uncertain sound. It is the advocate of Bible truth in doctrine, morals, experience, and life. It is not contained in creeds, it is not bound by creeds; and, while it does not repudiate creeds, it rests solely on the Word of God.—Good Way.

FATE OF THE APOSTLES.

All the apostles were assaulted by the enemies of the Master. They were called to seal their doctrines with their blood, and nobly did they bear the trial. Tradition says:

Matthew suffered martyrdom by being slain with the sword, at the distant city of Ethiopia.

Mark expired at Alexandria, after having been cruelly dragged through the streets of that city.

Luke was hung upon an olive tree, in the classic land of Greece.

John was put into a caldron of boiling oil, but escaped death in a miraculous manner, and was afterwards banished to Patmos.

Peter was crucified at Rome, with his head downward.

James, the greater, was beheaded at Jerusalem.

Philip was hanged up against a pillar, at Hierapolis, in Phrygia.

James, the less, was thrown from a lofty pinnacle of the temple, and then beat to death with a fuller's club.

Bartholomew was flayed alive.

Andrew was bound to the cross, where he preached to his persecutors until he died.

Thomas was run through the body with a lance, in the East Indies.

Jude was shot to death with ar[rows].

Matthias was first stoned, a[nd then be]headed.

Barnabas, of the Gentiles, [was stoned to] death by the Jews, at Salon[ica].

Paul, after various tortu[res and persecu]tions, was at length be[headed at Rome by] the Emperor Nero.

Simon Zelotes was [illegible].

HOUSEHOLD [illegible]

How beautiful is the religious household. Parents and children all drink into the one Spirit, love and harmony reign throughout the family circle, and prayers and praises ascend to heaven day by day from old and young. What a hallowed spot! God looks down from His lofty throne with a smile of approbation, and witnesses by His Spirit that He is well pleased. The Lord Jesus dwells with the happy group, and whispers to every heart the sweet assurance that He loves them. Angels visit and hover around the abode, and are delighted with the beautiful scene; and strangers coming in admire the unity of hearts, the simplicity and gentleness of manners, and the depth of devotion to each other and to God, which prevail in this blessed household.

We inquire how this was brought about, and we learn that in the first place, all have been engrafted into Christ by living faith, in the waters of baptism; so that now God owns them as his sons and daughters, Christ claims them as the precious purchase of His blood, and the Holy Spirit is given to enlighten their minds and to sanctify their hearts. We further learn that the rules of family government which God instituted are put in practice. The father acts in his position as the head of the household, and under him, and in perfect harmony with him, the wife acts in her position as helper; and both constitute the rulers in this little kingdom. The children also do their part as loyal subjects; the older setting an example to the younger, by prompt and cheerful obedience to the parents' wishes; and thus help to maintain the order which has been established in this realm of parental and filial love.

What a school of discipline, where authority is exercised in wisdom and godly fear, where every unholy principle is checked, and where subjection is yielded, and duty performed as to the Lord. What a nursery of truth and integrity, unselfishness and virtue. Together they live, and love, and labor in the blessed hope of soon being together eternally in the Paradise of God, where they shall re-unite with the loved ones who, perchance, now sleep in Jesus. Pray on, praise on, work on, ye households of Zion! Bar Satan from your dwellings, and ever lodge the Lord of glory! Be faithful in every duty, ye honored ones of God, and He will bless you!

Are there any of you, dear readers, whose households are not set in order? We would earnestly admonish you to see to it without delay, as you would desire to be an unbroken household in the kingdom of God. Joys here and joys eternal; peace abiding now and forever; life everlasting in Eden restored; a loving Savior who shall ever prove a Friend above all others—a Helper in every time of need, a Refuge in every storm, a Comforter in all your sorrows, a Balm for every wound; and above all, the great Jehovah as your Father—a Father who has already shown his infinite regard for men's salvation in sending his only begotten Son to die for us—these are inducements offered by this same loving and adorable Father to every individual and to every household that will walk in His commandments and bow to His will.—C. Northrup, in the Dawn of the Morning.

AVOID VAIN-GLORYING.—Men and women, laymen and pastors, should be ver[y careful] after bringing souls to Christ, no[t to fall into] a spirit of vain glory. A past[or said to one of] you who was apparently less su[ccessful], perhaps, he taught the way [illegible] less perfectly. Christ sa[ith] [illegible] eth receiveth wages and g[athereth fruit unto] eternal life; that both he [that soweth and] he that reapeth may rejoice together. And herein is the saying true, One soweth and another reapeth. I sent you to reap that whereon ye bestowed no labor; other men labored and ye are entered into their labors." Bengel has well said: "It is only the last stroke of the axe which fells the tree; but if one man gives fifty strokes, another thirty, a last only two, who can tell which of the wood cutters has been most useful, and which blow contributed to prostrate the tree?" So in soul saving, many influences contribute. Who shall determine which is the greater?—American Wesleyan.

THE PHYSICAL SIGNS IN NATURE.
PESTILENCE.—1850–1870.

BY D. T. TAYLOR.

SONG OF THE PESTILENCE.

I am sent to devastate your herds of beasts,
I am come on the ocean tribes to feast;
Even the birds of heaven are all my own,
And my shafts of death not for man alone.
I come as a scourge from Jehovah's hand
To humble the pride of this broad green land;
The haughty will tremble when I am there,
And mourners will crowd to the altars of prayer;
When I fill up the churches and churchyards too,
Ye will know that my warning words are true.
I will pillow my head on the nation's heart,
And friends must wither, and weep, and part;
For my scathing arrows of death must fall
On the young and the aged, the pure and all;
And wherever the tide of life shall flow,
I will mingle its beating pulse with woe.
I heed not the infant's piteous wail,
I touch the youth and his cheek shall pale,
I breathe upon manhood's lofty brow,
And sink them all in the grave-yard low.

A. D. 1850. An epidemic atmosphere pervaded all lands. Yellow fever ravaged Rio de Janeiro, and thence spread all along the Gulf States and Atlantic coast. So that by

A. D. 1853 it became a grievous pestilence. At New Orleans 50,000 citizens fled before it; there were from 25,000 to 30,000 cases, and the deaths reached over 8000. At Mobile nearly 1200 perished. Yellow fever first appeared at New Orleans as an epidemic in 1817, the same year the Cholera burst forth on the world from Judea. From that time on to 1854 inclusive, it visited that city thirty-four summers (every year save four). In the above period about 40,000 fatal cases occurred in this stricken city; the years of greatest mortality were 1833 (when 1200 died), 1837 (1700 died), 1841 (2000 died), and 1853 the worst year of all. It was very malignant and unmanageable beyond all precedent. All fevers raged. In five months 11,335 died in the city.

From 1795 to 1854, Dr. R. La Roche in his History of the Yellow Fever reckons up 63,737 deaths by this terrible disease in 21 cities of the United States; the deaths were generally one-third of all who were stricken; which compare with the pestilence of 1878.

A. D. 1853. While all the Gulf cities and lower Mississippi valley had Yellow Fever, a new cattle plague, viz., the Texas Cattle Fever, Spanish Fever, or Splenic Fever, attacked the herds of Missouri, destroying 60 and 70 per cent. of all that were sick, and spread out into Kansas and Iowa. The havoc done by it since is immense. It was never known previous to 1853.

A. D. 1855. Yellow Fever raged violently in Norfolk, Va.

A. D. 1856. Rinderpest destroyed in Russia 30,000 cattle, in Austria 25,500, in Gallacia 12,000, in Moravia 9000,—76,500. Hog Cholera first began to destroy the swine in the Western States, and became a deadly epizootic. Of every 100 attacked 90 died. At Auburn, N. Y., in a drove of 1500, over 1000 died rapidly. A panic ensued among owners. The plague was infectious. All who handled the putrid bodies were made ill. This disease has now for nearly a quarter of a century been a pestilence in America.

A. D. 1856. This year is also noted for the epidemical appearance of Diptheria in our country. Without doubt there were instances of it in New England as early as 1735 (See Webster's History); but now it began to destroy the children at the rate of 5000 to 10,000 a year, and devastate homes in this country and also in England. Its ravages are extended and increase every year. This year yellow fever struck hard at New York; 79 infected vessels were quarantined, but the plague did not spread.

A. D. 1858. Diptheria struck Albany. In ten months there were 2000 cases and 179 victims. Plague was in North Africa also.

A. D. 1859. Now Pleuro-Pneumonia attacked the cattle of Massachusetts, destroying 1000 head. Its virulence this year and the next in England was great, the loss being 95 per cent. Savans say it is never cured. New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Long Island and Maryland have suffered severely.

A. D. 1859–64. In these six years the loss by plague among the 8,000,000 cattle and 40,000,000 sheep of Great Britain and Ireland reached the enormous sum of $130,000,000. The plague was the "Foot and Mouth Disease." Cattle, sheep, pigs and poultry were attacked. No remedy was found. In 1865 by December there were 40,000 cases and 20,000 deaths, while 11,000 were slaughtered (all infected) to keep it from spreading.

A. D. 1865. In Russia one-tenth of all the cattle in many villages died of rinderpest which raged everywhere, while in Egypt no less than 300,000 head were destroyed by cattle plague, entailing a loss of $60,000,000. A bilious, relapsing famine-fever prevailed in Russia which had many characteristics of the Plague, such as the carbuncle, etc. In St. Petersburgh 40 physicians and 20,000 of the inhabitants perished before it. Meanwhile Rinderpest kept on its destroying march. In this and the following year Holland was visited, and over 90,000 head perished, while in but eighteen months in Great Britain there occurred the destruction of 500,000 head of cattle. From this time on for ten years the annual loss of cattle in Great Britain realized fifty millions of dollars; total, $500,000,000. The Texas Fever ravaged the herds in the West, and in Missouri a year or two later single counties lost cattle to the value of $300,000 and $500,000.

The same year Cholera was epidemic in India. It burst its bounds again and went on its career of destruction, with no abatement of its early violence. Asia lost hundreds of thousands of her people. Arabia was smitten; of 200,000 pilgrims at Mecca 150,000 were attacked and fully one-half died. At Alexandria, Egypt, 10,000 sickened and 3300 died. At Cairo the deaths reached 500 in a day! Europe was invaded; 150,000 people fled in terror from Constantinople; the Black Death was never more terrible; in the height of the plague the deaths exceeded 2000 a day! A terrible conflagration Sept. 5th–8th of four days, that burned 15,000 houses, checked the plague completely as the great London fire of 1666 seemed to extinguish the Plague in that city. Then Italy and France were visited, and many lands; in Gaudaloupe six thousand fell.

A. D. 1866. All Europe was visited by Cholera. In two weeks in London (July 21st–Aug. 4th) 5261 perished. In Holland 3866 died, in Hungary 40,000; and in all Austria over 100,000 perished. At Amiens 1000 died in a few days. Three hundred cities and districts in Europe were visited and scourged. It spread all over the United States. At New York 1190 died, of whom 250 died in one week, July 28th–Aug. 4th. Brooklyn lost 800, St. Louis 3532, Philadelphia 834, Cincinnati 1200, Chicago 978, Savannah 231, New Orleans 132, Richmond 164, Vicksburg 510, Louisville 150, while Memphis had 1174 cases and 889 deaths. In fifty-three cities and towns in but four months the plague destroyed 10,805 persons, and its total number of victims at this visit was put at 12,000. In every place in Europe and America the death-rate swelled, and the plague destroyed thousands in ships at sea.

A. D. 1867. The cholera again ravaged; in New Orleans 250 died. It was in all the Gulf States and Mississippi valley, on the great plains, among the Indians, and at the W. S. Forts. Cholera Morbus, Cholera Infantum, etc., was in its train. It menaced all the continent. India, Bokhara, Cabul, Astrachan, Orenburgh, Russia, then all Europe had it again. Holland, Switzerland, England and Africa experienced its effects. Warsaw had 4000 cases and 2000 deaths. Italy had 63,000 cases and 32,000 deaths. Sicily 12,000 cases and 7000 died in but two weeks. A respite of years has followed. It was its last visit to this country.

This year too the Oriental Plague, which had visited Persian Kurdistan in 1863, broke out again in Mesopotamia, and began widening its area. The fond hope that this old plague had died out vanished, although Egypt and Asia Minor were now exempt for thirty years.

A. D. 1868. A year of extraordinary earthquake convulsions, all signs betokening the on-coming of a period of sickness and plague. This year cholera lingered in Russia, and still lingered in the years 1869, 1870, 1871, in which last year it became epidemic. The Texas Fever this year first crossed the Mississippi river to the East, and with great destruction to the cattle spread itself into all the Northern, Middle and Eastern States. Rinderpest never appeared in this country, but Texas Fever is still the scourge of our herds, and it is said there is no known cure. The mortality is from 50 to 90 per cent. During these years (1866, 67, 68), the Cerebro Spinal Meningitis attacked the horses of Texas with severity, and hundreds died. It has come to be a terrible and mortal disease both among men and beasts, and is mainly incurable. The last decade, 1870–1880, now remains to be noticed, and the mortality of chief pestilences summed up.

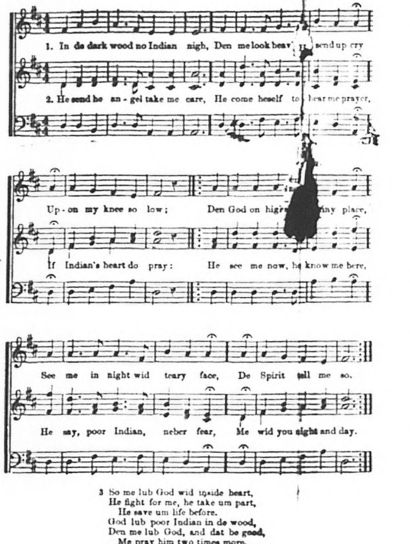
The Indian's Hymn.

Arranged by A. Ross.



3 So me lub God wid inside heart,
He fight for me, he take um part,
He save um life before.
God lub poor Indian in de wood,
Den me lub God, and dat be good,
Me pray him two times more.

4 So when time come poor Indian rise,
Me go Great Man above de skies,
And blanket leave behind.
Me hab no need of wigwam dare,
Me better habitation share
Wid Jesus, good and kind.

THE RESURRECTION.

BY J. S. WHITE.

Several objections have been raised to show that the dead will not be raised. One is, that the earth is not large enough to give all who have lived room to stand. It has been stated in print that the whole earth has been dug over several times to bury the dead.

To show the fallacy of this objection, we will suppose that when God made Adam he made eight hundred millions of human beings, and that this number died every thirty years during six thousand years; and that the same number was born in this time, to keep the number the same as at the beginning. As there are two hundred times thirty in six thousand years, the eight hundred millions would have died two hundred times. It follows that two hundred times eight hundred millions will give the whole number, which is one hundred and sixty billions. In this we make no account for the great age to which men lived before the flood, supposing that age to have been on an average but thirty years; neither do we take into the account the flood, at which time the human family then living was reduced down to eight persons. We have supposed the number to have remained the same, making each generation only thirty years on an average, the lowest estimate that has ever been made.

Question: Is the earth large enough to contain all this number, and to give each person ample room to stand upon? We will suppose a piece of land to be 230 miles square. This reduced to square yards gives 163,863,040,000 square yards. This number is nearly four billion more than the whole number of the human family, on the basis of our calculation. Of this number of yards there would remain, after giving each person nine square feet to stand upon, a piece of land two hundred and thirty miles square, i. e., two hundred and thirty miles on each of the four sides, containing fifty-two thousand nine hundred square miles. This, as we have shown, contains more square yards than the whole number of the human family.

The State of Texas contains two hundred and thirty-seven thousand three hundred and thirty-one square miles. This is nearly four and a half times as many as there are in the piece of land measuring two hundred and thirty miles. From this we see that the State of Texas is large enough to contain nearly four and a half times as many persons as there have been of the human family, giving each person one square yard, or nine square feet to occupy.

This objection to the resurrection, like all others, disappears on examination.

WATCHING WITH CHRIST.

Why did our Lord want His disciples to watch with Him that night in the garden? It was not to witness His agony, for He went on beyond them. It was not to share His conflict, for this they could not do. We talk about sharing each other's sorrows and struggles, but as a matter of fact, there is no such thing as companionship in living. We may receive counsel from friends, we may be cheered and nerved by them; but we really pass alone through our experiences. Others may hold the lamp of comfort to shine upon the gloom of our sorrows, but the sorrows themselves no one can share. When we are struggling in temptation, human or angelic friends may minister to us, but we must fight the battle alone. Lives are like drops of water, they touch at a few points, but remain forever separate. The picture we see in the garden is a picture of all life. The disciples could not share the Master's agony.

Yet while we must meet life's experiences absolutely alone, we want our friends near to us when we pass through sorrow or conflict. And this is what we see in Gethsemane. The disciples could not shield the Master from His woe. They could not lighten the awful burden by so much as a feather's weight, nor drink one drop of the bitter cup which was being pressed to His lips: yet He wanted them near. He took them with Him, that while He endured His intense grief He might know that His dearest friends were not far away. This was why He arose three times from His struggle and went back to them. He wanted to gather a little strength from their sympathy and love.

There are human experiences that will help us to understand this longing of Christ for the nearness of His friends in that hour. A child does not want to go to bed alone in a dark room; but when some one sits near, all the dread passes away. Or it awakes in the night while the storm rages, and cries out in alarm. The father comes and lies down beside it. The storm does not cease, but the little one falls asleep in sweet peace. When we who are older are passing through some sore trial, we want our tried friends to keep close to us. They cannot make the sorrow less bitter, nor take upon themselves any part of the burden; yet their very presence makes us feel stronger, and we want them to come close beside us and not leave us till the trial is past.

That was what our Lord wanted that night. He desired his disciples to keep near Him, and wake and watch while He suffered, that He might not be alone. How disappointed He was, then, when He came back to get renewal of strength from their waking love, to find them asleep! It is one of the saddest elements of His suffering that night, that He did not even have the little help which human sympathy could have given.

The practical question which arises here is What are the ways in which we may now watch or fail to watch with Christ? He [illegible] tude of friendship. We have such thoughts of the infinite fullness and self-sufficing of Christ, in His glory, that it seems to us inconceivable that He should need or miss the little love that our hearts can give to Him. Yet even in His ineffable majesty He hungers for the affection of all of His friends. The Scriptures are full of evidences of the divine yearning for human love and trust. Christ himself manifests a most intense craving for the companionship of His disciples. He clung to them as a missionary mother, about to depart over the sea, clings to her children whom she is to leave behind. His parting address throbs and quivers all through with His intense yearning. In His prayer He asked that they might be safely kept, and then be with Him forever in glory. He could not bear the thought of being forgotten. Though in heaven, with the love of countless angels, He craves and hungers for human love, and is grieved when our hearts grow cold. He wants us to watch with Him in responsive love. He wants us to remember Him continually, to "lean hard" upon Him, and to give Him our tenderest affection.

There is another way in which we are to watch with Him. He tells us that He accepts anything done to one of His friends as if it were done to Him in person. Parents can understand this. They accept kindnesses shown to their children as gratefully as if they had themselves enjoyed them. If my child is in a strange land, far from home, and is taken sick, and one cares for him, no favor shown to me could stir such gratitude in my heart as [illegible] toward his benefactor. Or, if [illegible] child wrongfully neglectful [illegible] I feel the wrongs or the i[illegible] more keenly than if I had suffere[illegible]. This helps to interpret Chri[illegible] toward those who perform minis[illegible] kindness or do not perform the[illegible] His followers. Every one of His disciples is infinitely dear to Him. He looks down upon them with ineffable yearning; and when one of them is in need, and another comes and gives help, His heart [illegible]ed and gladdened by it. Or if [illegible]ring, and another coldly passes [illegible] neglect goes to His heart far [illegible] than if it had been shown to [illegible]. Thus we have constant opportunity to watch with Christ in the person of His friends who need our help.

Another way in which we can watch with Him is by patiently enduring any afflictions, limitations, or bonds, which we are called to bear for His sake. Some have to carry crosses all their days. We meet disappointments at every turn. Joys fade out of our hearts like summer flowers that wither at the touch of the frost. Hopes vanish like the brilliant dream fabrics of sleep, and leave no reality. We find ourselves hampered and hindered on every side.

Now it is not always that these crosses and trials are borne with sweet patience. Sometimes we find ourselves growing fretful, morbid, and discontented. This is very sad. It seems to me that if we could realize in all our sufferings, that we are called by them into fellowship with Christ, the heaviest, blackest cross would become light, and would appear wreathed all about with flowers. Paul understood this. He looked even upon his reproach and shame as a badge of nobility and divine honor, because he was enduring them in Christ's stead. Every time we are called to pass through any trial, or to suffer any anguish, Christ is in the garden again, asking us to watch with Him. When we endure patiently, joyfully, triumphantly, we make Him glad.

Once more, in all service and sacrifice for Christ, we are called to watch with Him. Every great crisis is a Gethsemane. We are in one of these now. Shadows hang about Christ's church. Enemies gather. The nearest interests of Christianity are assailed. I have no fear of the ultimate result. In every such conflict, the Nazarene will conquer. Yet we are now passing through one of the dark hours in the history of His reign. As He enters the conflict, he calls His friends to draw near and watch with Him. He must fight the battle alone, but He wants us to wake. He wants to know that we are loyal and true. It is surely a time when every friend of Jesus should be so faithful that the Master's heart may never be pained by a disloyal act, or even by one hour of coldness or want of interest. To doubt or grow indifferent is to sleep when He wants us to watch. Let Him never come and find us sleeping.—J. R. Miller, in S. S. Times.

THE FLIGHT OF TIME.

The velocity with which Father Time flies is most apparent to those who look back; but with all his celerity, he moves but slowly and heavily forward to the man whose whole employment is to watch his flight. Time is often blamed as if he were a great thief; it is people's own fault. Use him well, and you will get from his hand more than ever he will take from you.

The epoch in which we live is characterized by deep solemnity and attended by serious circumstances. There is a growing conviction among the people of God that every year, yea, every day and hour, brings us with accelerated speed nearer to the great crisis of the world's history. These are times to make all men think, Christian men especially so; for there is nothing more manifest than that the King of kings is marshalling His armies, preparing His way, and maturing all things for His second advent in glory.

The decade of the eighteen hundred and seventies is now a thing of the past, and we have entered on the momentous decade of the eighteen hundred and eighties, during which the concluding events of the present [illegible] dispensation associated with the second advent of Christ are expected by prophetic expositors to be likely to occur. It is, in fact, probable that the decade of ten years from 1880 to 1890 will be signalized by the most unprecedented momentous occurrences that have ever transpired during the whole 6000 years of the history of mankind.

The year on which we have entered will, we doubt not, be most pregnant with stirring events. The revolutionary spirit of the age has faith in nothing but itself, and is laying violent hands on all existing institutions, while an invisible hand seems writing upon every edifice the sentence that startled the Chaldean monarch in the hour of his godless revelry. There can be little hesitation in saying that we have arrived at an epoch in the history of the world in which one of those mighty revolutions, happily rare in the annals of mankind, is impending. Human society, long troubled with a sense of discomfort, is now, as it were, convulsed with birth-pangs.

There are murmurings and fears all around us, and to be heard on every side, indicating that there is now stealing over the minds and hearts of the many who have slept too long in the lap of self-indulgence and carnal security, a presentiment of imminent calamity; that before long that sinful sleep will be roughly broken by Him who is about once more not only to shake the earth, but also heaven. But "to the upright there ariseth light in the darkness," and the believer in the Lord knows that when this earthly house is shaken and the old roof falls away, the house not made with hands will display itself in its spiritual symmetry, its imperial beauty, and its abiding strength, and that it will inclose him forever with its "everlasting doors."

How cheering the hope, amidst the din of war, the acclamations of false joy, the yell of idolatry, and the groans of creation, that a period is hastening when the [illegible] shadows and phantoms of the night shall have vanished, and peace shall stretch her shady wings over the sons of men; when rivers of joy shall water this vale of tears; when Cherubim to Cherubim shall cry, Holy, Holy, Holy, is the Lord God of Hosts: the whole earth is full of His glory.

Shall, then, the Christian fill his mouth with dust and his heart with rubbish, occupying his time with that which is not bread, while the true manna of the kindom is his for the taking, and golden joys and pleasures are his forever? Nay, nay! would it not be better that, instead of our Lord sighing over us, we were found sighing and crying for the abominations that exist, having no part or lot in any of them; being like men that wait for their Lord, that whether he come in the first watch or the second watch, we may be found waiting and longing for His appearing?

Till then the Spirit and the Bride, looking heavenward, say "Come;" the individual believer, taking up the cry, says "Come," and whosoever desires Him, and is athirst for Him, let him too join the cry, and say "Come." "He who testifieth these things saith, 'Behold I come suddenly.' Amen; even so come, Lord Jesus."

How important it is to determine whether we are the friends or the enemies of Christ—whether we have a saving interest in Him! Is He "made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and santification, and redemption?" If so, during the year 1880 let our gratitude be testified by a thankful acknowledgment, by a public confession of Christ, by fervent devotion and self-sacrifice, and by an entire acquiescence in the design of his death.

Everything in this transitory world is constantly shifting and changing. Those things which seem mostly to continue are destined to perish. Names, however great in reputation or in history, may be forgotten, but the name of Jesus will be immortally remembered. Prophecy said of Him, "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest." His name is great in the imperishable fulness of its meaning, in the peerless character it represents, in the unutterable grandeur of its associations, in the perennial efficacy it imparts, in the radiant hope it inspires, in the priceless blessings it reveals, and in the unfailing perpetuity with which it is invested. "His name shall endure forever." Cities may be laid waste, empires may rise and decay, crowns may rust and thrones crumble into dust, but "his name shall endure.

When the names of philosophers, heroes, statesmen, and kings have perished, "His name shall endure, and men shall be blessed in Him." His name alone is excellent in all the earth, and shall go down the accumulating ages, gathering influence and fragrance with the flight of years, and awaken new songs of joy among the nations of the saved. His dear name is more effulgent than the sun, more replete with blessings than the earth, and shall survive the wreck of the highest mountain or the deepest rock. "It hath pleased the Father that in Him should all fulness dwell." "God hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth, that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

If Jesus be your Friend, Savior, Brother, then, dear reader, whatever may be woven by the Divine Artificer in the hidden loom of the future, the year will be to you a happy and most blessed one, and your destiny the eternal companionship of Him who is the altogether lovely, "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever."—Christian Herald and Signs of Our Times.

WHOLE-SOULED RELIGION.

Satan is a shrewd strategist. His policy is to divide and conquer. All he asks of the sinner is to give him room enough to pitch his tent inside of the walls, and to occupy a part of the heart's territory. He has no objection to a man's going to church for an hour or two on the Sabbath, and reading a chapter in the Bible occasionally, and even having a serious thought once in a while. As long as Christ does not get the whole heart, he is quite satified that ultimately it will be all his own. In the fabled race for the crown, the golden apples of the Hesperides tossed down upon the course diverted the attention of the combatants, and he who stooped to grasp an apple lost the prize. Satan keeps tossing his glittering allurements upon life's highway; if he can keep the soul from "pressing towards the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus," he counts that soul sure for hell.

Christ on the other hand, demands the whole heart. "No man can serve two masters." "He that is not for me is against me." How sharply and clearly he cuts the dividing line. It is death to all compromise. "Whoso would be my disciple let him leave all and follow me. He that taketh not his cross and followeth after me is not worthy of me." This demand of the Lord for the complete lordship of the heart runs through the whole Bible. The chief commandment is, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and all thy might, and all thy mind and strength." One of the richest promises in God's check-book for us to fill up "on demand," is this one, "Ye shall seek me and find me when ye search for me with all the heart."

The model characters in the Bible are the whole-souled Christians. Caleb is one of these; for it is written of him that "he followed the Lord faithfully," and in another passage it reads, "he followed me wholly." While the half-hearted and the cowards perished in the wilderness, loyal old Caleb survived to possess his fruitful acres in full [illegible] of the Vineyard. [illegible] is another of these splendid characters whose entire reign was an unbroken line of holy achievements. His very name signifies "strength of Jehovah." The secret of his success is given in one golden line, "he did it with all his heart, and prospered." Daniel, the uncompromising hero of Babylon, belongs to this same company of choice spirits.

These are the type-men for our times. What we want to make our churches vigorous and succesful is not the pine-shaving piety that blazes up only during the brief periods of revival excitements, but the solid anthracite that is always glowing at a red heat, with "patient continuance in well-doing." We want the full following of Christ with the whole heart, for the whole time, and for the whole life. This requires a thorough regeneration at the start. Half-way converts make half-way Christians. Mr. Finney always urged anxious inquirers to dig deep and build solidly upon Christ as their bed-rock. Unless the conversion is radical and thorough, unless the submission of the soul to Jesus is unreserved and complete, there will be half-heartedness and halting to the end. We do not wonder that some professors complain that they "do not enjoy their religion," for they have so little to enjoy. Instead of being filled with the fulness of God, they never had more than a pint measure at the outset, and the scanty supply soon ran dry.

My friend, the reason you are not a Christian is that you are not willing to give Christ your whole heart. A fragment of your thoughts and affections, a few hours on Sabbath, an occasional good resolution, you are offering to Him in return for an eternal Heaven. You keep back your heart. He asks everything. You refuse it. And in your eternity of dark despair you will discover that you have lost everything, and forever!—Rev. Theo. Cuyler, in Christian Weekly.

THAT "WICKED AND SLOTHFUL SERVANT."—MATT. 25: 26.

BY L. A. WHEELER.

The servant who received but one talent of his Lord's money, or in other words had but little understanding of the Holy Oracles of God went and hid it—"laid it up in a napkin," that is, he did not do anything in particular with it; he was too slothful and lazy to investigate much, and did not practice what he did know, yet passed among the multitude for a servant until the "Nobleman" came to settle with him; then because he lacked the usury money (or the understanding of the Word which we get through the aid of the Spirit), the talent was taken from him and given to his companion who had been more faithful, so that he had an abundance, while the wicked and slothful servant lost all and was left in "utter darkness."

This parable seems to be synonymous with the preceding one. The servants who put their money out to usury appear to be identical with the wise virgins, and the wicked and slothful servant with the foolish virgins. The last class in both parables are in the end left in spiritual darkness, and consequently lost, and all because they had not traded with this Nobleman and received of His Spirit represented by the "oil" in one case and by "usury" in the other. We have this treasure in earthern vessels, says the apostle. (2 Cor. 4: 9.)

When the tarrying time came the foolish virgins in reality lost all confidence in ever knowing anything about Christ's second coming. Not so with the wise virgins. To them it only added more light and strength, because they saw that there had got to be just such a waiting time or the Scriptures would be broken; so like the cloud that led ancient Israel, that which was darkness to the Egyptians was light to the Israelites. In the other parable the same thing is represented by taking away the one talent and giving it to him that had ten, with the declaration "that unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance, but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that he hath."

When the "midnight cry" comes, which will probably be caused by the angels letting go their hold of the "four winds," then the "foolish virgins" and that "wicked and slothful servant" will awake to their terrible condition, and in their anguish of mind will weep and gnash their teeth. Then they are willing to buy oil (trade with the Nobleman), but too late! too late! They have drawn back to perdition. God has no pleasure in them. (Heb. 10: 38, 39.) He that is unjust let him be unjust still; and he which is filthy let him be filthy still; and he which is righteous let him be righteous still; and he that is holy let him be holy still. Rev. 22: 11. Then will come Daniel's "time of trouble." (Dan. 12: 1.) And Jeremiah's whirlwind (Jer. 25: 32)—"It shall fall with pain upon the head of the wicked." (30: 23.) "In the latter days ye shall consider it." (v. 24.) Has it not been considered perfectly?

Plainfield, Mass., Sept. 14th.

"WHAT IS TRUTH?"

In this age of inquiry and investigation, when skepticism has come up from the chambers of darkness, and is walking abroad upon the earth, armed with the weapons seized from the armory of science, defying the armies of Israel, and, like its author, "seeking whom he may devour," it is of the utmost importance that every one should search diligently after the truth, and make the inquiry that Pilate made, but not, like him, ask this much agitated question with a spirit of contempt, and thus obstruct the channel of honest investigation, by which this problem must be demonstrated.

Thought is the ruling principle of life, which the [illegible] of all motive power, directed and upheld, and as the eternal destiny of man is determined by the character he sustains, and as this character is moulded by his convictions of truth, it is of vital importance that he look well to the foundations of his belief, and thoroughly examine the basis of his hopes for the future, to know whether he is building upon the solid Rock, or on the flitting sand.

It is not necessary to delve into the mysterious depths of physical science, to bring up truth from the deep; neither do we need to ascend up into the sidereal firmament, to bring truth down from above, but it is nigh thee, even in the blessed Book of Truth, so that the "wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein."

The origin, condition and destiny of man are explicitly unfolded to us in the Bible, and truths that baffle the keenest intellects of the unbelieving world are there clearly revealed. Let us diligently search the pages of Holy Writ, to find the correct solution of this important problem, in opposition to the conflicting theories of scientists, who know neither God nor the truth of divine revelation. Let us firmly stand upon this rock of truth, and let not the storms of sophistry and unbelief move us from our sure foundation.

Let us be equipped with the panoply of truth, having every act of our lives stamped with its impress, being guided by its benign influence, until we are permitted to bask in the glorious sunlight of God's eternal truth.

SCOFFERS.

"Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of His coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation."—2 PET. 3 : 3, 4.

The last days must include the very last of the days which make the period in which the days are found. As the apostle was predicting events to transpire under the gospel, the last days in the passage must include the very last days of the gospel period.

As the foretold scoffers were to do their work in the last days, they must be found engaged in their specified wickedness when the gospel ends. As the gospel has not ended, and we have come to the last part of the dispensation, we conclude that the scoffers may now be doing their work.

Is it so? Have they come? and who are they? This question can only be answered by learning what their particular work is, and the particular arguments they will use in doing it.

A scoffer is "one who mocks, derides, or reproaches in the language of contempt." Webster. The act of scoffing is "To treat with derision or scorn; to address with contumacious language; to mock at."—Granville. Mr. Granville says to scoff is "to mock at," therefore a scoffer and mocker is the same. Jude evidently speaks of the same class that Peter did, calling them mockers, and shows that they will be especially manifested in the generation connected with Christ's appearing. He describes them as follows:

"But these speak evil of those things which they know not; but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves. Woe unto them! for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gainsaying of Core. These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear; clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots; raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever. And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him. These are murmurers, complainers, walking after their own lusts; and their mouth speaketh great swelling words, having men's persons in admiration [illegible] ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ; how that they told you there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their ungodly lusts." From v. 10 to 18.

He shows in verse 10 that they ridicule the things which they know not, and base their "ridicule" upon "what they know naturally, "as brute beasts"; i. e., they will reject all supernatural knowledge received through divine revelation, and accept of no conclusions only what they reach by natural reasoning. They will place more confidence in philosophy and science than in revelation, and will make ridicule of what men teach who rely upon revelation for their proof.

Verse 11 teaches that these "mockers" will be like Cain, who persecuted his brother Abel because he offered a sacrifice "by faith" in a prediction of what had not then taken place. The scoffers are also compared to Balaam, who labored to curse Israel, animated with the hope of receiving a large reward. They are also likened unto Core, who assisted Moses in his work of leading the Hebrews across Jordan into the promised Canaan, but God cursed them for this opposition to His appointed servants, and caused the earth to open its mouth and swallow them up. The item in each of these cases, which Inspiration takes as a likeness to the scoffers, is an act of opposition to God's servants; therefore the scoffing will consist in making "ridicule"—"derision"—of what the appointed servants of God shall be teaching. Verse 12th teaches that these mockers will mingle with those at whom they scoff in feasts of charity or in religious services. This proves that the scoffers are, many of them at least, professed Christians. The 14th verse shows that this class will be doing their wicked work just prior and extending to the coming of Christ, when He comes to execute judgment upon them for their "hard speeches," which these "ungodly sinners have spoken against Him," against Christ directly, and against His servants, which is as if done unto Him.

These scoffers will not be a low and vulgar class, but will glory in their learning. They will "speak great swelling words, and have men's persons in admiration because of advantage," i. e. they will be particular to exhibit all the polish and refinement of learning, so as to gain the "admiration" of the aristocratic and rich by their eloquence, and thus secure the "advantage" of high caste in society and a lucrative "reward."

Peter particularly defines this scoffing, and says they will say "Where is the promise of His (Christ's) coming?" They will therefore treat with "contempt" and "scorn" the doctrine of His coming, and will make "hard speeches" against those who preach His speedy advent. The apostle also says of them: "And bring upon themselves swift destruction." When they scoff at the Bible doctrine of Christ's speedy coming they will be quickly destroyed, for He will speedily come to punish them for this wickedness. (2 Pet. 2: 1). He also says that by them "the way of truth shall be evil spoken of." V. 2. He also shows that they are an apostate class, who once knew the right way, for he says they "have forsaken the right way, and are gone astray, following the way of Balaam the son of Bosor, who loved the wages of unrighteousness." V. 15. It is plain from all these passages that the scoffers of the last days will array themselves against a class of Christ's servants, particularly on account of their teaching His coming, and giving as proof His promise or prophetic assurance.

Christ evidently presents the same subject, introduces the same antagonism upon the same question, and locates the strife and its results at exactly the same point of time. He says: "Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you, that he shall make him ruler over all his goods. But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to smite his fellow servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken, the lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of. And shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." (Matt. 24 : 45-51.)

Where, in time, did Christ locate these servants, which represent two classes? At a time like that of Noah, when the flood was about to come and destroy the wicked. Upon what question did the servants differ? Upon the question of Christ's coming. How did they differ upon that subject? The evil servant or scoffer said, "The Lord delayeth His coming." What is it to delay? "To put off; to procrastinate; to stop for a time." (Webster.) To put off or to stop beyond what time? Evidently beyond the time taught by the good servant. The evil servants therefore deride and ridicule the good servant's arguments, which show the speediness of Christ's coming, and not simply the fact of a coming at some future time.

The distinguishing facts which show who are the evil servants, are (1) He will not believe the coming of the Lord is near. (2) He will smite—reproach, scoff at those who teach that Christ's coming is "at hand." (3) He will by his position gain the sympathy of the wicked classes, and draw the multitudes after him. Peter says, "Many shall follow their pernicious ways." (4) He will not be looking for the Lord, for He shall come "in a day when He looketh not for Him." Paul says, "Unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation." (Heb. 9 : 28.) These words of Inspiration positively define the distinction between the saved and lost of the last generation. The saved will be "looking for Him" when He appears; while to the lost He will "come in a day when he looketh not for Him."

Ezekiel takes up the same subject, and says: "Son of man, behold, they of the house of Israel say, The vision that he seeth is for many days to come, and he prophesieth of the times that are far off. Therefore say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God: There shall none of my words be prolonged any more, but the word which I have spoken shall be done, saith the Lord God." (Chap. 12 : 27, 28.)

Here the prophet finds a class in the church in the same place that Christ, Peter and Jude found the scoffers, and saying substantially the same things. Peter [illegible] that they will challenge the servants of Christ upon the proof that the Lord is coming. Christ teaches that they will say, "He delayeth His coming," and the prophet says they will say, "He prophesieth of the times that are far off."

These passages with many parallels which might be quoted clearly define the scoffers and the particular nature of their scoffing, showing the special class, and the position occupied by them, of whom they will jest and make ridicule, and also defines the period when this shall take place. We think that the fulfilment of the Scriptures and their application to events now transpiring is too manifest to need a word of explanation.

We most earnestly exhort our readers to prayerfully examine themselves, to see if they are scoffing or lending their sympathy or support to scoffers, thus weakening the hands of those who are fighting the most fearful battle ever fought between truth and error.

TRUTH without love will fail to do what God means it for; and love without truth would flatter the soul into a false peace, from which the waking would be in woe. Truth is the stern, hard thing, like the bare branches of winter. Love is the softener and beautifier, like the green foliage on the summer tree. If you show that you love people, you may tell them truths that condemn them, and yet awaken no bitterness; you may show them how wrong they are, and only make them thankful to you for setting them right. —Exchange.

PEACE OR WAR—WHICH?

It is a fact patent to all that there has been a difference of opinion among religious teachers as to the prophetic condition of our world in the immediate future relative to peace and war. A large majority of the preachers and nearly all of the theological schools of the Protestant Church have taught for the last hundred years that the future, from about the present time, would experience general or universal peace. At the same time there has been a less influential class who have taught the opposite—that war would greatly increase, and end in the coming of Christ and the establishment of the kingdom of eternal peace.

The first class rely much upon a sentence in Isa. 2 : 4, 5 : "And He [God] shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more; O house of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the light of the Lord." Taking this passage as a declaration of the Lord, and it would seem to prove that the nations, while they exist as such, will have a time of universal peace; but when we notice that the passage is what "many people shall go and say" (see v. 3), instead of what the Lord says, the passage is changed altogether, especially when we find that the Lord calls these teachers "soothsayers, like the Philistines," who "please themselves with the children of strangers," (v. 6), i. e., they are comforted by the prospects they have of the future condition of the "children of strangers," or the heathen. This idea is clearly expressed in the comparison of those who teach universal peace, to "soothsayers."

A soothsayer is one who foretells coming events, and especially those of prosperity. The prophet Joel introduces the same subject of the condition of the nations in the last days, as it regards peace and war, and declares that the Lord said—"Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles: Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up; beat your ploughshares into swords and your pruning-hooks into spears; let the weak say, I am strong." (chap. 3 : 9, 10.) This prediction is exactly opposite of what Isaiah says the people will say; therefore when the harvest is near, as Joel shows it will be when the nations make this preparation for war (see v. 13), and which Christ locates at the "end of the world" (see Matt. 13 : 39), there will be a class teaching that universal peace among the nations is coming, whereas great wars will be approaching, and the proof of this will be seen in uncommon preparations for war.

Paul, in 1 Thess. 5 : 2, 3, was unquestionably writing upon the same subject when he said: "The day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night," i. e., it will come unexpectedly upon the wicked, as a thief in the night, and adds: "For [because] when they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child, and they shall not escape." [illegible] the fact that those who should say "peace" should not escape? He evidently read it in Isaiah 2nd chapter, for after he had said, "Many people shall go and say . . . Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more," he said of the same people, "They shall go into the holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth, for fear of the Lord and for the glory of His majesty, when He ariseth to shake terribly the earth." (v. 19.) In this chapter we get exactly what Paul expressed, and in the same order; (1) the proclamation of many (the majority) people of coming peace, (2), that destruction would follow, and (3) that these events would be connected with the coming or presence of the Lord.

As we before said, it is a fact that there has been for the last hundred years a large and leading class of religious teachers who have taught that the nations would soon cease to learn war, and fight no more. It is also a fact that there has been during the same period a class who have made a counter proclamation, exactly as the Lord said by Joel should be made just before the harvest, viz., that the Gentiles would prepare for war on a scale never before known.

These two classes have been teaching side by side for a hundred years, and the first class has become numerous and popular, for they, like soothsayers, have foretold very pleasant and beautiful things to be experienced in the Golden Age coming in a brief period.

But the second class have plowed a deep furrow through a stony and rooty soil, during a dark and stormy day, midst howling tempests and battling elements of worldly opposition. But is there no historic proof within the century by which the correctness or fallacy of the two theological creeds may be tested? We think there is, and it is this: Both classes teach that we have come to the last days of the present order of divine administration, i. e., that we have come to the transition period, where the principles and agencies foretold by God to produce the ending of the first dispensation, preparatory to the introduction of the second, are at work. If therefore the present dispensation is to end by the introduction of universal peace, and that the end is near as both teach, then the elements and agencies calculated to produce national peace must have been operating for many years, subduing and exterminating those calculated to promote and increase war. But if the second class be correct, then the reverse must be experienced, and the tendencies and preparations for war must increase, defeating all the efforts and crushing out all the principles tending to produce national peace.

If there has been any unusual change among the nations during this period, indicating a rapid tendency to general peace or to general war, it should in all fairness and honesty of argument be considered very strong proof in supporting the theory indicated by the change. We ask the question: Does the history of the last fifty years show that the great questions producing antagonism in human society are being more peacefully settled than formerly, or are they irritating humanity more and more, thus causing all classes to combine and arm for defence? To say that men will increase their preparations for defence when their fears of attack are diminishing, is to talk foolishly. We will come to the main question: Has the intelligence of the present generation seen a necessity for a great increase of armies and munitions for war? If so then it has seen an increase of principles and circumstances threating war.

A few items of well authenticated history of the last few years will suffice to answer the questions: Mr. Richards, member of the English House of Commons, is reported as making the following statements:

During the years between 1859 and 1874 there had been an addition to the armed forces of Europe of 2,000000 men. The total cost of the armaments of Europe had been estimated at $2,500,000,000 a year, and this vast expenditure was growing with appalling rapidity. The annual public expenditure in Europe had risen from $1,990,000,000 in 1865 to $2,925,000,000 in 1879, being an increase of $935,000,000 in the course of those fourteen years. In Russia and Germany that expenditure has more than doubled. The future was mortgaged for the needs of the present, European national debts having swelled in that period from $13,130,000,000 to $21,320,000,000. Germany, which, in 1865, [illegible]nt on the army and navy $50,000,000, [illegible] expended $105,000,000, and Russia [illegible]ncreased her expenditure on the service in the same period from $110,000,000, to $180,000,000. By far the largest amount of the revenues of all European nations was applied in either paying the interest of debts contracted in former years, or making preparations for future wa[illegible] Only two classes of [illegible] population were exempt fr[illegible] taking part in warfare, viz., the women [illegible] the clergy. The pretext constantly al[illegible] for these great armaments was that [illegible]crifices secured quiet, confidence, an[illegible]se of security. During the last twe[illegible]ars there have been six sanguinary [illegible]nvolving a sacrifice of 2,000,000 hu[illegible]beings and $15,000,000,000 in money. The existence of these enormous armaments was an incessant provocative to war, and the finances of the great States, or many of them, were in a condition of embarassment, while the effect of the wars in which those armaments had been engaged sank multitudes of the people in poverty, misery and ignorance.

If these figures and statements do not show that the world is drifting very rapidly into war, we should despair of proving anything by history. The war of God Almighty is evidently very soon to be experienced, and woe to him who shall not be prepared for translation.

SICK.—Bro. Goodrich is sick, and wishes to say that he will attend to all matters of business, correspondence, etc., just as soon as he is able.

FROM BRO. P. G. BOWMAN.

Dear Bro. Couch:—I like Bro. Leslie's views on the tract question. The distribution of tracts is certainly mission work. And if the Mission Board has the funds, they would do a good work by sending them broadcast over the land, particularly such as relate to the nature of man and the speedy coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. We need them much in this distant field. The speedy personal coming of Jesus to shake the heavens and the earth is the key note of the gospel; indeed it is the foundation of all the teachings of patriarchs and prophets, of the Christ and His apostles, from the garden of Eden down to the last word of God's revelation to man. Suppose this truth, which is emblazoned on every page of Holy Writ, should suddenly dart its burning fires through every pulpit on this continent, inflame every heart, of every congregation, subordinate the legislative, judicial and executive departments of this great country, sweep through all the marts of trade and commerce, go to every factory and every shop and farm and house; I say, suppose all this, and what then? Why, all hearts would be broken to pieces, and heaven and earth would be filled with penitential tears and cries and sorrows and prayers, and shouts and praises to the Holy God for His sweet forgiving love. Then all wills would be broken and subjugated, the conscience would be purged, the desires would be regulated, the dispositions sweetened, the affections sanctified, and Hope would cast anchor on the other shore, and hold on and hold fast, until Jesus come and overturn, overturn, overturn all things pertaining to this present dispensation, and set the purging fires loose to purify and prepare this entire world for an everlasting kingdom for Himself and His people.

"Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people." And so it is. O Jesus, thou art still "despised and rejected by the people," and "Thy name is continually blasphemed"; and "because of swearing the land mourneth." "Blood toucheth blood, and the Devil has come down in great power," and reigns and rules everywhere. "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." Amen.

The Campmeetings are over, and I could not attend them. I tried to pray God's blessing upon the[illegible]nd I am glad to see He has done [illegible]ll doing what I can. CAMPMEETING.

Bethel Campmeeting, with its sacred associations and blessed social meetings, is again in the past. Its memories are blessed in the hearts of some. Seldom or never was there greater harmony between ministers and between people, and the Lord blessed abundantly to the spiritual upbuilding of his people and the conversion of sinners. Bro. Albion Ross was there with others to preach the Word, and give us some powerful sermons. Nearly every child and young person in the camp seemed to belong to the Lord or were converted after they got there, and the young people's meetings were as fully sustained socially as any other. The large tent was crowded with people to witness their last meeting on Sunday, and there were some wet eyes among the spectators. In all there were fifteen conversions that seem to be sound, including old and young, and seven were baptized. Bros. Holt, Drury and Cheney were ordained to the work of the ministry. Altogether it was one of the largest and most profitable meetings ever held there.
ARTHUR F. MOORE.

GREAT SERMONS AND NO CONVERSIONS.

BY L. L. L.

There is an increasing demand for great preaching—"Star sermons." At great meetings with large congregations such sermons only are desired and expected. Committees, managers of great religious gatherings are expected to provide great sermons, and it is often difficult to find and bring forward the man who can satisfy either the world or the church in this respect. A great meeting without great sermons! What an incongruity! Who wants to hear in these days a small sermon, either at a great meeting or anywhere else? Great sermons give character to any meeting, especially to a large one. How long would a great meeting be such without great sermons or eloquent preaching? Surely the meeting would not be regarded as worthy of the patronage of the public, nor satisfactory to many identified with the interests of the meeting, if there could be had no great sermons, or more than ordinary preaching.

It has been said (with what truth we will not say) "that no one of these great sermons has for years been the means of the conversion of a soul." If this be true, then those who have been converted at great meetings have been brought to Christ by means of small sermons or social or individual effort. We can not remember when, at the close of these great sermons, an invitation was given by the preacher for the unconverted to come to the altar for prayer. When this has been done (and it is seldom done now after such a sermon), the invitation has been given by another voice, and one, perchance, little calculated to persuade men to accept of salvation.

We do not ignore great sermons because they are great (and to be truly great they must be the gospel of Christ), but when they are intended for the ear rather than the heart, then we deplore their being preached, and are obliged to say, none were ever, to our knowledge, converted by them.

If it be the Holy Spirit that moves men to repent, then it is neither rhetoric nor eloquence that can do it. Men may be rhetorical and eloquent, and have the Holy Ghost with which to speak; but it is not they nor their gifts that bring sinners to Christ. Without these they might, with the Spirit of God in them, bring men to repentance and salvation. Natural gifts and learning are essential to what is now by men called great preaching. Both the church and the world are calling men to preach for them—men who have nothing but natural gifts and an education with which to declare the gospel of Christ. They are learned and eloquent. They entertain and please. They feed the intellect and enlarge the imagination. They themselves have only the letter of the gospel, and it is only the letter that they can give. The multitude hear, listen attentively, are delighted, enchanted, borne away in rapturous excitement—but are never, never converted to Christ.

Men must be in possession of something more than talents and learning to bring sinners to Christ by their preaching. The intellect and taste, with all the faculties of the mind, may be fully educated, trained and developed, and to these an angel's face and voice be added, but if there be not within and around that man the Holy Spirit of God, he is but as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal to angels and men. Great sermons without the power of God in them fail to convert men.

Winchendon, Mass.

FROM BRO. H. MUNGER.

Bro. Couch:—Some are wondering why there are no more conversions. This inquiry is among all denominations. Something is the matter. I have seen this state of things coming for some time. There are three causes for it. First, the world is in the valley of decision. Joel (3 : 14, 15) prophesied concerning the signs of the coming of the Lord.

When the sun was darkened in 1780 the church turned its eyes to the fathers, or prophets; and the next Sabbath from many pulpits were preached prophetic sermons on this dark day being a sign of the approach of the judgment. Other signs followed, after which Advent doctrine was preached. This was rejected after the time passed, and many decided against it. Those opposed to it warned all to keep away from hearing it. This hardened many, so that the gospel will not affect them.

The second cause is that among our opposers were many who had heard so much of our doctrine preached and the Bible so explained, that the preaching which left out all relating to the coming of the Lord and the judgment failed to satisfy many of their best hearers, and they began to fall off. The churches then began to cut down the requirements of the gospel to suit a natural, morbid appetite, and they introduced festivals and plays. Thus a form of godliness took the place of "the power," as Paul said it would in the last days. This is one of the last-day signs, and the sinners in their congregations know it, and tell them of it. This lessens their influence with sinners, hence there are less conversions among them.

The third cause is that the Bible has been preached so little, and that little so contrary to its true meaning, that it has created a disposition in many to interpret it for themselves and to their own liking, or throw it away altogether and become infidels. That was to come in the last days as another prophetic sign, and here we are with the world full of infidels, the churches dead or dying, the Advent doctrine is unpopular, and few sinners feel alarmed. Some preachers say that if we as a people stood where we did once, sinners would be converted as formerly. But I think they will find it hard to accomplish more than their brethren whom they reflect upon. I believe we are in the gleaning time, and the angels will soon reap the tares for the fire.

At a late Campmeeting the preachers got together to get the opinion of each other and the old lay members upon this matter. After a long discussion they called on a Methodist Adventist, and pressed him to tell what he thought. He told them one cause of their going down in spirituality was because they rejected the Advent doctrine; another was pride, and the festivals and fairs in the churches,—just what I have here written, in substance. One said there was double the spirit at the Advent Campmeeting at Springfield the last few years that they had had; yes, he said, four times as much, for he saw from three to five on their feet at once to testify for God, and they could not get any without urging. Others admitted this fact who attended both meetings. He distributed four religious papers among them; one was the Crisis. Said a preacher: "Do you take that paper?" Answer—"Yes, for there is more of the truth of the Bible and more spiritual pieces in every issue than there is in Zion's Herald in four weeks." Another preacher said: "There is more in the last Crisis than the Herald has had for six months." This Methodist brother told me to-day that many of their preachers liked the Crisis best, and would take it if they dared to. I think the time is near when the honest ones will break away and come out squarely for God.

Chicopee Falls, Mass.

BIBLE vs. SKEPTICISM EXAMINED.

BY C. H. SHEPHERD.

A communication from Mass. has reached us, inquiring where the history can be found concerning the large fish of the Mediterranean, that we referred to in Crisis, Sept. 22nd, 1880. To inform all who read that article that we intend to tell no "fish story," we will say our authority will be found in World's Crisis, June 30th, 1880, second page, third column, headed, "Jonah endorsed by Jesus."

The scientific part reads as follows: "Science has shown that a great fish, the true shark, exists in the Mediterranean; and upon human testimony the statement will be accepted that in some of these fish fully a dozen undigested tunny fish, weighing four hundred pounds, have been found; that in one of them an entire horse was found, having an estimated weight of fifteen hundred pounds; that from another a sailor, who had been swallowed, was rescued alive. (Keil and Delitzsch, vol. 1, p. 398). Yet, when God speaks, He only is to be treated as a liar! But such is man."—Dr. J. H. Brookes.

If this authority is questionable, we are not answerable. He who accepts the Bible needs none of these proofs to confirm him in Scripture statements; but the skeptic pretends that he wants them all, and then perhaps would deny them if he thought it would go to prove God's Bible correct. We have known intelligent men to "wriggle" when a Scriptural application has been made in keeping with their statements.

Melvin Village, N. H.

FROM BRO. J. MAXIM.

Bro. Couch:—I thought I would write a word to the Crisis, to let the brethren and sisters know that I am still living, but very feeble and almost blind. I can hear no Advent preaching only what comes through our excellent Crisis. I was highly edified with the contents of the Crisis recently, especially an article by Bro. Gorham on—"Should Errors be Forgotten?" Those pieces ought to be before the Christians of every denomination. What is more injurious to man than the baneful effects of the slanderous tongue? What servant of God has so lived as to escape its abuse? The slanderer has an evil heart, filled with the devices of the devil, [illegible] reaches his ungodly ears.

Now how about "forgetting sins and errors which have been repented of"? Bro. Gorham says: "We find this unjust, unchristian, pharisaical spirit among professors of religion to an alarming extent." This is true. I have for threescore and ten years been a professor of religion, and know its truth by sad experience. I have beheld this kind of antichristian spirit among all denominations. We say, "These things ought not so to be." We are to follow Christ. Did He ever possess such a spirit? Did the father of the returning prodigal possess such a spirit? No, no. Then can those who do possess such a spirit be Christ's disciples? No indeed. I would say as did Bro. Gorham, "Friends, let us have charity for all—that charity which suffereth long and is ever kind; we shall need to have the same extended to us in the great and awful day of God." Brethren, pray for me, that I may be ready when the Saviour comes to take His children home.

DEDICATION.

Bro. Couch:—On the 19th of Sept., an Advent Christian Chapel was dedicated at Fairfield, Wis.,—a comfortable house of worship, free from debt. Many others should follow the example. Our property cannot be burnt up in a better enterprise at the last day.

REPORT OF THE A. C. CONFERENCE OF WINONA DIST., MINN.

The first Quarterly Meeting of this Conference met in the Chapel of the Winona church Friday evening, Sept. 17th, and held over the following Sunday.

Conference was called to order Saturday P. M., by the Secretary. Our President—Eld. P. Mitson—being absent, Eld. W. J. Bursell was elected President pro tem.

Moved, to adjourn.

Conference was called to order again Sunday P. M., Eld. W. J. Bursell in the chair. Bro. E. P. Waite reported the Winona church as in a prosperous condition, though it had been called to pass through great trials during the past nine months, still it had risen triumphantly over them all. Preaching every Lord's day morning and evening, a flourishing Sabbath School, and a well-attended regular prayer meeting.

Dr. Talbot reported the Utica church as firm in faith and hope, but many of their members had moved west, and since Sister Rowell had been obliged to close her labors with them, in consequence of the growing interest in Winona demanding her whole time, they had been kept without any preaching. He hoped it would be arranged so as to have the next Quarterly Meeting with the Utica church.

The meeting was greatly blessed by able gospel preaching from Bro. Bursell, which comforted all hearts and encouraged them to press forward toward the mark for the prize of their high calling in Christ Jesus. The weather was unfavorable for the meeting, but the Lord was with us.

Services closed Sunday evening after an able discourse by Bro. Bursell to a full house with deep feeling, and the administration of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, when twenty-five sat around the table of the Lord, being mostly members of the Winona church, there being but few in from abroad in consequence of the bad weather.

PUNISHMENT OF NIHILISTS IN RUSSIA.

Melikoff seems to be more than a match for the Nihilists in Russia. They are very quiet now, not because he visited swift and terrible vengeance on those he found guilty, by hanging, shooting and exiling them, but much more effectually by the arts of blandishment and bribery. The warm sun of prosperity has robbed the Nihilist of his coat, not the knout and the gallows. He proceeds somewhat as follows: "He personally communicates with Nihilists of high rank or influence now in prison or under ban. He releases these men from all penalties on the simple condition that they give him, in the the strictest confidence, the names of other Nihilists hitherto undetected, and pledges his honor that the latter shall not be disturbed in any way whatever. Obtaining the names of these new persons, Gen. Melikoff goes to them and offers them liberal pay in the Government service. They are generally poor people, whose poverty is the chief cause of their discontent, and they gladly accept these overtures of practical good-will. They are largely employed as political agents of Russia in Roumelia, Servia, Greece and Constantinople. They are not only out of Russia, at a distance safe for the Government, but are actually working abroad for the country which they left for their country's good.

Many other formerly dangerous Nihilists, for whom no official work can be found, are kept on pay in sinecures, which is much pleasanter for them. A Russian of the old school would have increased the army, multiplied the gallows, started a new knout factory, and revived all the familiar terrors of Russian tyranny, while adding to the enormous debt of the empire, and all without extirpating the Nihilists. The more vigorously they have been persecuted, the more they have flourished. Much may be said in praise of Bismarck's blood and iron as practical statesmanship. But tact and reconciliation is capable of results quite as wonderful as his, and Melikoff has proved it, no doubt much to the comfort of the troubled Czar."—Selected.

"PRESIDENT DIAZ, of Mexico, has made a bold effort to satisfy the three American companies which are seeking Mexican railroad grants, by tendering important privileges to each. Should his offers be ratified by the Mexican Congress and turned to account by the grantees, there will be, within a few years, a railroad from the Mexican capital to the Pacific Coast, and trunk lines to Texas and Arizona, where each will connect with the American system. Such facilities for traffic would add largely to our trade with Mexico, while they would increase the wealth and promote the tranquility of that country."—Sel.

Obituaries.

BURPEE. Sarah H. Coleman, wife of Samuel Burpee, was born in Hartland, Vt., Sept. 28th, 1824, and fell asleep in Jesus, in Hopkinton, Mass., July 24th, 1880.

Brought up a Universalist, educated in the school and writing for the papers of that denomination, after her marriage and residence in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., she still retained that faith until the Tent Meeting held in this village by Elder Miles Grant, who gave her the first light of the Scriptures on what is termed "Second Advent doctrine." She embraced it intelligently, and the labors of Eld. W. A. Fenn and other preachers of "that blessed hope" and its faith were greatly appreciated and enjoyed by her. Prostrated by disease in the spring of 1872, our acquaintance with her was as a confirmed, but cheerful, loving, hopeful invalid, a prayerful member of our little church, and the fourth of whom we have written "fallen asleep in Jesus." Many hearts were saddened when, on account of the desire to be with relatives, they removed to Hopkinton, Mass., last year, and we felt that our next greeting of her sweet face must be in the kingdom of our Lord. The faith and hope which has sustained her during the days and nights of the years of painful endurance, is now the solace and comfort of our dear Bro. Burpee and his loving, dutiful daughter, whose devotion to her mother was so beautiful, and whose happy acceptance of Christ was such a joy. May God still bless and make them a blessing.

And the union shall be sweet
When immortal they shall meet.

MRS. M. L. DURAND.

FULLER. Fell asleep in Jesus in Farmington, N. H., Aug. 30th, 1880, Sister Arcelia C., wife of Wm. W Fuller, aged fifty-four years.

Our sister, while in the city of Portsmouth, some twenty-five years ago, became interested in the Bible hope, and heartily embraced the soon personal advent of Jesus, with kindred truths. Being strong and decided, no reproach against the truth could move her from her honest convictions of right. When she came to Farmington she found her home among the few looking for the Lord, and her hand was open to help support what she believed to be truth. But our sister, like many who are sound in faith, had not all that salvation that she felt she must enjoy in order to read her title clear; but as disease and suffering fastened upon her she went through a most critical examination of herself, and she was enabled to surrender all, and could say, "Not my will, but Thine, O Lord, be done." She was strongly attached to her family, having a great desire for their present and eternal interests. May her prayers and tears avail, and husband and children all meet in paradise restored. Sermon at the funeral by the writer.

HOOK. In East Colebrook, N. H., Sept. 12th, 1880, of heart disease, Thomas Hook, aged seventy-nine years.

He came from England in 1836, from the town of Attlebridge, Norford County. Was a resident of the town where he died for thirty-six years. He married his wife in England. They lived together fifty-seven years. He leaves a widow and seven children. The funeral was at his residence. Many friends were in attendance. The people regret his sudden departure. BELL. In Hartford, Vt., Sept. 4th, 1880, Sr. Betsey Bell, aged seventy-two years.

Our aged sister died suddenly from a ruptured blood-vessel. She has been a devoted follower of the Master for many years, and died in the blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus. She leaves a sister eighty-four years of age. For many years they have lived alone, the Bible being their daily guide. May the precious promises of God sustain the remaining sister. HANSCOM. In Deerfield, N. H., Aug. 17th, 1880, Joseph H. Hanscom, aged seventy-eight years.

Bro. Hanscom leaves a wife and two daughters to mourn, but not as those that have no hope. Bro. B. believed in the soon coming of Christ to raise the dead and change the living. He believed he should sleep until the resurrection, and said to his wife, "It will not be long before Jesus will come, and we shall meet to part no more."

"O hail! happy day."

C. S. SHERMAN.

KNAPP. In Stewartstown, N. H., Sept. 6th, 1880, of pneumonia, infant son of Ozra and Hannah Knapp, aged eight weeks.
D. N. CHADSEY.

SHERMAN. In Savoy Centre, Mass., Sept. 17, 1880, Lucy A. Sherman, aged seventy-five years.

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC NEWS.

London, Sept. 27. The Constantinople correspondent of the Times telegraphs: A spirit of reckless defiance is becoming more and more intense at the Palace. For several days past the Sultan has refused to listen to any objections made by his Ministers to the policy he has adopted, and he issued an order that any official who shall be heard expressing a contrary opinion shall be dismissed and exiled. Never before, since the time of Mahmoud the Terrible, has such an order been issued.

A dispatch from Berlin says that Montenegro has asked for a postponement of action against Dulcigno beyond Wednesday in order that she may complete her armaments.

Cettinje, Sept. 27. Riza Pasha has notified Prince Nikita that if the Montenegrins assume the offensive, Turkey will regard it as an act of war.

A dispatch from Constantinople says: The Ambassadors' reply to the Porte's circular on the Montenegrin question has been delivered to the Porte. The reply declines to grant more time or abandon the demonstration.

The Times corrrespondent at Gravosa says: A battalion of Turkish regulars has been observed in Dulcigno itself.

Ragusa, Sept. 27. The squadron which is to actually take part in the demonstration will be divided into three columns. The first will be formed of English and Italian ships, the second of Austrian and French ships, and the third of Russian and German ships.

Ragusa, Oct. 1. The Albanians continue to assemble in the neighborhood of Dulcigno in such numbers as to render its occupation more difficult than at the outset. Riza Pasha has advised the inhabitants of Dulcigno to remove their families to a place of safety in case of bombardment, but the people refused, saying they would rather die than submit to the Montenegrins.

The Berlin correspondent of the News says: The Prussian Government has requested a state of siege to be proclaimed at Leipsic and Hamburg, as they are considered hot-beds of Socialism.

It is alleged that the state of the west of Ireland is very alarming. It is well known that other land owners are marked for assassination and will be shot on the first opportunity. Quantities of arms have been brought into the country.

At Valparaiso, Aug. 13th, as the steamer was leaving, a severe earthquake was experienced. The spire of the church at Vina del Mar was thrown down.

It is reported at Coquimbo that the town of Illapel, in the interior, was destroyed by a shock and two hundred persons killed.

A strike among the English cotton operatives is considered inevitable.

It is reported that the Magdalen Island fisheries have failed, and that the people are in danger of starvation.

A fire in South Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 24th, destroyed $300,000 worth of property in about two hours and threw between two and three hundred men out of employment.

A passenger and a freight train collided Sept. 24th, near Terre Haute, Ind., and two locomotives were plunged down from a trestle work forty feet, killing two men and injuring several others.

Constantinople, Oct. 3. The European Ambassadors were instructed to grant the request of the Sultan for delay until to-day, but at the same time to demand that the Porte shall order Riza Pasha to allow the surrender of Dulcigno and withdraw the Turkish troops from the town. A petition signed by three hundred members of Ulema and a number of high dignitaries has been delivered to the Sultan urging resistance to the demands of the Powers.

There was a $30,000 fire in St. Louis on Sunday. Lighted cigar stumps dropped into a pile of shavings at Cincinnati on Sunday by a couple of thoughtless boys burned up $50,000 worth of property.

Special Notice.

To the Brethren and Friends of the Maine Lake Side Campmeeting: An earnest invitation is hereby given to all, who can, to meet on the Campground Oct. 18th, for work for one week, in making roads and grading the grounds. Some of the friends at Belgrade offer to give us some work if we will work this fall. We therefore hope and expect that the brethren from different parts of the State will make some sacrifice to give a few days' work, that there may be as little to do in the spring as possible. The interest of the meeting demands that we have as little work to do on the ground as possible near the time of the meeting, as brethren get tired out and cannot enjoy the meeting.

The Superintendent of the Rail Road is pleased with our success, and will pass all those over the road who wish to go to work on the grounds this fall for half fare. They will also transport all our Tent lumber free; besides this, they will put in a side track for us in the spring.

All who go by Rail Road to work must drop a card at once to our Secretary, Eld. R. R. York, Yarmouth, Me., informing him from what station they wish to go, that he may inform Mr. Tucker in season for half-fare tickets. Please do not neglect this. Horses, oxen, dump-carts, or wagons, and tools to work with, such as axes, shovels, crow-bars, hoes, etc., will be needed. Come prepared to take care of yourselves. Bring food and bedding, and you will find plenty of good room, and stoves in the boarding-house on the ground. Let all who can come with teams, prepared to cart gravel for grading roads, etc. Some of the Committee will be on the ground from Oct. 18th to the close of the week. For the Committee,

R. R. YORK, JER. CARR.

Conference Notice.

The Kennebec Valley Advent Christian Conference will hold its Third Session with the church at South Gardiner, Me., Booker meeting-house, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 14th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and hold over the following Sunday. We hope to see a large attendance of brethren and sisters at this meeting. Come filled with the Spirit of our Master, ready to work for the lost and perishing. Our time for labor is very short. The night someth, wherein no man can work. Homes will be provided for all who come. Call on Geo. Peacock, Joseph Meader and L. Totman.

J. R. HALL, President.
F. E. BLAISDELL, Secretary.

Iowa Annual Conference.

The South Central Iowa and Northern Missouri A. C. Conference will hold its Annual Session at the Chapel with Carmel Church, ten miles southeast of Leon, Decatur Co., Iowa, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 14th, and hold over Sunday. We desire that a special effort be made to make this meeting a blessing to the church and community. To this end we invite all to come to work, and let us pray for God's choicest blessing to be bestowed upon this meeting. Ministerial help is desired.

J. F. ADAIR, President.
JOHN NEWLIN, Sec.

NOTICE.—The good Lord willing, we shall hold a week of revival meetings with our people at Thayer's Corners, in the town of Burke, N. Y., commencing Oct. 12th, at 7 P. M. Meetings will be held every afternoon and evening. Brethren and sisters in regions around, come and help us in the name of the Lord. God is blessing us in our meetings now, but we feel like making a more personal effort. Those who cannot come, pray for us and the cause here. Our work is almost done. Soon Jesus will come. God help us to do what we can to save the perishing.

If any wish to come on the cars, please write us on what day and train you will come, and we will have a team to meet you. You will find hearts open to receive you. GEO. A. STREETER.

Spirit Birth.

I have published a Tract of eighteen pages with the above title. I am now ready to fill orders sent to my address.—S. D. CAREY, Santa Clara, California.

NOTICE.—There was left at my tent at Springfield (which I have not as yet found owners for), one plated butter-knife, marked Annie; one yellow and brown water-proof, somewhat worn; two parasols. I will send them by mail to the owners if they will write me.

ENOCH MORRILL, Box 342, Putnam, Ct.

NOTICE.—The York County Evangelist, A. G. Davis, will hold a meeting at Hollis Centre, Maine, commencing Thursday, Oct. 14th, at seven o'clock P. M., to be held over the Sabbath, and longer if the interest demands. This meeting is free for all. Will the brethren and sisters come and meet with us? Pray that much good may be done.

T. L. CARLL.

NOTICE.—There will be an Ordinance Meeting held at Edenboro, Pa., commencing Oct. 16th, and continue until the 24th. Services conducted by Eld. M. Beck, of Ohio. All are invited.

M. BECK.

NOTICE.—To all whom it may concern: Whereas, in the providence of God, and in compliance with our unanimous request, Bro. H. Pollard has cast in his lot with us to labor for the cause of Christ in this vicinity, notice is hereby given that the pastoral charge of this church is committed to his care from this date until further notice. By order of the church, WM. M. LASLEY, Clerk.

NOTICE.

The Annual Fall Meeting of the Executive Committee of the Alton Bay Campmeeting Association will be held in Portland, Me., Oct. 19th. Important business is expected to come up, involving the future interests of the Association. A full attendance is desired. H. K. CHOATE, Pres.
W. H. MITCHELL, Sec.

NOTICE.

To the Churches of the Hoosick Valley Conference:—Dear brethren and friends: As the time draws near for the Annual Meeting of the Conference, the church at Hoosick, with characteristic liberality, will open its doors, and invites all to come up to this annual feast of refreshing. In the year that has passed God has blest us as a people. We are still the recipients of His love and mercy. Let us manifest our love and zeal for Him and His cause by our gathering together, not only to counsel but to pray and "exhort one another." The day of redemption draweth nigh. Let us be up and doing the Master's will, that when He comes we may receive the "crown of life." Conference meeting will commence Wednesday, Oct. 13th, at 7½ o'clock P. M., and continue over the following Sunday.

Teams will meet passengers at Hoosick. Come, one and all, prepared to stay through the meeting, and labor for the Lord.

CHAS. A. PHELPS, President.
A. F. MOORE, Secretary.

Yearly Meeting in Darien, N. Y.

The Lord willing, our Annual Meeting in Darien, N. Y., will commence Friday evening, Oct. 8th, and hold over the 10th. A general invitation is extended to the scattered brethren and sisters to meet with us. Homes will be provided for all who come. Teams will meet the trains from East and West at Croft's on the N. Y. C. R. R., at 6 P. M. Friday, and also from the East at 9 36 Saturday morning. Any that would like to be met at any other time, please write to me, or to B. C. Simonds, Darien, N. Y., or George Strong, West Batavia, N. Y. For the Church,

A. P. MOORE, Pastor.

P.S. Eld. Miles Grant is expected to be present.

NOTICE.—Will those who subscribed for Tent and Missionary purposes at our last Conference at South Butler please send in their subscriptions, as the treasury is empty, and the Tent is still in new fields doing missionary work. Will you sustain it as you have pledged?

A. P. MOORE, Treasurer, Alexander, N. Y.

NOTICE.—The Tent is in Batavia, N. Y., and is to remain as long as the interest demands. This is an important point. Pray for the meeting.

B. P. STEVENS. A. P. MOORE.

NOTICE.—The Lord willing, the next Annual Session of the New Hampshire A. C. Conference will be held with the church at South Barnstead, commencing Tuesday evening, Oct. 12th, to hold over the Sabbath. Fare will be reduced on the Concord R. R. Tickets for sale at Concord, Suncook, Manchester, New Market Junction, Portsmouth and Nashua. Those wishing to go over the Northern or Concord and Claremont R. R. will send to E. D. Clough, Concord, N. H., and he will send them tickets for two cents per mile. Those coming over the B. C. & M. R. R. will buy regular tickets, and receive return passes at the meeting. Conveyance will be furnished from cars to meeting. Let all come who can.

I. W. PIPER, President.
C. H. FLETCHER, Secretary.

REVIVAL MEETINGS will be commenced in Salem, Mass., Thursday, Oct. 7th, conducted by Bro. H. A. King. He will have his great Prophetic Chart with him. The meetings will be continued as long as thought best. Pray for us.

C. GOODRICH, for the Church.

NOTICE.—The California A. C. Quarterly Meeting will be held in Fairfield, commencing Friday, Oct. 8th, at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue over Sunday. A good attendance is desired, and it is hoped that there will be a good representation from all the churches. A. J. YOUNG, Sec.

NOTICE.—The next Union Quarterly Meeting of the Northern Indiana and Michigan State Conference will be held at Branch, near Cold Water, Mich., commencing Oct. 14th, and continue over Lord's day. We trust that all lovers of truth and of the Saviour's coming will come in the fulness of the gospel of Christ to this meeting, to work earnestly for the salvation of the perishing, for it is manifest that our work for sinners is fast winding up. O for a fresh unction from Heaven to fit us for our work! The friends of Jesus at Branch will be ready with open hearts and hands to receive you. Teams will be at Cold Water on arrival of trains from the east and west, between one and three P. M., to convey friends to the meeting. Be sure to come the 14th.

A. N. SEYMOUR, President.
C. D. BERRY, Secretary.

Notice.

At the next session of our Annual Conference, which commences in October, we will have before us for discussion the following questions:

1. Church order and church government.
2. Should we be a distinct people?
3. The Bible theory of future life.
4. The nature and responsibility of our work.
5. Why preach the coming of Christ at hand?
6. Future retribution, its nature and when due.
7. The proof of Jesus' Messiahship.
8. What is the soul and spirit of man?

The brethren and sisters, whether ministers or lay members, are requested to select one or more of the above subjects for an essay to be read at that time. Those who choose topics will please signify their selection to me at Bethlehem, Iowa.

J. F. ADAIR, President.

NOTICE.—The A. C. Conference of Connecticut will hold its Annual Meeting at Scitico, Ct., commencing Oct. 13th, and continue over the following Sabbath. We earnestly hope that every church will be represented by delegates, as it is an important session, when officers for the coming year are to be chosen, and also our Campmeeting Committee. The church in Scitico has given us a cordial invitation. Come early as possible, so we can dispose of our conference business, and be able to commence at once to labor for the perishing. Scitico is situated on the branch of the New York and New England Rail Road. All can be ticketed through from any station on the main Road. B. HITCHCOCK, President.

NOTICE.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the Advent Christian Churches of Sanilac County will be held with the Port Sanilac Church, commencing Friday evening, Oct. 15th, and holding over Sunday. We hope to see all lovers of Jesus and His soon coming present. Come praying, filled with the Holy Spirit, and we will have one more time of laboring, shouting and praising together.

For the Churches, OLIVER YAKE, Sec'y.

NOTICE.—The fourth Quarterly Meeting of District No. 3, State of Kansas, will be held at the Jackson school-house, three miles east of Oxford, Sumner Co., Kansas, commencing Saturday, Oct. 16th. There will be services at 11 o'clock A. M. Let all the brethren possible be present. Officers are to be elected at this meeting. Come, brethren, in the name of the Lord, and let us have a good meeting together. W. D. BOWMAN, Pres.

MICHIGAN CONFERENCE.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the North Western Mich. A. C. Conference will be held at Ashland, Newaygo Co., commencing Oct. 15th, and continuing over Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to persons of every denomination. Come and hear for yourselves, throw aside prejudice, accept the "blessed hope," and prepare to meet the Master when He comes. In behalf of the Conference,

DANIEL WEAVER, President.
ROBERT BAILEY, Secretary.

NOTICE.—The Advent Christian Missionary Society of Michigan will hold its first meeting at Ashland, Newaygo Co., on Saturday, Oct. 16th, at two o'clock, for the election of officers, and transact such other business as may be for the interest of the cause. Let there be a full attendance of members. Those members who cannot attend, may send their vote by letter to Mrs. Mary Barton, Ashland, Newaygo Co., Mich. Mark on the envelope "M. S." STEPHEN DUDLEY, Pres.

NOTICE.—There will be a meeting of days at Hollis Centre, Me., commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 14th, at seven o'clock P. M., and continue over Sunday. Brethren scattered abroad, come and meet with us. This meeting is free for all. A. G. DAVIS.

NOTICE.—The Mission Tent of the Northwestern Evangelical District No. 2 of Kansas is now in the field. Any one wishing our services and the Tent will please address me at Burr Oak, Jewell Co., Kansas, care of W. P. Kelch.

T. R. COMSTOCK.

NOTICE.—If any of our brethren and sisters in Oregon and Washington Territory desire meetings, that the good news of the kingdom may be published to their fellow men, and that a people may be made ready for the coming of the Just One, will they please write to us, and let their wants be known. Direct to J. C. and S. E. Smith, Walla Walla, Washington Territory.

Appointments.

Appointments must be received as early as TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon), to insure insertion for the coming week.

Resolved, That no appointments be published in the "Crisis" henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given.

Resolved, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister or ministers of the information received, as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquital.

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—OZIAS GOODRICH, Boston, Mass.

THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD.

BY MRS. M. C. EDWARDS.

This is a Poem on the union of the church with the world, showing in graphic language how the marriage took place, and what resulted. It is a strong and keen reproof to "world-loving" professors of Christianity. Published by I. C. Wellcome. Price by mail 2 cts., or 50 cts. per hundred. Both the above sold at the "Crisis" Office.

"THE REMINDER

of a long train of events about to culminate in the establishment of the everlasting kingdom of God." "By a Wayfarer." Published by the Berean Class, St. Mary's, N. B.

This is a pamphlet containing a well arranged chain of genealogy of the family of God and kings of Israel from Adam to the captivity of king Zedekiah, with a statement of the prophecies and history of the Babylonish captivity and Israel's condition under Gentile dominion, illustrated by the finest and most elaborate cut we ever saw of the image of Daniel 2nd, and beasts of Dan. 7th, inwrought in a map of the countries governed by the Gentile Monarchies. To this is added a sketch of history of the rise, progress and end of Mohammedan power, showing that the prophecies relating to all these governments are [illegible] to and the Lord Jesus Christ is [illegible], well-reign on David's throne. [illegible] of a wide circulation, truthful [illegible] it. Price by mail 10 [illegible]. [illegible] at the "Crisis" Office.

A LITTLE WHILE.

BY IDA L. LEWIS.

"A little while, a little while";
 The words sound strangely sweet.
Farewell the grief—welcome the smile
 Of heavenly joy complete.

"A little while," and God's own hand
 Shall wipe away all tears,
And banish from the careworn brow
 All trace of changeful years.

"A little while," and He shall come.
 These eyes shall then behold
The King, and from His hands receive
 A crown of gleaming gold.

"A little while," and He shall break
 Death's cruel, icy bands,
And we with joy again shall feel
 The clasp of loving hands.

"A little while"—we heed not now
 The careless world's sharp scorn,
The hidden wounds shall all be healed
 At coming of that morn.

His own the Lord of life shall lead
 Where living waters flow,
Where falls no darkening shade of night,
 Nor lurks a trace of woe.

Our yearning souls cry out, How long
 Ere all our sorrows cease?
We pray the day of rest to come;
 We sigh for home and peace.

EXPERIENCE.

BY H. FORD.

The first I remember in regard to another world was when I was some eight years old. My mother told me that if I was a bad boy I should go to hell when I died and be burned forever and ever in a lake of fire and brimstone; but if I was a good boy I should go to heaven and live with God and all the good people. I made up my mind I would be good. Some two years after, Eld. Woolley, an old-fashioned shouting Methodist, held a meeting at my father's house. His text was—"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." I shall never forget how he shouted, nor how he prayed, nor how the brethren and sisters with their straight dresses and white handkerchiefs on their necks shouted. Such exhortations would not be allowed now in our churches; they would be called crazy fanatics.

At the funeral of a playmate of mine, the minister spoke of the judgment day, when all the people of the earth were to be gathered at the judgment seat of Christ, and He was going to separate them as a shepherd divides his sheep from the goats. I never shall forget my thoughts at that time. He had said the little girl was an angel in heaven, and then said she was coming back to judgment, and to be mixed up with the wicked after she had been in heaven for ages. This idea was more than I could comprehend; and right here was the starting point of my infidelity. I knew that the child was dead, and there in the coffin, and his doctrine that she had gone to heaven and was coming back to judgment, mixed up with, and separated from, the wicked, was to me so ridiculous that, although a boy, I did not believe a word of it, and consequently discarded the Bible altogether.

Finally he closed up with the description of a burning hell, which God created for the express purpose of punishing the greater portion of the human family through never-ending ages; their sufferings and torments increasing as ages rolled round; and we poor creatures being created by the will of the Almighty, and every act of our lives being foreordained, I could not see there was any thing for me to do only to move along. Whatever I did was only fulfilling the part for which God had created me. But my mind was continually uneasy; and the more I pondered over these things the more perplexed I became. Everything seemed to be created for the express purpose and benefit of mankind; the animal as well as the vegetable creation must be wholly for the human family, and for what purpose were we created? How could all these things be, and where and how did they originate, were questions I could not comprehend without admitting the power and being of the Almighty; and when I admitted that, common sense seemed to say, If there is a God, the Bible must be His Word; but this hell-fire doctrine was too much for me, so I wandered along year after year, until Wm. Miller's lectures came out. My father hired me to read them; and by comparing prophecies with history, seeing their wonderful agreement, especially the "Great Image" in the 2nd of Daniel, I was compelled to acknowledge a power behind the scene—a God that revealeth and maketh known what shall be in the latter days.

Then the going to heaven and coming to judgment, etc., seemed to come up with double force. Something seemed to say, Examine the Bible for yourself. So for the first time in my life I commenced to examine the Bible, without any theory or any ideas. I took a Concordance, and as the hell-fire doctrine had been such a mountain before me, I examined that first, and if ever a mortal was astonished, I was to learn that instead of hell being a burning pit of fire and brimstone, as it had been continually preached, it was only a repository for those falling asleep; and that good old David was still there, not only body but soul too, which our preachers told us went to heaven at death. I saw that Christ also had been there, and that His Father had raised Him out of hell, as David prophesied He would ages before, and that His soul should not be left in hell (or Joseph's new tomb), nor His flesh see corruption. David also said his heart rejoiced and his tongue was glad and his flesh should rest in hope. I found that instead of hell being such an awful burning place, it was only the grave; and the more I studied the Bible the more like the work of a God it looked to me; and long before I got through Miller's Lectures my infidelity was awfully shaken. I became satisfied from the prophecies that there must be an overruling power, one that could foretell the end from the beginning, and consequently the Bible was His Word; for when we acknowledge there is a God, it must be the height of ignorance to question the truth of the Bible. I found, according to the Word, we were created as free as the air we breathe; life and death were set before us, and if we chose life, we could obtain it by following the great Pattern; and I learned that instead of the wicked being burned eternally in hell, in the day of judgment they were to be as stubble, and when this earth is dissolved they will be burned up root and branch and be as though they had not been. When I [illegible] in a God, I was satisfied I must become [illegible] creature in order to live forever.

In the summer of '42, I was haying with one of my neighbors, a drinking and profane man. We got to talking about religion. I said to him that I had no faith in religion; it was nothing but mesmerism, or the effect of mind upon mind. He turned round with tears in his eyes and said to me, "I can't hear you talk so; I know there is an eternal reality in religion"; and he gave me a history of his experience. I was perfectly astonished. That fall I was led to make an effort to become a Christian, if there was such a thing, and God in His goodness saw fit to adopt me into His family, giving me all that I asked for—an evidence that all the mesmeric spirits of devils could not account for nor counterfeit.

I was alone in my barn, with none but my horse to mesmerize me, at eleven o'clock at night, on my knees, praying to God for light, and that the awful load of unbelief and horror that seemed to envelope me might be removed, and I made to know that there was a God and a heaven. O how I could rejoice if I only could get an evidence right from Heaven that there was life beyond the grave! Death, eternal death had always been an awful thought to me. I could not seem to endure the thought to be "as though I had not been," and it seemed as though I should rather suffer in hell than to be utterly destroyed. When I knelt there I resolved that I would never arise until God should give me an evidence that there was a God, one that could kill and make alive. I promised that if He would only give me an evidence of His existence I would declare to the whole world His goodness and power.

He answered me, and it seemed as if a stream of burning light came down through the barn, with a sound like that caused by something passing swiftly through the air, and filled me full of light and glory; and it seemed as though I was going up, shouting Glory! Glory! there is a God! As I started for the house, leaping and praising God, my wife met me more than half way, shouting, "God has forgiven you! believe! believe!" Then it seemed as if an audible voice said, "Stop shouting; you will scare your neighbors." I shouted the more. I wanted to raise them, and tell them there was a God. I was so happy to know there was a God. I got on my horse between eleven and twelve o'clock at night and rode through my neighborhood, and waked up my friends telling them there was a God; for it really seemed to me they did not believe it any more than I had. God went with me in His mighty power, and I really thought then that I could convince the world of the reality of God and religion. It was all Glory to God! No other expression of language could fill the place of Glory.

When I returned home I took the Bible to see how that looked. I opened to the 15th of John, which I had read many times before, but never saw any beauty in it till now. The first verse—"I am the Vine, and my Father is the Husbandman," seemed to be gilded with gold. O how I shouted Glory. I said, I never shall be broken off through unbelief. The whole chapter seemed so plain, so full of God and His love and light, that I could but wonder why I had not seen it before.

The next morning I arose early and started across the field to see my profane friend who had declared to me there was a God. God seemed to go with me. The birds and everything seemed to be praising Him, and I went leaping and shouting, Glory! Hallelujah! this is not my home. There is a God and a life beyond this vale of tears. I found him in his house and said to him, "There is a God surely, and O how can you live so?" His wife, an infidel, came into the room and broke down, and was soon converted. They came out to meeting in the afternoon, and he confessed his awful backslidings and started again for the kingdom.

The next Sunday at the meeting there were three ministers. When they had prayed and sang, I could sit on my seat no longer, but arose and told the people there was a God, and that he had redeemed me from infidelity and the devil, and I was a new creature; that this earth was not my home until it was restored; that we were to be somebody and live always on this earth in God's everlasting kingdom established under the whole heavens; and that the wicked, instead of suffering eternally in hell-fire, were to be burned up root and branch and be as though they had not been. I began to think they would say I was crazy or a fool, and feeling I had ruined the meeting I sat down. But as soon as I sat down, one old Congregational brother arose and said, "You are not crazy nor a fool, but clothed and in your right mind." He commenced confessing and acknowledged all I said was true, and they continued confessing and exhorting without intermission until four o'clock in the afternoon. A glorious reformation followed, some over forty being baptized in a small town of a few inhabitants. From that time down to this I never for a moment have doubted that Wm. Miller was raised up to awaken this world to the great truths of the Second Advent.

As some of our Advent friends are advocating so many new theories and ideas, my mind runs back to 1844. I shall never forget those times nor the power of faith manifested in God's people. They were filled with the Holy Ghost. They made the infidels tremble and the world acknowledge that God was in the move.

DIVERSITY OF GIFTS.

A man never knows what is his true nature, nor what God wants to do with him in the world until he has given himself clear over to Christ. Do you know the reason why there are numbers of Christians almost exactly alike—like so many eggs in a basket? Just because they copy one another. They have before their mind a certain ideal, or rather specimen, of what a "good Christian" ought to be, and they try to be that. So there is a great sameness about them; whereas, if each one gives himself to God to inquire, "What wilt Thou have me to do?" we shall have variety in unity, which is the characteristic of every one of God's works; and the church will be a great church; will be a beautiful church, with an infinite diversity of gifts—each man in his own place, and no man saying to another, "You are wrong, because you are not employing your time just as I do," but each one saying to the great Master, who gives to every man his work, "Thanks be unto Thee, that Thou hast given him his part and me my part, and we all work together for Thy glory." Theodore Monod.

AN INCIDENT IN LUTHER'S LIFE.

In the commencement of the 16th century there lived at the fine fortress of Erbach, in the near Odenwald, a very honorable and noble Knight, Eberhard von Erbach. But most prominent in his character was his almost fanatical piety, and he had no remonstrance to utter when the people called him the most faithful son of the Church. To serve his Lord and Saviour with his all, even with his blood, seemed to him the most noble aim of life, and he had his good sword dedicated to the service of the Holy Virgin.

It was in the spring in the year of 1518, at a late hour, when the pious Knight von Erbach, with many of his retainers, halted before the hotel "Zum Riesen," in Miltenberg, and expressed his desire to the hotel-keeper to stay over night. Yet he entered with only one of his servants into the hotel; the rest of them he sent off with short and strict commands.

He demanded from the host a room, took his evening meal silently, went early to bed, and sank deep in thought, which sometimes would come to utterance, showing the excited state of his mind. Just intending to say his evening prayer, he heard through the thin, wooden wall that separated him from the next room, a powerful song from a rich baritone voice. It was a holy evening hymn. The knight understood every word of the hymn; and the pious, God-inspired content of the same, the beautiful melody, the expressive execution, and the masterly accompaniment on the guitar, delighted the knight more and more. He crossed himself and folded his hands, and when the pious singer had finished a stanza, he would fall in with lisping "Amen" When the singer had finished the hymn, he added a short, powerful prayer, in which he recommended himself and all good men to the Holy Trinity, and concluded with the prayer that God may open the hearts of the hardened sinners and erring men to the rays of His charity.

The knight is lisping his "Amen! Amen!" and feels himself so exalted and inspired as he has not been for a long time, and he falls asleep with blessed feelings. With the first rays of the morning sun he was awakened by the sound of the guitar and a lively hymn from his neighbor. Oh, how much was this song of thanks to the Creator of the universe inspired with the breath of piety and true love to God. Involuntarily the knight folds his hands, a soft sensation comes over him, and lisps after each stanza, "Amen! Amen!" And when finally the song is ended, he crosses himself piously and rises to make inquiries from the host.

"Who is my neighbor up stairs, that delighted and refreshed me so much with his singing and praying?"

"It is a priest of middle age, and noble and venerable appearance, whose name I do not know; he arrived yesterday evening shortly before you, in a very modest, one-horse carriage, and intends soon to continue his journey; as he has paid his bill and already ordered his horse."

"Go and tell him that I wish to thank him personally and verbally for the delight he has given me by his beautiful songs of last night and this morning; ask him to give me an interview for a few moments only, as I am likewise in great haste to get away on important matters. But tell him I must shake hands with him by all means."

The knight followed the host and took the door-latch out of his hand. The pious singer stood before the pious knight and responded to his friendly greeting with the like heartiness. He was a man of about thirty-five years, of middle size, but strongly built in body; his countenance was not what you call handsome, but imposing, showing mildness, and yet strength and decision. His large blue eye was lively and intelligent, his auburn hair lay around his high forehead and the strong, powerful neck. His mouth seemed to speak before it opened. The whole figure heightened the impression which the Knight von Erbach had already received by his singing, so that he felt at once at home with him.

"I come, venerable father, to give you my heartfelt thanks for the enjoyment you have given me," said the knight, "and although I was told by the host that you are in haste to continue your journey, and although I am in haste myself, yet I must pray you to sing me another such hymn. My soul is thirsty for the spring of life that flows from yours."

He took his guitar and accompained a hymn. It was a hymn of such exalted beauty of faith, that it did not miss its effect on the excited soul of the pious knight. There he sat with folded hands, occasionally lisping "Amen! Amen!" while tears were running down his cheeks. When the stranger had finished his song, the knight, overcome by emotion, stretched both hands out to him, and both men, with closed hands, looking at each other, formed a higher union of souls without words. Then the knight said; "Your beautiful hymn puts a question in my mind: What is your opinion in regard to the teachings of St. Augustine, that by our confessions, works and repentance, we cannot be delivered from our sins, but only by the sacrifice of the blood of Jesus Christ, since human nature has been depraved and unfitted for doing good, by the fall of Adam?"

The priest listened and sweetly smiling, answered:

"Truly it seems to me that beside your pious faith, you have a good deal of theology in your body, and therefore I may talk with you as with one of my own profession!" The knight nodded his head and the priest began with remarkable oratory to speak of the fathers of the Church and in particular of the merits of St. Augustine. He honored at the same time the opinions and views of adversaries, but took a firm stand for Augustine, whom he considered next to St. Paul, the greatest prince of the Church, and the strongest pillar of pure faith. At times the knight opposed him or risked a question, which caused the speaker to bring forth more and new arguments.

Unnoticed by both, time had moved on—several hours had passed—then a knock at the door, and the host entered, asking if he should order to unharness the horses again; both servants, of knight and priest, were anxious and uneasy, as they full well knew that both gentlemen had demanded a quick departure.

"Help, Jesus, Maria!" said the knight, rising, "you have made me forget my duty with your pleasing talk, a talk such as I never heard before from a minister, and yet I have also a pious and God-pleasing work which will have your assent, venerable father!"

"Then I may know what important work you have to do, Knight von Erbach?"

"Certainly. And you must give me your blessing so that it may be successful for the glory of God and the holy mother Church!"

"Then tell."

"I have turned out with my retainers, and they have already taken possession of the route to Wertheim, where soon I will join them, to make the capture of a heretic, a blasphemist, a roast for the devil, who as I have espied, is surely coming that way."

"Whom do you mean?" attentively asked the stranger.

"The impertinent Augustine monk from Wittenberg, who last fall lifted his blasphemous voice and hand against his mother church and who scorned and trampled under foot its holy laws. He will travel to Heidelberg."

"You m[illegible] Dr. Martin Luther?"

"Whom [illegible], as this fool, black sheep of the faithful herd, who has given so much trouble and disturbance in the whole empire!"

"And what do you intend to do with the Wittenberg monk after you have caught him?"

"I w[illegible] incarcerate him in my strong tower, a[illegible] priests shall torture him until the d[illegible] driven out of him, and he returns a [illegible] sinner to the cross of Christ!"

"What [illegible] does not change at your desire, but continues to stand at his conviction of truth?"

"Do you think that I have spent a large sum of money for nothing, to get well posted in regard to his journey to Heidelberg? He shall fall in my trap without his paying for it. If he does not mind my well-meant advice, and he remains obstinate, then I will transport him to Rome, I, with my retainers, to deliver him to the holy father, who may burn him alive, so he may have a foretaste of hell fire, which awaits all blasphemists. I must go, though not knowing your name, venerable father. You are one of the most pious, learned, and God-inspired sons of the mother church, I ever met with."

"I will fulfill your desire. You need not trouble yourself much longer, the man you want to capture stands before you. I am Martin Luther."

The knight stood like a statue; only his wide-opened, staring eyes showed he was yet alive. He was unable to speak; even his thoughts seemed to have left him.

Dr. Luther continued smiling: "You see I am in your power. If you really want to throw in your tower-prison a harmless traveler who confided in public safety, solely because he does not believe in the power of absolution of sin by the Pope as you do, and without having heard his arguments, very well; then you may send for your armed servants and take me prisoner. I have no arms but the living Word."

"Not so!" answered, ashamed, von Erbach. "I have heard you, and I want to hear more. We are in no hurry now, and we will send the horses into the stable. I will send my servant out, to call the others to return. It is a wonderful ordination of God that you arrived yesterday, while I expected you to-day. Let us sit down; I am anxious to hear more from you. But before you explain what you have against the Pope and the absolution of sin by the priests, come and sing me another hymn, so as to get my soul in the proper exaltation. If you know a song of praise to the holy Augustine, then sing that."

Luther took his guitar and, after a prelude, praised in powerful word and song the great African prince of the church. Then he commenced to talk. He was in an uncommonly exalted state of mind, and probably never before did speech flow from his lips more beautifully and convincingly. The knight's eyes glistened, his hands were folded across his chest, and occasionally acknowledging, he would nod his head. Hour after hour passed, and neither speaker nor hearer heeded it, until the host entered the room, reporting that all the servants had returned and were awaiting orders from their lord; and also that the little one-horse carriage was awaiting the priest.

"Now, then, in the name of God, come with me, Dr. Martin Luther," said the knight, deeply moved. "You have convinced and converted me completely, and God has enlightened my heart with your clear, reasonable, hearty speech. Come with me to my castle. And, see! so wonderfully has God ordained [illegible] I, who intended to carry you the[illegible] [illegible]oner, return as your prisoner to [illegible] home, which, through you, is [illegible] to a house of love and true fe[illegible] I bless your hand which has rem[illegible] bandage from my spiritual eyes, a[illegible] the chains of the pure and true fa[illegible] your prisoner to his wife, that she may be blest with the same grace through you."

And the enlightened knight took the fearless knight of the Saviour by the hand, led him down [illegible] helped him into the little modest [illegible] which the servants surrounded, [illegible] was riding at the side of the Doctor.

So they moved along through the green valley into the green mountains of the Odenwald, to the neat little town of Erbach, and toward its stately castle, chatting cheerily. The knight had sent a servant ahead to announce their arrival. And when they came near the little town, suddenly all the bells chimed, and the school-master came along with the little children of the town, singing, "Blessed is he, who cometh in the name of the Lord!" And the music-band of the town played lively airs.

To the highly astonished lady of the castle, who awaited them at the gate, her lord and husband said, "Here he is! But we have changed places. He is the capturer, I am the prisoner. As a Saul I went out to do him harm; as a Paul I return converted by him. And for that God be praised forever! Amen!"—Selected by J. Shattuck.

The peace which Christ gives to His disciples is not a peace which comes of the disciple's surroundings; it is a result of nearness to Him who is the center of the universe, and who is unmoved by surroundings. The Christian's peace is as great in times of storm as in times of calm. When the tempest of sorrow or of opposition rages on every side, then he who is one with Jesus realizes "the peace of God which passeth all understanding."

HEARTS OVERWORKED.

No organ in the body is so liable to be overworked as the heart. When every other part of the body sleeps, it keeps on its perpetual motion. Every increased effort or action demands from the heart more force. A man runs to catch a train, and his heart beats audibly. He drinks wine, and his blood rushes through its reservoir faster than ever was intended by nature. His pulse rises after each course at dinner. A telegram arrives, and his heart knocks at his side. And when any one of these "excitements" is over, he is conscious of a corresponding depression—a "sinking" or "emptiness," as it is called. The healthy action of all the members of our frame depends upon the supply of blood received from this central fountain. When the heart's action is arrested, the stomach, which requires from it a large supply of blood, becomes enfeebled. The brain, also waiting for blood, is inactive. The heart is a very willing member; but if it be made to fetch and carry incessantly; if it be "put upon," as the unselfish member of a family often is, it undergoes a disorganization which is equivalent to its rupture. And this disorganization begins too often now-a-days in the hearts of very young children. Parents know that if their sons are to succeed at any of those competitive examinations which have now become so exigent, high-pressure is employed. Hence young persons are stimulated to overwork by rewards and punishments. The sight of a clever boy who is being trained for competition is a sad one. These precocious, coached-up children are never well. Their mental exitement keeps up a flush, which, like the excitement caused by strong drink in older children, looks like health, but has no relation to it. In a word, the intemperance of education is overstraining and breaking their young hearts.

If in the school-room some young hearts are broken from mental strain, in the playground and in the gymnasium others succumb to physical strain. "It is no object of mine," says Dr. Richardson, "to underrate the advantages of physical exercise for the young; but I can scarcely overrate the dangers of those fierce competitive exercises which the world in general seems determined to applaud. I had the opportunity once in my life of living near a great trainer, himself a champion rower. He was a patient of mine, suffering from the very form of induced heart-disease of which I am now speaking, and he gave me ample means of studying the conditions of many of those whom he trained both for running and for rowing. I found occasion, certainly, to admire the physique to which his trained men were brought; the strength of muscle they attained, the force of their heart; but the admiration was qualified by the stern fact of the results." The symptoms of failure of the heart from overwork are unusual restlessness and irritability. Sleepless nights are followed by an inability to digest a proper amount of food; and meals, which have probably been taken at irregular intervals and in haste, become objectionable. Stimulants are now resorted to; but these nourish a workingman as little as a whip nourishes a horse. They give him an exciting fillip; but the best medical men tell us that in nine quarts of alcohol there is less nourishment than could be put on the blade of a table-knife.

We speak now of the heart-breaking effect of anger. A man is said to be "red" or "white" with rage. In using these expressions we are physiologically speaking of the nervous condition of the minute circulation of the man's blood. "Red" rage means partial paralysis of minute blood-vessels; and "white" rage means temporary suspension of the action of the prime mover of the circulation itself. But such disturbances cannot often be produced without the occurrence of permanent organic evils of the vital organs, especially of the heart and of the brain. One striking example is given by Dr. Richardson in the case of a member of his own profession: "This gentleman told me that an original irritability of temper was permitted, by want of due control, to pass into a disposition of almost persistent or chronic anger, so that every trifle in his way was a cause of unwarrantable irritation. Sometimes his anger was so vehement that all about him were alarmed for him even more than for themselves; and when the attack was over, there were hours of sorrow and regret in private, which were as exhausting as the previous rage. In the midst of one of these outbreaks of short, severe madness, he suddenly felt, to use his own expression, as if his 'heart were lost.' He reeled under the impression, was nauseated and faint; then recovering, he put his hand to his wrist, and discovered an intermittent action of the heart as the cause of his faintness. He never completely rallied from that shock; and to the day of his death, ten years later, he was never free from the intermittency. 'I am broken-hearted.' And so he was; but the knowledge of the broken heart tempered marvelously his passions and saved him many years of a really useful life. He died ultimately of an acute febrile disorder."

Wine is commonly said to make "glad the heart," but such hilarity is short-lived; and it would seem, from the latest discoveries of science, that the drunkard is even physically a heart-broken man. The heart is nothing more than a force-pump to keep up the circulation of the blood. The pulse indicates the beats or strokes of the pump. If the beats be more than seventy per minute in a middle-aged person, something is wrong; there has been some kind of over stimulus. The use of alcohol increases the number of beats, just as a violent fire makes a kettle boil over.

This over-action of the heart is a terrible enemy to good health. It is killing by inches; The fact, however, only breaks on people when the mischief is far advanced, and past remedy. Our counsel to habitual imbibers of alcohol is, "Look to your pulse;" for on the proper working of the heart, length of days, in a great measure, depends. The throbbing of the heart is a criterion and guide which all can understand.

These few illustrations show us that, if we would keep our hearts whole, we must cultivate that self-knowledge, self-reverence, and self-control, that "alone lead life to sovereign power." Knowing well that the "pains and penalties of idleness" are even greater than those of over-work and anxiety, we warn the indolent not to lay the flattering unction contained in the foregoing words to their souls. They are quoted for the sake of those whose danger lies in an opposite direction.—Chamber's Journal.

OBEDIENCE TO CHRIST.

Some Christians will never get into full fellowship with Christ because they neglect to study His Word and search out what His will is. It ought to be a serious work with every Christian, especially in commencing his career, to find what is the will of his Lord on all subjects. Half the Christian people in the world are content to ask, "What is the rule of our church?" That is not the question; the point is, "What is the rule of Christ?" Some plead, "My father and mother before me did so." I sympathize in a measure with that feeling; filial reverence commands admiration; but yet in spiritual things we are to call no man "father," but make the Lord Jesus our master and exemplar. God has not placed your conscience in your mother's keeping, nor has He committed to your father the right or the power to stand responsible for you; every man must bear his own burden, and render his own account; search ye the Scriptures for yourselves, each one of you, and follow no rule but that which is inspired. Take your light directly from the sun. Let holy Scripture be your unquestioned rule of faith and practice; and if there is any point about which you are uncertain, I charge you by your loyalty to Christ, if ye are His friends, try and find out what His will is; and when once you are sure upon that point, never mind the human authorities or dignities that oppose His law. Let there be no question, no hesitation, no delay. If He commands you, carry out His will though the gates of hell thunder at you. You are not His friends, or at any rate, you are not so His friends as to enjoy the friendship, unless you resolutely seek to please Him in all things. The intimacy between you and Christ will be disturbed by sin; you cannot lean your head upon His bosom and say, "Lord, I know thy will, but I do not mean to do it." Could you look up into that dear face—that visage once so marred, now lovelier than heaven itself—and say, "My Lord, I love thee, but I will not do thy will in every point"? By the very love He bears to you, He will chasten you for that rebellious spirit if you indulge it. It is a horrible evil; holy eyes will not endure it. He is a jealous lover and will not tolerate sin, which is His rival.

"Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." O beloved, see to this! under all the crosses, and losses, and trials of life, there is no comfort more desirable than the confidence that you have aimed at doing your Lord's will. If a man suffers for Christ's sake while steadily pursuing the course of holiness, he may rejoice in such suffering. Losses borne in the defence of the right and the true are gains. Jesus is never nearer His friends than when they bravely bear shame for His sake. If we get into trouble by our own folly, we feel the smart at our very heart; but if we are wounded in our Lord's battles, the scars are honorable. For His sake we may accept reproach, and bind it about us as a wreath of honor. Jesus delights to be the Companion of those who are cast out by kinsfolk and acquaintances for the truth's sake and for fidelity to His cross. They may call the faithful one fanatic, and enthusiast, and all such ill-sounding names; but over these there is no need to fret, for the honor of being Christ's friend infinitely outweighs the world's opinion. When we follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth, He is responsible for results; we are not.—Spurgeon.

DOES GOD ANSWER PRAYER?

BY MARY LAMPREY.

Does God answer the prayers of His children? Yes, I believe he does, and will answer the very humblest. There are some of God's little ones, whom the world despises, that have gone into their closets, unseen by mortals, and there in faith and trust asked the Lord for just the things they needed. They have asked for temporal blessings, and received just what they asked for. I can bear witness to this. I am like a bruised reed, all crushed. The Lord in infinite wisdom has laid His afflicting hand upon us for many years.

My husband has been sick with lingering consumption for fifteen years, and is now apparently very near the gates of death, yet full of hope and trust. Many times during these years fervent prayers have gone up from our humble dwelling that God would raise him, and God heard the cries of His little ones, and tempered the wind to His shorn lamb, and gave him rest and comfort for a time.

Three years ago this autumn my husband was taken sick, and in a few days after I fell victim to disease myself. We did not send for a physician, but trusted in Elijah's God. One day there came to visit us a brother of humble pretensions, and as I was suffering exceedingly I asked him if he could pray the Lord to raise me up from that sickness, so that I could care for my husband. The brother knelt and simply asked the Lord to raise me up, and before he arose from his knees, in an instant as it were, I was as free from suffering as I ever was. I was very weak, but in a few days my strength came to me, and I was in my usual health. The Lord should have the glory.

Concord, N. H.

THE VICTORY.

It is told of a Christian woman that a friend entered her room and found her with bowed head, as if in prayer or in deep, earnest thought. For a long time the silence was unbroken. At length her friend spoke to her tenderly, knowing that a great sorrow was on her heart, and thinking that she might comfort her. "I have been trying to say the Lord's Prayer," she answered, "but I cannot get through with it."

Her friend was well aware that she had known that precious prayer, and had repeated it over and over, ever since she learned it in infancy at her mother's knee. Her remark seemed strange, therefore, to her. But she explained. She had said the words a thousand times in sunny childhood, in joyous youth, on her wedding day, and then along the gladsome years that followed, amid songs and flowers, and prattling child-voices, and the sweetness of an unbroken home circle. And they flowed from her lips like rippling music all this while. But now a great sorrow had come. The blow had well-nigh crushed her. Deep were the shadows. She had been called to take out of her bosom and give to the Great Shepherd the most precious and tender of her joys. And now she could not get through the Lord's Prayer any more. Since the light had had faded from those dear eyes, she had begun a hundred times, "Our Father, who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will—" But she could not say, "Thy will be done." And it was days before she gained the victory, and before quiet peace came again. But when it came, what deep, blessed peace it was.—Presbyterian.

NEVERTHELESS I LIVE.

Paul said out of his own experience, I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live: as if he had said, I am not crucified to death, but to life; my crucifying with Christ is my quickening; for by this I am so killed, that I live the more; yea, now, I only do truly live, being formerly dead. My own proper life, in myself, was my death; but Christ's life in me is my true life. For I was dead with the worst death, to wit, in trespasses and sins; but now I live in the best life, even the life of righteousness. Whence it is manifest, that the living Word and Spirit of Christ in a Christian, do so kill the life of his flesh, that at the same time they communicate to the same man, to the same soul and body, a true and spiritual, and holy and heavenly and eternal life.

For no man is crucified with Christ, but he also lives with Him; seeing the same Word that kills our life, communicates Christ's; and Christ crucified us with Himself, not that He may kill us, but that He may quicken us, and our quickening is the end of our crucifying, and our crucifying is the way to our quickening.—Sel.

LOVE NOT THE WORLD.

The lovers of the world are never found to be lovers of God. If you can show me such an anomaly as a theatre-going Christian, I am certain that, without looking any further, I can point you to a Christian who rarely goes to the place of prayer, never is found laboring and praying with lost souls, and never knows what it is to have deep and constant communion with God, or a zealous desire to bring men to the knowledge and acceptance of Jesus Christ. The heart is simply incapable of a divided loyalty. It cannot pay tribute to two masters, or find its highest pleasure in ministry at two hostile altars. If the service of Christ isn't pleasant enough to satisfy you, your love to Christ isn't strong enough to hold you. As Peter coldly denied Christ when warming himself at the fire of the high priest's palace, so the Christian who goes for warmth to the frivolous excitements of worldly pleasure, will be pretty certain to turn away from the light of life.—Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

(Selected.)

LAMPS do not talk, but they do shine. A light-house sounds no drum, it beats no gong, and yet, far over the waters its friendly sparks is seen by the mariner. So let your actions shine out your religion. Let the main sermon of your life be illustrated by your conduct, and it shall not fail to be illustrious.

IT is not for God's pleasure, but for our profit, that He afflicts us. At such seasons prayer is like an arrow that pierces the dark clouds of affliction, and makes them break with blessings on the Christian's head; but the arrow will fall to the ground unless the bow is strong, and bent in dependence on the Holy Spirit.

THE principal part of family religion is prayer, every morning and evening, and reading some portion of scripture, and this is so necessary to keep alive a sense of God and religion in the minds of men, that when it is neglected we do not see how any family can in reason be esteemed a family of Christians, or indeed have any religion at all.

THE springs at the base of the Alpine mountains are fullest and freshest when the summer sun has dried the springs and parched the verdure in the valleys below. The heat that has burnt the arid plains has melted mountain glacier and snow, and increased the volume of the mountain stream. Thus, when adversity has dried the springs of earthly comfort and hope, God's great springs of salvation and love flow freshest and fullest to gladden the heart.

NEVER be afraid to trouble the Master with little cares, or with the needs of a temporal estate. He will listen to everything, and provide everything; only trust him with all your heart. The reason why some Christians have so many cares and so little comfort is just because they do not acknowledge him in all their ways. They lean to their own understanding so much, and trust his wisdom and grace so little, that they seem to forget that he has nowhere forbidden them to cast the burdens of their daily life upon him, but on the contrary has invited and commanded them to roll all their trouble upon his arm.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

VOL. LIV. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1881. NO. 1.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER, Issued every Wednesday Morning by the ADV. CHRIS. PUBLICATION SOCIETY, At No. 144 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass. OZIAS GOODRICH, TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT.

EDITORS: JOHN COUCH. E. A. STOCKMAN. WM. SHELDON.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE: WM. SHELDON. MILES GRANT. B. HITCHCOCK. D. R. MANSFIELD. JAMES HEMENWAY.

The CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

WE ARE WAITING.

We are waiting for the coming
Of our Saviour, Priest, and King—
For the dawning of that morning
That will our deliverance bring.
We are pilgrims sad and lonely,
[illegible] dark vale we roam;
[illegible] are strangers,
[illegible] waiting to go home.

Here we have no place of resting,
This is not the Christian's home,
But we are seeking for a country
Where no sorrow e'er can come;
And we know that we are nearing
That bright land we long to greet—
That our journey's almost ended—
We shall soon our Saviour meet.

We are waiting, and the moments
Swiftly now are speeding on,
And we must be up and doing,
Striving well our race to run.
For we see the many tokens
Which proclaim our Saviour near;
On every hand they're rising,
And we know he'll soon appear.

We are waiting for his coming,
And we strive to overcome,
For we want to be all ready,
That we may be gathered home,—
To that home of glorious beauty,
To that golden city fair,
Where we'll ever be with Jesus,
Free from sorrow, pain and care.

AN APPEAL.

At our late Conference in New Hampshire, the question was agitated whether all was being done that can be in the way of spreading the glad tidings of our soon coming Lord; and the feeling prevailed that the work must be carried to the regions beyond, even to the dark places of the earth, and habitations of cruelty. Said our Lord and Master, "This goospel of the kingdom must first be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; then shall the end come." Said our venerable John S. White, "If this is to be done before the coming of Christ, we had better be about it." It may be argued that it has been done already. But is it not the sounder argument that, forasmuch as the end of the world yet lingers, the work has not been fully accomplished? At any rate, it will be safe for us as a people to intensify our interest, and labor until we see him coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory.

At this present hour the mails of all nations are at our service. The great proportion of missionaries abroad are from England and the United States. The English langua e is coming practically to be the language of the Christian world. This looks to me like the Lord's doings; and while this wonderful providence, blended with the voice of the prophets, points to this wide open door, let us not fold our hands longer and say, "Four months, and then cometh the harvest." "Behold, the fields are white." While the Lord is speaking to us from heaven, saying, "I come quickly," Ethiopia and the islands of the sea, together with the grand divisions of the earth, Asia and her teeming millions, are waiting to hear the message. Shall we not at once respond and help swell the angel's cry, "Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come"?

But the question may be asked, "How shall this be done? I answer, by sending Second Advent publications to the various foreign missionary stations. The names of stations and the addresses of missionaries, in part, has already been obtained, and all can be. What is wanted is to select tracts already published, adapted to this work, and publish others directly upon the subject of the personal coming of Christ and the signs of the times, and send them by mail to every missionary station on the globe; and also to translate into the languages of the different nations coming to our own country; and as they come meet them with the cry, "Behold He cometh!"

My brethren and sisters of like precious faith, let us consider the importance of this work, and engage in it at once. Considering the comparative distant date when our Association will be convened, and knowing that time is too precious to delay, the New Hampshire Conference in session thought it advisable, and did appoint a committee to solicit funds and put them to immediate use. Some money has been raised, and it is hoped every man, woman and child will feel an interest in this praiseworthy undertaking. Do we want our Lord to come and restore all things? Let us prepare his way. Let all make up their minds to do something. If you cannot give a dollar, give a dime; if you cannot give a dime, bring in your mite. It will surprise every one to see how much can be saved to the cause of benevolence and truth by industry, economy, and systematic giving.

Allow me to here suggest to our young people and Sabbath School children to form themselves into Missionary bands for the purpose of raising funds to send the glad tidings of Jesus' coming to all the missionary stations on the earth. Make up your minds to waste no more by buying confectionaries, but that you will save everything for Jesus and his cause. Think of what you might do by such weekly savings for the perishing heathen in foreign lands, and all around you. It only requires you to deny yourself of a few sticks of candy, to give to some perishing soul the whole New Testament, dedicated to the church by the precious blood of Christ. And then, what a wholesome discipline it would be to yourself to adopt such a course. You would not only bestow a great good upon others, but the greater would come to yourself. And again, provided you should ignore every superfluity of life, would you not be the better? By such self-denials you would have something to give to the missionary cause, while you look for "that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ."

Again, I wish to appeal to men and women in Christ who command their thousands, and are paying out their thousands to support the foolish fashions of the day; and to this add bad habits and appetites. Said Dr. Young, Chief of the National Bureau of Statistics: "The grog bill for 1870 was more than $600,000,000, and the expenditure for tobacco was almost equal to it, while $50,000,000 covered the entire contributions for religious and benevolent purposes in the United States." John Wesley once said that "religion led to industry and economy, and that led to wealth, and wealth led to show, luxury, pride and forgetfulness of God; so that in the end religion destroys itself." Is it not coming to be so in all Christian communities, Advent people not excepted? Where are the men who have means to supply their temporal wants, and are practising temperance and economy in their expenditures; and, in the room of adding a number of thousands to their capital annually, are putting all their income aside from their individual necessities into the cause of the Master? My brethren, you expect your ministers, who give their time and strength to the work, to make the most sparing use of what is contributed to them. Why not follow out the same course yourselves? Should all in this country, now looking for Christ use the time of the coming year, and appro, priate all their earnings and income aside from their actual necessities to the prolamation of the coming of the Lord, we should not be under the necessity of staying a second year to complete the work. At the end of twelve months the message wou'd be found wherever human inhabitants are found.

The Committee appointed at the New Hampshire Conference chose Bro. F. L. Piper, of Melvin Village, to act as Secretary and Treasurer, to whom monies collected can be sent, and an account rendered through the Crisis for the same. For the Com.

A. ROSS.

THAT "CHRONOLOGY BOOK."

A New York brother (C. F. N.) inquires: "Is it true, as affirmed in a certain sheet, that in your Chronology book you take the following positions:

1. That the daily (Dan. 8) signifies the Jewish daily sacrifice, and that therefore the Jewish sacrifice helped tread down the sanctuary?

2. That you make the 70 weeks and 2300 days begin with the same event. in the 20th of Artaxerxes, and then absurdly claim that the 2300 may possibly begin a few years later, without changing your location of the weeks? I fail to find anything of the kind in your book, and regret that such a blind assault should be made; but lest some may be misled, your reply through the Crisis is solicited."

Our reply is cheerfully made.

1. While we do regard the "daily sacrifice" of Daniel 8 to be the Jewish sacrifice, we do not claim that the "daily sacrifice" ever did, or ever was to tread down the sanctuary for 2300 days, or for any other length of time; nor is such a thing even hinted in the vision; so we neither take this position, nor is it the result of any view we hold. Whoever charges this claim upon us does it ignorantly, or on a worse principle. We claim that although the word "sacrifice" is a supplied word in the vision, it is justly supplied; as in the angel's interpretation of the vision the same word occurs, and is not there supplied: "He shall cause the sacrifice and oblation to cease"; and all know that the "daily sacrifice" was the only one coupled with the oblation. In the vision, Ga briel saw a certain horn "take away the daily sacrifice," and afterwards "tread down the sanctuary." At the time the vision was given to Daniel, the sacrifice was extinct, and the Jews were in bondage; but when the daily sacrifice was seen in vision—showing it must be restored—and a certain power was seen taking it away again, and after taking it away proceeded to "tread down the sanctuary," the question arose, "How long the vision"—not how long the trance state, or the time occupied in seeing the vision, but how long the events measured by the vision: "How long the vision [measuring] the daily sacrifice, and the transgression of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot?" Two things are measured; first, "the daily sacrifice"—and that could not be measured till established; second, after the close of the daily sacrifice, the "desolation" was to be measured, which was thenceforth to tread down the sanctuary; and the measurement of the two was to aggregate 2300 days; but only the last event measured ("the transgression of desolation") had anything to do with the treading down work; and even that did not begin till after the "daily sacrifice" was taken away; so it is not true that the vision even hints at a treading down that should last 2300 days, but only one that was to begin after the first event measured was past, and to continue only during the last part of the 2300 days. The history of the "daily" ended before the treading down began.

2. We do not set up an absolute claim that the 70 weeks and the 2300 days began with the same event; we make the 70 weeks begin with the restraint that was to favor the Jews—beginning by holding their desolating enemies at bay while they fortified themselves, and became a defensive nation; but we begin the 2300 days with the restored "daily sacrifice"; and while it seems probable to us that the sacrificial worship of the Jews was permanently established immediately upon the commencement of Nehemiah's work of fortification, or simultaneously with the beginning of restraint in their favor, yet we do not pretend to know that it commenced so early; possibly the whole attention of the Jews might have been absorbed at that critical juncture, as a military emergency, for some months, before turning their attention to their abandoned worship. At the end of Nehemiah's twelve years' labor, we find the sacrificial worship in operation, whether it began at the commencement of his week, or later. If the 70 weeks are a part of the 2300 days (which seems probable to us), then the 2300 days and the 70 weeks began together; if they are not connected, even then the 2300 days would probably begin with the 70 weeks, as it is probable that the restoration of the sacrificial worship was coupled with the beginning of the restraint that interposed in favor of the Jews; but as this is not certain, it is possible that the 2300 days began later; and that, too, without affecting our application of the prophetic weeks in the least.

These points are made sufficiently clear in our book for the comprehension of an unbiased reader. In contrast with the foregoing allegations and misapprehensions, we call attention to the fact that other eyes have looked at the book. An Iowa brother (Eld. P. W. Hough) thus writes: "I do not see any defects in your argument. Would like to see the man that could pull up your stakes. However, the connection between the 8th and 9th chapters of Daniel I firmly believe to be true, and rejoice in the prospect. Yet, if '84 should pass, it would not move a post in your building, but show there was no connection. . . . . Your book will stimulate research, and I speak for it a great sale; and to show you that I do not use breath to puff your book, enclosed you will find $5.00 for ten copies."

That man can understand a book when he reads it. It would be better for others to understand before claiming to be exponents of the arguments which they incorrectly allege the book to teach.

A Wisconsin brother (D. Clow) writes: "I have glanced over every page of 'Chronology and Prophecy made Plain,' and am free to say it is the best I ever saw. Nor have I been slow in searching for the hidden treasures of revealed truth, as you well know. Nay, forty years of diligent investigation, with all that I could desire at my command to aid me, I have spent in this matter; and yet it seems that I have made but little progress, as I glance over the new and most convincing evidence of chronological and astronomical facts found in the new work. Nay, I feel quite happy over this matter, as I am supported in all the essential facts of my faith. Never, never have I doubted that the 'wise' would yet understand the time of our dear Lord's return. Nor have I ever seen any reason why we should abandon time, as all intelligent Adventists do know that our mistakes were the result of Usher's erroneous chronology."

Letters like these are multiplied on each hand. We have given a sample to show that our labor finds a congenial and reciprocal element in every quarter. "Watchman, what of the night?" The morning is not far off. It will not delay it a single hour if we close our eyes to facts. While we would not deal in censorious dogmatism, we would entreat all to open their eyes wide to see their nearness to the end, and then work with a will to save others.

PRACTICAL AND DOCTRINAL.

BY C. B. COFF.

Descriptive of Bible truths, these terms do not occur in that book. They are the coinage of men of modern times. Behold how flippantly they are handled now-a-days, which gi es the impression that there is a lot of useless Bible truth lying about that book, like the accumulated junk about a workshop. This is labelled doctrinal, and to be laid on the shelf in the Scriptural museum. Some are so scared of it that they would feign mark it "dynamite," or some other fearful name, to keep God's searching children away from it.

That there is a lot of needless doctrines about us, and not lying idle either, is true; but they are not the pure mother tincture of Holy Writ. They are the weak attenuations and adulterations of speculators and novelty constructors. If the children of God are to wander far from what is "written in "the Book" into the laboratories of experimetors, then I am in favor of plainly labelling some things "nitro-glycerine—handle with care." But we are speaking of plain Bible truth—of first principles. Is the Bible encumbered with needless doctrines which are to be studied and believed, or not, as you like —"better not to be believed," as I once heard a popular preacher say? If so, then I lay a solemn charge against the Spirit of God for putting them in, and leaving out so many "practical" things which I, with many others, desired to know. "And there are also many other things which Jesus did, the which if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself would not contain the books that should be written." (John 21: 25.) Is the Bible weighted with useless doctrine to leave out one thing that my blessed Lord did or said? I solemnly protest against it, if so. I should like to know, among all these things, what Jesus wrote on the ground when the woman taken in adultery was brought to him. The words and music of that doubtless spiritual and melodious "hymn" which they "sung and went out" from the first Lord's Supper would be very desirable now on these memorable occasions. "And many other things" as John says.

But the Bible is all right. There is nothing unimportant to the church in it. We can afford to wait until we see John in the kingdom of God, when he will have time enough to tell us all about those "many other things;" for his memory will be wonderfully sharpened in that body "like him" —Jesus; but I fear we shall never get there at all if we now despise or lightly esteem anything in God's Word which was written aforetime for our learning, that we might with patience and comfort of the Scriptures have hope. No, we should take heed to it as a lamp that shineth in a dark place. "We ought to give the more earnest heed to the things that were heard, lest haply we drift away from them." "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of the prophecy, and keep the things which are written therein; for the time is at hand," saith the Word at the commencment of the most useless book, according to modern thought,—the Revelation of St. John.

That there is doctrine and practice is true. We go to the Bible for doctrine, and then we go on our knees and out into the community to practice it. This is the practical part, which is best preached individually, actively, effectively. Our "Household Physician"—a useful book we have in our house—is, first, all doctrinal; and second, all practical when we put it into use. There is nothing unessential to salvation in it when considered in the light of all the diseases for which it prescribes. It does not say that A, who has the typhoid fever, must take the same medicine that B does who has the gout. It is much the same way with God's Bible—the household physician for all sinful ills and growth in grace. It does not say that a man who has stolen a sheep can be cured by believing in the doctrine of "the sleep of the [illegible] Lord." Nor does it say that a [illegible] consolation in simple conversion joy. [illegible]ely enough when he gets into the same boat with afflicted Job, he will want to know something about where he is going to land.

The Bible is a book of doctrine; our lives should be a book of the practice of that doctrine. Doctrine simply means teaching. Christ ever taught "openly in their synagogues." He preached doctrine, "sound doctrine." He taught his disciples to pray; that is doctrine, and pretty hard to practice too sometimes. If people are afraid of doctrine—Christ's doctrine, which he said a man should know if he would do his will—then they had better steer clear of the Bible.

WALKING IN CHRIST.

BY CHAS. W. WARD.

"As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him."—COL. 2: 6.

This is addressed to those who have received Christ as their Saviour—to those who have yielded themselves as servants. To such, there comes the exhortation "to walk in him." To walk, denotes progress. Everywhere in the Scriptures, we have held before us the Christian life, as a state of growth and progression. Paul presents it to us under the figure of a race, which must be run with patience. Then again, he exhorts us to leave the principles of the doctrine of Christ and go on unto perfection. It is therefore certain that at conversion, that is, at the time we receive Christ, we do not enter a state of perfection, although at that time we may be perfect in some respects. A child at its birth may be a perfect child, yet there is vast room for development and growth. In one sense it is perfect, and all the years of its growth do not add to this perfection. It is perfect in form, perfect in all the members that make up its organism, and, as we have observed, all the years of its growth do not affect this perfection. Yet there are lying in that child possibili- [illegible] are necessary to bring to perfection. So with the child of God, when he is begotten again, and puts on Christ. Being in Christ he is a new creature. Now, then, being in Christ, he must walk, that is, go on in that way. But how is a person to walk in Christ?

First. He must walk in his love. In order to do this he must keep his commandments; or, in other words, must be obedient. Christ is not pleased with a disobedient child. It is obedience that pleases the Lord; for our Saviour said, "If a man love me he will keep my words; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." So it is upon the condition of obedience that we are to have him abide with us. And by the same obedience we are to abide in his love, for he has said, "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love." So being in his love, and his love dwelling in us, we are to walk in it; that is, by careful and constant watchfulness of self, of the world and the devil, so that none of these influences shall cause us to stumble, or disobey his word.

The farther we advance in the way of this love, the stronger will be the attachment between us and Christ. Walking in his love, we shall have such a blessed experience, nothing could induce us to walk in any other way. By continual progress, the bond of love will grow stronger. Our affections, desires, purposes, and will, will blend together with his, forming a bond of love that nothing can break. So complete will it be that we can realize "that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

Second. We should walk in his fear. Not the kind of fear we would have of a cruel, merciless tyrant. Not that we should live in dread, a fearful anxiety always possessing our souls, but exercising and walking in a filial fear, the same kind of fear we would have of a dear friend we love. We would not for the world—unless truth and justice demanded it—say anything to such a friend that would grieve him, or hurt his feelings. Whatever might be the subject we were discussing, we would, out of respect and love to him, say nothing that would offend him. Such should be our fear of God. We should so fear him that we would not do anything to grieve him, nor ought that would be displeasing to him. This is the kind of fear of God we should walk in. In order to do this, we should see how very careful we must be, guarding our tongues that we speak nothing disrespectful, unholy, or sinful against him, his cause, or his people. The Lord will surely honor those that so walk in his fear.

We read: "As a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him." In walking in His fear, we shall have a reverence for him. We shall look upon him with an holy awe. In walking in his fear we shall learn to be very careful in conduct and conversation.

Third. We should walk in His light. "For if ye walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." Walking in the light, we have fellowship with him,—have a real acquaintance with him. Being acquainted with him we can have confidence to approach him—have liberty in his presence. Then again, if we walk in the light we shall not stumble, neither lose our way. A person groping about in the dark cannot accomplish anything, or get anywhere with any certainty. He is liable to stumble and hurt himself, or wander entirely away from the right path. So it is with those who do not walk in the light of God's word, for it is his light to lighten the path of his saints. All that will walk in his light shall know the truth, and the truth shall make them free.

Perryville, Md.

ONENESS WITH CHRIST.

The following deserves a careful consideration by all who wish to be like Christ. The instruction it contains is valuable, and thoroughly practical. Read it, remember it, and look for a special benefit. It is taken from The Times of Refreshing, published by Dr. Cullis, Boston, Mass.—M. G.

So many of God's children are crying out for a real and vital union with Christ, that it seems important to come to a right understanding of what it consists in, and how to realize it. And I have a few words to say about it, which have been of great practical use to myself, and I trust may be a help to some others.

There is one lesson in the Christian life that most of us are obliged to learn over and over, at every advanced step we take. I, myself, have had to learn it many times, and I often doubt whether I know it thoroughly yet. It is the lesson of not depending upon frames and feelings as the test or or assurance of our spiritual condition. We learn it at one stage and about one thing, only to forget it as soon as a new stage is reached or a new question arises, when it has to be learned all over again.

I remember very well what a revelation it was to me when I first learned it. It was in the very earliest of my Christian experience, and was in regard to forgiveness. I had no other thought but that my forgiveness depended upon my feelings; that if I felt sweet, and tender, and earnest, I was forgiven; but if I felt cold, and dead, and languid, I was not forgiven. Consequently my faith varied with my feelings, and I literally made the Word of God of none effect by my own changing emotions. It was a grave dishonor to him, but this I never dreamed of, and it was utter misery to me.

Finally some one told me, or else I read it in a book, that frames and feelings had nothing whatever to do with the matter; that my forgiveness was dependent upon how God felt, and on what [illegible] might happen to be. This was a perfect revelation to me. My common sense laid hold of the idea at once, and I saw it was the only reasonable, as well as the only Scriptural ground to take. "Of course," I said to myself, "my feeling must depend upon what I know about it; it is always knowledge that controls feeling, not feeling knowledge. I have been turning the whole thing wrong end before. My forgiveness cannot in any possible way depend upon my feelings. I must find out first whether I am forgiven before I can expect to have any right feelings about it at all."

I saw also that my feelings after all depended very much on the state of my health; if my liver for instance was out of order, I could not possibly have any sweet or joyous feelings, no matter how truly forgiven I might be. Our feelings are affected by a thousand things, over which we have no control,—by a rainy day, perhaps, or a fog, or some disappointment in our plans, or by the influence of some one's magnetism over us, or by any or all of our varied circumstances and surroundings.' But God's word cannot be touched by any of these things, and I saw that if he said I was forgiven, then I was, no matter how I might feel. And as soon as I found he did say so, all trouble on this point was over. But at each step onward I have been confronted by the same conflict between faith and feeling, my feelings always asserting their right to be the deciding element in each new question in the spiritual life. And every time the same ground has had to be gone over as to the foolishness and utter unreasonableness of trying to decide by feeling what could only be decided by God's word.

Now, on no point does this temptation more persistent assail a soul than on this of our real and practical oneness with Christ; and in nothing is the mistake more dangerous. It seems at the first sight as though this at least was a point which must be decided by feeling, and the soul turns inward to examine its own emotions, sure that, however wrong such a course may have been in all previous cases, here at least is the right and Scriptural thing to do.

I hope to prove in this article the fallacy of such reasoning. Oneness with Christ must in the very nature of things consist in a Christ-like life and character. It is not what we feel, but what we are, that settles this question. No matter how exalted or intense our emotions on the subject may be, if there is not a likeness of character with Christ, a unity of aim and purpose, a similarity of thought and of action, there can be no real oneness. This is plain common sense, and it is Scripture as well.

We speak of two people being one, and we mean that their purposes and actions, and thoughts, and desires are alike. A friend may pour out upon us enthusiastic expressions of love, and unity, and oneness, but if that friend's aims, and actions, and ways of looking at things are exactly opposite to ours, we cannot feel there is any real oneness between us, notwithstanding all our affection for one another. To be truly one with another we must have the same joys and sorrows, the same hopes and fears. As some one says, we must look through one another's eyes, and think with one another's brains. This is, as I said above, only plain common sense. And oneness with Christ can be judged by no other rule. It is out of the question to be one with him in any other way than the way of nature and character, and life. Unless we are Christ-like in our thoughts and our ways we are not one with him, no matter how we feel.

I have seen Christians with hardly one Christ-like attribute in their whole characters, who yet were so emotional, and had such ecstatic feelings of love for Christ, as to think themselves justified in claiming the closest oneness with him. I scarcely know a sadder sight. Surely our Lord meant to reach such cases when he said, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter the kingdom of heaven; but he which doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." He was not making here any arbitrary statement of God's will, but a simple announcement of the nature of things. Of course it must be so. It is like saying, "No man can enter the ranks of astronomers who is not an astronomer." Emotions will not make an astronomer, but life and action. He must be one, not merely feel that he is one.

There is no escape from this inexorable nature of things, and it pursues us here. Unless we are one with Christ as to character and life and action, we cannot be one with him in any other way, for there is no other way. We must be "partakers of his nature," or we cannot be partakers of his life, for his life and his nature are one. Feeling avails nothing here. I am afraid I have not made this point as clear as I want to, but must trust that the blessed Spirit will illuminate it to the minds of my readers.

And now for the application. First of all the warning, and then the comfort. The warning I address to the emotional natures among my readers. Dear friends, you are in great danger of being deceived by the very things upon which you rest confidingly. Your emotions, which are such a joy to you, are likely to become pit-falls. You feel so near Christ and so united to him, that you think it must be real; and over-looking the absolute necessity of Christ-likeness of character and walk, you are building your hopes and your confidence on your delighted emotions and exalted feelings, and think you must be one with Him, or you could not have such rich and holy experiences.

Now it is a psychological fact that these or similar emotions can be produced by other causes than a purely divine influence, and that they are largely dependent upon temperament and physical conditions. It is most dangerous, therefore, to make them [illegible]. It may result in just such a grievous self-deception as our Lord warns us against in Luke 6: 46-49, "And why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" Your soul delights perhaps in calling him Lord, Lord, but are you doing the things which he said? for this is the important point after all, he tells us. If, therefore, led by your feelings, you are saying in meetings, or among your friends, or even in your own heart before the Lord, that you are abiding in him, let me entreat of you to take home to yourself in solemn consideration these words of the Holy Ghost, "He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself so to walk, even as he walked.

Unless you are thus walking, you cannot possibly be abiding in him, no matter how much you may feel as if you were. If you want to know what sort of a walk this will have to be, 1 Peter 2: 26-27 will tell you: "For what glory is it, if, when you are buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when you do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God. For even hereunto were ye called; because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that we should follow his steps, who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth; who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously."

If, therefore, you follow in his steps, you must be sweet to those who are cross to you; you must bear everything and make no complaints; when you are reviled you must not revile again; you must consent to be trampled on, as Christ was, and feel nothing but love in return; you must seek the honor of others rather than your own; you must take the lowest place, and be the servant of all, as Christ was; you must literally and truly love your enemies, and do good to them that despitefully use you; you must, in short, live a Christ-like life, and manifest outwardly as well as feel inwardly a Christ-like spirit, and must walk among men as he walked among them. This, dear friends, is what it is to be one with Christ. And if all this is not your life according to your measure, then you are not one with him, no matter how ecstatic or exalted your feelings may be. This is my lesson of warning.

SPIRITUAL EXPERIENCE.

To learn the lessons of life, you must live through them. The boy cannot learn to swim upon the land; he must trust himself to the water. Soldiers cannot be made in peace-time. Sailors are not to be trained upon the land. The one must endure hardships of the campaign, the other must go out in the open ocean and bear the violence of the gale and the dangers of the seas, before he will know how to encounter the anger of the ocean-wave and how to handle his ship in the tempest. So it is in matters of the spiritual life. The experience of other people cannot be made our own beyond a certain point. By hearing of it, or reading it in books, we may prepare ourselves for bearing trials and for learning certain lessons of vital religion from them, but they cannot teach us generally the lessons themselves. The patience and the resignation, the sympathy and the unselfishness, the love of God and the contempt for the world, which trials and troubles teach, cannot be learned from the trials and troubles of other people, but only from our own. That is the providential purpose of such. By them the Holy Spirit of God works upon our souls and refines them, weans our affections from the world, and draws them to himself.—Selected.

COMPLETENESS.

When the Jordan was bidden to halt, you would have supposed it would have overflowed and devastated the country. That would be the natural law. Arrest a river in its march to the sea, and you destroy the country. But when God built an invisible dam across the Jordan, so it halted, he built at the same time an invisible dam on either side of the Jordan, so that the [illegible] up. It was a complete miracle, complete in every respect, just like God's work—always complete.

But you would have said, "If the waters of the Jordan are drawn off, it does not make any difference though there be two or three feet of water, the Israelites can easily wade through, and they will come up with saturated garments on the beach as people come up from a shipwreck." No, it was better than that. You would have said, "If the waters of Jordan are drawn off, then there will be a bed of mud and slime impassable. It would take days and weeks for it to dry up." But lo! the completeness of the miracle. The river bed is perfectly dry. They go through dryshod.

Oh! the completeness of everything that God does. Does he build a universe, it is a perfect clock running ever since it was wound up. Fixed stars the pivots, constellations the intermoving wheels, and ponderous laws the weights and mighty swinging pendulum. The stars in the dome striking midnight, and the sun with brazen tongue tolling the hour of noon. The wildest comet has on it the chain of a law it cannot break. The thistledown that flies before the school-boy's breath is controlled by the same law that controls a whole universe. The rose-bush in your window is controlled by the same law that controls the tree of the universe, on which stars are ripening fruit, and on which God will sometime put his hand and shake down the fruit. It is a complete universe. No astronomer has ever suggested an amendment.

Does God make a Bible, it is a complete Bible. Standing amid its dreadful and delightful truths, you seem to be in the midst of an orchestra, where the wailings over sin, and the shoutings over pardon, and the martial strains of victory, sound an ocean of truth on which God walks, sometimes in the darkness of prophecy, and sometimes in the splendor with which he walked on Galilee—apostle answering to prophet, Paul to Isaiah, Revelation to Genesis. A complete book. It is the kiss of God on the soul of lost man.—Dr. Talmage.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

BY W. A. BURCH.

Three ship-yards all silent and still! That is what I have seen to-day, where only yesterday was the noise of saw and hammer, plane and chisel, sledge and anvil, the clanking of chains, the hum of machinery, and the noisy shouts of men and boys. Were you ever in a ship-yard? What a busy, interesting sight it is. But to-day there reigns strange quiet.

What does this silence mean? Why for to-day and to-morrow of this pleasant weather are these yards to be free from the noisy work of so many busy hands? Ah! 'tis the old story,—"death reigns." Men who cannot find time to obey God, who are too busy to listen to his demands, are not too busy to die. Plans for years in the future come suddenly to an end, and the man's busy work, that hardly seemed commenced, is done.

"What does it mean?" It means this. Yesterday noon a young man, about twenty-seven years old, left this city in activity and health, and was brought back at night a mangled corpse, killed instantly while attempting to leave a train in motion. The son of a well-known ship-builder, who is a member of the firm controlling these three yards. He was left in charge of the business, while father and mother sought to regain shattered health in the far west. Suddenly his life has ceased, and parents, sister, wife and friends mourn their sad loss.

It means that one more is numbered with the dead, waiting in silence the time of reward when Jesus comes. I cannot learn that he possessed the Christian's hope. Thus it is another warning to the men who have "time to think" to-day, and another lesson to us all, showing the great importance of being a Christian—of having our lives hid with Christ in God. It but voices again the words of James: "For what is your life? It is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away."

Three silent yards! They speak to me the impressive thought that soon, not the business of a few yards merely, but the business of the city shall come to an end—yea, the business of the world. Should it come to-day, am I ready? Should death come now, would it be well with you? Do you "belong to death's Master?" Be ready!

"Death comes down with reckless footsteps
To the hall and hut;
Think you death will tarry knocking,
When the door is shut?
Jesus waiteth, waiteth, waiteth,
But the door is fast;
Grieved, away thy Saviour goeth,
Death breaks in at last."

WE can hardly be too careful about indulging speculations that conflict with what God has declared, however mysterious or inexplicable the divine declaration may for the time appear to us. It is unwise to disbelieve any statement of God's Word simply because we cannot understand that statement at a glance.—Zion's Herald.

THE LAST-DAY FIRES.

Do the Scriptures teach that there will be fires in the last days which will be peculiar to that period? We think they do, and we will here quote a part of the description given of them by Inspiration: "A fire goeth before Him, and burneth up His enemies round about. His lightnings enlightened the world; the earth saw, and trembled; the hills melted like wax at the presence of the Lord of the whole earth." Ps. 97: 3-5. Here the coming and "presence of the Lord" is presented, and before Him, or preceding His presence, and also in His presence, there will be premonitory and destructive fires. That these fires will fulfill sacred prophecies, and will come in connection with general atmospheric disturbances, is shown by the following: "Fire, and hail; snow, and vapors; stormy wind fulfilling his word." Ps. 148: 8. "A fire devoureth before them; and behind them a flame burneth: the land is as the garden of Eden before them, and behind them a desolate wilderness; yea, and nothing shall escape them." Joel 2: 3.

The prophet locates this fire thus: "Blow ye the trumpet in Zion, and sound an alarm in my holy mountain; let all the inhabitants of the land tremble; for the day of the Lord cometh; for it is nigh at hand." V. 1. This passage proves positively that the Lord will require His servants just before "the day of the Lord" comes, to proclaim a message designed to "alarm" the people, and among the tokens named, which will indicate coming calamities, is, "a flame burneth." The land, which is inhabited and productive, like the garden of Eden, is left like a "desolate wilderness." The prophet again presents the same token of the approach of the day of God, in the same chapter, as follows: "And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the Lord come." (Verses 30, 31.)

The prophet Habakkuk takes up the same subject, connecting the coming of the Lord with fire and burning coals. He says: "God came from Teman, and the Holy One from Mount Paran. Selah. His glory covered the heavens, and the earth was full of his praise. And his brightness was as the light; he had horns coming out of his hand; and there was the hiding of his power. Before him went the pestilence, and burning coals went forth at his feet. He stood, and measured the earth; he beheld, and drove asunder the nations; and the everlasting mountains were scattered; the perpetual hills did bow; his ways are everlasting." (Ch. 3: 3-6)

These fires are classed by Joel with the signs in the sun, moon and stars, which are to precede and indicate the speedy coming of the Lord. They are also classed by the Psalmist with the great phenomenal atmospheric manifestations given as signs of the end. This is conclusive proof that there will be special fires in the period of the other signs, prior to and indicating the Lord's glorious manifestation.

The fires sent by God upon Sodom are presented by Jude as "an example" of those which will be sent by Him in the last days, by which the wicked will suffer "eternal" punishment. It was said of those typical fires that they "came down from heaven." So we may understand that the signal fires will not be natural fires, but will originate in the heavens, as we believe in electrical currents, and will, in many cases, ignite before reaching the combustibles of earth. As these electrical currents usually produce atmospheric convulsions,—tempests, cyclones, lightnings, local floods and local drouths, it is natural to suppose that these phenomenal fires will occur in connection with tornadoes, floods and drouths.

Are the people of the present period experiencing just such a class of signal events as the Word of God foretells will come in the last days? and do they originate, as the most learned declare, in atmospheric elements? We believe it is so.

It is perfectly vain to talk about a common forest fire appearing to hundreds of people as if the heavens had first taken fire, and that ordinary fires would be kindled at all points over an area of thirty by one hundred miles in an hour. What produced the terrific roaring and thunder amidst the descending flames in the late Michigan fire but the electrical currents, just as they do in ordinary thunder showers? This shower of fire was just such as came in Wisconsin a few years ago, and such as devastated a part of Northern Africa the present year. The angel of God having power over fire has come, and has commenced to operate the celestial battery, and kindle the fires which will consume the foundations of the mountains, and fuse the solids of this ponderous earth. J. C.

THE SUFFERINGS AND GLORY OF CHRIST.

Peter says of the prophets, "The Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow." 1 Pet. 1: 11. The prophets foresaw Christ's sufferings and glory, and the periods and connected events with each. They saw Him first in sorrow, and afterward in glory. They saw Him first cast out of all earthly society, hated and killed of sinners, and subsequently coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory, to be "admired" by all the saintly millions.

As Christ was first, in His earthly experience, hated and ostracised from worldly society before enjoying the earthly glory, so it must be with all who follow Him; they also must pass through the suffering period to reach the time of Christ's glory.

Paul says of them, they are "joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together." Rom. 8: 17. The sentiment expressed is this: If Christ became heir to the world on the condition of voluntary suffering, all who choose to become heirs with Him must also consent to voluntarily suffer with Him, or as He did. Christ was inspired to endure the suffering, by the prospect of the glory which it would secure. Paul said, "for the joy [or glory] that was set before him, [he] endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." Heb. 12: 2. The glory inherited by Christ, through suffering, is presented by Isaiah thus: "And one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts: the whole earth is full of his glory." Ch. 6: 3. He expresses the same again: "And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." Ch. 40: 5. Peter gives his testimony upon the same subject when he says, "But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." Ch. 4: 13.

Christ presents the time when He will enjoy and manifest this glory thus: "They shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory." Matt. 24: 30. He testifies to the truth of his people sharing with Him this glory, as follows: "And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one." John 17: 22. He also shows that His people will be rewarded with this glory at His glorious manifestation, by this language: "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works." v. 27.

These passages prove conclusively that the time when Christ will enjoy the glory which follows His sufferings, will be at His second advent, and that His people who suffer with him will be rewarded with the same glory and at the same time.

The revealed condition upon which men may share with Christ this eternal glory and divine blessedness is, that they consent to share with Him the sufferings He endured. He suffered the hate scorn, and persecution of men, He was rejected from religious society as a dangerous heretic, because He interpreted the Scriptures literally, and applied "present truth" to the people who heard His teaching. He boldly condemned the false religion of His day, and taught the people that they must abandon their false hopes and theology, cease to worship in a worldly, pompous way, and accept the last message of sacred truth presented them by God, or go under the ban of divine judgment.

This position and these teachings caused His sufferings and tragic death. If His people are required to fill up the measure of His sufferings to secure His glorious inheritance, they must be required to follow in His steps, teaching truths as obnoxious to the people as He preached, exhibiting the crying sins of the people as He did, and preach truths which will manifest the aggravating sins of the people and the prophetic judgments coming upon them for their wickedness. To occupy such a position and do such a work requires self-denial and cross-bearing.

To provide for such an experience of suffering, God has so arranged truth in its progressive development, that each generation will be required to accept and teach some revealed truth which the unbelievers and false professors will despise and reject, as they did some of those taught by Christ, thus causing the same class of sufferings as endured by Him. History presents no class or generation of Christ's true servants, who have not been called to such a work and such suffering.

Christ testifies to this when He says, "And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: but he that endureth to the end shall be saved." Matt. 10: 22. He confirms the fact that all His servants, of all generations of His people, will suffer as He did. He said, "If they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household?" v. 25.

The most fatal error that the Church has ever fallen into, is, that she has passed her period of suffering, and has already reached the period when she is entitled to glory, i. e., to worldly honor, fame, riches and pleasure. This was the fatal stumbling-stone to the Roman and Greek Churches. The cross, to them, ceased to represent the shame and rejection from polite and worldly society, as it did with Jesus, and became the emblem of social distinction, a pledge of human protection. The cross to them never represented present suffering, but present exaltation and glory. The Protestant Church has largely fallen into the same fearful error. The great effort everywhere is to aggrandize the church at the present time in this world. They compass sea and land to draw the multitudes into their communion, with but little regard to their spiritual character. They manifest great preference for the rich and honorable, showing that the leading object is to build up a rich and popular people, so as to enjoy wealth, power and glory in this world. Houses of worship are built in the most attractive style; the most charming music is obtained, and the most drawing and eloquent ministers are sought; and all for—What? To enjoy present fame and glory. The present religious generation is wild with a mania for church pleasure. The old-fashioned, humble manner of worshiping God has become antiquated and unpopular, and feasting, fairs, theatricals, and ostentatious parades are substituted.

What is the interpretation of all of this? It is this: The Church has fallen into the old error of the ancient apostates, that the time for fasting, humiliation and prayer has passed; and the time for feasting, pleasure, and religious glory has come. O fatal mistake! Who will dare sound an alarm? Who will dare warn the Protestants, as Luther did the Romanists? Who will put his shoulder under the cross which must be borne at this perilous hour, and thunder the commandment of Jehovah in the ear of this generation—"From such turn away"? Where are the Luthers and Wesleys of the present day, who are not looking for places, titles or salaries, but are faithfully sounding the alarm to the people, of present dangers? He who joins in the jubilant song of the present time, sung by the proud and blind, either never saw the light of truth, or has departed from Christ, and is a traitor to the Church.

We feel almost an unendurable agony of spirit when we see how artfully and fatally Satan is coiling his snares for the people of this time, and our kindred and dearest friends are exposed to the awful deception. The thought that they must be made to see their danger and escape the snare in a very brief period, or pass into the gulf of hopeless ruin, overwhelms us with pity and fear. The sight of our eye affects our heart, and we involuntarily cry out, O Lord Jesus, arouse Thy people to a sense of the awfulness of this hour. Open the eyes of Thy servants to see the magnitude of the events, and the interests of humanity crowded into this short period.

But alas! how much the present hour resembles that when Jesus uttered His agonizing prayer in the garden, and the disciples were heavy with sleep.

Brethren, beloved, can ye not watch one hour? Why are there so few closets in which the plaintive sound of earnest prayer is heard? Why are the prayer-meetings so thinly attended, and why has cold, frozen ritualism, taken the place of godly zeal and melting love? It is because the people, in their unconscious sleep, have turned the suffering into glory, and esteem a feast and jubilant song more appropriate than solemn prayer and earnest exhortation.

Brethren in Christ, we exhort you to put an end as far as possible to this religious feasting, and the solemn mockery of vain worship, and pray with Christ one hour—this last fearful hour—in the most earnest and agonizing spirit, that you may enjoy full salvation yourselves, and be able to before it shall be said—"It is finished." J. C.

KEY TO THE VISION.

Gabriel, after carrying the mind forward to the final "war" against Jerusalem, conducted by a certain military "prince," affirms: "In the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and oblation to cease" (Dan. 9: 27)—the "one week" of war—the last week of their national history in Judea; and though we may not be justified in insisting that "the midst of the week" necessarily signifies the precise middle, it must approximately at least; and all know that about A. D. 70 the sacrifice and oblation ended; that is 69½ weeks of the 70 then expired, making 487 current years, which measured back from A. D. 70, allowing for crossing the Era line, reach B. C. 418 for the beginning of the measurement, as B. C. 418 added to A. D. 70, diminished by one, is 487 years, or 69½ weeks of years. It is evident that a part of the last week of the 70 was to continue on after the sacrifice ended; not necessarily an exact half, but certainly a portion of it; and this fact serves as a key to find the starting point, B. C. 418, just where we prove the 20th of Artaxerxes' reign fell (in our book on Chronology), at which point Nehemiah began to fortify Jerusalem, restoring the sacrificial worship permanently, and it was thenceforth there continued, with temporary interruptions, till about A. D. 70, when it ceased in the midst of the last week. W. S.

"THE 202nd OLYMPIAD."

All agree that this Olympiad began with the first full moon of the summer solstice of A. D. 29, and ended at the same season of the year in A. D. 33, for there is no disagreement about the location of the Olympiads this side of the commencement of the vulgar Christian Era; and all the historic records that we can find which pretend to give the date of the crucifixion place it "in the 202nd Olympiad." Then it follows from this historic premise that, as Christ was crucified at a Paschal full moon it must have been in A. D. 30, or 31, or 32, or 33. The choice is thus restricted to these four years, if history places the event in the right Olympiad. Then remembering that the crucifixion occurred not only at a Paschal full moon (which was always the first full moon after the Vernal Equinox), but also on the right day of the week to allow an intervening space of three days before the morning of the first day of the week, we will briefly examine each Passover point in this Olympiad.

1. The Passover of A. D. 30 fell on Thursday. If Christ died then, he could have risen on the third day after his death, and also on the first day of the week.

2. The Passover of A. D. 31 fell on Tuesday. If Christ died then, he must have risen on Friday morning, the sixth day of the week, instead of the "first day."

3. The Passover of A. D. 32 fell on Monday. If Christ died then, he must have risen on Thursday, the fifth day of the week, instead of the "first day."

4. The Passover of A. D. 33 fell on Friday. If Christ died then, he must have risen on Monday, the second day of the week, instead of the "first day"; and moreover, if he died in this year, this being the fourth Passover after his baptism, his baptism is thereby placed in A. D. 29, the 16th of Tiberius' sole reign, and the 18th of his full reign, instead of "the 15th" as affirmed in Scripture; and, furthermore, as Christ was "about 30" at his baptism, this would locate his birth in B. C. 2, the second year after King Herod's death, for invulnerable facts place Herod's death in B. C. 4; and every body knows that Christ was born before Herod died. The only year during this Olympiad in which Christ could have died was A. D. 30. That allows him to die on the right day, to be baptized in the right year, and also to be born before Herod died. W. S.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

We are informed by the Business Agent that a most commendable zeal is being manifested by many friends of the Crisis in procuring new subscribers. A large number of names have been sent in on the Agent's special three months' offer; and a goodly number of yearly subscribers also. In four days in the past week there were received one hundred and twenty-nine for three months, twelve for six months, and nineteen for one year.

This is very gratifying and encouraging. The views advocated in the Crisis being true and biblical, [illegible] the largest dissemination, and [illegible] be pushed with unceasing vigor and every proper means until the Lord appears. So, dear brethren and sisters, let the good work go on. We trust that every friend of the paper will do something—even the utmost in their power—to still increase our subscription list. The night is closing in around us. Let us press into the few remaining moments the utmost measure of activity for God. Dear brethren, it is your paper, not ours. Make it, in its volume of usefulness what you desire it to be. Let us have one grand rally at once. May God direct, and make our work a glory for his own name. E. A. S.

DEDICATION.

"The Household of Faith," Geo. R. Kramer Pastor, Wilmington, Del., have completed a fine church edifice, which will be dedicated to the worship of God on the first Sunday in December. Bro. Kramer's people have evinced great enterprise and liberality, and the community around them has rendered marked sympathy and aid in their undertaking to provide themselves with a commodious and attractive place of worship. Their great success indicates the approval and blessing of God upon the position and faithful labors of our highly esteemed Bro. Kramer. We trust that rich and abounding grace and blessing, with still larger success, will attend the new church and its able Pastor, even to the end. All friends are invited to attend the dedication. E. A. S.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

BRO. H. A. KING is holding a revival meeting with Bro. Burr's church in Portland with success.

THE church in Westfield, Mass., Bro. S. G. Mathewson Pastor, is enjoying a steady and growing prosperity, with frequent additions.

GREAT prosperity is attending Bro. Geo. Their new house of worship is soon to be dedicated.

An interesting ordination service was had in the church at Lynn yesterday (the 18th.) Bro. J. E. Cross was set apart to the work of the ministry. This church has called Bro. E. McCulloch to its pastorate, and he is expected to enter upon his labors soon.

SISTER M. E. KILBORN writes from Bridgeton, Me.:—"Our meetings are generally interesting, and characterized by the divine presence. Our first weekly prayer-meeting for November was one of especial interest. One backslider expressed a desire to return to Father's house. The first Sunday in this month Bro. Whitman preached three very weighty and instructive sermons, illustrated by his chart. At the close of the evening sermon a brother arose and said, 'The last time Bro. W. brought his chart here, I was led to see the truthfulness of the Scriptures, and give myself to God.'"

BRO. W. A. BURCH writes from Bath, Me.:—"The meetings here are excellent, and the attendance large. Eld. Burnham was with us for a week in October, and much solemn truth was presented. Our chapel is insufficient to accommodate the people, and many were unable to gain even standing room. Said a Methodist brother to me last night, 'I wish your chapel was four times larger. There are many would like to go, if it were not for being crowded so.' One rose for prayers Sunday afternoon, and others are almost persuaded. A baptism is expected next Sunday. The ceilings of our chapel have had little done to them since the house was built, and the walls are being white-washed and tinted this week. We would like much to enlarge the building, but our means are limited. We expect special meetings this winter. Pray for us.

WHAT A DEPARTURE!

It is no wonder that the Holy Spirit moved Paul to write that the "time would come" when certain "teachers" would "turn away" the people "from the truth," and lead them to believe "fables." Dr. Whiton, of New Jersey, has published a work entitled "The Gospel of the Resurrection." When speaking of the book, the Christian Union says: "This book teaches that as each one passes out of the body having life from Christ, that life is found to be superior to the power of death, and without any loss of time the spiritual body is received and the spirit rises into the felicity which is proper to its condition, judged as it has been before by its own presentment of itself; and apart from this there is no resurrection and no judgment. Resurrection is a continuous reality, not a spectacular event; a development, and not a miracle. Scripture is made to teach this by a process of spiritual interpretation, and the difficult passages are all met and made to harmonize readily with this view."

"By a process of spiritual interpretation" the great and grand truths of the Bible may be all frittered away into mere "fables, as this Dr. has done by the glorious doctrine of the resurrection of the dead. Beware of "fables." M. G.

NEWFIELD.—More good news comes from Newfield, Ct. Judge F. D. Fyler writes that some twenty-five have requested prayers, and some have been brought from darkness to light, and are now rejoicing in the blessed hope. The good work is still advancing. Pray for them. M. G.

BRIEF DOTS FROM ALABAMA.

TO THE A. A. M. SOCIETY.

Dear Brethren:—My last left me Sept. 28th, I believe, at Dodsonville, Ala., where I was engaged in a glorious work. I baptized three there, and left others who were baptized by Bro. Bryan. Came home, and on the first Sunday in October preached at Cedar Grove (my home church), and baptized my daughter and one more. Monday morning mounted a mule and started for our Annual Conference, a distance of eighty miles, across two big mountains. I expected to preach at Valley Head at night, twenty-five miles away from home, but missed my route on the top of Sand Mountain and went about fifteen miles out of the way. Reached the place next day, and found Bro. F. R. Bankson and a congregation looking for me. Remained and preached till Thursday morning, and fourteen were converted. Thursday rode thirty miles and crossed the war-famed Lookout Mountain, and preached at at night at Liberty Church in Cherokee Co. The next day on the way preached at Hale's School-House. Reached the Conference in the P. M. at Lebanon church in Ettawah Co., and stayed seven days, and preached eleven times. The church was revived, and many came for prayer. Six were converted and four were baptized after we left.

We returned to Hale's School-House and preached Friday, and also at night. Saturday to Hopewell, and continued meetings till Monday night with no conversion. This grieved me much, for I believe the Lord is coming, and I want to see souls converted. But we tried to stir the church up to renewed energy. Tuesday back to Liberty and continued till the following Monday night. About twenty came to the anxious seat in deep contrition; among them several heads of families. Six or seven were converted. We baptized five, among them little Johnnie, a thirteen-year old son of Eld. F. R. Bankson. The meeting was indeed glorious. Eld. Bankson has done a good work this year, traveling and preaching, and has received no help at all financially. Eld. Livingston also has worked faithfully this year, and the Lord has blessed his labors.

Tuesday I rode thirty miles to Valley Head, and learned that my wife and one of the children had been very sick for two weeks. My daughter had written for me to come home, but her letter did not overtake me. This was a severe trial—would I find either of them dead and buried? or better? The night was spent in miserable suspense. Next morning I hastened across Sand Mountain and Tennessee River, and found all alive. Wife was just able to sit in a chair, and more reduced in flesh than I ever saw her. She had been very low, but God had mercy, and she is now steadily but slowly improving. Praise the Lord for his goodness to us. I left the family in his hands, and earnestly prayed for his protection.

Last Friday morning I took train for Boyd's Switch, where I found a Protracted Meeting of the M. E. Church south, under the labors of Bro. W. E. Cameron. We went in and preached for him at 11 A. M.; thence out to Smith's Chapel, where we preached at night. Saturday morning baptized one, and started on a beautiful clay-bank pony, kindly furnished me by Bro. B. have been for some time into Marshall Co., where we preached Saturday night and Sunday A. M. This is a new place, and our first visit. It rained during the entire meeting. Monday A. M. baptized two, and then started for home. Reached Bro. Towers' after they had retired for the night.

To-night I was "booked" for South Pittsburg, Tenn., but wife was worse, and the rain kept me in doors. To-morrow I start again. I have rested from preaching five days since August 1st, and my physical strength is by the grace of God kept up in a wonderful manner, although at times I am almost prostrate. Calls come from every direction, and the end is near and hasteth greatly, and how can I be idle? I go next week to Louisville, Ky., for a few days' work in that city. Then I expect to spend January in Arkansas and Texas. This is a flying message, and I want as many as possible to get it before the Master comes. Pray for me and mine. JOHN A. CARGILE.

Stevenson, Ala., Nov. 9th, 1881.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference held its eleventh Annual Session with the church in Castleton, Vt., commencing Thursday P. M., Oct. 6th, 1881.

The first meeting for business was called to order by the President, Friday at ten A. M. Prayer by Eld. H. B. Quimby. The Secretary's minutes were called for, read, and approved. On motion, the Chair appointed a Committee on Credentials, who reported the following membership present:

Ministers: C. A. Phelps, Sandy Hill, N. Y.; A. S. Williams, Hebron, N. Y.; W. J. Blanchard, Chittenden, Vt.; W. O. Bibbins, Rutland, Vt.; G. H. Wallace, Castleton, Vt., and W. O. Higley, Bennington, Vt.

Visiting preaching brethren present: C. W. Baker, Cambridge, N. Y.; H. B. Quimby, Bristol, Vt.; Geo. Earle, North Springfield, Vt.; H. W. Perkins, New Haven, Ct.

The churches of Sandy Hill, Fort Ann, North Fort Ann, Hebron, Castleton, Hoosick and Shrewsbury were represented by delegates.

On motion, the Chair appointed a Committee on Business, who reported the following order: 1. Treasurer's Report. 2. Report of Ministerial Committee. 3. Report of Ministers and Churches. 4. Election of Officers. 5. Miscellaneous Business.

Visiting preaching brethren were invited to a seat in Conference deliberations. The name of Eld. C. W. Baker, of Cambridge, N. Y., was proposed for membership, and was received by vote. Reports of Treasurer and Ministerial Committee were heard and approved. Next listened to reports of ministers and churches, which were in the main encouraging. Eld. George A. Streeter and Sr. Mary L. Tower reported their labors by letter.

Next in order was the election of officers for the ensuing year, as follows: For President—Eld. C. A. Phelps; Vice President—Eld. A. S. Williams; Secretary—G. H. Wallace; Treasurer—J. B. White; Ministerial Committee—G. H. Wallace, C. A. Phelps, A. S. Williams.

Under the head of Miscellaneous Business it was Moved, that the Secretary keep a Ministerial membership list in connection with the Constitution and By-Laws. Carried.

Moved, that Eld. A. S. Williams be appointed to procure and care for the Conference Tent. Carried.

Moved, that the Secretary be instructed to correspond with the churches of Bristol, Addison and Hinesburg, inviting them to unite with this Conference. Carried.

Moved, a vote of thanks to the Castleton church for hospitality. Carried.

Moved, to adjourn sine die. Carried.

The business sessions of this meeting were harmonious, the preaching good, the social worship spirited. Two noble young men put on Christ by baptism. The Lord smiles on Conference work.

G. H. WALLACE, Secretary.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

It seems to me that we ought to try and get "The World's Crisis" sent into new places and to persons that have never taken it. In order to accomplish this object, we will send "The Crisis" to persons that have never taken it for 25 cts. for three months. Any of our brethren and sisters wishing to give "The Crisis" to any person or persons that have never taken it for three months, can do so by sending me 25 cts. in advance. Now brethren and sisters, let us rally to this work, and do what we can to send the good news of the coming kingdom through the length and breadth of the land, so that none can say in that day that they were not warned. AGENT.

P. S. We cannot allow any commission or discount upon the above offer to any one. AGENT.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

We are sending the Crisis to the preachers of all denominations at the low rate of one dollar per year. Now we feel that at that low price they should all see to it that their Crisis is paid for IN ADVANCE. Will our preaching brethren see to it—each one individually—that this matter is attended to at once, and oblige? AGENT.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Any one sending us fractional parts of a dollar, if they wish can send POSTAGE STAMPS. Please send good clean ones, and put them in your letter properly, so that they will not stick together. Send any denomination of stamps, as we can use them all. AGENT.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

We wish to increase the subscription list of The World's Crisis. We also wish to get all the subscribers we can for the "Pacific Mission Advocate and Herald of the Advent," a monthly paper published in California, and edited by Bro. H. F. Carpenter. Now in order to accomplish the above object, we make the following offer for new subscribers. Any one sending us TWO DOLLARS, we will send the "World's Crisis" and "Pacific Mission Advocate" for one year. Also all old subscribers to the World's Crisis that will pay in full what may be due on their paper, and one year in advance at rate of TWO DOLLARS per year, we will send both papers for one year.

P. S. We cannot allow a commission to any one on the above rates. AGENT.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

The World's Crisis can be obtained each week at Benj. L. Hawke's Stationery and Periodical Store, 234 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass. AGENT.

LIFE BEYOND DEATH.

We have just published a pamphlet entitled, "The Life Beyond Death in the Home of the Holy; when and where to be enjoyed." It is written by Wm. Sheldon. The plates of this pamphlet were donated by Bro. Sheldon to the Mission Society last August. There were one or two editions of it published a few years ago. We think it a very interesting and valuable work. It was this pamphlet that first brought Brn. Bowman and Kramer to see this hope as we see it. This pamphlet has done good work in the past, and we trust it will in the future. We have it nicely bound in paper covers. 142 pages. Price single copy, postpaid, 25 cts. Per dozen, postpaid, $2 25. Per hundred, by Express, $15.00. We trust the friends will order liberally. AGENT.

KEY OF TRUTH.

We have published an edition of "Key of Truth." The plates were furnished us by Bro. Sheldon. It is a very valuable tract of 16 pages, and should be circulated freely. We will send 1300 pages for one dollar, postpaid. Smaller quantities at same ratio. AGENT.

NEW TRACTS.

We now have in press FOUR NEW TRACTS, which will be ready next week to send out. Three of them are by Geo. R. Kramer, and one by A. Ross. The three by Elder Kramer are entitled as follows: "Conscience," 16 pages. "Gates of Hades," 16 pages. "Jesus Only," 24 pages. The one by Elder Ross is "Great Events. Showing our Nearness to the End." Price of the above single, by mail, 3 cts. The two first for 20 cts. per dozen; the two last ones 25 cts. per dozen, postpaid. AGENT.

THE FIERY VENGEANCE.

That irretrievable and complete destruction is sometimes symbolized as a catastrophe resulting from a consuming fire is not denied. But that every expression in relation to a fiery doom is to be interpreted figuratively, will by no means follow from this admission. The predictions of wrath to come must be explained by the examples of wrath in the past. In this, as in other cases, history becomes the expositor of prophecy. "A fire goeth before him, and burneth up his enemies round about."

The only example we will give from the inspired records of the past is the destruction of the cities of the plain. This is briefly told in Gen. 19: 24-29: "The Lord rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the Lord out of heaven; and he overthrew those cities and all the plain, and all the inhabitants of the cities, and that which grew upon the ground. . . . And Abraham got up early in the morning to the place where he stood before the Lord; and he looked toward Sodom and Gomorrah, and toward all the land of the plain, and beheld, and lo, the smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace.

We will now quote a prophecy that is to be fulfilled in connection with the coming of the Lord, and of which events transpiring in our own times may be the partial accomplishment. "For, behold, the Lord will come with fire, and with his chariots like a whirlwind, to render his anger with fury, and his rebuke with flames of fire. For by fire and by his sword will the Lord plead with all flesh; and the slain of the Lord shall be many." (Isa. 66: 15, 16.)

Of the terrible instruments of vengeance that will be employed to exterminate the enemies of God at the close of the present dispensation,—as famine, fire, war, and pestilence—we see no reason why fire should not be as literal as the others. For the harvest of death when the sword shall reap the earth from one end to the other and cover its surface with the unburied slain the nations are making the most ample preparations in the days in which we live. (Jer. 25: 33.) Of the wasting famines of the future, China and India have recently afforded terrible examples. Of those predicted pestilences that will "walk in darkness, and waste at noon-day," the cholera and black death have been frightful premonitions. Is it not true, also, that the world has witnessed the preliminary kindlings of the last-day fires? Ever since the terrible fires of 1871, which proved so destructive to Chicago, Peshtigo, and other localities, we have been firmly persuaded that fire would be one of the agencies employed to punish the world for its iniquities at the closing of this present age.

The skeptic that has scouted the prophetical declarations as impossible of fulfillment, has been confronted with the fact that fires devouring the earth are possibilities, and that the atmosphere itself is combustible, or that destructive elements easily combustible and terribly destructive may be diffused widely through the atmosphere. This combustible condition of the atmosphere, or of some singularly developed and unknown gases blended with it was a terrible feature of the fires of 1871, when Chicago was burned, and when the flames spread such fearful desolations over large portions of the country.

In Chicago it was the burning fire in the air that, like scattered incendiaries, kindled simultaneous wide-severed and resistless conflagrations that speedily reduced the boasted fire-proof blocks, and the wooden tenement to the same sudden and undistinguishable ruin. It was really fire in the air that burnt up Peshtigo, and that sped like condensed lightning over the contiguous parts of Wisconsin, sweeping the surface of the earth with air-blazings that left only death and utter desolation in the terrible course. It was literally a fire-tempest that has lately desolated so large a district in the State of Michigan.

To give some idea of the extent of this conflagration it is said that "upward of fifty townships, covering an area of about two thousand square miles, have wholly or partially burnt over; scarcely a green sprig being left in the track of the fire. Immense trees were twisted off by the force of the tornado which prevailed, and the darkness was so great that nothing could be distinguished at six inches distance. This accounts for the great loss of life, as the people were bewildered and knew not which way to turn to escape." Many enveloped in this thick darkness had no notice whatever that fire was anywhere near. All at once "fire would come out of the sky," and quickly everything would be in flames. In these fires the heated air would roast and kill like the heat of an oven where it was not kindled into a blazing flame.

In the dreadful plague recorded in Ex. 9: 22-24, it may have been this frightful air-fire, that was blended with the other elements of destruction, that "ran along upon the ground" in that desolating hurricane of the Divine vengeance.

The difference in the miraculous fire that destroyed the cities of the plain is possibly only one of geological circumstance. Asphaltum is found along the shores of the Dead Sea, and during some recent earthquakes, to which the country is still subject, it has been thrown up in large quantities. Sulphur is also found intermixed with the disintegrated carbonates of other formations. There are evidences of volcanic action of a date long since the formation of the deep valley.

The fire from God out of heaven would find ample fuel in the inflammable bitumen and sulphur, and thus Sodom and Gomorrah perish in a fire-tempest of air above and a land of burning pitch beneath, all blended in one volcanic seething furnace of aerial and terrestrial fire explosions. But bitumen and sulphur are not necessary fuel when the fires of wrath are kindled. Chicago's boasted fire-proof palaces went to dust and ashes as rapidly as Sodom's buildings of polished bituminous blocks.

Our design at present is only to call attention to those fires as the precursors of more dreadful conflagrations to come in the future. That prophecy is fearfully literal in its denunciations of coming vengeance, is proved by forerunning heraldings of calamitous burnings yet to be. We near the time of trouble when war, famine, fires, cyclones, earthquakes, and pestilences shall all combine to scourge this sin-polluted world, that will soon reel to and fro under the devouring curse of impending judgments.

The church will be above the storm of wrath that will so desolate the earth that but few men comparatively will be left. Mere fragmentary remnants of nations will survive the crushing demolition of the Great Image. But beyond the political chaos, and the charred cities and countries, dawns the restitution of all things, when the kingdoms shall be the Lord's and our earth be filled with the glory of God.—Restitution.

A FIERY GRAVE.

The Westphalia papers give an account of a terrible catastrophe which occurred in the northwestern part of that province on the 18th inst. There has been for some time in operation in the neighborhood of Solingen, not far from Barmen, a strange phenomenon. A part of the soil of a hilly heath became excessively hot, so much so that some people living close by availed themselves of the heat for domestic purposes. The explanation suggested was that some inflammable subterranean gas, or perhaps petroleum, had been accidentally set on fire. Some water had been brought to the spot by an artificial channel; but its contact with the burning soil had only produced violent explosions, which seemed to shatter all the ground around. Yesterday week some persons drove out in a carriage from Remscheid to inspect the spot. When arrived at a distance of about a quarter of an English mile, they heard a strange rumbling noise, which so terrified the horses that they had to alight, and send the carriage back some distance. They walked on, discussing the likelihood of any danger, when suddenly a space of the hillside, about one hundred metres square, opened, disclosing a gulf of liquid fire, and throwing up flames. The house where the family mentioned above lived was at once surrounded by the flame, and was, before their eyes, swallowed up in the liquid fiery caldron at their feet, apparently feeding the flames. It is known that several persons were in the house; none were saved, but it has not been ascertained how many perished.—Ex.

NEW YORK CONFERENCE REPORT.

The New York A. C. Conference in its Semi-Annual Session met with the church in Darien Oct. 28th to 30th inclusive.

Ministers present: W. J. Hobbs, E. C. Cowles, M. R. Miles, B. P. Stevens, O. M. Owen, C. W. Low, W. M. Steele, P. W. Taylor, A. P. Moore. Visiting Brn.: J. H. Whitmore, C. H. Williams, A. C. Newell.

Letters received from A. Snashall, A. H. Dunbar, C. Colegrove. A good representation of brethren and sisters of Western New York were present.

The reports of ministers and churches were not as cheering as they might have been. The church in Springwater was just now feeling somewhat depressed over the removal from them so soon of Bro. Hobbs, who has been their pastor about nine years; but they were earnestly praying the Lord to send the right man to take his place—one that will do them good. Rochester, P. W. Taylor pastor: Rather low spiritually, but regular preaching and united. Kendall, B. P. Stevens pastor: Struggling amid discouragements, but hopeful. Martville, M. R. Miles pastor: Somewhat prosperous. Congregations large. Darien, A. P. Moore pastor: Prospering. Prayer-meetings twice a week, largely attended. Preaching every Sunday. Sunday School flourishing. E. C. Cowles: Preaching one half of the time to a Christian church near where he lives. C. W. Low reported not preaching, but working on his bench to support his family. W. M. Steele: Preaching occasionally as the way opens. O. M. Owen: Had been teaching school the past year, but was now ready to go and preach as the Lord opens the way.

Bro. Hobbs having resigned his office as President of Conference, the following preamble and resolution offered by A. P. Moore was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Bro. W. J. Hobbs, having labored with us earnestly and faithfully the last fifteen years, is about to remove to another State; therefore,

Resolved, That, while we deeply regret being compelled to part with him, we do hereby commend him to the confidence and esteem of all with whom he may be called to associate in the great work of preparing a people for the coming of our Lord.

It was voted to pay the fare of the delegates to the Association meeting last August, both ways instead of one way.

The attendance was large, and the social meetings excellent, breathing out an earnest longing for the coming of our dear Lord. Four were baptized. Many said it was the best Conference they ever attended, and on the whole we pronounce it a good meeting.

A. P. MOORE, Secretary.

P. S.—Brn. Miles and Stevens remained, and we continued meetings through the following week, and six started to follow Jesus. A. P. M.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Quarterly Conference of St. Paul District, Minnesota, convened at Independence, Henepin Co., Minn., Nov. 4th, 1881, with the Advent Chris. Church under the charge of Eld. O. R. Fassett and Mrs. L. E. Fassett. Bro. W. J. Bursell, of Minneapolis, preached an appropriate discourse on the evening of the 4th.

Nov. 5th. The morning meeting was devoted to prayer and conference, and the good Spirit was present. In the afternoon Eld. M. Wellcome preached a good sermon on Faith; after which the Business Conference was called to order by Eld. M. Wellcome, President. Elder O. R. Fassett was chosen Secretary pro tem., the Secretary being absent. The minutes of the last Conference were approved after the reading, with the objection removed being explained, presented by Eld. Bursell by Eld. Wellcome, which was this: Bro. Bursell acted as Secretary pro tem. at the last Quarterly Meeting, and found in his minutes, when the report of the Conference was published in the papers that he had commended his own preaching abilities. Elder Wellcome remarked, that the minutes were presented to him to correct and forward for publication, and he added that Bro. Bursell "preached a good discourse," etc., not thinking how it would look, and did not, as he should have done, affix his own name to the report.

The ministers present at this meeting were Elders M. Wellcome, W. J. Bursell, O. R. Fassett and Mrs. L. E. Fassett. Each being called upon to report their labors did so. The reports were favorable, but none were as satisfactory as the ministers desired, and the record of their labors is on high for the Master's approval or disapproval.

The churches of the District reported by letter and delegates were, the Minneapolis church, Oswego church, and the church in Independence. The reports were somewhat encouraging, but not as much so as the churches could desire; and some of the churches neglected to report or send delegates.

Voted, That the next Quarterly Meeting be held with the Otsego church, in Jan. next, near the close of the month, during the full moon; of which due notice will be given. Adjourned.

In the evening Eld. M. Wellcome preached a good practical discourse from Matt. 5: 8, which was followed by remarks from the congregation of the saints in general.

Nov. 6th. Eld. W. J. Bursell preached a well received discourse, from Ps. 50: 3, to a large audience. Eld. O. R. Fassett preached in the afternoon on "The Signs of the Times." This was followed by an interesting Communion season in memory of the crucified, risen, glorified and coming Lord. Elder M. Wellcome preached Lord's day evening a faithful sermon, which closed a most interesting series of meetings. Only one hindrance to its enjoyment throughout, and that was the state of the weather and the wretched bad going, detaining many from the gathering of the saints. The rains still prevail, flooding the Northwest and embarrassing travel. O. R. FASSETT.

FROM London there comes the report of the recent death of Dr. John Cumming, D. D., minister of the Scotch Church in Crown Court, Covert Garden, London. He was born in 1810, became a very popular preacher, and has had the Queen among his hearers; he was an earnest opponent of Roman Catholicism, was the author of several religious works, chiefly on the apocalypse, treating of the coming of Christ and the end of the present dispensation.—Ex.

IT is a noteworthy fact that the present British and Foreign Bible Society is built on the spot in Earl Street, London, where three hundred years ago a body of fanatics burned every copy of the Bible that could be found, and then congratulated themselves that the book was destroyed. The book is now printed there in one hundred and seventy-eight different languages.

LATEST NEWS ITEMS.

The Pacific National Bank of Boston has suspended.

An Italian Revolutionist, who is on trial before the courts of his country, is accused of no less than three assassinations.

The great assassin's trial is at last fairly under way. Guiteau is manifestly trying to play the role of insanity. Let us hope that he will receive his deserts.

The lawyers of Great Britain are said to be greatly interested in the trial of Guiteau. Under the Scotch law the courts do not go into the insanity of a prisoner's family, but simply consider whether he was or not insane when he committed the crime. Under the law of England, however, the courts hear evidence going to prove hereditary insanity.

The German Gustavus Adolphus Society, which aims to assist Protestant ministers and build Protestant churches in Roman Catholic countries in Europe and foreign lands, received last year $190,000, with which it built twenty-two churches and six parsonages, and laid the foundations of sixteen new churches, eleven school-houses and thirteen parsonages. In the forty-nine years of its existence it has received $3,863,000 in contributions and has aided 1156 congregations.

A singular case of intolerance of a man's religious views is reported from Somersetshire, England. A dissenter living at Wells hired through an agent a house in a country parish. A few days later he was informed that the owner of the property declined to ratify the bargain because he had promised the vicar, who did not like to have dissenters living near him, that he would not let the house to any dissenter.

Religious liberty does not exist in Sweden, and an effort to secure it has failed for the present. The last Swedish Reichstag has concluded its sittings without repealing the law which empowers the Ecclesiastical Council of every parochial jurisdiction to prohibit dissenting ministers preaching within the district. Three measures were introduced, and the commission to which the matter was referred laid one of them before the two chambers for consideration and adoption. It was carried in the second chamber by 85 to 64 votes, but was rejected in the first by 54 to 25 votes. In May last a dissenting minister was prohibited by the church council of Grythylte to preach in that parish. The prohibition was, however, not respected, and the preacher was summoned to appear in October before the court of Grythylte and Hellefors to answer for his disregard of the order. The penalty for such offences is a fine or imprisonment.

Obituaries.

PECK. In Mt. Union, Stark Co., Ohio, Oct. 11th, 1881, of malarial fever, E. Grant Peck, only son of Lyman and Matilda Peck of North Fairfield, Huron Co., aged twenty-one years.

Grant was attending college at Mt. Union, endeavoring to prepare himself for life's duties, which arrayed themselves before his mind as he anticipated the future. Sometimes he would remark, "It seems as though there was so much to be done, and there is so little time!" On receiving a card from his room-mate, informing us of his sickness, we hastened to him, hoping to find him able to be brought home. We were with him nearly a week, when he fell asleep. Although away from home, among strangers, the kindness and sympathy extended to our son in his sickness, and to us in our affliction, by the students and Faculty of Mt Union College, and by residents near his rooms, will be held in grateful remembrance by us. Memorial services were held in College Chapel at 11 o'clock, and at 1 o'clock we took the train at Alliance for home, accompanied by A. B. Wilcox, Grant's room-mate, and Prof. J. A. Brush, who were appointed a committee to attend the funeral. This was held at the Baptist Church in North Fairfield. In sorrow we have laid him away in the grave so beautifully decorated with evergreens, buds and white flowers by his young friends. But we sorrow not without hope, for Grant had long cherished a well-grounded hope of eternal life. He sleeps in Jesus, waiting for the Life-Giver to come and waken his sleeping saints, and crown them heirs of the kingdom. Funeral sermon by Elder Allen, Disciple. Remarks by Prof. Brush. Prayer by Eld. Thompson, Congregationalist. L. & M. PECK.

COLBY. In Dalton, N. H., Oct. 25th, 1881, Daniel Colby, aged seventy years.

Our brother was sick but a few days, his death occurring just one month to a day from the death of his wife. He appeared in usual health at the funeral of his companion, and little did we think that in so short a time we should lay him by her side in the cold ground, to rest till Jesus should bid them come forth. We believe they rest in hope. May the children so suddenly bereft of father and mother be comforted by the Christian's hope, and be made better prepared for the great and notable day of the Lord which is so soon to come. He leaves children, brothers, sisters, and other relatives, who sorrow, but not as those who have no hope. We tried to comfort the mourning group with thoughts drawn from the following words: "He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces." Isa. 25: 8. C. PIKE.

The obituary of Louisa Colby, which appeared in Crisis of Oct. 26th, should have read wife of Daniel Colby instead of Samuel. C. P.

SMITH. At Auburn, R. I., Nov. 1st, 1881, Sr. Abby E., wife of Bro. Wm. H. Smith, formerly of Stonington, Conn., in the forty-seventh year of her age.

Thus again death has invaded the sacred circle of home, and torn from its hallowed endearments a faithful wife, a fond mother, and a devoted Christian. She has left a father, a step-mother who dearly loved her, brothers and sisters in Christ, a husband and two children; all of whom deeply deplore their loss; but not as those having no hope. Funeral services at East Greenwich, in the M. E. Church, by the writer, assisted by Bro. Yeates, Pastor. After which we laid her to rest, in strong hope of a speedy and better resurrection. A. DURFEE.

For many years Bro. P. has been a firm believer in Bible truth. He has faithfully served the Advent Christian Church at W., until disease sadly affected his mind. But few have lived so even, quiet and peaceful a life. He has left a widow, whose hope is firm in the Lord, and thirteen children who mourn the loss of one of the best of Christian fathers. All but one were present at the funeral. Sermon by the writer, from the words, "I have kept the faith"; assisted by Bro. C. Pike, Pastor. N. WHEELER.

ROUCH. At Foreston, Ill., Oct. 31st, 1881, of heart disease, Mr. James Rouch, aged fifty-nine years, seven months and twenty-two days.

He was a man of few words, a good husband, father and neighbor, beloved by all who knew him best. He died in hope of a home in the kingdom of God when Jesus comes. He leaves a wife, a son and two daughters to mourn his loss. Sermon by the writer, from 1 Cor. 8: 3. D. S. CLARK.

Ministerial Convention.

A Ministerial Convention will be held at New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, commencing Friday evening, Dec. 2d, and hold over Lord's day, and longer if the interest demands. The Christian public of all shades of religious faith are cordially invited, especially the ministry, and also the whole community of unbelievers are cordially invited. We hope to do you good. We also ask the earnest and believing prayers of the household of faith for the presence of the holy One to be with us. It is hoped a reduction of R. R. fare will be had.

ORDER OF EXERCISES.

The first evening a discourse will be delivered setting forth the object of the meeting, followed by choosing the proper Committees for furthering the object of the Convention. Some papers will be read from the pens (and hearts) of our Pastors, East and West.

Per order of the Northern Advent Christian Conference of Iowa, P. W. HOUGH.

Union State Conference.

The next Meeting of the Northern Indiana and Michigan Union State Conference will be held with the Church at Olive Branch, St. Joseph Co., Indiana, commencing Thursday, Dec. 1st, and holding over Sunday. Teams will be at South Bend on Thursday to convey railway passengers to the meeting. Let those who purpose attending the meeting write early to T. H. Rupel, Box 295 South Bend, Indiana, who will see that teams are in readiness to wait on those who come. Let there be a general rally to this meeting, and come in the name of the Lord, and to work for him.

Conference at Chelsea.

There will be a session of the Eastern District of the Mass. Second Advent Conference at Chelsea, Mass., to commence THURSDAY EVENING, Nov. 24TH, at the Advent Chapel on Heard Street. The meeting will continue daily, till over the following Sunday. Prayer and Conference meetings in the forenoon, as may be appointed, and preaching at 2.30 P. M., and 7.30 in the evening. We desire a special effort, by the power of God and his truth in the Spirit, to make this meeting a blessing to the church, and all the holy brethren who come. We want to see a large representation of the faithful in Christ Jesus at this meeting. We invite, and expect our brethren in the ministry to be present to preach the word of life, due this generation.

L. BOUTELL, Committee for District.

Annual Conference.

The Annual Meeting of the A. C. Conference of California will be held with the church at Santa Clara, commencing Nov. 23d, and continue over the following Sunday. It is desired there will be a general gathering of the saints to this annual feast. Perhaps it will be the last before the judgment. Brethren, commence now to pray that this may be the best meeting ever held on this coast. Let all come to this meeting in the Spirit of Jesus, and God will pour us out a blessing we cannot contain. W. R. CHANDLER, Secretary.

NOTICE.—To the Brethren and Sisters of Illinois Central Conference: The time has almost come for our annual gathering, which we now appoint to begin Nov. 23d, and continue as long as the Lord may seem to direct. It will convene at Auburn, Ill. It is very desirable that all our ministering brethren attend. We hope none will excuse themselves, but be at their post. Let every church send a delegate. If they cannot do this, send a report by letter to the Secretary, to be read in Conference. Tell your numbers, condition, and wants. A general invitation is extended for all brethren and sisters who can to attend. We expect the power of the Lord will be there to reclaim and convert. Come and enjoy it. Come with faith and prayer.

A. S. CALKINS, President.
Clayton, Ill. O. D. GIBSON, Secretary.

NOTICE.—I have closed my work with the Tent for the season. Our last meeting in London, N. H., was a blessed one. Twenty-five gave evidence of a determination to follow the Lord. The blessing of God has truly rested upon our labors the past few months. I would say that I am ready to go out anywhere in the vineyard where duty calls. A. FOGG, Lynn, Mass.

MUNGER'S LIFE AND EXPERIENCE.

WRITTEN BY HIMSELF.—Third Edition.

This is a new edition, and contains 186 pages of solid matter. Thirty-one pages of this is entire new matter. It is full of notable events and curious experiences in his labors in religious meetings for the last fifty years, he having attended some two hundred campmeetings, and it is related in the author's own peculiar style. Therefore we think it an interesting book. Price, single copy, 50 cts. postpaid; per dozen by express, $4.50. All profits accruing from the sale of this book will be used for the free distribution of tracts and papers. AGENT.

☞ I wish to say to those who have written to me for my book, that I have none to sell. They are the property of the A. C. P. Society, not mine. Please remember to send to OZIAS GOODRICH, Box 5140, Boston, Mass. HIRAM MUNGER.

THE COMING ONE.

Christ is coming, quickly coming—
O my heart, what joy! what joy!
Soon to see him, soon to dwell in Scenes of bliss without alloy!
Hushed each murmur, freed from sinning,
Quenched all bitter doubts and fears;
Then no sorrow, pain, nor sighing;
God, our God, shall wipe our tears.

Christ is coming, quickly coming—
O my heart, fresh courage take!
Shrink not from the daily crosses;
Joy to suffer for his sake.
Fear not war with Satan waging,
He's a conquered foe at best;
Faint not though the battle's raging;
All will soon be perfect rest.

Christ is coming, quickly coming—
Wing, ye hours, with rapid flight!
Hasten, welcome his appearing,
Moments of supreme delight!
Solemn moment of his coming—
Love, O mystery divine!—
Joy to know he's coming for me;
"I am his, and he is mine."

Christ is coming, quickly coming;
Then with lamp all trimmed and bright,
Gladly working, watching for him—
Waiting for the dawning light;
Telling out the gospel message—
Offering mercy full and free—
Tell of Jesus sweetly pleading,
"I have died—come unto me."

Christ is coming, surely coming—
Woe to those who know it not!
Awful judgments, anguish, horror,
Is their destined, certain lot.
Would that all believed his coming,
Ere the Bridegroom enters in,
While his precious blood still cleanses
Every crimson, scarlet sin!

THE CHRISTIAN LIFE THE ONLY LIFE.

BY W. F. HILTON.

Had there been many ways of living whereby God would be pleased in us, he would never have set before us a command to choose between two conditions, one of which separates us from him, while the other places us near him. It was a command, rather than an invitation; but certainly it is also an invitation as well as a command; and in our acceptance of either, it associates us with him, and gives countenance and preference to that which alone pleases God; for he says, "I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth." When Jesus said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life"—"I am the resurrection and the life," there was disclosed in those declarations the purpose of God. Indeed, it was the mind of God made manifest, the mystery of godliness revealed. The Psalmist says, "I was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me"; thus showing of a truth, that in me no good dwelleth. Hence, says the Saviour, "Ye must be born again." Why this decided, radical change? Because, says the Psalmist again: "Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward parts, and in the hidden parts thou shalt make me to know wisdom"; and thus is light come into the world, to reveal our darkness, and to dispel it.

There remains, then, nothing for man but to either abide in his condition of present condemnation, or accept the light and life. If the gospel be hid, or unrevealed, or covered up, it is to them who are already lost; their preference is darkness rather than life, because their deeds are evil. It cannot be otherwise, for evil proceeds from the heart, and out of its abundance it will bring forth its character. If the heart be right, it will bring forth a character pleasing to God, not of itself, lest any man should boast, but of God: "For it is God that worketh in us both to will and to do of his good pleasure." If God is at work in us we can exclaim with the apostle Paul, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me."

If one desires to meet God upon his terms, the prophet Isaiah sets forth God's own way. Man, to begin with, must recognize the solemn fact and dreadful truth that he is a sinner, and under the death sentence. Here is where the trouble all begins—man's failure to acknowledge his lost condition. If salvation was universal; if man could save himself; if God should forget justice, of what service then is Jesus Christ? Of what use the prophet's words, "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found: call ye upon him while he is near"? Let the wicked"—not the moralist, not the respectable—no, God shuts us all up to that one word, wicked; for all are sinners, and have come short of the glory of God—"Let the wicked forsake his way." Then the wicked one's way is not the right way. His thoughts and steps are wrong. Both the way and the thinking must be abandoned; yes, forsaken; then let him return unto the Lord; not to his own devices, not to his own schemes; but unto the Lord. Why? Because God, being the one offended, the offender must have the forgiveness of the one he wrongs. God says he will have mercy upon him—will abundantly pardon him. This makes it plain. Man hath the wrath of God abiding on him; hence is dead in God's sight. God is life as well as love, and it is only in living beings that God can reveal himself; and so offers eternal life to as many as will accept it.

This life is in Christ Jesus his Son. There is no such condition as a "higher Christian life." All life in Christ is higher life. The life is the same, whether in a convert of one day or an old saint of half a century. But there is a greater growth, a nearer approach to fruition; a more perfect development. It seems hurtful to have some Christians take ground that they have a higher life than others. Our life is hid with Christ in God. We are simply letting God work out his own good pleasure. Life shows its character in its work. It is recorded by Moses that when he came down from the Mount, his face shone. But it says, Moses wist not that his face shone. And so is it with a true life. If we abide in the mount of God, the communion will fill us with glory, and we cannot but help shine. People will see it, and we need not to tell of it. We are simply to grow, and thus please God. Life is character, and he giveth life to as many as believe, in order that they may be partakers of Divinity. What a monstrous libel on God is it for man to call himself a doctor of divinity, when Christ alone is the Great Divine. How plain is God's way, when he demands, commands and threatens us, to prevent us from trusting in man. God wants all or none. God wants us for himself; and he that hath this hope within him, purifieth himself, in order to possess that holiness, without which no man can see the Lord. Let man alone live with God.

"As ye have, therefore, received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him; rooted and built up in him, and stablished in the faith as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving." "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the traditions of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ." "For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily." "And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power." "By whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God."

NOTES BY THE WAY.

BY H. B. SEVEY.

Dear Brethren in Christ, beloved of the Lord:—Some time ago, by an unknown hand and name, I received a letter containing ten dollars; the writer saying that as I labored in new places, they felt they would like to help the cause by their substance. I am led to say that if all who are able would do likewise, much more could be done by those who preach who now are dependent on their hands to support their families.

I kept watch of the Spirit for an opening to spend the money the best I could to glorify the Lord in spreading the truth in a new field. The Spirit showed me I ought to go to Matinicus Island, twenty miles from Rockland, nearly one hundred miles from my place. The 1st of August I started. Called on brethren in Bath, who said the church there was doing well as could be expected in the busy season, while some were away. Next called on Brn. in Damariscotta. Had only two hours there. For some reason the brethren were divided, and meetings were given up. Those I saw were strong in the faith. The truth holds them amid the trials. Next met brethren in Rockland. Met at Burpee Hall. Our meeting was of interest; the Spirit was with us. We appointed a meeting for the next evening, as the Packet was not in. Again we had a precious season.

The next day, Thursday, we went aboard the Julia Fairbanks. Capt. Philbrick gave us a free passage to the Island, where we landed, a stranger to all, and without an invitation from any one. This Island is two and one half miles long, by one mile wide. About fifty families live on it. Their business is mostly fishing. There are some beautiful farms and good farmers. It looked very neat. Their potato fields looked like a flower garden. We picked strawberries the 15th of August. Their stock was of the best. Their taxes are very light; they have no poor; if any lack, they all help. They have one school-house, situated in the centre of the island, finished in the best style, with an organ. We found Bro. Ames, their superintendent, who gave us a kind reception; arranged for meetings Friday evening and over Sunday. They had been destitute of preaching for a long time, except that Bro. Beaton came from Vinalhaven and gave them one meeting.

Our meeting was very well attended the first evening. We spoke on the literal fulfillment of prophecy, showing them that all the prophecies in the past had been fulfilled literally, and by the same rule the remainder would be fulfilled in like manner, and that Jesus would come and take the kingdom personally; and if so, then we should be anxious to know when. After giving the signs of his coming we gave the invitation and the promises to the sinner. Bro. Macomber was with me a few days. Our meetings continued over Sunday with increased interest. Bro. Macomber went home. I continued meetings evenings through the week, and over Sunday. I visited nearly every family in the Island. We found but very few who ever made a profession of religion; but most all very friendly, and some who were reading their Bibles and praying. We never saw such love and union manifested in a place before. It seemed as though they were hid away from the bickering and strife of this age. To be in a place where there was no backbiting or tattling was worth noting. Our meetings continued with increased interest. Some six or more made a confession of their faith. Some rose for prayers; others were enlightened and strengthened. One lady over eighty years of age for the first time arose to confess her need of Christ. One man came that had not been to a meeting for nearly forty years.

A number of brethren from other places came to our meetings. The Island is a harbor for their vessels. They were strangers to us, but their speech betrayed them. They gave good help. We found the Crisis taken by Sr. Young, in whose family we found a pleasant home. Their family consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Young and eleven children, all living at home. Several were educated as teachers, and some of them made a start for the kingdom. This family reminded us of Bro Smith's family who lived in West Gardiner, but now scattered in the West. Bro. J. C. Smith was one of the number, now sounding the gospel message. The people here decided to hold two prayer meetings each week.

Tuesday, Aug. 16th, we started for home, thanking the Lord we went to Matinicus. Next, we attended our Lakeside Campmeeting in Belgrade. This was the second year of the meeting. Much work had been done on the ground. Many new tents were put up, new roads graded and streets laid out, which added to the interest of the meeting. We found the committee hard at work for the interest of the meeting. The first part of the meeting was somewhat retarded by labor on tents, moving and such like. The preaching was good, and some timely, but to me it lacked the prominence of our special message. I have felt for a long time, when in a new place especially, we as a people should make very prominent the message which distinguishes us as Second Adventists. My fears are that our Campmeetings will be places of resort for rest and personal gratification, rather than the real deep yearnings for the salvation of sinners. One was hopefully converted and baptized. Others went forward also in baptism. Our social meetings were quite good, but too large. I think it would have been better if they had been divided into three or four. Then the weak ones could get a chance to speak. In the places where I have been of late, I find a few striving for the kingdom, and are expecting it soon to be established. O for that power by which only we are kept,—the power of God through faith alone. Thine watching, working and waiting.

MISSION WORK.

At the New Hampshire A. C. Conference, recently held with the church in Manchester, a committee of five was appointed on Foreign Mission Work, consisting of A. Ross, F. L. Piper, John Hook, G. W. Brown, and G. M. Little. There seemed to be a general interest awakened in this work, and a feeling that, after preaching in the United States for nearly forty years, the message of coming judgment, it should in some way be sent to nations that have not heard it. While we have not the means to send out missionaries as we could wish, it is proposed to secure tracts covering in a comprehensive manner, the great truth of the coming of Christ in judgment, and the evidences of its near approach, and send them to all the Missionary Stations on the globe. This can be done at comparatively little cost, with the present perfection of the mail carrying system; and with money to pay for the tracts and postage, the glorious message we bear can be sent world-wide.

It is also proposed to translate comprehensive tracts on this great subject into other languages, and send them as messengers of warning into all the world. The present day affords facilities for the ready performance of this work, and brings it within the means possessed by us as a people. We rejoice in the interest awakened in this work, and the liberality with which our first appeal for funds was answered. It was made to the church at Northwood Narrows, N. H., Sunday, Nov. 6th, and the sum of $16.50 was raised for the work, and there is more to follow from them. If other churches in New Hampshire will follow suit, a grand work can be done. Bro. Ross has suggested that in the churches of N. H., a collection for this work be taken every Sunday evening. If this method should be adopted by all of our churches, a grand fund might be raised to send the proclamation of coming judgment to the ends of the earth.

Brethren, are you not ready to take hold of this work? We appeal to our ministering brethren in New Hampshire, to bring this subject before the people, and secure funds and pledges for the work. We appeal to the laity of our body in the State for aid in the work. There are many who are prospering in the accummulating of temporal means, who profess to believe the end near, and can put into this work five, ten, twenty-five, fifty, or a hundred dollars, and then have left thousands to be destroyed when the Judge comes.

Brethren, here is a golden opportunity to give evidence of the sincerity of your professed belief that the Lord is near, by thus contributing means to send this last message to the nations where its notes have not been heard. Let there be a general awakening to this work. Those who have not ready money for the work, can encourage it by their pledges, payable within a year. Sabbath Schools can help on the work by penny collections. Any amount, large or small, in money or pledges, can be given to either of the above committee, or sent direct to the Treasurer, F. L. Piper, Melvin Village, N. H.

It is proposed by the committee to make every cent count, that shall be given for this work, and reports of monies received and expended, will be occasionally given for the benefit of the donors and all interested.

Let New Hampshire speak promptly on this matter, that the message of coming judgment may be hurried to every zone and clime under heaven. At this writing, only four days after the choosing of the above Committee, there is in the hands of the Treasurer, in money and pledges, some more than eighty dollars, and liberal promises of an indefinite character. Brethren, please act at once.

F. L. PIPER.

REPORT OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF MICHIGAN.

The Society met, pursuant to call, at Ashland Oct. 15th, and was called to order by singing—"Work, for the night is coming." Prayer by L. Bower. The President, S. Dudley, in the chair. The Secretary being absent, L. Bower was chosen Sec. pro tem.

The Treasurer's Report was read and accepted.

REPORT OF THE EVANGELIST FROM OCT. 16, 1880, TO OCT. 15, 1881.

Beloved Brethren and Sisters in Christ—I, your steward and servant of our Lord Jesus Christ, and fellow laborer in the gospel with you, present to you a report of my labors the past year in the mission field. I very much regret that I am not able to give a more favorable report of my labors, for the following reasons: (1) In settling up my temporal affairs and that of others, it occupied more of my time than I expected when I accepted and assumed the duties of an Evangelist. Hence I was much hindered in the work. (2) I had previously engaged to preach for the church at Grand Ledge once in four weeks for a year, and they were not willing to let me off; hence I had to fill that engagement. I was called to engage in revival work in several places that I could not call mission work. (3) The winter was very unfavorable for holding revival meetings. In some places our labor was a failure, because of the severe storms. This summer I served our Conference as Delegate to the Foreston Convention; also as a Delegate to the Association Meeting at Chelsea, Mass.

Although I have not been able to do much mission work, I have not been idle in the cause of the dear Master. Under the circumstances, I believe I have done what I could. I have sown the good seed in several new fields by scattering tracts and preaching the Word. The result will not be fully known until Jesus comes. I have spent forty days in what I believed would come under mission work, and have preached thirty-four sermons. Have seen several turn to the Lord.

My expenses have been $19.05. I have received from collections where I have labored, $12.29, leaving a balance on expense of $6.76. I have received from the Mission Fund $40.00, which leaves a balance due me on expenses of $6.76. At our Annual Meeting last year there was raised by collection $5.25 for tracts; of this I have used $3.00, leaving a balance in my hands of $2.25, which I am ready to pay at any time to the proper person.

JOHN BOWER, State Evangelist.

Voted, To pay the Evangelist the balance on expenses.

At this stage of the meeting a letter from Sr. Janes was handed to the Secretary and read before the Society. It was voted that the chairman appoint a nominating committee. Brn. A. W. Lamson, A. Amos and A. T. Squire were appointed. The Committee reported S. Dudley for President, L. Bower for Secretary, N. Scott for Treasurer, R. Burtenshaw for member of Board of Directors to fill his own vacancy.

Moved, by Bro. Crozier, that the Secretary cast the vote for the Society, which vote resulted in the election of those nominated by the Committee as officers for the ensuing year.

Bro. J. Bower was chosen Evangelist for the ensuing year. Voted, to pay the Evangelist the same as last year, $1.00 per day and expenses. Pledges were taken to the amount of $94.00.

Voted, That the Evangelist report his labors through the Crisis, once in four weeks.

Voted, That the Secretary have five hundred blank certificates of membership printed for the use of the Society.

Voted, That the Evangelist be authorized to procure such help as he may need to assist him in carrying on the work in new fields; and that he be authorized to draw on the Treasurer for their pay and expenses.

Thus closed the Annual Meeting of the Society. This Society was organized only one year ago, with some of the best men and women at its head. We had nothing to commence with, but now we have a strong Society in membership, and over one hundred dollars in the treasury. I should like to add some thoughts on missionary work, but will forbear at this time. Love and harmony prevailed throughout the meeting. All took new courage to press the work until the Master comes and says, It is enough; "enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

TREASURER'S REPORT.—A. C. M. Society of Michigan, in account with the Treasurer. Oct. 16, 1880. By cash on hand, $78.00. Oct. 15, 1881. By cash received to date, $20.75. Pledges, $38.00. Total, $98.75. Contra. April 20, 1881. Paid J. Bower, $40.00. Balance on hand, $58.75.

N. SCOTT, Treasurer.

P. S.—There were a number of renewals of membership at this meeting, which swelled the above amount to over one hundred dollars. Voted, To adjourn.

L. BOWER, Secretary.

THE SOUL'S RESTING-PLACE.

My Saviour, I am weary
Of everything but thee;
All else is dark and dreary,
A wilderness to me.
By sin I'm sore oppressed,
By Satan sorely tried,
With self-love all distressed,
In thee myself I hide.
Thy precious blood, it healeth
The wounds that sin has made;
My heart its comfort feeleth,
Whene'er it is afraid.
But oh! the hope of being Forever, Lord, with thee—
The joyful hope of seeing
The face once marred for me!—
It fills my heart with comfort,
It fills my lips with praise,
So that amidst my sorrow
A joyful song I'll raise!
No more shall Satan tempt me,
No more shall sin deceive;
No more thy heart, my Saviour,
Shall I by folly grieve.
Oh! then I shall be like thee,
And in thine image shine,
With deepest joy confessing
The glory's only thine.

REPORT.

Editors of Crisis.—The church here is small, but presents a solid front, there being no divisions, either doctrinal or personal, to hinder us. Brotherly love for each other, and all who love Jesus and his appearing, is firmly established here. We have passed through severe trials, that caused some difference of opinion, and tried our faith and love for each other, but we have been saved from all bitterness, and our little church is a unit. In matters of faith, we are firm in the Bible truths advocated by the Crisis.

We feel sad that many who have been advocates of the truth, do not see fit to take hold with us. There are some here in Nashua who have never been to one of our prayer-meetings, though we have held them regularly for more than two years. That we have been misrepresented is evident; but even if we have faults, we are willing to be forgiven, and would be pleased to see those of like faith, who are in this place, coming into line with us; that we may all work together for the spread of the glorious truth of the immediate personal return of the Master. We have preaching occasionally in Good Templar's Hall.

We wish to add to the above report that we have a healthy Sunday School connected with the church. We use Bro. Goodrich's Question Book for the younger class, and the Pilgrim Lessons for the adults. There are twenty-four scholars and teachers, with an average attendance of more than one-half. Some are compelled to stay away by feeble health, a great part of the time. The church and Sunday School are supplied with the New Hymn Book, which is much liked. Our usual meetings are: a prayer-meeting Sunday, at 2 P. M.; Wednesday, at 7½ P. M. "Service of song," Friday evening, at 7½; Sunday School at 1 P. M., Sundays. By the request of the church,

A. F. GOULD.

Nashua, N. H.

FROM G. W. CRAWFORD.

Dear Brother:—I am glad that I have the privilege of writing to the dear ones scattered abroad, to let them know how our work goes on in these parts.

Bro. Cargile, myself and several other ministers, started for our Conference in Etawah Co., Ala., a distance of one hundred miles, and across two mountains, the Sand and Lookout. The first church that we visited was situated at Valley Head, where Bro. Bankson had a protracted meeting in progress. Ten were converted the evening we were there. We started the next day on our journey over the Lookout Mountain. Nothing worthy of note took place till we arrived at the place where we were to hold our Conference. Here several found Jesus precious to their souls, and many were made to rejoice in the love of God. How pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

After spending several days with Lebanon Church, we started for Cherokee Co. We stopped over several days with two other churches, Hale's school-house and Bro. Glen's church. We found some precious brothers and sisters with these churches, who are looking for the coming of the blessed Master.

After leaving these churches we came to Spring Creek church, and had a glorious revival. Several found the Lord precious to them, and much good resulted. Backsliders were reclaimed, and many praised God. Many of the sisters spoke in this meeting, and some of the middle-aged started for salvation. Sixteen or seventeen were forward for prayers on the last day of our meeting. Praise God for his goodness and for his wonderful works to the children of men.

There are several good workers and self-sacrificing ministers in these counties that we visited. They are doing a great amount of labor, and much good has resulted. God bless them and save them, is my prayer. Our work is being extended in all directions, where we had no opening a few years ago. We have free access now, and truth is being sought. We had several ministers of other denominations, who seemed to hear the word gladly. We had in all twenty-six conversions.

Bro. Cargile's sermons were all attentively listened to, and the truth was presented. Praise God for a free salvation and a plain Bible, that we may read, and accept the plan of salvation through Jesus. How precious! Jesus did it all for me, even me, a poor sinner. Yours in hope of eternal life.

FROM SR. M. A. TIBBETS.

Dear Brethren Editors:—The letter page of the Crisis this week is so very interesting, that I wish to notice some of the precious words of the various writers, whose contributions of the pen have made me feel so joyous and happy. Although unknown to me by name and person, yet your words of gospel love and trust in Jesus as the Life-Giver, so sweetly accords with my own heart, that I wish to make this humble response. The letter of Sr. Mary J. Haley claims my deepest love and sympathy, and I say yes, dear sister, you shall be remembered at the throne of grace on the 16th of Nov., as you request, and may God grant that your eventful and useful life may long be spared to work in the vineyard of the Master.

Next, that "Remarkable Meeting," where two hundred invalids met in holy, humble prayer with Dr. Cullis, that highly honored instrument in the hand of the Lord for help and healing to the suffering and afflicted. May he long be spared to lessen human woe and prove a living witness that Jesus is still the Great Healer of all who fully trust in him.

Then there were a few words of "Encouragement" from Eld. A. J. Bolster, concerning the Foreston meeting, that did me good. I have read so many unkind sayings about it, that surely were not written "with the wisdom that is from above," and my heart has been so sad over it, that I am glad to hear from some that can give encouragement and are willing to heal and not divide, to improve that which is not perfect. We are all slow to learn, and it was only "little by little" that ancient Israel ever overcame their foes. So it will be with us, not only as humble individuals at home, but in our meetings for business and spiritual improvement. I would only add: If that meeting was not all that good and well meaning brethren hoped it would be, make it better the next time. Don't "let that which is lame be turned out of the way, but let it rather be healed," "and let there be no strife, for ye are brethren."

I am longing "to see the King in his beauty." I want to see the glorious city, so graphically described in the glowing lines of Bro. Libby, in his "Blissful Vision" of the golden streets and pearly gates of that celestial home Jesus has gone to prepare. It is indeed an "Entrancing Prospect" which I love to contemplate. I am an Adventist, and love the doctrine of Christ's second coming, and those who advocate it, and are walking in accordance with it. But I must stop telling what I love, or my humble letter will be too long. I will close by saying, Fill the letter page with fresh ones every week, full of love. Work for Christ, and let every lamp be trimmed and burning when Jesus comes, is the prayer of your waiting sister in "the blessed hope."

FROM BRO. T. J. SMITH.

Dear Editors:—Some time ago Bro. McCulloch, of Illinois, came here and held meetings with us, and truly it was "meat in due season." One obeyed the Lord in baptism. We had unfavorable weather, nevertheless the Lord was with us. Two united with us in church fellowship, and we trust that they will be bright and shining lights before the world. Some others were convinced of the error of their ways, and we trust will soon follow. Bro. McCulloch set in order a prayer and praise meeting, which I hope will not cease till the great Life-Giver comes, "who shall change these vile bodies, and fashion them like unto his glorious body."

Bro. and Sr. Gibson were the only ones that came to the Quarterly Meeting. Since the Conference on the Reserve, Bro. Gibson has held a few meetings with us in Hamlin. The brethren and sisters are stronger in the faith, and seem to realize more fully the necessity of letting their light shine. It is the same here as it is in most of other places; some are prejudiced; but we hope the time will soon come when they will see. All glory be given to God for what he has done. From your unworthy brother, looking for Jesus.

Hamlin, Kansas, Nov. 7th.

FROM BRO. E. FROSTIC.

Christian Brethren and Sisters in Christ Jesus:—I with you am looking for the second coming of Christ. I am glad to know that he is coming, and that the time is so near. I became one of Jesus' disciples about nine months ago. I know that these months of serving Jesus are worth more than a whole lifetime serving Satan. It is truly blessed to walk with God. It is a great wonder to me how people can turn from serving the living and true God, to serve one who will give them no true pleasure, but death and destruction at last. Why will ye turn back? "Today, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts." If you turn from your Lord and Master, what will you turn back to? Since I turned to the Saviour, I have found more peace in believing than I ever did before I was converted. I request an interest in all your prayers, that I may ever be found faithful, and at last meet you where parting will be no more. Yours in Christ.

DENOMINATIONAL WORK.

BY N. FIELD, M. D.

There is a good deal said in opposition to this kind of work, as calculated to destroy the unity of the body of Christ. The idea is that Adventists should have no name or organization to distinguish them from the various sects who teach all sorts of error, and who are governed by the doctrines and commandments of men. All the metaphors and parables used by our blessed Saviour to represent his disciples and their oneness, are quoted to show that we Adventists are doing wrong in perpetuating division among Christians.

Now I want these opposers of our work to tell us where the body of Christ is, and who compose it. We know what it was in the days of the apostles; but where is it now? Since the rise of the Great Apostacy the world is full of sects, error, delusion and falsehood. Is the Church of Rome, with her one hundred and seventy-five million members, the body of Christ? Are her daughters, the Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Lutherans, and a host of other sects, the body of Christ? I want a categorical answer to these questions. Let there be no quibbling or prevarication. We are condemned for not working in the interests of these sects, giving them the fruits of our labor. It is right, therefore, that it should be proved that one, or even all of them, are the body of Christ. Not one of the sects of this country recognize us their equals, and would not fellowship us. They ridicule the doctrine we hold, and tell all manner of falsehoods about us, in order to prejudice their members against us. If one of their preachers should get his eyes open, and preach the doctrine of the Second Advent of Christ, and its cognate truths, they will expel him from their communion, and denounce him as a heretic.

Again, I repeat the request, that the opposers of our denominational work, tell us where to find the body of Christ; and when they find it, I for one will join it, if I have not already done so.

CONDENSED NEWS ITEMS.

The President has appointed Nov. 24th as national Thanksgiving day.

One hundred and sixty persecuted Jews arrived in New York from Russia the 15th.

A girl sixteen years old in St. Louis has been sleeping for four months. She is kept alive by small quantities of milk.

The Messrs, Lord, card manufacturers, near Bradford, have failed. Liabilities £130,000.

It is stated in a Paris paper that Baron James Rothschild, whose death was announced a few days since, lost $16,000,000 on the "Bourse," speculating in stocks, and that the excitement and anxiety arising from the disaster were the cause of his death.

The sub-commission of the land court has reduced the rent of a tenant of Lord Clarina from £53 to £44, notwithstanding that the landlord contributed to the expense of building and drainage. The judgment is considered startling.

The Standard's dispatch from Berlin says: At his recent meeting with the Emperor, Prince Bismarck expressed a wish that the crown Prince be present, in order to discuss the present situation, and in order that he may have a voice in deciding upon the policy to be pursued. The Emperor expressed a wish for a restoration of peace between the Catholic Church and the State.

The Jews are preparing to help their persecuted brethren. Assistance is doubtless needed, and it is from the wealthy Hebrew merchants in this country that it may most properly come. The refugees from Russia must be given some aid, and to their more fortunate brethren here they most naturally look for it. At Dallas, Texas, the other day, an Israelite organization was formed with this object in view, and, as a sign of earnestness of purpose, $1,000 was subscribed on the spot.

If rumors from the Canadian border are correct, England is finding out anew that misfortunes never come unattended. The report is that a member of Parliament in Canada intends to enter tentatively at the approaching session a motion for State independence. The grievance is that Canada is not permitted to have sufficient voice in the choice of a Chief Magistrate. She wishes the privilege of electing her own Governor-General. It is, however, clearly strategical and may justly be considered as indicative of serious determination on the part of Canadian reformers.

M. Gambetta presented himself, with his colleagues, in the Chamber of Deputies today, (Nov. 10) and explained the policy of the ministry. He said: "We desire a policy which will advance gradually and wisely toward reform. We rely on finding a majority which will afford us its frank support in both chambers and upon disciplined public service. We propose to reform the judicial system, perfect national education and complete military legislation. We wish, by means of treaties, to extend our commercial relations. We wish to strictly follow the provisions of the concordat, and to maintain peace at home and abroad. These reforms will suffice us and enable us to reach a fresh stage of progress."

IMPROVING THE TIME.

BY H. S. WEBSTER.

The wise man said: "Do with thy might what thy hands find to do, for there is no work, nor knowledge, nor device, in the grave, whither thou goest." In view of the shortness of our lives, the little time allotted us here, and the insecurity of our life, is it not befitting that we should do with our might all that we can? All who have named the name of Christ and put him on, have entered into his service to labor for him. Not one is there but has a work to do, to labor and to wait. Then should not we do our work with zeal and determination? It is a good work, no matter what part is allotted us. "Whatsoever we do, let us do it heartily as unto the Lord," knowing he will reward us far more than we deserve. None need think because it is so little they can do, they will be excused. It should be our inquiry, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

What a work there is before every child of God! The love of Christ in our hearts constraineth us to seek ways and means of doing good, to speak an encouraging word to some poor, fainting heart. This can be done by sending our beloved paper, the Crisis, to some one. Do not let one of these messengers of peace and good will lie upon your selves, or be torn, or wasted, while so many are starving for the bread of life. Send or give a little tract. Put one of these stirring messengers into your written letters to friends. Who can tell the good it may do? I could tell of many instances where good has been done in this way.

What a glorious work, doing what we can for Jesus! trying to comfort the dear people of God! It is only a little while we have to labor and wait and pray. Yes, pray "the Lord of the harvest to send forth more laborers into his vineyard." Yes, pray, pray in our secret chambers, and the Lord openly will hear. Let us be faithful to our trust, and be led by the Holy Spirit, letting our light shine that others may see the beauty of a Christian example.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Kennebeck Valley A. C. Quarterly Conference met with the church at Bowdoinham, Oct. 6th, at 7 o'clock P. M. Preaching by the President, Eld. J. R. Hall. Some followed in exhortations. Friday morning had a good prayer-meeting. It continued until noon. At 2 P. M., preaching by Bro. Wm. A. Burch; in the evening by Bro. J. Sturdivant. Saturday morning brethren and sisters came in from other towns, and we had a good prayer-meeting. In the afternoon preaching by Bro. J. R. Hall. In the evening preaching by Bro. E. M. Andrews. It was a profitable discourse, and a good feeling was in the meeting.

Sunday morning, at nine o'clock, a social meeting. The house was crowded, and there was a good feeling in the meeting. One started to be a Christian. At 10½ preaching by Bro. J. R. Hall. In the afternoon by Bro. Burch. In the evening by Bro. Burch. This closed a good and profitable Conference. Preachers present: J. R. Hall, E. M. Andrews, Levi Andrews, John Sturdivant, W. A. Burch, John Lake, and H. S. Mitchell.

FROM GEO. W. ENGLISH.

Dear Brethren in the North Western District of Michigan, and especially the isolated ones:—I would say that I am about to lock up the old tool chest, being a carpenter and joiner by trade, and the season for that kind of work being about over; and, the Lord willing, I want to spend a few weeks in the missionary field. I am ready to go anywhere that good can be done. Any desiring my labors with them for the salvation of the perishing, can address me at Edmore, Montcalm County, Michigan.

Now, dear brethren, remember that time is short, and what is done must be done soon, or forever remain undone. We shall soon be called to an account for the manner in which we have spent these last precious moments of time. The fields are already white for the harvest, and the laborers few. How important, then, that we improve every moment of time. May God help us to extricate our hands from the entanglements of the world, and go out into the highways and hedges in the name and strength of Israel's God, and battle against the enemy, perhaps for the last time. Do not let us always be getting ready, but go. See the clouds gathering thick all around us. The storm is coming! Soon, very soon, the trumpet will sound, and find us with our work done or undone.

Finally, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may have free course and be glorified; and may the God of love comfort our hearts and stablish us in every good word and work. From your Bro. in Christ.

QUARTERLY MEETING REPORT.

The Quarterly Meeting at Manchester, Iowa, was not largely attended, on account of the state of the roads, and therefore it was no criterion by which to judge of spirituality and growth. Those present seemed to enjoy the meeting, and are steadfast in the faith. They have arranged to buy a piece of land for Camp and Conference purposes, and also to build a place of worship if thought best. We met them in joy, and parted with them in hope, but mingled with tears.

Editors World's Crisis:—It has been a long time since I felt able to write you anything for the Crisis; nor do I now feel competent to do so. I cannot forbear thinking much on the subject of our Lord's coming again to destroy the wicked from off the earth, and to establish a glorious kingdom, according to his own testimony and that of the holy prophets "since the world began"—even an everlasting kingdom "under the whole heaven." An important feature in that coming kingdom will be, the Lord Jesus himself; the mighty God is to be in it forever and ever.

How glad the true children of God will be when this kingdom comes. To greet each other then on the other side of Jordan, what joy will be theirs! There no pain, no disordered heads or hearts shall ever be experienced in that land.

I am feeble yet, from the effects of what physicians call softening of the brain. I am failing in strength, both of body and mind. But I hope in God as my all. I must submit to whatever awaits me, whether it be a demented condition of mind, a crazy brain that may linger long, or the work of disease cut short, remains to be experienced. I feel the need of the prayers of all my dear brethren scattered abroad, for it is an awful thing to lose one's mind. But I WILL trust in God. He is my only hope. I feel that I love him with my whole heart, and that there is nothing that I count dear to myself now. I make a full surrender of everything but my blessed Saviour. I earnestly ask to be remembered by all who read this. Do not forget, my brethren, to ask for a blessing upon me. Your brother in Christ.

THE BIBLE.—What a wondrous book this Bible of ours is! When you have read it through a score of times, you may have only strolled over the surface, looked at the land, or ploughed, at most, the upper soil. If you take one passage and dig deep for the treasure that coucheth beneath, you will find it inexhaustible. The book has in it a matchless fullness. It were as possible to measure space, or to grasp the infinite in the hollow of your hand, as to investigate the entire compass of Holy Scripture. It is high; I cannot attain unto it. It is broad; I cannot reach its boundary. But oh, what an abundance of provision, and what a fullness of comfort there is stored up in the promises of God's word!"—Spurgeon.

In the love of Christ his followers have ever found great joy. It is their light, the day-star dawning in their hearts, the renewing of their inward man, their joy of faith, the believing that makes them rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory.—Bushnell.

THE DAWNING YEAR.

Rejoice! rejoice! the day is near,
The morning breaketh full and clear;
No gloomy doubt nor timid fear
May desecrate this glad New Year.

Arise! arise! The waning night
Of woe, and pain, and tyrant's might,
Forecasts the coming of the light,
The morning song—the reign of right.

Ring out! ring out, loud-pealing bell!
O'er lake, o'er sea, and mountain dell
Ring out! Let the high anthem swell,
That truth on earth hath come to dwell.

Proclaim it wide: the year is nigh,
When, through rejoicing earth and sky
Will ring the glad exultant cry,
"All things are thine, O Christ, most high."

O heart of mine! Take thou good cheer;
Ring out thy song of triumph clear;
For Christ, thy King, will soon be here—
Millennium dawn, some glad New Year.

TEXTS AND THOUGHTS FOR THE NEW YEAR.

BY M. L. SUYDAM.

"Be ye also ready." "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his works." Matt. 16: 27. "For thou shall be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." Luke 14: 14. "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. 3: 4. "Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord at his coming?" 1 Thess. 2: 19. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." 1 John 3: 2. "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body; according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself". Phil. 3: 20, 21. "And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and take you to myself, that where I am, there ye may be also." John 14: 3. "I will not leave you comfortless, I will come to you." ver. 18. "Because I live, ye shall live also." ver. 19. "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." John 11: 25. "And he took the cup and gave thanks, and said, Take this, and divide it among yourselves; for I say unto you, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine until the kingdom of God shall come." Luke 22: 17, 18. "Jesus said, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me." John 21: 22. "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 1: 10, 11. "Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who will bring to light the hidden things of darkness." 1 Cor. 4: 5. "For as oft as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come." 1 Cor. 11: 26. "For bodily exercise profiteth little; but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." 1 Tim. 4: 8. "For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry." Heb. 10: 37. "And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day." John 6: 39, 40, 44, 54. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live. For as the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself; and hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man. Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation," or condemnation. John 5: 25-29.

Here we have one class spoken of who are dead in trespasses and sin, and another class who are now dead and in their graves, returned to dust, and the spirit returned to God who gave it. I believe this latter class here spoken of are the ones referred to by Hosea (13: 14), "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death: O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction; repentance shall be hid from mine eyes." Also Ezekiel says, "Therefore prophesy, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel; and ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves." Ezek. 37: 12, 13. Read also Isa. 24: 21-22—"And they shall be gathered together as prisoners are gathered in a pit, and shall be shut up in the prison, and after many days shall they be visited."

It is proven by profane history that John the divine was banished to the isle of Patmos by Domitian, A. D. 94, at which time and place he wrote the Revelations, in about the year 96, or thirty-six years after the destruction of Jerusalem. We read (Rev. 1: 1)—"The revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass"; and (verses 10, 19)—"I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day, and heard behind me a great voice as of a trumpet, saying, Write the things which thou hast seen, and the things which are, and the things which shall be hereafter." Here John was given the spirit of prophecy, as Daniel, Isaiah, Ezekiel, Hosea and Paul, and was allowed to see things that should take place in the "great day of the Lord," or "Lord's day." Hence we read, "And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. 5: 9, 10, 13.

Yes, saints, look up, and hold up your heads, for this must shortly come to pass. You need not keep this matter in your heart any longer, but cry aloud, for "the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever." Dan. 7: 18, 27. But, right here, we must exercise great patience, for "at the time appointed" it will come to pass, and not before; "the interpretation is sure"; therefore abide in hope, and watch. Peter says, "And when the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." 1 Pet. 5: 4. Has any one heard of his appearing in the clouds as yet? I think not, for John says, "When he shall appear, we shall be like him." The telegraph brings us daily many instances where "blood toucheth blood," but no tidings of the long-looked for Saviour. Let us not be discouraged. Remember how Paul reasoned with the Thessalonians, saying, "I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope; for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive, and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent [go before] them which are asleep; for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise [not have already gone to heaven] first, then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." This was written about the year 64; and Paul says, "The Lord shall descend"; notice this point, together with the one saying, "which are asleep"; then he says, "Wherefore comfort one another with these words." 1 Thess. 4: 13-19. O joy! wait a little longer.

It does seem to me that all mankind should look upon these repeated assertions of a judgment to come at the appearing of Christ and the resurrection of our bodies. Paul looked and groaned for it. Rom. 8: 23; Phil. 3: 16. How can an intelligent being of ordinary reasoning faculties reject what follows, and join themselves to "traditions and fables of men," when by so doing they must be lost, or cast away? "Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him." Jude, 14, 15. "But every man in his own order; Christ the first fruits, afterwards they that are Christ's, at his coming." 1 Cor. 15: 23. "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." Matt. 25: 31-46. "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom, preach the word," etc. 2 Tim. 4: 1-8. "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth." "And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise; God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." Heb. 11: 13-40.

What does this all mean if it does not refer to the same persons mentioned by Daniel, Isaiah, Ezekiel and Hosea, who are now in their graves? "And the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great; and shouldest destroy them which destroy the earth." Rev. 11: 18. Let us bear in mind that our Lord said, thirty-six years after the destruction of Jerusalem, "And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." Rev. 22: 7-12. "He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come speedily. Amen." Rev. 22: 20. Paul must have been a firm believer in this revealed religion. Hear him: "And to you who are troubled rest together with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting [aionion] destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe." 2 Thess. 1: 7-10.

How many of us, kind reader, under all these circumstances can really and truly unite with the apostle John and respond, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus"?

As I pen these lines on the last day of the old year, 1882, in hope that they may through the blessing of God cause the scales to fall from the eyes of some professing Christian, some one who is as blind to the true intent of God's Word as I was a few months since, I most earnestly pray that he may keep me, with all the readers of the Crisis, honest and faithful to ourselves, that we may surrender all to him, and ever be found "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ" during the year 1883, or until he come. Reader, are you looking, are you expecting, are you praying? Lord, help!

THE ONLY WAY.

BY GEO. W. SEDERQUIST.

"Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life."—John 14. 6.

The prospect of our Lord's departure out of this world filled the hearts of his disciples with grief because they had long enjoyed his gracious presence, and had indulged the hope that he was about to "restore again the kingdom to Israel." But he comforted them with the most assuring words that he was going to his Father to prepare a place for them; and that he would come again and receive them to himself, that where his place and presence was there should they (his disciples) abide with him forever; knowing as he did the opposition his disciples would meet in the world, and the questions that would naturally arise concerning him and his mission, and the events clustering about his death, which was so strange and shameful, thus he speaks to his disciples: "Let not your hearts be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me." The many convincing proofs he had given them of his divinity ought to have been sufficient for their faith; but knowing their weakness, and the tendency of the human heart to falter in the hour of temptation and bitter disappointment, he introduces these gracious promises to encourage their poor hearts, and supply them with ample means of defence in the coming struggle that awaited them when he, their leader, should be taken from them; which they realized shortly after.

When he had stated the fact of his going away from them, and his returning to them again, he adds, "Whither I go ye know, and the way ye know." But Thomas, who was slow of apprehension, and apt to doubt, saith unto him, "Lord, we know not whither thou goest, and how can we know the way?" Then Jesus said unto him, "I am the way, the truth and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." This declaration should forever settle the question how believers are to receive life eternal. But poor sinful man, led by a blind superstition, has sought out many ways, and suggested many theories. But one and only one way exists by which ruined man can ever enjoy life everlasting. And that way was brought to light when Christ abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. All glory to his name!

Jesus says, I am the way." As a way or road leads to a certain place, and as man's leads to certain ends, so our Lord Jesus Christ is the way to all the blessings which grace provides on earth, and to all the glories of a blissful immortality hereafter.

He is the way to pardon. "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God." Through Christ our sins are remitted when we believe in his name. As Peter said by the Holy Ghost, "To him gave all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him should receive remission of sin." Acts 10: 43.

Jesus is the only way to peace; he being the true and only source by which peace is obtained. The world is at war with Jehovah; but Jesus, the Word, is the way of reconciliation. 2 Cor. 5: 18, 19. Hence all true believers have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. Rom. 5: 1, 2. "For he is our peace who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us." Eph. 2: 14. "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you." "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." John 14: 27. As the Prince of peace, he reigns in the hearts of his people.

Jesus is the way to holiness. "His blood cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1: 7. The means to this end is stated in the 9th verse thus: "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." He died that we might be holy, and walk unblamable before him in love. "And having been chosen of God the Father to salvation, through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth." "Whereunto he hath called us by the gospel to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ." 2 Thess. 2: 13, 14. "Who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people zealous of good works." Titus 2: 14. He requires that his people be holy; for it is written, "Be ye holy, for I am holy." His people should be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world." Phil. 2: 15.

Our Lord Jesus Christ is the only way to the heavenly kingdom. His merit gives us a title to it. His grace works in us a fitness for it. His word and Spirit beget in us a longing desire and a patient waiting for the coming and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. Our relation to him, as pilgrims and strangers on the earth, lead us to seek a country, and look for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God. Jesus says, "I am the truth." He certainly is the fountain and source of all truth. As the law came by Moses, so grace and truth came by Jesus Christ. All truth is known to him; all the treasures of wisdom are hid in him. All Scripture given by inspiration is the direct result of his Spirit dwelling in the prophets. Hence they spoke as they were moved by the Spirit. "The Spirit of prophecy is the testimony of Jesus." He was the truth which burned in the hearts of patriarchs and prophets, and sanctified the holy ones of Israel. He prayed for his disciples, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy Word is truth. And he is called the Word of God, which was made flesh and dwelt among men.

He that doeth truth, cometh to the light. Thus the Word of God, which is truth and light, leads us to consider the life. "I am the way, the truth, and the life." "No man cometh unto the Father but by me." How plain, how significant are these words of truth! How they drive back the dark clouds of superstition and tradition, and exalt Jesus at the head of his mission, leading the blind and deaf, the lame and halt, by a way they knew not, through this dark and dreary world of death and graves! How cheering and encouraging! All that come to him with his gracious Word, find proof that he did not come to kill men or destroy life, but rather to give life. And so we find him doing. For he said, "I have come that ye might have life, and that ye might have it more abundantly." The more abundant life which he speaks of may be better understood from his gracious word spoken to Martha and her sister Mary concerning their dead brother, when he said, "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." "And whosoever liveth and believeth in me, shall never die." "The hour is coming in the which all that are in their graves shall hear his voice and come forth." John 5: 29.

Again he said to his disciples, "For as the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself." John 5: 26. For their encouragement he said, "Because I live, ye shall live also." "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead; for as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. 15: 21, 22. "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Rom. 5: 12. And as Adam had power to transmit death to all his seed, so Christ has power to transmit life to all his seed; for he obtained the power of an endless life when he burst the bands of death, and triumphed o'er the grave. He came forth a mighty conqueror. And "having obtained eternal redemption for us, he is able to give eternal life to as many as the Father hath given him." To convince his disciples that he was the same Jesus, he showed them his hands and his feet; and to his servant John, years after, he declared, "I am he that liveth and was dead, and am alive forevermore. Amen. And have the keys of death and hell." Rev. 1: 18. And Paul says, "He was declared to be the son of God with power, according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead." Rom. 1: 3, 4.

Thus Jesus has made it possible that all may have life, for he has by the grace of God tasted death for every man. Oh, how blessed to know the way, and walk therein! Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, few walk therein." What a privilege to understand the truth in these days of fables and fiction! The time has come when the people will not endure sound doctrine; but truth is the truth, if nobody believes it. Let us purify our souls in obeying the truth. And finally, like Paul, to be able to say, "It is no more I that live, but Christ that liveth in me; for the life I now live I live by the faith of the Son of God." "And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins." Eph. 2: 12.

Oh, may we all, dear readers, with the apostle Paul, seek for glory, honor, immortality, eternal life. Rom. 2: 6. "For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When he who is our life shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory." "Even so come, Lord Jesus." The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all.

THE NIGHT IS FAR SPENT.

BY M. D. BABCOCK.

"The night is far spent, the day is at hand; let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light."

The shadows of that long and dreary night fell in the garden of Eden, and will remain on the earth and its inhabitants until the Day Star shall arise. Man disobeyed, hence was driven from that garden. Darkness covered the whole earth, and gross darkness the people. The clouds gathered blackness, the lightning pierced the heavens, the thunder declared the destruction of the old world, the rain came in torrents, the wind moaned—all, all is lost! Six thousand years has nearly passed, and the whole earth groaneth and travelleth in pain together until now. The inhabitants have sickened and died one after another. Its flowers have faded, its fruits have decayed, and passing away is written on all we see.

Truly this has been a long night of darkness. From righteous Abel down there have been trials, sorrows, pain and death. The prophets all were persecuted and lived the lives of martyrs, and many came to that death. All these ages the children of God have been the children of sorrow and affliction. Some were tortured, others had trials of cruel mockings and scourging, of bonds and imprisonment; some were stoned, sawn asunder, tempted, slain with the sword; some wandered about in sheep skins and goat skins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented, hiding themselves in deserts and in the mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth. All, all in the past has gone to the silent grave. Will there be no day? Will there be no light? Will all remain silent in the grave forever? nay, verily; behold the morning cometh when the sea, and death and hades must give up their dead. When the Son of man shall send forth his angels, then all the wicked will be destroyed, and the earth made new, and the saints of the Most High be led by the gentle hand of Jesus back to the garden of Eden, never again to be overshadowed by a cloud.

As the shadows of the night are still on the world, let us not sleep as do others, but let us watch and be sober, for we are all the children of light, and the children of the day. We are not of the night nor of the darkness. They that sleep sleep in the night; but let us who are of the day be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love, and for an helmet the hope of salvation. Knowing the time, let us put on the whole armor of light. The day is at hand. The day of the Lord, the day that brings in everlasting peace, the morning of the resurrection, a morning without a cloud, an holy day. No night, no darkness again. All is peace. Welcome glorious day when sorrow, tears and death are forever done away!

THE WORLD GROWING WORSE.

BY N. FIELD, M. D.

Judging from the amount of crime reported by the daily papers, the conversion of the world, as taught by the clergy, will have to be delayed at least half a century longer. A few more costly churches will have to be built, spires raised higher, and larger bells used to attract the people and bring them to meeting. They will not come without a sensation of some kind to draw them. Crowds will go to hear Ingersoll ridicule Mr. Moses. A paragraph in the daily papers announcing one of his tirades against the Bible will fill the largest hall in any of our large cities, while the best-paid preachers cannot get a respectable audience. They will go through rain, thunder and lightning to hear him prove that there is no God, no devil, no future punishment, and no future life for man. That the universe is the work of chance; that animal life is the product of heat and moisture acting on matinal atoms, called protoplasm; that man came up by slow degrees from an atom to a monkey; by continual progression he got to be a baboon, then an ourang outang. At this stage of evolution tails were dropped off, and the ourang outang went into the clothing business, and began wearing clothes cut in the latest fashion.

Ingersoll thinks this much more reasonable than what Mr. Moses says about the origin of man. In a lecture in Louisville ten years ago he said he was proud of his monkey ancestry, Duke Ourang Outang and Princess Chimpanzee! This new gospel of Ingersoll's costs five hundred dollars a sermon. It is a money-making business; much more profitable than writing briefs, and defending Star-route thieves. He seems to be very anxious to enlighten the world, but he charges so much for it that a great many poor people cannot afford to buy his gospel.

In a recent lecture he spoke rather favorably of Jesus Christ, calling him a good man. There were a few other good men who might have been mentioned, such as Enoch, Job, Moses, Aaron, Esau, Noah and Joseph. All he could allege against Noah in his lecture two years ago was that he accidentally got drunk; but the old man confessed the sin, and had it sent down to posterity as a warning to other grape-growers not to fool with wine. If I were a betting man, I would bet a gill of buttermilk that if Col. Ingersoll should happen to get drunk and be naked in his garden at Peoria, he would never have it published in the New York Herald as a warning to other drunkards. He would not be as honest as Noah, or David, or Peter, and many Old and New Testament saints. He does not tell any of his sins in lectures, but takes particular pains to tell what they did in old times when Mr. Moses lived. To hear him talk, one would suppose that the Bible is the cause of all the rascality in the world. That no man could be really honest and virtuous without becoming an atheist. That the destruction of the Bible is the only remedy for all the wrongs and ills which affect humanity.

France once tried to live without the Bible and without God, and the experiment was a signal failure; not, however, without costing that country 300,000 lives by the guillotine. That atheistic government proved to be the most despotic and cruel that ever existed on the face of the earth. His lectures are filling the land with violence, in so much that the rising generation may consider themselves fortunate if they should be allowed to die a natural death.

THE SECOND COMING.

Mr. Moody while speaking recently on the above subject in the City Hall, Glasgow, Scotland, advanced the following ideas: "If this doctrine was to bring young converts into a fog, why did Paul write so much about it? There are only two hundred and sixty chapters in the New Testament, and yet three hundred and eighteen different passages refer to the Lord's coming. What makes the doctrine so sweet in the 15th chapter of 1 Corinthians? Why, it not only speaks of Christ's burial and resurrection, but tells us of his coming. "Behold I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed." Some Christians would never taste death, but would be caught up and changed. We have the same authority for his coming back that we had for his burial. He went up unexpectedly, and would return unexpectedly. If we were ready for death, of course we would be ready for the return of our Lord, but we would rather look for his coming than for anything else in this world. Our Lord's second coming was not so mysterious and wonderful as his first coming. If some one had declared fifty years before Christ's birth, that he was to be born in a manger, that he was to be rejected and crucified, he did not think there was a man on the face of the earth who would have believed the story—it would have been too incredible.

Although he came suddenly we would meet him with joy. The wife whose husband had been away received a communication that he was coming; and though she did not know the exact time, yet how glad would she be when he returned. So it would be when our absent Lord returned. It would not be long, because with him a thousand years were as one day. Looking forward was the attitude of God's children from all time. For four thousand years they looked for the Promised One, and for nearly two thousand years we have been looking for his return. There was not anything which would take a man more out of the whirlpool of this world than this doctrine. If a man went up in a balloon the earth seemed smaller; so it was when we came nearer to God—things of time look little indeed. With regard to the objection that this was teaching a doctrine that discouraged work, to this he replied that for himself he had done three times more work ever since he realized this doctrine. Indeed, he had never got hold of anything that had stimulated him more. He now looked upon the world as an old wrecked vessel, and doomed to destruction. Perhaps the last words that Paul penned were those when he said that in the last days perilous times would come. 'As the days of Noe were so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.' They would be eating and drinking till the flood came and took them all away. That did not look as though there was going to be a millennium before Christ came. And if we walked the streets of Glasgow on a Saturday night, we would see much of the same eating and drinking. Mr. Moody pitied from his utmost heart any man who could not see this blessed comforting doctrine, that our Lord was coming to set up his kingdom, which should be from the river to the ends of the earth. Man has had his day, and God would have his. —Our Rest.

QUESTIONS FROM W. E. HITCHCOCK.

Bro. Cunningham:—1. Will you please state in the Crisis how you compute the seventy-nine years, six months and ten days from the dispersion of the ten tribes, or from the twenty-first year of Manasseh's reign, or from the Assyrian kings?

2. And also, how does 1887 years, etc., from Christ's birth compare with the Vulgar Era 1883? As some readers of the Crisis might not understand the time, and think it would continue four years in the future.

First. In connection with these questions those interested would do well to consult the last two paragraphs of my article in Crisis of Dec. 20th, 1882.

We compute the period referred to by adding up the reigns of the kings of Judah from the twenty-first year of the reign of Manasseh king of Judah, and then each succeeding king's reign in that line, down to the seventy years captivity of the Jews in Babylon; and they aggregate just seventy-nine years, six months and ten days. This is demonstrated by the following texts of scripture. 2 Chron. 33: 1. As is there stated, Manasseh "reigned 55 years in Jerusalem." As our date begins from his 21st year, it leaves 35 years more to the end of his reign. Manasseh was succeeded by his son Amon, who reigned two years. Ver. 21. Amon was succeeded by Josiah, who reigned 31 years. Ch. 34: 1. Josiah was succeeded by Jehoahaz, Jehoiakim and Jehoiachin. These three kings reigned just eleven years, six months and ten days (ch. 36: 2, 5, 9), and ended with the beginning of the seventy years captivity in Babylon. 2 Kings 24: 8-17. The reigns of these kings from the twenty-first year of Manasseh added together make just seventy-nine years, six months and ten days, as all may see who will take the trouble to compute them. The remaining interval from the said captivity to the birth of Christ is 553 years; thus making from the twenty-first of Manasseh, where the 2520 years punishment of Israel is to be dated, to the birth of Christ 632 years, six months and ten days. This computation makes the birth of Christ to occur on the tenth day of the seventh of the year, Jewish time, and leaves just 1887 years, five months and twenty days from the birth of Christ to end the "seven times" of Lev. 26: 18, 19, or the 2520 years.

Second. The matter of the Vulgar Era 1883, in our judgment, is 1886 years from the birth of Christ. This conclusion does not rest upon any scientific or astronomical basis of chronologers, which we regard as uncertain, but upon evidence of a typical character; which consists in regarding the forty years journey, or wanderings of the children of Israel in the wilderness, from the time they left Egypt until they passed the Jordan, as a type of the history of the great Advent movement, from the specially marked epoch of the tenth day of the seventh month of 1844, when Adventists as a body went out "to meet the Bridegroom"—the antitype of Israel's going "out of the land of Egypt; therefore the "tarrying of the Bridegroom" must correspond to the same interval of time that completed the forty years wanderings of Israel in the wilderness. Paul tells us (1 Cor. ch. 10), that the history of Israel in the wilderness "happened unto them for types; and they are written for our admonition upon whom the ends of the world are come."

There is much proof that might be given on this subject, but is hardly in place under the head of questions and answers.

DESECRATION OF SACRED THINGS.

BY M. MUNGER.

I grow sick every day of professors making mockery of sacred things; even houses of worship are turned into theatres, gambling houses and gluttony in their picnic feasts—eating and drinking with the drunken literally, thus desecrating the house of prayer. Also the birth of Christ is brought down four years and about five months from the true date to the birth of a heathen king's son by the Pagans, adopted by the Papists, and carried out by the Protestants. Instead of worshiping Christ, they dress up some one they call Santa Claus, to give out the presents. I have just read accounts of accidents that happened on Christmas eve. One took fire in the flurry and nearly burned to death; another broke a lamp and got burned so that he died; another a row over a jumping-jack as a gift; two were killed and four shot, and others arrested—all in the churches keeping Christmas. In our place there was a breech-loading shot-gun hung on the Christmas tree for the Methodist preacher; so if the people did not repent he had the thing that would make them. I told the preacher that did not look like old-fashioned Methodism.

Since our time passed, the Protestant churches have swung half around to many of the old mother's ceremonies, such as putting crosses on to churches, and different articles to sell and wear at their festivals, especially Christmas festivals. I never knew of a Christmas tree being erected in a church, except a Catholic or Episcopal—which is Catholicism refined—in our region until our time passed; then the old mother and her daughters began to commemorate the first advent, and scoff at the second; and the Protestants have followed suit. We cannot recant, in word or deed, and be justified; better be found standing out with a few for this God-honoring truth, than to draw back into the popular crowd of scoffers that worship Christmas instead of Christ the author of it.

HOME.

BY C. H. S.

"There is no place like HOME."

It may be a rude, rough home, at the foot of some stern, snow-clad mountain; but wherever we wander, we look back to it with the utmost interest. Our thoughts linger in pleasure or pain when we call to remembrance the scenes of early days, the home of our childhood, which were checkered with the joys and sorrows of life. We remember the parting from home and mother. The last lingering look at the dear old home as we went out into the world among strangers. These memories at times will arrest the attention of the most busy life, while thoughts are carried back to dear friends of youth, whose bones perhaps now lie in the old churchyard. Home lives in memory; the old homestead, old faces, the landscape, the well with the old oaken bucket, the brook along which we often wandered, the meadow and the distant mountain, with its misty drapery, will pass like a panorama before the mind's eye, and with these thoughts of departed days the tear will often start to know the old home circle can never more meet in this state of existence. Many can never even visit the scenes of other days.

A happy home is "where the sunshine of love falls daily with a brightness no cloud can wholly obscure; where only the attractive, not the repellant forces exist. Wealth alone cannot make a home in the true sense. Many may have a place to stop that they call home, where all that money could purchase has been lavished; rare pictures, statuary and costly gems to adorn that palace of beauty; carriages in silver and gold trimmings; horses in gay harnesses; men in glittering livery, and servants ready to do the bidding of its occupant; the table loaded with everything that the most demanding appetite of the epicure could desire; and yet happiness may not be found there.

It is true that money used to make home attractive, where loving hearts hold sway, is a blessing. But it is no evidence that the stately mansion, as such, has more of the endearments of home than the humble cottage on some unpretentious street, where wife and daughter, in their neatness and simplicity, wait to welcome the toil-worn husband and father to his plain repast. "His hardships are forgotten, fatigue vanishes, he eats and is satisfied." No spot on this earth can give permanent bliss. No home for the stranger and pilgrim in this; but in that bright country, the Eden to come, we'll find in the bosom of Jesus a home."

BARABBAS.

The crowd around the judgment hall cry for the blood of Jesus. We hear Pilate declare him innocent; yet they cry, "Crucify him! crucify him!" We see Pilate lead him forth, covered with blood and crowned with thorns, asking, "What evil hath he done?" "Behold the man!" He wishes Christ to be the object of their national clemency. But the crowd becomes agitated and restless, crying out more fiercely, "Not this man, but Barabbas." Will not God rescue his beloved Son from the wild, passionate mob? Will he not strike down his enemies and vindicate Jesus? Shall not truth triumph over falsehood and slander? How demons rejoice! How angels are struck with wonder! How the devout weep! What meaneth all this?

Barabbas is the representative of a world lost in sin, condemned and awaiting retribution, deserving to die, and no means of escape. Jesus dies, and Barabbas is free. The wild, blood-thirsty cry of the mob now becomes music in the sinner's ear.

There is another view in which this incident may be considered. The robbers have often been preferred by us. When we, like Gehazi or Judas, or Ananias and Sapphira, prefer the world to Christ, we are in the position of this mob. When pride rules our hearts, robbing us of true peace, robbing God of the service due him, we prefer it to Christ. All sin is robbery. Every act of sin is a Barabbas. Robbing God, and destroying souls, yet often preferred to the Lord Jesus Christ.

On which side are we? For Barabbas or for Christ? We cannot prefer both; one must go to the cross and the other be set free. Let the Barabbas of our hearts be nailed to the cross, and welcome the Christ in, for he saved not himself that he might "save others."—Evangelical Messenger.

The infidel, who boasts that he is not confined by the narrow faith of the Bible, is like the man on the bleak wintry moor, who boasts that he is not hampered by the petty limitations of a house to shelter him.

You complain because you are one of the few who carry the burdens of your church. You will not be sorry when, with the elect few, you hear your Lord say, Well done, good and faithful servant.

Christian politeness ranks high among the virtues.

TRACTS.

Gospel publications were never so important or ever so available for the presentation of divine truth as at the present time. The Ruler of our world foresees all things, and causes all necessary means for the accomplishment of His purposes at the time when they are needed. The last four hundred years has produced a radical change in the manner and expense of printing, and of sending published matter to all nations and classes in the world. The fact also that this printed matter, together with the standard of all truth—the Bible—can be thus cheaply and quickly sent to all men in their own language indicates a divine interposition in producing these changes in this one department of human instruction. Added to these developments is the most significant fact that during this period religious toleration has been forced upon all the great intolerant nations of the world by the last prophetic, arbitrating, political power—the European Alliance. This was accomplished in A. D. 1815.

Before that time, for more than twelve hundred years, purely gospel publications could not be circulated among the people of but a small part of the world. At the present time gospel tracts, books, magazines and papers, costing relatively but a trifle, can be sent us on the wings of a "flying angel" to all nations, and none are allowed to dispute the right of reading them. We confidently believe that these wonderfully connected events manifest the controling hand of God, clearly showing His purpose to have the last unfoldings of gospel truth sent by swift messengers, running "to and fro" when "knowledge (of revealed things) shall be increased." (See Dan. 12: 4)

God wills that "the gospel of the kingdom" shall be proclaimed orally and silently to all nations, notifying them that the limited time for rebels against His government to exercise dominion over the earth is about to expire, and that the time appointed for his Son to rule this world as its Eternal King is at hand.

Beloved in the Lord, the proof, both scriptural and providential, that God has called his servants of the ministry and laity to heartily and liberally engage in this great work of publishing the glad tidings of speedy deliverance to the saints in all the world is overwhelmingly conclusive. God never gave any generation the opportunities of sending the gospel to all nations that he has given the present. The movable type, the printing-press, the cheap paper, the fast and almost priceless mails. The iron horse and plowing steamers carry God's messengers like the lightnings over continents and seas, to far-off nations whose gates have been bolted for ages against them.

Brethren, these golden opportunities were sought and prayed for by the holy brethren of the dark ages, but were reserved for us; and let us show ourselves worthy of being their sons by appropriating the marvelous means God has put in our hands to publish this most solemn and important truth to our rebel race. Tracts with silver tongues, and burning like "the bush" with divine love should be written, published and scattered like the autumn leaves over the continents and islands of the sea. God has manifested his superintending care in this matter, and furnished the treasures necessary by opening the doors to vast amounts of wealth unknown to the peoples of earlier times. Shall these treasures be wasted upon our lusts, or heaped up for the last-day fires, while millions, unenlightened, are in midnight darkness, hasting to the yawning gulf but a step before them? We think we hear a responsive answer from every quarter, We will not. We will put it into the Lord's treasury where it can be used for the publication of tracts to be sent to those sitting in darkness and under the gathering shades of eternal death.

Let all who are entrusted with the application of such donated funds feel that they are sacred, and should be appropriated in the most judicious and economical manner. If this work is of God, woe to all who shall directly or indirectly hinder it. If God is running this train, let none stand upon the track. If Jehovah is not leading this enterprise, then the quicker we lay down our pens, stop our presses, and close our treasuries, and retire from the field, the better. But He is with us, and has been with us, therefore let us arise in his might and gird ourselves for the last advance, the last desperate charge upon the enemies ranks and fortifications, that we may unite with all the faithful in the shout of final and eternal victory. Pour out your freewill offerings, and send the silent messengers into all the dark corners of the earth, and God will reward you with the riches and bliss of the everlasting kingdom. J. C.

A SIGNIFICANT DOCUMENT.

The Moscow Gazette published an extract from a memorandum drawn by General Strobeleff, the great Russian general, just before his sudden death. He wrote:

"The political and military ideas which must in the future form the basis of our policy are those by which I have been guided, remembering, as I did, the solemn words the late Emperor addressed to me before starting for the Tekke expedition. To my mind the Central Asian question is perfectly clear and simple. If it do not enable us in a comparatively short time to take seriously in hand the Eastern Question itself, why, the Asiatic hide is not worth the tanning. I venture to think that sooner or later Russian statesmen will recognize the fact that Russia must have the Bosphorus; that upon this depends not only her greatness but her very security from invasion, and, by implication, the development of her manufacturing and commercial centres. No one, I suppose, will dispute that so long as we are weighed down by the Polish and West Russian questions, all regular progress, in the truly national sense of the word, will be extremely difficult. At present, in spite of the blood we have poured forth, all our frontiers are open to hostile attacks, compelling us to maintain an immense army; while the Polish difficulty, thanks to the complications arising from the Austro-German alliance, keeps us in a continual state of siege. Not until she dominates the Bosphorus can Russia make an irrevocable Finis Poloniæ."

No man in Russia understood the real purposes of the government relating to her future movements, especially relating to her military designs as to war and conquest, better than did General Strobeleff. He assisted the Czar to map the Tekke expedition, and perfectly comprehended what was the ultimate design of the Central Asian operations. He well knew that its principle purpose was to be able to march an army through Asia, which it has never been able to do through Europe, for the purpose of wrenching from the grasp of the Grand Turk the possession of the coveted "water way," and the altar of St. Sophia. He certainly understood that the vast expenditure of blood and treasure, in preparing a great military rout and fortifications through Asia, would prove fruitless if it did not open the way for Russia to take possession of the Bosphorus. He expressed the idea that by their taking possession of the Bosphorus that Austria and Germany could then be so controled as to give Russia the power to hold her Poland possessions without a constant menace.

These circumstances cause the European diplomatists and journalists to be constantly watching and commenting upon every movement of Russia. Every special military movement in Russia or any additions made to its fortifications produces immediate excitement in Western Europe.

Edward King, writing from Paris last week, says there is general excitement in France and England over the rumor that Russia is designing to make war on Austria in the spring, and is already moving troops to the frontier. These rumors and excitements show clearly that the people are in expectation that a great war designed to settle the "Eastern Question" and change the map of Europe is at hand. The people of Europe and all the world, as Jesus predicted, are certainly suffering fearful expectation of calamitous events in the near future. J. C.

A REMARKABLE FACT.

Many of our readers know that it has been generally understood by the standard Christian writers for centuries, that the two antichristian powers occupying the two capitals of the Roman Empire—Rome and Constantinople—would both sink under the same wave of revolution, which wave would be a part of God's last judgment upon the wicked nations. These powers are those of the Catholic and Mahommedan religion, at the head of which are the Pope and the Sultan. These writers came to this conclusion by their interpretations of the sacred prophecies. We have for more than forty years looked upon their arguments as correct, and have therefore watched with unfaltering interest to see the operation of the many agencies which have for a hundred years been drawing the national forces from those religious governments, and threatening to rob them of their thrones and of all former authority.

It is a very ominous circumstance that at the present time both the Pope and Sultan are bemoaning the loss of power, and both are now surrounded with circumstances which they say threatens their lives and the sovereignty of their governments.

An exchange presents this subject as follows:

"If the Pope has been compelled to accept a seat on a subject's stool after having had the chair of royalty unceremoniously snatched from under him by the King of Italy, and thus be left to bewail a lost kingdom and departed glory, he can now comfort himself—on the principle that misery loves company—with the reflection that the Grand Turk occupies a throne so unstable that he must soon vacate it. The Moslem well knows that England has gone into Egypt to stay, and he realizes the magnitude of this calamity. How forcible the quotation from the prophet! The downfall of these great world powers is a premonition of the downfall of all enthroned tyrannies. The time rapidly approaches when all thrones must be vacated, that the Divine One may wear the diadem of the whole earth."

An exchange thus speaks of the Sultan's present condition: "The Sultan of Turkey is reported to be on the borders of insanity, owing to the results of the Egyptian trouble, and to his consciousness that the Empire of Turkey is gradually being dismembered. A dispatch to the New York Sun says that the Sultan's mind has also been affected by the discovery of a plot to assassinate him. He is a prey to the most fearful fits of depression, becomes frantic in his terrors, wails and shrieks at his imaginary enemies, makes and unmakes ministers in twenty-four hours, and altogether presents a pitiable spectacle. His dread of assassination haunts him like a perpetual nightmare. He tells every one about him that he will meet the fate of his brother, and if his hallucinations do not carry him off it is quite possible he may. The same correspondent adds: The English government was perfectly well aware that the Sultan had committed an act of war against England, and that she, in conducting a campaign against Arabi, was really at war with Turkey. But, for a variety of reasons, it was not desirable that formal admission and publication of the fact of and her knowledge of it should be made, as in the trial of Arabi it necessarily would have to be made; therefore Lord Dufferin summarily disposed of the state trials at Cairo, and the relations of England with Turkey are apparently undisturbed. The acknowledgment of the existence of a state of war between England and the Porte would have entailed the most serious consequences, and a responsibility that England could not at present shoulder. It would have precipitated an outbreak between Austria and Russia, which may not be very long deferred in any event."

These wonderful events, so perfectly corresponding to what the sainted fathers anticipated, and so perfectly agreeing with the infallible Word, become to us substantial proof that the day of the Lord is impending over our world, casting fearful shadows upon the armor-clad millions and blasphemous multitudes who say "Where is their God?" Proof is every month accumulating, showing that Christ's coming cannot be much longer delayed. The whole world seems to be ripe for its harvest. The true church is devoutly echoing the prayer of Patmos' great prophet—"Even so, come, Lord Jesus." J. C.

SCENES AND SAYINGS OF THE CRUCIFIXION.

JESUS BEFORE PILATE.

"Then led they Jesus from Caiaphas unto the hall of judgment."

The Sanhedrim had power to "judge worthy of death," but the execution of the death penalty must be by Roman authority and by Roman hands. And so Jesus was sent to Pilate for ratification of the verdict rendered by Caiaphas' court. The mysterious claims of Jesus, the name "Son of God," and his wife's dream, conspired to solemnly impress Pilate with the belief that Christ was innocent, and a being of no ordinary character and power; and filled with awe he sought to release him, or rather to obtain the consent of the Jews to his release; for he had full power to set Jesus at liberty on his own responsibility. He ordered Jesus to be scourged after the severe Roman method,—much more cruel than Jewish scourging; allowed the soldiers to bitterly and shamefully insult and torment him, and then bringing him forth "wearing the crown of thorns and the purple robe," he said to the Jews, "Behold the man!"—the man you have accused to me of seditious designs against Cæsar and Rome; and I, representing Cæsar and his empire, find no fault in him. Pilate hoped that the sad and touching appearance of Jesus—covered with his blood from the terrible scourging, and loaded with contempt and shame by the hardened and remorseless soldiers—would appease the rage of the Jews. But this Roman procurator had failed to comprehend the relentless malice of the high priests against the Son of God. The sight of their victim and his sufferings only the more enraged them and sharpened their thirst for his blood. "And when the chief priests therefore and the officers saw him they cried out, saying, Crucify him! crucify him!" "Pilate saith unto them, Take ye him and crucify him, for I find no fault in him."

Their criminal charges having utterly failed, they fall back upon their own Jewish law and urge that Jesus ought to die because he made himself the Son of God; and well knowing the weakness of Pilate, they appealed to his fears, saying, "If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæsar's friend";—thus virtually threatening to impeach Pilate before Cæsar, if he dared to release Jesus. This intimidation was effectual. "When Pilate heard that saying, he brought Jesus forth," and said, "Behold your King!" "The chief priests answered, We have no king but Cæsar."

Behold the treachery, the shameless disgrace, the utter debasement, the insatiable hatred, the amazing blindness of the Jewish rulers! To secure the death of Jesus they were ready to (falsely) declare for the supremacy of a foreign prince; to surrender their nationality; to repudiate their own prophets and turn their faces away from their fathers and the God of their fathers. Was ever shame like this? What marvel that God forsook them, annulled their polity and called another people?

The high priests were determined to accomplish the death of Jesus, and also determined to avoid, if possible, the responsibility of his crucifixion. And Pilate, allowing his fears to overcome his conscience, sought to cast the obloquy of the murder on the Jews. But the responsibility was not divided; both were guilty of the death of the Son of man—the Jews for the death of their Messiah; and Rome for slaying the world's Redeemer. The "innocent blood" is on Rome, and on the Jew. For he suffered under Pontius Pilate; and Stephen said to the Jews, "Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them which showed before of the coming of the Just One; of whom ye have been now the betrayers and MURDERERS." The accomplishment of God's purpose of redemption through the death of his Son in no sense relieves either the House of Israel or the Roman government of the terrible guilt of the shameful death of the cross. Both Pilate and the high priests shall answer for that deed of infamy and blood when they shall "see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven."

Prominent in this saddening picture of cruelty and ignominy is the insult and violence of the soldiers having Jesus in charge. It is inconceivable that Pilate, who thrice attested the Saviour's innocence, should have allowed such atrocities to have been heaped upon him only on the supposition that he hoped thereby to satisfy the Jews and thus avert a worse result. Nevertheless this flagrant and unpardonable insult offered to Jesus has a grand prophetic significance—that kind of prophetic meaning that often comes from the madness of men and devils overruled by the Great God. On that brow pressed by the "crown of thorns" shall sit the "crown of all the world," resplendent with an ineffable glory that shall drive all earthly splendor into endless shade. The hand, forced to hold and wave the "reed" as a symbol of contempt, shall seize and sway in undisputed sovereignty the sceptre of all nations—when he comes to reign. In the derisive homage of the soldiers we see grand prefiguration of universal admiration, of men and angels, in the hour of his predicted triumph when "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess." That bent, humbled, bleeding form, clothed in mockery with the "scarlet robe," shall yet be seen as John beheld him in the rapt visions of Patmos, "clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the breasts with a golden girdle. And his head and his hair white as white wool, white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire; and his feet like unto burnished brass, as if it had been refined in a furnace; and his voice as the voice of many waters. And he had in his right hand seven stars; and out of his mouth proceeded a sharp two-edged sword; and his countenance was as the sun shining in his strength.

"Hail! thou once despised Jesus,
Hail! thou everlasting King."

"AND THEY LED HIM OUT TO CRUCIFY HIM."

A GOOD MAN FALLEN.

Very many hearts will be touched with peculiar sadness at the tidings that our dearly and very widely beloved brother and faithful co-laborer for God, Dr. H. W. Buxton, of Worcester, Mass., now sleeps in death. He expired Jan. 8th, and was buried Jan. 10th. Eld. D. T. Taylor officiated at the burial, and will, doubtless, furnish an early and fitting obituary for the Crisis.

Dr. Buxton was no ordinary man. He possessed many rare excellencies. His superior literary tastes and acquirements; his remarkable amiableness of mind, heart and manners; his genuine, uniform and active godliness; his abundant sympathy with all in trouble; his ready and graceful tact in meeting and controlling the emergencies that frequently arise among the friends of Jesus; the radiant sunshine of his eye and countenance; his tender care for the humblest and lowliest; his delicate relish for the true and beautiful in religious things; his ready, easy and lucid but unobtrusive communication—all these, joined with a peculiar personal attractiveness, made all who approached him feel that they were in the presence of a really Christian man and beautiful character. Death could have stricken from our ranks no other form that would have left a greater or sadder vacancy. Beautiful in life, blessed in memory, peaceful in death, he rests most sweetly till He who looks down and watches his sacred form shall bid him rise again. Grand will be his awakening! Blissful the reunion of affection's sundered, golden links! Unspeakable the endless joy!

His estimable wife—tenderly devoted to him to the last—and her grief-stricken surviving children—will surely have the profoundest sympathy of their many—very many—friends.

And now farewell, true friend, faithful brother, grand soldier of the cross! Thou hast honored thy Lord's great name on earth, and richly graced the ranks of those who love him. Heaven grant us to meet thee "when the mists have cleared away."

A MISTAKE CORRECTED.

In our column of "Pastors and Preachers" we noticed, some time since, the call of Dr. Mathewson to Minneapolis, Minn. We were under the impression at that time that Dr. Mathewson's call was from the organized and only Advent church in Minneapolis. We have since learned that it was not so; but that there is and has been for years a regularly organized Advent church in Minneapolis of which Eld. W. J. Bursell is pastor; and that the church is enjoying a good degree of prosperity under Bro. Bursell's faithful labors. We most heartily wish the church and its pastor continued success.

While we would make encouraging mention of the movements and labors of our pastors, preachers and people, we would not, on any account, do injustice to any preacher or church. E. A. STOCKMAN.

THE CONTRAST.

Old earth has a variety of climates from cold, colder, coldest, to warm, warmer, warmest. On the 11th of Dec. 1882, we left Wisconsin for California. Just before leaving Wisconsin, the thermometer had been down to 15 degrees below zero. On our arrival in California flowers were in blossom everywhere, in every yard, the fields being mantled with green in every direction, far and near. Our change from the rough reign of winter to the mild sway of spring was marvellous. In two hours time we abandoned very cold weather, with eight inches of snow on the mountains, for spring-like weather, and oceans of smiling flowers, and fields robed in their gayest garments of green, thrown over hill and vale. The merry house-flies came aboard our train for a free ride, and persistently refused to part company with us, evidently appreciating our society more fully than we did theirs. Evidently these flies believe in California, if they are capable of belief, for they seem to enjoy the country amazingly, and seem anxious to let new comers know that they do not intend to emigrate. Gardens and green wheat fields smiled upon us all the way to the Pacific coast after reaching the borders of the summer land. The nights, however, have a wintry chilliness that reminds the new comer of the fact that winter exists in a meagre degree even here, and the rains furnish us some cool days.

ARTAXERXES' REIGN.

We have previously shown that the reign of Artaxerxes began B. C. 438, and that consequently his 20th year began B. C. 418, and his 32nd began B. C. 406, and we still regard this position correct; but closer examination reveals the fact (shown by Scripture and history) that these different years of his reign began several months after the commencement of the Roman year (that is, several months after January), evidently in keeping with the Persian year which commenced about the time of Summer Solstice, or near the middle of our year; so if the 20th of Artaxerxes began B. C. 418, it ran several months into B. C. 417; and if the 32nd began B. C. 406, it ran several months into B. C. 405. This fact renders it possible that the 70 weeks, which we claim began in the 20th of Artaxerxes, might have commenced in that part of the year which fell in B. C. 417, thus making it possible for them to reach A. D. 74. It also makes it possible that the 62 weeks, measuring to the crucifixion, which we claim began in the 32nd of Artaxerxes, might have commenced in that part of the year which fell in B. C. 405, at the Passover, and thus have ended exactly at the Passover of A. D. 30, instead of terminating a few months previously. And this would likewise render it possible that the 2300 days, if commenced with the 70 weeks, might also reach to 1884; and even this point, if time ever carries us so far, is but a step before us.

STRANGE PROGRESS.

The New York Evangelist contains an article on "Home" by Arthur T. Pierson, in which he says: "At the alarming rate of decrease observable for the past fifty years in native born American children, should that rate of decrease continue, by the year 1829 there would not be a single infant child remaining among the families of the better classes of Americans! And on this by no means slender basis of calculation, the Romish hierarchy rests its arrogant boast of entire control in this country within one century! We cannot marvel at the famous saying of the silver-tongued Cicero: 'I would rather be the founder of a noble family than the offspring of one.'"

Rome is confident that she will have the United States under her control in a little while. An item of New York news, dated Dec. 26th, 1882, and published in the Sun, says: "It is positively alleged that Gen. W. T. Sherman has recently been received into the Roman Catholic Church." There goes the head general of the American nation. What next? M. G.

DEGREES IN FUTURE PUNISHMENT.

The Scriptural doctrine of the literal destruction of the wicked at the great judgment day, is often objected to on the allegation that it conflicts with the doctrine of degrees in the punishment of the incorrigible sinner, taught in texts like the following: "Every man shall be judged according to the deeds done in the body;" "sorer punishment," "greater damnation," etc; and it is generally supposed that the doctrine of eternal misery is essential to the doctrine of degrees in future punishment. We will here repeat an argument on this point, as expressive of our present convictions.

The doctrine of degrees in punishment is more easily reconciled with destruction than with endless misery, when we take into account the fact that death is not the sum total of the sinner's punishment, but merely one ingredient in it; for with the popular view the man of few sins that died one thousand years ago, and the man of many sins who dies to-day continue in endless chastisement; hence the only principle on which they can possibly be punished according to their crimes, and prevent the small sinner from receiving more punishment than the larger sinner, is by claiming that the difference is not in the time, but in the intensity of the chastisement. Allowing this same claim to hold good in its application to the chastisement due the sinner before the second death, the last ingredient in the penalty, all is harmonious.

It is absurd to claim that the penalty must either consist in misery exclusively, or in death exclusively. Whatever God has threatened the sinner with as a retribution for sin is a component part of the penalty. All the chastisement they receive at the judgment will be according to the infallible decision of the divine Judge, based upon the amount of crime committed; but in every instance this chastisement will culminate in the "second death," which is one ingredient of the penalty; thus one class will receive "greater damnation" than another (Matt. 23: 14), and "sorer punishment" than ordinary death of criminals. (Heb. 10: 28, 29.) Death is due every sinner; but death is not the only ingredient in his sin-bought fate; "tribulation," "anguish," "wrath," "vengeance," and "wailing" are likewise due the impenitent; and as these cannot be experienced subsequent to death, they must precede it, and if these are to be literal, so must the threatened death be; both being component parts of one penalty; and if death is ever inflicted, these cannot be endless, but death, one ingredient of this punishment, will be eternal.

God has threatened both chastisement and extermination against the sinner, and he will keep his word; and as chastisement, and not extermination, can be proportioned to the amount of crime in each case, and must also precede extermination, the matter is clear. Should a king decree that the thief should receive forty lashes, and death, and the murderer one hundred lashes, and death, there would be degrees in the punishment, though the same death in each case, while the law would be disregarded, and the degrees in punishment set aside, by omitting the whipping. The degrees of punishment would be in the whipping, but the punishment could not be complete without death. So Jesus was "scourged," and "died" for sinners; and "by his stripes we are healed," and by his death we escape death as a penalty; but without repentance, both the scourging and death will be the sinner's portion—"outer darkness, where there shall be weeping," as well as "death." I have strong arguments to prove degrees in punishment, which I will not present at this time.

It is folly to insist that if one ingredient of the punishment is everlasting, that every ingredient must be—that if the death is endless, the suffering must also be; because it is a part of the same punishment. If a law is enacted that the robber shall be punished with two hundred lashes and imprisonment for life, who does not know that this punishment is a life-long punishment, and who does not know that the whipping is one ingredient in the punishment, preceding the imprisonment too; and who would be foolish enough to insist that as the punishment was life-long, and the whipping a component part of the punishment, that therefore the whipping must be in process of infliction through the entire life of the criminal? Such a claim would be just as reasonable as in the case of the Divine law.

Sometimes the "terrors of the Lord" are portrayed to the sinner, and sometimes the sinner's final end, to show them their danger, and lead them to turn. Shall we then be inconsiderate enough to insist that the sinner's doom must be either misery only or death only?

I am a firm believer in degrees of punishment, and deem the position susceptible of irrefutable demonstration; and this I say after having read many attempts to refute the sentiment, which I regard equivalent to an indirect reflection on the character of God by making him mete out the same fate to the greatest and smallest sinner. Reason and revelation alike rebel against this sentiment, and it is a detriment to the spread of the truth.

Jesus affirmed that it should be "more tolerable" for one class of sinners at the day of judgment than for another class, as they must be judged "according to their works," and be recompensed in agreement with the judgment rendered; and the wisdom displayed in the judgment rendered, will be equalled by the power manifested in its execution, imparting few "stripes" to some, and many to others, ending in death in every case. W. S.

MAN HAS A SOUL.

With an air of triumph it is often affirmed by the blind opposers of our faith, "We can prove from the Bible that man has a soul." Yes, indeed; but what has that to do with proving its personality? We can prove from the same Bible that God also has a soul: "The Lord trieth the righteous; but the wicked and him that loveth violence his soul hateth." Ps. 11: 5. "If any man draw back my soul shall have no pleasure in him." If the simple fact that man has a soul is proof of a man within a man, then the fact that God has a soul as strongly proves a God within a God; and as that proves too much, it is not reliable evidence for the purpose employed. That man has a soul is a conceded point, but its personality and immortality is yet to be proven—assumption can never take the place of proof. Is the soul of man an entity, or an element? "In whose hand is the soul of every living thing." Job 12: 10. An element of life is meant, and not an entity for all animals. It sometimes indicates mentality also.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.—My address for a few weeks will be Santa Clara, Cal. W. S.

THE PASSING YEARS.

"We spend our years as a tale that is told."—Psa. 90: 9.

Another year is gone into past eternity!

"Hours of the past,
Where are they? With the years
Before the flood."

A new year has come with its joys and sorrows, its duties and cares, its ever changing and transitory scenes; and as yet its unveiled realities of good or of evil to each and to all. The record of the past years of our lives, how does it appear on the pages of time? How will it be read and rehearsed hereafter? Is it pleasant in our own review, though not perfect as we ought to have made it by the assisting grace of God? "The retrospect of a life well spent affords peace of mind in old age." Is this ours to enjoy through our Lord Jesus Christ in our decline of life? How is it with those in youth and middle-age as you take a retrospect of the past? Does it afford you "peace of mind"? or is there remorse of conscience? What are our resolves as we enter upon a new year? Have we made any pleasing to God, and that will be a blessing to humanity? What are our hopes as we look into the future of time, and draw nearer the eternal "ages to come"? Soon our Lord will come, and are we preparing to meet him? Through watchfulness and prayer, and by diligent faithfulness and zeal in his most blessed service, and "by grace through faith," are we ready for his trumpet to call us away from earth to meet him in the air at his coming?

Every day and every year we are making up the story of our lives. The narrative will be rehearsed to the living who survive us, if we die, and our "record is on high," to be narrated when "the judgment shall set, and the books shall be opened." "For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil." Eccl. 12: 14.

A story may be true or false, made up of fact or fiction. Thousands love fiction more than real history. The world is full of novels because there is a demand for them; and many, very many try to make the story of their lives mere fiction. They spend their years in glee and mirth, and in a round of earthly, sensual pleasures and gratification; neither realizing the preciousness of the time wasted, or how short it is, or the damage done to their own souls by self-indulgence and "the pleasures of sin." The experience of tens of thousands of our thoughtless mortal race is here described:

"Life is like a vessel on the stream
In life embarked; we smoothly down the tide
Of time descend, but not on time intent;
Onward, unconscious of the gliding wave,
Till on a sudden we perceive the shock,
We start, awake, look out; what see we there?
Our little bark is burst on Charon's shore!"

Time, oh, of what precious value! Life, oh, how precious and inestimable a blessing! Yet frivolously, as of little worth, both are thrown away, and "eternal life," and the reward of faithful well-doing are lost forever. Life is real—too real for the votary of pleasure and the careless and slothful prodigal. The story of our years is no fiction. Then, dear reader,

"Shun delays, they breed remorse;
Take thy time while time is lent thee."

The Psalmist's prayer was, "Remember how short my time is." We need to pray it, that the Spirit of the Lord may awaken us to realize the shortness, the uncertainty and vanity of human life. "For what is your life? It is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away."

"Life speeds away
From point to point, though seeming to stand still;
The cunning fugitive is swift by stealth!
Too subtle is the moment to be seen,
Yet man's hour is up, and we are gone."

O. R. FASSETT.

RESIGNATION.

Dear Editors:—Having fulfilled my engagement to labor with and for the church in this city for one year, and notwithstanding I have received a call to remain another year, still feeling that my labors might accomplish more for the cause of Christ in other fields of labor, I have tendered the church my resignation, but shall remain here for the present, where friends and those desiring my labors can address me.

CALENDAR.

We have just published a yearly Calendar, called THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN CALENDAR FOR 1883. It is printed on very thick, heavy paper. Size 15 by 19 inches. In the centre is the Calendar size, 7 by 9 inches, and the rest of the sheet is filled up with excellent short articles on our faith. We think it a neat Calendar, and would advise all to get one. Price 5 cents single sheet, or 50 cts. per dozen postpaid.

REPORT.

At a meeting of the A. C. P. Society held in Boston, Mass., Jan. 4th and 5th, 1883, a Committee was appointed to prepare a paper on the relations of this Society with the Foreign Board of the A. A. Mission Society. Elders E. A. Stockman, Miles Grant and John Couch constituted said committee. Their report was as follows:

Advent Christian Publication Society in session at the Office of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass., Jan. 5th, 1883:

1. We hereby heartily and gratefully recognize the profound importance and blessedness of sending the tidings of our Lord's speedy coming to foreign lands; a work that should have been undertaken at an earlier period.

2. We most earnestly commend to the confidence and support of all who believe in Christ and love his appearing, the Foreign Mission Board of the American Advent Mission Society, and its work, inaugurated at our late Annual Association at Amboy, Illinois.

3. But it is the understanding of this Society that the Foreign Board is to obtain all needed funds by direct appeal to persons of means, and to our people at large, for donations especially for foreign work, not interfering in any way with the funds of the Home Mission Society, Sunday School work, nor any of our publishing interests.

4. Also, it is not expected that the Quarterly Journal of Prophecy will be an advertising medium in any sense, but especially devoted to the evidences of the Advent near, and preparation for that glorious event.

5. This Society will do everything coming properly within its power to promote harmony and co-operation between this new gospel enterprise and all our other institutions and activities.

6. We advise our Business Agent to arrange if practicable, and offer club rates for the World's Crisis and Quarterly Journal of Prophecy.

E. A. STOCKMAN,
MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH,
} Committee.

The report was adopted, and ordered to be published in the World's Crisis.

FRANK BURR, Secretary.

SUNDAY SCHOOL REPORTS.

In the Blessed Hope Quarterly for the fourth quarter, 1882, appeared the following notice: "The S. A. C. S. Union, under whose auspices the Quarterly is prepared, desires the statistics of our Sunday School work. We earnestly request each superintendent to forward to W. A. Burch the number of scholars, names of officers and teachers, etc., in his school."

Strange to say, the only answer to this earnest appeal has been the report of a single Sunday School in Nova Scotia. We are glad to know that some schools sent in reports with the credentials of their delegates to the annual meeting of the Union. But there are many still unreported. Will not each superintendent or Sunday School secretary see that Eld. A. W. Sibley, Taunton, Mass. (the present secretary of the Union), has a report of their school?

We desire to encourage Sunday Schools, especially in places where there are no regular meetings. We think there are many places where Sunday Schools might be maintained to great advantage where there are but few brethren and sisters. We hope sometime to have a Sunday School missionary in the field. Meanwhile let those in destitute neighborhoods correspond with Eld. Sibley. Advice and plans for work can doubtless be given that will help such.

W. A. B.

All such Sunday School reports sent me as are referred to by Bro. Burch shall be placed on file, and a carefully made up statement of all the schools gathered from said reports shall be given annually, that we may know what is being done in Sunday School work among us as a people.

SECULAR NEWS.

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 9. Marsh T. Polk, the absconding Treasurer of Tennessee, was captured yesterday afternoon near Webb Station, eighteen miles from the Rio Grande. The capture was made by Officer Joe Sheely, the officer noted for breaking up stage robbing in Western Texas, and sending seventeen offenders to the Illinois Penitentiary. Polk had obtained a horse, having left the cars at Webb Station with a view of reaching Mexico at an isolated point above Laredo. The officer was aided in making the arrest by Pullman Car Conductor Cook. After the capture Officer Sheely at once telegraphed to Governor Hawkins of Tennessee, and then placed his prisoner on a train and conveyed him to Laredo, where he was jailed. The officer, with his prisoner, will arrive in this city at six o'clock to-morrow morning. Polk was traveling in disguise, but the method of escape he adopted is regarded as very stupid, indicating that he had no knowledge of the telegraphic facilities of the country nor of the character of border officers.

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 9. A box has come to light containing notes, due bills, checks and various securities, aggregating $125,000, which Polk, the defaulting State Treasurer, left with an attorney here, with instructions to apply the proceeds toward insuring certain of his bondsmen against loss.

Bethlehem, Pa., Jan. 9. A frightful boiler explosion occurred this afternoon at No. 1 blast furnace of the Bethlehem Iron Company, resulting in the death of four men and a woman and in the serious injury of several others. Two boilers, forty inches in diameter and thirty-six feet in length, exploded, wrecking the interior of the engine house and demolishing nearly half of the pattern shop adjoining. Five bodies have already been recovered, and the search in the debris continues to-night, as it is reported that one or two employes are still missing. The boiler thrown through the roof of the old mill was hurled a distance of three hundred feet and fell among about one workmen. Last week the boilers were cleaned and inspected, and were pronounced safe. They have been used probably from ten to fifteen years.

Emperor William has just granted 600,000 marks of the Imperial treasury funds as a contribution for the relief of the distress of the sufferers by the inundations.

The Frankfort Zeitung of Berlin announces that it has received already large sums, including 15,000 marks from New York, in aid of the sufferers by the floods. The same paper has organized an adequate and rapid distribution of the funds and will gladly receive further donations from the United States.

The floods in Germany are abating.

The Newhall House at Milwaukee was burned last week, and it is feared that about one hundred persons were killed.

The Christian, reporting the Moody meeting at Bristol, England, says: "On Friday evening a little baby's crying attracted the attention of the audience, just as the address was to begin. Mr. Moody took the opportunity of saying that it would not disturb him in the least, but it was very embarrassing to a mother to have one thousand four hundred people turn round and look at her. He would a great deal rather preach to those mothers who can not come except they bring their babies, than to the ladies who had servants to leave them with at home. It would be a kind and considerate thing for a lady to go down to a poor sister's home and nurse the baby while the mother came to the meeting. At Aberdeen, a mother anxious about her soul wanted to go into the inquiry-room, but, having her baby in her arms, she was afraid of disturbing the others. A tall man, however, standing by, said he would nurse her child, and he walked up and down with the little one in his arms until the mother returned, having received the peace she sought."

A Correction.—In the "Short Sermon," published in Crisis of Dec. 27th, read in the first section, fourth line from bottom, "Divine gush" for gust. P. W. Hough.

Obituaries.

Barton. In Naples, Maine, Nov. 20th, 1882, of pneumonia, Bro. William Barton, aged sixty-seven years.

Our brother in the prime of manhood gave himself to Christ and united with a Free-will Baptist Church, with which he remained during its visibility. A few years ago his mind fastened to the great truths that Christ would soon return with eternal life for his people, and to reign over earth restored. He has often expressed the desire that he might come in his day, but so it was not to be. His house has ever been a resting-place for God's tired children; and the writer will never forget the smile that would play upon his face when he would give him a cordial welcome to his pleasant home. He took great delight in reading the World's Crisis, and would sometimes say it was better than some meetings to sit down Sunday and peruse its pages. How lonely the family will be without him! A widow is left in lonely waiting for the resurrection, and sons and daughters mourn the loss of one of the best of fathers. May God bring them all together again in the deathless land. He was buried from the Union Church at the village; sermon by the writer to a large gathering of friends. J. Albert Libby.

Davis. In Northfield, Me., Nov. 6th, 1882, Sister Lucinda, wife of Bro. James Davis, aged fifty-two years.

Sister Davis has been for many years a humble, faithful Christian. She has finished her course and kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for her a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge will give unto her at that day; and not to her only, but to all them also that love his appearing. She leaves a husband, five children, and a large circle of friends to mourn. But they sorrow not as those without hope. May the blessings of God, whom she loved and served, rest especially upon the bereaved husband and lonely daughter, who are left in the old home. Services by the writer. L. M. Day.

Day. In Wesley, Me., July, 1882, Mary Rich, youngest child of Samuel and Adelia Day.

Of twelve children baby May was the first to fall by the enemy death. May the parents be prepared to meet her when the little ones shall come from the enemy's land to die no more.

L. M. Day.

Corwin. In Napa, Cal., Dec. 28th, 1882, Sr. Josie Corwin, aged thirteen years.

Sister Josie heard the writer preach the gospel of the kingdom two years ago, and joyfully embraced the blessed hope; and after a protracted and bitter opposition to her baptism by her uncle and guardian, an opportunity offered, when she was buried in holy baptism by the writer in April last. Consumption was already doing its deadly work; she lingered on through the summer and fall, and then calmly fell asleep in the one faith and hope. She was a consistent and well beloved member of the Napa Red-Wood Advent Christian Church. Her life was spotless, her faith unwavering, and her hope radiant with immortality. She was greatly beloved by all who knew her, and our hearts were wrung with anguish as we took our last look upon her face still lovely in death; yet we sorrow not as those without hope. Funeral services were held in the Baptist Church, and words of comfort were spoken by the writer from 1 Cor. 15: 26. After services we took the sleeping one to a north hill side where sleep two other jewels of Christ, and laid her away to await the trumpet's blast that will soon arouse her from her dusty bed and dreamless sleep, and then Josie will rise in immortal bloom.

"Fare you well for a while, faded star of our home,
Sweetly rest from all sorrow and pain,
Till the Prince of the angels in triumph shall come,
And restore your lost glory again."

J. D. Carey.

Howard. In Chicopee Falls, Mass., Nov. 1st, 1882, of diphtheretic paralysis, Willie H., youngest son of Ansel B. and Sarah J. Howard, aged eight years and six months.

Willie had patiently passed through a severe attack of diphtheria, and seemed fairly on the way to health, when he began to lose his voice and sight; and on the first day of Nov., while out with the children who were at play, he fell of paralysis, and died in the evening. Willie was a rare boy—respectful, gentle, kind, amiable, truly loving and greatly beloved by all who knew him. He seemed religiously inclined, and in the general conception of things was quite before his age. We believe that Willie, with little Alice and Cora, previously deceased, will share in "the kingdom of heaven which belongeth to little children." The parents mourn deeply, but find sure consolation in familiar communion with the God of comfort, and in hope of a tearless reunion at Messiah's return. The other members of the family are warned to prepare for the same. Words of comfort were spoken by Rev L. W. Staples

A. C. J.

Craig. At the residence of her son-in-law, Roderick McLeod, Granby, P. Q. Nov. 18th, 1882, Olive Craig, relict of Aaron Craig, in her eighty-fourth year.

Our mother was born at Shefford Mountain in 1798, her father being among the first that emigrated from the States to Shefford, Canada. She leaves a large family of children who have lost a good mother. Though a great sufferer from cancer in the face, she bore it with true Christian patience, leaving behind the assurance that her children, if faithful, will meet her on the other shore. Her last words were: "I am saved, I am saved" Her Bible has been her comfort through life, and for the last few years the Crisis as a Christian paper was appreciated much. Sermon by Rev. W. B. Longhurst. Her remains were interred by the side of our father in the Granby Episcopal Cemetery, to wait the morning of the resurrection.

"Gone from her home is our mother dear,
And we miss her sadly there;
Vacant the place at the table now,
And empty and lonely her chair."

M. O. Vaudry.

Murphy. In Barnstead, N. H., Nov. 19th, 1882, Bro. John Murphy, aged seventy-five years.

The subject of this notice was a firm believer in the great truths of the Bible which have made us a distinctive people. He early heard and received the message of the coming kingdom and final judgment. His life was not without its failings and triumphs. Long and hard was the struggle between disease and vitality. Patience and submission was manifested by him during his entire sickness. He frequently said "it was all right." The hope of a resurrection to endless life and rest comforted his heart while the tide of mortal life ebbed out. A widow and two sons survive him, with a circle of friends, neighbors, and brethren in Christ, who loved, respected, and will miss him. The widow weeps, but not without hope. Services were conducted by the writer. W. M. Harmon.

Lutterton. In Carlton, N. Y., July 23d, 1882, of paralysis, Sarah Lutterton, aged seventy-eight years.

Mother was for many years a member of the Freewill Baptist Church of Gaines, N. Y. When Bro. P. A. Smith of Rochester, N. Y., came to this place in 1864, and proclaimed the "blessed hope," she at first refused to accept him as a servant of God, and rejected the truth he taught; but the Holy Spirit strove with her, and yielding she rejoiced in the new light that shone from God's Word. Her path was not a thornless one. Her row was well hoed. She loved the Crisis, and when she could no longer read it herself, she listened while others read from it. She had requested that Bro. P. A. Stevens should preach her funeral sermon, saying, "I want the truth preached over me." But Bro. S. could not get here in time. Eld. Walker, the Baptist pastor, preached a very good sermon from Rev. 14 13. Her children arise up and call her blessed.

J. H. Lutterton.

Young. In Cuffey's Cove, Cal., Nov. 5, 1882, after a short illness, Willie Young, aged five yrs.

Willie was a bright and promising child. But death loves a shining mark, and claimed him as his own. His bereaved parents sorrow not as those without hope, for they laid their little treasure away in full hope of the soon coming of a life-giving and death-destroying Christ, when they expect to meet their beautiful boy in life and immortality in the on-coming kingdom. The voice of the archangel and the trump of God will soon break in upon the dull ear of death, and arouse the sleepers in the dust to life everlasting.

J. D. Carey.

Pomroy. At Stanstead, P. Q., Nov. 23, 1882, William Earnest, beloved son of Wm. L. and N. U. Pomroy, aged two years.

Sermon by the writer from 2 Kings 4: 26—"Is it well with the child? It is well." Bible proofs were offered, and the broken-hearted parents and relatives were comforted as they bowed in anguish over the beautiful form of the dead one, and solemnly said, "By the grace of God we will meet thee."

Dear son, laid to quiet rest,
Soon to shine among the blest;
At the resurrection morn,
With the righteous nation born.

Glad the meeting in that day—
Earnest comes to ever stay;
Tears and sorrow are all gone,
Jesus reigns upon his throne.

C. P. Dow.

Hewitt. At Burns, Lacrosse Co., Wis., Dec. 24th, 1882, Sister J. C. Hewitt, wife of Bro. Jas. Hewitt, aged thirty-eight years.

For the second time in two years our dear brother has been called to mourn the loss of a loved companion. But in the darkness and gloom of death, visions of a blessed reunion with loved ones, where death can never come, cheers and sustains our bereaved brother. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer.

C. A. Slocum.

Remick. In Falls City, Nebraska, Dec. 21st, 1882, Carrie, daughter of Levi and Emeline Remick, aged seven years.

The little sufferer feared not, but leaned on the Shepherd's staff as she passed the dark valley. The father and mother are bowed down with sorrow, and with moans and tears and groans cried out, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

No Name.

Gilbs. At Princeton, Me., Jan. 4th, 1883, Willie Gilbs, son of Edward and Anna Gilbs.

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, by request. J. M. Hunter.

Notices.

Notice.—It is expected that Eld. John Couch will attend the Conference at Worcester and remain over the Sabbath. L. Boutell.

Special Notice.

Elder Miles Grant will commence a course of lectures from his great Prophetical Chart at the Advent Church in Westfield, Mass., Sunday, Jan. 21st, 1883, to continue as long as the interest may demand. S. G. Mathewson.

Conference Notice.

The middle district will hold their Quarterly Session of the Second Advent Conference at Worcester, Mass., commencing Tuesday evening, Jan. 16th, 1883, and continuing over the following Sunday. These meetings are for the special benefit and interest of the believers in the cause of Christ, and the "hope" we so much cherish, namely the coming of Jesus and readiness for that event. Now, dearly beloved, we have had a welcome invitation from the Advent Church in Worcester to have this feast in their chapel. Let the district be fully represented by both laymen and preachers. It is strongly desired that all the old soldiers who volunteered and went out with the first regiment on call for duty, with all the recruits to the same army, may report themselves at Worcester the first of the meeting. Let this call be heeded. Orders in the next.

L. Boutell, Committee.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Old-Fashioned Conference.—The church in Worcester again invite their brethren and sisters to meet with them in an old-fashioned Conference, to be held in connection with the Quarterly Conference already appointed to commence on Tuesday evening, Jan. 16th. Dear brethren, let us gather in conference once more, and review the grounds of our faith and hope, and thus strengthen one another as we draw near the time of our deliverance. It is desired that this meeting may be like those of former years, characterized by a deep interest in the things pertaining to the kingdom of God now near at hand. A general attendance is desired.

Church Committee: E. G. Higgins, Geo. E. Merrill, F. D. Barnes.

Conference Notice.

Providence permitting, the second New Hampshire Quarterly Conference will be held in Goffstown, N. H., commencing Wednesday evening, Jan. 17th, and continue over Sunday, Jan. 21st. A cordial invitation is given to preachers and brethren to come to this meeting, and as it is a new field, come in the name of Israel's God, that we may see his power displayed in building up believers, and the salvation of the lost. Our labor is almost over. Let us do what we can. Do not be afraid to come, the hearts and houses are open to receive you. J. G. Smith.

J. T. Libby. G. W. Bowles.

Conference Notice.

There will be a semi-annual Conference of Southwest Iowa and Northwest Missouri A. C. Conference at Lewis, Cass Co., Iowa, commencing Thursday evening, Feb. 15th, and holding over Sunday, Feb. 18th. We appoint this Conference with the assurance that brethren and sisters will make it a point to be there. We have the assurance that the brethren from Troublesome Creek, Milford, Elliott, Red Oak and Atlantic, and all over the Conference district, will be in attendance. Come, brethren and sisters to the rescue. Elder H. G. McCulloch is expected, and Elds. D. Q. Kent and Adair are invited, and any others coming in the name of the Lord. Business relative to future Campmeetings will be considered. By request. Wm McCulloch.

Conference Notice.

The Annual Meeting of the A. C. Conference of Northwestern Michigan for the election of officers, etc., will be held with the church at Grant Station, on the Grand Rapids and Newaygo R. R., in Newaygo Co., commencing on Thursday evening, Jan. 18th, and holding over Sunday. Let all the churches be represented by delegates. Come, brethren and sisters, to do work for the Lord, for he is coming soon. John Bower.

Notice.—The A. C. Conference of District No. 2, State of Kansas, will meet with the church at the Townsend school-house, six miles southwest from Waterville, in Washington County, commencing Feb. 15th, and continue over the following Sunday. Brethren, let us hear from all the churches, and see as many present as possible. P. O. address, Waterville, Marshall Co., Kansas.

W. H. Shriner, President.

Notice.—The Lord willing, I shall commence meetings at North Limington, Me., Union House, Thursday evening, Jan. 18th, evenings through the week, and continue as long as duty may demand. We hope the brethren and sisters from abroad will come and assist in the work of the Lord. M. Stevens.

Notice.—The first Quarterly Meeting of the A. C. Conference of Northern Illinois will be held with the church in New Rutland, Ills., commencing Tuesday evening, Feb 20th, and closing Friday evening, Feb. 23d.

D. S. Clark, President.

J. August Smith, Secretary.

Conference Notice.

The Annual Session of the Penobscot Valley A. C. Quarterly Conference will be held, the Lord willing, with the A. C. Church in Bangor, Me., commencing Thursday, at 2 30 P. M., Jan. 18th, and continuing over the following Sunday. Dear brethren and sisters within the circle of this Conference, let every church and community send at least one or more representatives to this session. Come with the spirit of the Master to work for the salvation of sinners, the comforting of the saints, and the general interest of the cause of Christ. All are cordially invited. It is expected several of God's watchmen will be present to sound out the gospel message.

O. S. French, President.

Geo. W. Bean, Sec'y.

Notice of Lectures.

Mrs. Mc.Kinstry will deliver her course of Historical-Prophetical Lectures as follows:

In North Hatley, P. Q., from Tuesday evening, Jan. 23d, to Sunday evening, Jan. 28th.

In Hatley (Old Church) from Tuesday evening, Jan. 30th, to Sunday evening, Feb. 4th.

Any wishing to arrange for the Lectures at any time intervening between the above appointments, or beyond them, can address me at any of the above named places according to the dates given.

L. C. Mc.Kinstry.

Quarterly Meeting.

The first Quarterly Meeting of the H. V. A. C. Conference will be holden with the church at Hebron, N. Y., commencing Thursday evening, Jan. 18th, and continue over the Sabbath following. A team will meet the one o'clock train each day at Rupert, Vt., commencing with Thursday. Those arriving earlier will wait until one o'clock. We hope ministers and churches will manifest a proper degree of interest in this meeting, as the Hebron church needs a good meeting, and their hospitality to the people of God has been proved by many meetings of this kind.

Chas. A. Phelps, President.

G. H. Wallace, Secretary.

Conference Notice.

There will be a Conference at South Addison, Me., Washington Co., beginning Thursday evening, Jan. 18th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and continuing over Sunday the 21st. Preaching brethren are invited to come to this meeting. Let all come who can, looking to the Lord to help in the good work of saving the lost. Homes will be provided for all that may attend. By request of the Church,

Rufus Snow.

Notice.—To the brethren and sisters in Christ: I wish to say that I shall stop in Exeter through the winter months, then I shall be ready for the field again. All wishing me to labor with them in the spring can address me.

J. E. Cross, Exeter, N. H.

Special Notice.—All churches within the Eastern District of the Wisconsin A. C. Conference, and any isolated brethren who may desire a Quarterly Meeting, or a series of meetings, will please correspond with the writer at Mifflin, Iowa Co., Wis. Philo Hitchcock, Dist. Evangelist.

Notice.—Having closed our pastoral care and labor with the Church of God worshiping in Hardwick, Vt., we are ready under God to labor Sundays, or in revival meetings, or as Pastor of some church, as the Lord may direct. Address me at North Montpelier, Vt. E. N. Morse.

Special Notice.—On account of the meeting at Worcester being appointed at the same time as the Springfield meeting, the Springfield meeting is postponed till a later date, of which due notice will be given. Geo. L. Teple, Com.

Notice.—Elder Jesse Gay wishes me to send an appointment to the Crisis for his meeting at North Waterboro, Me., school-house No. 16, third Sunday in January, two o'clock and evening. J. M. Johnson.

OUR YEARS.

BY J. ALBERT LIBBY.

Each day that glides is but an onward pace—
Each year is as a mile along the road
That marks our journey from its starting place
Through changeful scenes to where with meekened face
And tired feet we drop life's heavy load.

How truthfully sublime the psalmist's words,
Soul-sounds of sad experience of old;
Yet fitted for each living heart's deep chords,
True of the cotter poor and palace lords,—
"Our years are spent like as a tale that's told."

Sometimes a story sweetly, smoothly flows,
And all its scenery such beauty hath,
That we are charmed; and thus life's journey goes,
And all the months bloom as the choicest rose,
Sending a fragrance out along the path.

So we forget that life hath aught but sweet,
Our selfish hearts rejecting others' woe,
To haste with pleasure, seeking eyes and feet,
Tripping along youth's paved and showy street,
With wealth of health, to keep the cheek aglow.

But soon we strike a desert-dreary-day,
When thorns and thistles pierce where'er we turn,
Troubles new-born benight the uneven way—
Our tears fall sadly, and we choking say,
The past was O how bright, but now we mourn.

And well we may, for some dear kindly face
That hath companioned with us, now is missed,
As a loved star from its accustomed place,
And memory through the dark with eager chase
Longs for the tender touch of lips once kissed.

And hands go out in vain grasping the air,
Where once they met the strong and willing palms,
Ready to lift us up each rugged stair,
Or brush the brow to smooth away our care,
Or take us to the love of rounded arms.

But they were tired, so let us bid them sleep,
And take the work to do which they laid down,
Deeming our loss their gain, and cease to weep,
Since He thought best who doth his chosen keep,
That they should stop and wait to take the crown.

Our march is but a little farther on,
When we shall feel the fatal sting of pain;
And find our places with the myriads gone,
Till rising with the glow of breaking morn,
Our loved and lost ones we shall meet again.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Bro. J. F. Meyers writes from Chicago: "The church on Green St. has just closed a four weeks' meeting. Sinners have been converted, backsliders reclaimed, and a goodly number have been baptized. The church has been blest. Bro. J. August Smith has labored faithfully among us."

Bro. E. M. Andrews writes from Biddeford Me., Jan. 5th, 1883:—"The work of God still goes on here; the church is now in excellent order, and backsliders and sinners are coming to Christ. Quite a number have found peace; and conviction is deeply affecting the people. To God be all the glory. Pray for us.

Bro. J. August Smith writes from Chicago, Ill.:—"We closed up the last year with a good meeting. We baptized three converts into the church; making eleven in all during December. The Lord has been working with us as a church, and we rejoice in seeing so many being brought to Christ. Pray for us in Chicago."

Sister A. A. Mason writes from Fisherville, N. H.:—"There are a few of us here who are trying to keep the truths we hold dear before the people, though we have much to contend with. The Lord has blest us in the past, and the interest in our meetings is increasing, and we believe the Lord has greater blessings in store for us. Pray for us that we may double our diligence in the Master's service."

Bro. Marshall McCulloch writes from Clark Co., Ill.:—"We have been in this county one week holding meetings in the M. E. Church. The people had never heard of such things as we preach before. The evidences of speedy judgment startles some, while a few rejoice exceedingly. God is working among the people. Five arose one evening, and three more last night, saying they wanted the prayers of the church; while some others are getting quite angry, which we consider a good omen. Oh, for more laborers! The fields are already white for the harvest."

Bro. E. N. Morse writes from North Montpelier, Vt.:—"I thought that perhaps some would like to hear from the dear ones in Hardwick, where we have been laboring one half of the time through the year just closed. There is a small church in Hardwick that are striving hard to enter through the strait gate; and God has blessed our united labors in adding to the little flock such as should be saved. Five have been buried in the likeness of Christ's death by baptism, and the same number have been received into church fellowship; others are ready to join. To God be the praise."

Bro. Geo. A. Streeter writes:—"I wish to say to the praise of God that we as a church are prospering well. There has been a steady increase in numbers and interest since we came here. The one great trouble here, as in other places, is careless living. We are giving them the pure word of truth—holiness and Christian or Bible perfection—as a readiness to meet Jesus in peace. Pray for us that we may have wisdom from Heaven. Our congregations number from fifty to seventy-five in the morning, which we think is good, scattered as they are. We have a good Sunday School. Think the Blessed Hope lessons are greatly improved."

Bro. Thomas Sadler writes from Louisville, Ky., Jan. 4th:—"It may be interesting to our Western friends to hear from our little band of disciples who are looking for and expecting our blessed Lord's soon advent to our earth, or rather to his earth, made new for his children to dwell in after they are raised from the dead, and when this mortal shall have put on immortality, and to be forever with the Lord. Praise the Lord for this precious hope! We keep up regular preaching every Sabbath, by the writer, except when Dr. N. Field, our good and faithful brother, comes over and feeds us sumptuously on good Advent doctrines, which he is so able to do. We have now about a dozen and a half of members, but there are but two who are able to contribute towards the support of the gospel. But we believe in due time the Lord will provide. So living in hope we remain yours in Christ till he comes. Let all who read this remember and pray for us."

Bro. Sederquist writes from Springfield, Mass.:—"Permit me to say to the saints scattered abroad, that the church in S., through the grace of God, still lives. We have just enjoyed a refreshing as from the Lord, through our dear sister McKinstry's labors. She closed her course of lectures on Sunday night, Dec. 31st, to a congregation of over five hundred, who listened to our sister three times on Sunday, and gave the strictest attention to every point. It was evident from the many tear-filled eyes, both morning and afternoon, that a deep impression was made; and many were convinced that we are living very near the judgment scenes. After the lecture, we enjoyed a watch meeting; some two hundred or more remaining, many of whom confessed their convictions that they had seen the light. All praise to Jesus. We continue our meetings for revival work all through the month of January, and onward as the Lord directs. Pray for us."

Bro. Burr writes from Portland, Me.:—"Bro. Grant commenced meetings here Dec. 5th, and continued until Jan. 1st., 1883, closing with a watch meeting. The Lord has greatly blessed his efforts. Sinners were converted, backsliders reclaimed, and the church greatly quickened and blessed by the gift of the Holy Spirit. Some of the meetings were exceedingly rich in spiritual power. We trust that a new impetus has been given to the cause of truth in Portland, that will last and increase till the end of time. None of those present will forget the impressive scenes at the communion on watch-night. It was a melting time. Give to a church 'fellowship one with another,' and the blood of Jesus 'cleansing from all sin,' and there will be power and glory in soul and body. Bro. Grant's close, searching sermons were really enjoyed by us, and his lectures on the chart were very interesting to all. The attendance was very good at all the meetings, and quite a number from other churches came in, and took part in the exercises with much freedom. Bro. Grant preached a whole gospel, and gave each part its share and place to the joy of believers. One person who was a skeptic before the meetings began, confessed Jesus and resolved to serve him."

Bro. A. N. Dunbar writes from Athol, Mass.:—"As it is encouraging to me to read the news from the churches, I thought perhaps others would be glad to hear good news from New Boston (Winchendon). I have labored there most of the time for a year and a half, and I feel to praise the good Lord for the fruit we have seen. We have just closed a protracted meeting of two weeks, which we hope may prove a blessing to all. Some of the young people took a decided stand for God, other's expressed a determination to be more faithful, and others with whom I labored were under deep conviction, but would not yield. We have hope that there will be more to follow in the good way. Pray for them you that hold communion with God, that the work already begun may continue until many more of those young people may welcome the grace of God in their hearts, and be governed by the principles of sound doctrine, which is able to make us wise unto salvation. We feel more encouraged than ever to keep sounding the alarm, to warn men to flee from the wrath to come, and to be prepared to live in the kingdom of our Lord."

Bro. H. D. S. writes from East Hatley, P. Q., Jan. 2d:—"Having filled my appointment at Hall Stream, Sunday, Nov. 12th, I appointed meetings at Luther Hill schoolhouse for the 13th, and longer if the interest demanded. Monday it rained so we could not have a meeting, but Tuesday morning we got the evidence that it is good for us to be here; so we started out and circulated the appointment for the evening, and the dear Lord blest us in preaching from Luke 9:25. There was quite a number out; among them were two Seventh Day preachers, who I learned had given out an appointment for meetings at same place for Tuesday and Wednesday evenings on the Sunday previous, where they were holding meetings; but they quietly gave way as, at the close of the meeting, I gave out an appointment for Wednesday evening. Our numbers steadily increased during the week, and the dear Lord truly blest his word, and eight sinners started out to serve the Lord; some backsliders among the number. We had to close our labors on Friday evening on account of regular appointments at Coaticook, spite of the earnest entreaties of many to stay. We promised to go back as soon as we could, and started from home Saturday, Dec. 9th, for Hall Stream and Luther Hill, but did not get through, on account of bad roads, until Monday morning. Had meetings every evening but one, though it stormed about all the time. Saturday evening had a social meeting at Bro. Clark Haines' residence, after which nineteen sat down to the table and partook of the emblems of the 'broken body and shed blood' of our dear Saviour. Two more started Sunday, 17th."

FROM WM. CHAPMAN, M. D.

Dear Crisis:—It is now five years since I left my home in Iowa to come to this great North West. I was the first to preach our great Advent truths in this place, and I believe in this territory. For two years I hung my head as a bulrush with sadness because every door was shut against our truths, and myself branded as an infidel for promulgating them. But I can say an effectual door has been opened, and many are now crying, "Come over and help us!" Since the above time, I have organized and helped to do so three churches within from ten to thirty miles of my home and preach to two steadily, and the third as often as I can.

Last June Bro. J. C. and Sr. S. E. Smith came with tent by invitation to this valley. I lectured with him for one month, and then went with him for two months to the Willamette Valley, and just returned from one more month's labor up Snake River in this Territory. At this last place there are many dear lovers of our truths; and if they had a stated minister, all Snake River would become Advent. At this place we met our old friends Bro. and Sister Stephen Shields from Minnesota. There is an interesting church on Rice's Bar, and all up the river they were anxious to hear our truths. At Hemenway's we held meetings for three hours, and gave a running lecture for two hours to a deeply interesting congregation. Most of the places I have visited the people have relapsed into an indifference with the unconverted, and with the Christians an apathy truly alarming. On this coast infidels abound, but thank God the message we have to give arouses all alike. The prophecies convince the infidel that the Bible is true, and the Christians arise and trim their lamps, realizing that the day of judgment is at hand.

I have traveled somewhere over a thousand miles by stage, rail or boat, and the greatest thing I am impressed with is the vastness of the field of Oregon and Washington Territory, and but one or two ministers to devote their whole time to the work. The flood-gates of the East are open, and it is here migration drifts; and there are thousands upon thousands who have never heard the Advent message. Here is the field for labor, for mission work. Our Rail Roads are threading their way through every portion, and it is now or never that the work must be done. I have not time myself, but am deeply interested in the work, and will do what I can in my own valley, which is 25 x 30 miles and between three and four thousand souls. Instead of going over the fields again and again as your tents do back East, giving the people hundreds of warnings, I think the Judgment message should fly. We want men that can pull on the coarse boot and that can adapt themselves to the wants of the people and go through thick and thin to warn the masses. While Bro. Smith and wife are doing all the good they can, they are only as a drop to the bucket-full.

May God bless our Board of Missions, and show them that in this great Northwest the harvest is great and the fields are white and ready. God bless the Mission work.

BEFORE DAWN.

Long is the night, and we ride
Into the east, it seems,
Friend and foe at our side,
Through a land of shadows and dreams.

Voices to left and right
Out of the darkness call,
"Travelers, what of the night?
Wayfarers, wanderers, all."

From magical gardens behind
Songs and sweet echoes enthrall.
Lo! here are your idols enshrined,
Return for the flowers you let fall.

Ah, never! forever away
Through the dark must we speed,
Borne on to the unknown day,
And the echoing songs recede.

Loometh a watch tower tall
"Watchman, what of the night?"
For behold in the windowed wall
Surely there shineth a light.

But dumb is the oracle, cold
Is the window empty and high,
And the light it seemeth to hold
Is a star in the eastern sky.

Prophet, poet and saint,
Have said that a dawn will break,
But chilled by the darkness we faint.—
Will those who are sleeping awake?

They have slept so long and so deep,
Our hearts are aweary, our eyes
Are heavy, we too must sleep,
Shall we awake with the day in the skies?

—Anna Boynton in Methuen Enterprise.

The following is a reply to the above, by Eld. D. T. Taylor.

ALMOST SUNRISE.

Yes, the night is dark and long, but the East
Is aglow with a bright'ning flame,
And we pass to the joy of the marriage feast
In the banquet-hall of the Lamb.

What of the night? thou dost lonely cry—
It is passing, forever and aye,
And we turn our gaze toward the Eastern sky,
Where the night shall be lost in the day.

Let the syren sing in the gardens of sin,
And echo her magical strains,
We may not stay for the music within,
Nor dwell where the serpent reigns.

Through a land of shadows and dreams and gloom,
Where sad hearts break alway;
Out, out from the night, on the wings of light,
We are swiftly borne away.

Light from the watch-towers window's high
Streams down to the traveller's feet,
And proclaims to the weary passer-by,
He is nearing home so sweet.

The watchman shouts. It is coming soon,
It is breaking, that beautiful morn!
And dumb alone is the doubting slave,
Of all heavenly vision shorn.

Soon the gates of that endless Eden-land,
Sung by poet, saint, and seer,
Shall open wide to the sleeping band
When the Bridegroom shall appear.

For the sleep of the grave, so deep, so long,
Shall be broken forever and aye,
For the "King of Life" is righteous and strong,
And will chase all death's shadows away.

Be glad then O hearts that sigh and yearn;
Be strong O souls that fear,
For though it is darkest just before dawn,
Lo, the beautiful morning is near.

FROM JOSIAH SMITH.

Dear Editors and readers of the World's Crisis:—It has been some time since I wrote you, but this being my seventieth birthday, and fifty-fourth year of my religious life, and fiftieth year of my public life as a minister of the Word, I have decided to drop you a few lines. I am truly thankful that in all these years my Father has never forsaken me. His mercies are renewed from year to year, from day to day, and from hour to hour. In the many trials that he has called me to pass through, he has ever been near to uphold; and now I can say with the Psalmist, "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

Since I got crippled last spring, as announced by Bro. Jno. A. Cargile in the Crisis, I have not been able to do much work in the Lord's vineyard, though I have seen and felt some precious seasons. I have aided in some meetings where much apparent good was the result. I assisted in setting in order one new church, and adding about twenty-five members to another. In the early part of this month I made a mission tour through Van Buren, White and Independence Counties. I filled many appointments of one sermon at a place, but at James Town I preached five times to a people who seemed much interested, and increasing in numbers and attenntion to the end. I hope to revisit them ere long. I found some fruit here of tracts I sent out from Alabama some years ago. A Baptist minister who heard Bro. Cargile in this State some years ago was very attentive and ready to learn the truth.

I met with a Methodist minister and talked with him much, as I learned that he had gotten so much new light from the Bible as to sever his connection with the people over whom he had presided as an elder for years. I learned that he had joined a Bible class to investigate it, and it alone for truth. Eighteen men, Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians, had entered into a solemn covenant to study and follow the teachings of the Bible, lead where it might. The leader of this party is Eld. J. T. Hambey, Floral P. O. Independence Co., Ark., who some years ago had a debate with our brother, Eld. G. W. Crosby. I also found intelligent brethren here and there entirely without any of our preachers to help them, but it was said that they stood up as lights in the darkness.

Many persons came to me for private instruction on the themes I had presented in my discourses, and for three or four days I had to do from three to six hours' constant talking each day. If I had had tracts to give, it would have saved me much labor and risk to my throat trouble.

There is a wide and inviting field for mission work in this part of Arkansas. I feel lost in trying to work without tracts. I expect, the Lord helping, to do more work for the Master this year than the last two. Will some of you send me tracts for distribution? They are much needed in these parts. Address me at Pinnacle Springs, Faulkney Co., Ark.

Many thanks to some one for the Crisis and American Quarterly Journal. May the Lord keep us unto the day of redemption.

Pinnacle Springs.

QUESTIONS

asked Elder Munger at different times, both by letter and in person, on theological subjects and revivals.

Question asked in the cars: "I remember hearing of you thirty years ago; how long have you been preaching, Elder Munger?" It is about thirty-two years since I first publicly recommended Christ to a sin-cursed race.

"Do you travel all the time? I hear that you preach three times on the Sabbath, and some week days, and that you are over seventy years old." I am most seventy-six years old; was born in 1806, and have always traveled as an evangelist, having taken from four to ten weeks trips at a time, and preached on an average six times a week, and make four of these trips in a year. I average five hundred miles to a trip, paying the different Rail Roads for fares one-half of what I get for preaching.

"Do you say that you have preached over four thousand sermons? That is more than I have ever heard of one man's preaching." I have preached nearer five thousand times. I have attended nearly two hundred Campmeetings, together with my other travels. It is thought by some that I have spoken to more different people than any other man on the continent. This I do not know or care if I have done more good than harm.

"What do you do with your long list of appointments when sick?" I have been sick but once since a boy, and then but for a short time, and was on my feet every day. God has spared me from pain and sickness, not even enduring the toothache, for I have thirty-two good sound teeth, which I think is owing to my temperate habits. For the past fifty years I have been a member of the Cold-water Society, it being the first temperance organizat on in the State of Massachusetts.

"As your experience is so great in theological matters, I should like to ask where you graduated?" In Lower Chicopee, in Col. Abel Chapin's grist-mill, and Japhet Chapin's saw-mill. I completed my course of instruction at the age of twenty-one, and then started out for myself.

"You don't say that you have done so much without an education?" No; I was educated in a higher school than any earthly school for the work that I am now engaged in. I have seen and heard unconverted men and hypocrites preach that have an education which enables them to pass into the ring, as in many other positions, with only the whitewash of education, without experience or virtue.

"Do you think a person can be converted by the preaching of a wicked or unconverted man?" It takes double the time and talk to answer questions that it does to ask them, and I should prefer asking you a few.

This ended the interview for awhile, as he refused to be questioned. Soon however this question was again asked in regard to "unconverted men as instruments for the conversion of sinners." I think I have seen many such cases, and where they lived their religion out to the end.

"How can that be, as the preacher had not faith in God?" If the preacher preached God's truth, and the man was seeking for it, it was the faith of the seeker that caused the seed (which is the word of God), that fell on good ground, to spring up and have fruit; the working out on our part that will produce salvation. If a man who sows the seed is as pure as an apostle, and we neglect to do our part in cultivating it, we may go to the devil, while the other man may be saved by doing the work which God's Word commands him. A good man may sow a field, and a bad one reap it; a good man's word does not always prove fruitful.

"Well, Elder, that looks very reasonable, but I must stop at this station." (A New Haven interviewer.)

FROM MRS. WM. GIBSON.

Dear Editors:—I wish through the medium of your paper to express my gratitude to the donors of bundles of the Crisis and tracts, as I cannot thank them personally, not having any clue by which to find them except two. Elder N. E. B. was very careful to remove the name, but I found him out, and got his papers; a bundle of tracts, and two other bundles of Crisis. It made a pretty good load for our mail bag.

My dear friends, you do not know with what joy I received them, and how eagerly they have been perused. I have sent them around to my neigbors, and I pray that the blessing of the Lord may follow them. I was surprised to find my letter published entire in your paper; but I am thankful now that it is so. When I sent you that letter, I asked God's blessing upon it, and it has returned to me bearing thirty fold. A friend said to me as I was showing him my treasures, "The Adventists are in dead earnest." But my opinion is they are in live earnest. I will circulate those papers all I can among our scattered settlement, and pray that the Lord will go with them, and if by so doing it might be the means of saving one soul, what a great reward it would be for so little trouble. I ask an interest in the prayers of all the brothers and sisters who are watching for the dawning of the day for the people on this frontier, and also for this poor unworthy writer.

The faithful teaching of the truth as it is in Christ, the earnest preaching of the Word of God, the holding fast of the simple elements of the Gospel in their divine and living power constitute the best possible means of stopping the course of error, and accelerating the progress of truth.

"ALL THE WORLD KEEPS CHRISTMAS DAY."

It is quite natural that some persons who love and trust the Son of God should delight to celebrate the day on which some suppose he was born. It may seem unkind and almost sacreligious to devout souls to say anything in disparagement of this merry celebration. Still it is a fact that God in his providence has not permitted us to know the natal day of Jesus. We are quite sure he was not born on December 25th.

And again, it is the death rather than the birth of Christ that we are to keep in mind and celebrate. (1 Cor. 11:26). And it is far more Scriptural to watch daily for his coming again than to observe an anniversary of his birth. Indeed, no special day but the Lord's day has any divine sanction, and in the judgment of God's dear people, especially reformers and martyrs, there is no blessing from God in the long list of holy days in ecclesiastical calendars. All these had their origin in Pagan and Papal superstition.

But the strangest aspect of this Christmas celebration is, that "all the world" joins the church in observing it—the world that once rejected, despised and crucified the Son of God,—the "world" essentially the same to-day, and that has never repented of the deed nor been willing for him to reign over it,—the "world" bound over to judgment for crucifying the Lord of glory and that will cry piteously for rocks and mountains to hide them from his face when he comes again—this "world" celebrates his birth with a "Merry Christmas."

The strangeness, absurdity, and if it were not thoughtless we might say mockery of the spectacle may be seen in the light of the following Bible reading.

1. How the "world" received the Lord Jesus Christ when he came the first time. Luke 2:17; Matt. 8:20; John 15:18, 19, 25; 3:19; 18:40; Luke 13:21.

2. How the "world" will meet the Lord Jesus when he comes again. Matt. 25:31–46; 1 Thess. 5:1–3; 2 Thess. 1:7–9; Jude 14; Rev. 1:7; 6:14–17. 20:11–15. He may come on Christmas day. Mark 13:35–37.—E. P. Marvin, in Messiah's Herald.

[We fully endorse the above, and are happy to learn that a Presbyterian minister is not afraid to protest against this demoralizing anti-scriptural feast, and do it boldly in the face of its world-wide approval. The Protestant fathers denounced it as being built upon a lie, originating in a heathen court, and clad in gospel livery by Roman priests. There is in these days a sad drifting towards the sinful practices of the Lady of Kingdoms. Let all who are separate from the carnal pleasures of the giddy world remain so, and those who are not, come out of this Babylonish folly lest they partake of the coming plagues.—J. C.]

FROM BRO. GEO. A. STREETER.

I cannot refrain from writing my feelings this morning, Jan. 1st, 1883. As I rose at 6 30 o'clock and went to the door facing the east, a bright star, a clear sky and a silvery moon met my vision. "Truly," I said to my dear wife, "this is a happy new year." The most lovely morning I ever saw for the first of January. My whole soul was filled with glory, and my mouth was filled with praise to a God that had kept us a long year, now past. What trials of faith! What changes of events we have passed through! And here we are pleasantly situated in the midst of pleasant people, enjoying richly the things God has given us to enjoy. Praise his name! What will be in this year? Will the end of all things come? Will God's saints be made like their risen head? But remember it is only the "pure in heart" that will see God. Oh, watch carefully over yourself! God helping me, I mean to be gathered when the rest are. Oh! hasten the glad day! Amen.

FROM E. S. SHELDON.

Dear brethren and sisters:—A new year's greeting to all; and may we each strive more earnestly to be willing and obedient servants, and have our lives wholly consecrated to God, knowing that we have but a little while to wait for our Lord and Master. Oh, how cheering the thought that we are nearing home! Let us hail with gladness the trials and temptations of life that are permitted by God, to wean us from the trifling things of earth, and make us holy in heart and life; believing that the Lord doeth all things well, and that "all things work together for good to them that love God." I believe the little church here is growing in grace continually under the leadership of Bro. A. S. Williams. Oh! how blessed and satisfying to commit everything into the hands of our loving heavenly Father, and let him manage all our affairs! When our Father is at the helm we are safe; and how much we ought to love him!

How often I think of dear Sister Weaver, who has been in the furnace of affliction so long. I expect to meet her on the new earth, freed from all suffering; and how comforting to think that none of the ills of this life will be permitted to enter that Eden home! As we see the multitudes who have never accepted Christ as their Saviour, we ought to feel that there is something for Christians to do, and realize that our Lord wants no idlers in his vineyard. I know by experience that the dear Crisis is doing much good. May it cheer the hearts of even more this year than ever before.

LOVE.

BY W. C. HICKS.

Love is greater than all. It is the sovereign remedy, the rich provision for all the troubles of suffering humanity. Do we love God for fear of punishment? No. For hope of reward? No. We love him because he first loved us and gave himself for us. Where this grand centre of all truth is lost sight of, the mind is darkened, the heart is hardened, and as a result, the Word of God is clouded, and we lose the enjoyment of our purest and holiest affections. The love of God in the heart produces light in the mind. We are exhorted to walk in the light, to fellowship one another; therefore the church is built on love to God and to each other. Love is of God; he imparts; we receive; and it is declared of him that "God is love."

To a sin-cursed, perishing world he says, He so loved you, that he gave his only-begotten Son for you. Accept the gift. He is the very embodiment of the Father's love. We pray you love him; he is worthy, and through his name we preach to you the gospel, the "good news" of reconciliation. A Father's love calls you; his everlasting arms are extended towards you; he cares for you; he would do you good; he is the Great Physician; his love is the balm that cures all ills. He is nigh thee. Call on him to-day; he will hear; he will save.

WISCONSIN CONF. REPORT.

The Conference was held with the church at Fairfield, commencing Dec. 21st, 1882. The following officers were chosen for the coming year: President, P. Hitchcock; Secretary, B. N. Meigs; Treasurer, A. M. Barber; Campmeeting Committee, T. J. Chase, Rock Co., Wm. S. Harseim, Sauk Co., David Deitzman, Iowa Co.; District Evangelists for Eastern District, P. Hitchcock; Southern, A. M. Barber; Southwestern, L. H. Cook; Northwestern, C. A. Slocum. Delegate to the Eastern Association, G. W. Turner, with privilege to choose a proxy; expenses to and from Chicago to be paid by Conference. An adjourned session of Conference to be held at the June Campmeeting; the next Annual Conference to be held with the church at Magnolia. Visiting brethren present, Eld. Geo. Button, of Broadhead.

During the entire meeting the best of feeling prevailed, and the best of all was the Lord was with us, and much good was done, and we trust many, if not all, went home strengthened, and more than ever determined to stand by this noble cause till the Master comes.

R. N. Meigs, Sec.

TIRED AND TRIED.

It seems, sometimes, that the "narrow way"
Is a rough and crooked road,
And we almost doubt the truth of the words,
"All things work together for good."

We wait for our ships to come from sea,
But, instead, the wrecks drift past;
And we bury our hopes with the dying years,
And think life's sunshine all past.

But the reason why things are as they are,
We shall know on "the other side";
And how God's plans for us were best,
We shall see—and be satisfied.

FROM BRO. J. M. STETLER.

Dear brethren and sisters in Christ of like precious faith, scattered abroad, I send you heavenly greeting in this another New Year. I have recently received a copy of the "History of the Advent Message," written by I. C. Wellcome, and while my dear daughter reads it to me (as I cannot see well enough to read for myself), I can truly say it is a rich feast to my soul. Get this work, dear brethren and sisters, young and old; read it, and if it does not revive and refresh your drooping spirits, I think it will be because there is some want of sympathy in your own heart towards the dear ones in Christ who have been the pioneers in God's hands in bringing these precious truths to our knowledge. While she reads to me page after page of this interesting history, my soul wells up with heavenly delight and joy, and the tears run down like rain. Only think of God's wonderful dealings with his people, and how that man of God, Bro. Wm. Miller, struggled against his convictions of duty to God and the world, but finally he yielded, and what wonderful revivals followed his labors elsewhere, and sinners were coverted by thousands. O that God would again pour out his Holy Spirit once more as he did then, and refresh his waiting church.

I am sure I never felt a greater love going out of my heart for the dear ones in Christ than I do now, especially for the good and the true, and the dear old veterans who in our earlier history unfurled the banner to the world, on which was inscribed, "Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him;" and have never furled it again, nor never will until he comes whose right it is to reign on David's throne. I would not have missed the experience I have had in this Advent movement for the last forty years for all the gold of California. O I do love the good and pure in heart, and the unselfish, for remember dear brethren and sisters, that no selfish one will ever enter the portals of that heavenly world. Then we must be willing to esteem others better than ourselves, and so feel that we are one in Christ Jesus.

I have never felt a greater sense of the divine presence in my soul than I have lately. I think I experience some of that holy joy that animated Stephen when he rehearsed God's wonderful dealings with his ancient people Israel, recorded in Acts 7. I have had wishes and desires of my own, but now I can pray with a sincere heart, "not my will, O Lord, but thine be done in me." I feel as I never have before a settled conviction that we are nearing our eternal home; and my soul cries out, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." Amen.

CHURCH SOCIABLES.

Managers of church sociables who are just now laying out the winter's campaign would do well to reflect upon a sad story which comes from London, Ontario. From time immemorial patch-work bed-quilts have had saintly associations around them; they have gathered the good women of many generations in their efforts to alleviate the sufferings of the poor and to aid the cause of the missionary. But the persistency of evil is shown by the fact that even these churchly traditions have not preserved the patch-work bed-quilt from the ways of iniquity. The ladies of the Episcopal church in London, Ontario, held a meeting to dispose of a certain bed-quilt which was to be awarded to the person who received the highest number of votes. Two of the church wardens nominated two young ladies as candidates, and when fifty dollars had been collected the polls were closed and the quilt awarded to one of the candidates; but on the discovery of a mistake in the count voting was resumed amid the most intense excitement. When ninety dollars had been received the other candidate was declared the winner; whereupon the warden supporting the first candidate laid down his gold watch and chain in favor of the first young lady, and the second warden put up his house and lot in favor of the second young lady. At this point the meeting broke up in confusion. The watch and chain, house and lot, and two hundred dollars have since been returned, and both wardens have resigned.—Christian Union.

[It would be quite vain to use the word shame in such a connection, for professed Christians who would do such things in the light of day, and carry them into the consecrated house of God, would not comprehend the meaning of the word.—J. C.]

"THE LAND OF SUNSHINE" AND "THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE."

BY H. PRATT.

Many invalids are wending their way from the ice-bound regions of the north to this home of the afflicted—Florida. We see the tickets drawn out for the conductor's punch by the yard, and readily know their destination, and an intimate acquaintance follows. The destination brings us into friendship, and to a certain extent fellowship. We are all seeking health, and "life more abundantly." Conversing with an eminent man from the Shenandoah Valley, Va., he says, "I would not care so much for life if I could escape the punishment." I replied, "Sir, there is not a man in all the south that enjoys life more than yourself, and not one that would give more for his life than you." "I would give all I had," said he. "Now Christ wants to give you an eternal life. Will you accept it?" In parting, he said, "I shall not forget your words." And so I thought and felt the Spirit had directed God's arrows to his heart. This paid the fare one way, if not the round trip.

If "the land of sunshine" had been my only attraction, I should have been much disappointed, for the weather for the few days I have been here has been chilly and cold; still the farmers plough, pick their cotton, and hoe their strawberries. I recollect of reading long ago of a spring somewhere up the St. John's River that the Indians called "the spring or fountain of life." I have made some inquiries, and no one seems to know of but one spring to which the Indians could have referred, but which is now called the "Silver Spring," about one hundred and twenty miles from Jacksonville, which is about eighty feet in diameter, and throws up a quantity of water sufficient to bear a steamboat upon its river. The spring is about forty feet deep, and a small coin thrown in can be distinctly seen upon the silvery sand of the bottom. What a fountain! What depths of crystal waters! Yet this is not the river of life, though its waters are as clear as crystal. Men live and die around this fount, but invalids never will spend the winter of sick days beside the river proceeding from the throne of God.

I am glad that so many invalids find rest and comfort of health regained in Florida; but to my brethren looking for the "blessed hope," let me say, there is a snare for you here. You buy your land, set out your orange groves, buy the wild orange grove and graft it, get you a good comfortable place for your family in the winter, and see whether you will talk Florida or the kingdom. Christ says, "Sell that ye have." Yes, brother, that is just what I am doing. I am selling out in the cold north, and purchasing in the south, to better provide comforts for my family. That is almost up to Saul's wisdom, "saved the fattest to sacrifice unto the Lord." Jesus does not say sell houses in the north, and buy vineyards in the south, but "sell and give alms." Does Jesus say it? Does he mean it? Will you do it? "It is a hard saying, who can bear it?"

I have been here but a few days, but I find an entire revolution in my digestive organs, though my catarrhal and bronchial difficulties seem quite unyielding as yet. Still I hope that ere long I will have the opportunity of baptizing many in the Jordan of Florida ere "the kingdom come," though a few months of time only remain.

STORY OF THE ROMAN GUARDS.

The story which the Roman guards were bribed to circulate, that the disciples came by night and stole the body of Jesus, was so absurd that it must have materially aided the spread of the truth that Jesus had really risen from the dead. Here are some of the absurdities: 1. That Roman soldiers should be found asleep, when Roman discipline was so strict. 2. That, even if they had fallen asleep, they should all sleep so soundly that the noise of the disciples removing the stone should not awaken them. 3. That they should acknowledge that they had been asleep, if such had been the case. 4. That they should be able to tell who stole the body of Jesus, if they had been asleep at the time. 5. Body snatchers do not usually leave things in such good order as was the case with the things in which Jesus had been buried. If the disciples had stolen the body, they would not have taken the trouble to fold up the grave-clothes. 6. It is absurd to suppose that the disciples, few in number and timid, should dare attempt to face the Roman guards, especially as they had no reason to suppose that the guards would be asleep. 7. The fact that the Jews did not apprehend the disciples, and punish them for the offense, shows that they did not believe that the body had been stolen. The tomb had been sealed, and the breaking of this would have been an additional crime, but the action of the chief priests belied their testimony.—Signs of the Times.

TO AGED CHRISTIANS.

My aged friends, permit me to counsel you not to give way to despondency and unprofitable repining at the course of past events. Trust in the Lord and encourage your hearts to hope in his mercy and faithfulness. Your afflictions may have been many and sore, and your present circumstances may be embarrassing and your prospects for the future gloomy. Providence may seem to have set you up as a mark for the arrows of adversity. Stroke upon stroke has been experienced. Billow after billow has gone over you and almost overwhelmed you. Truly the time has come when you can say, "My joys are gone." But though friends have been snatched from you or have proved unfaithful—though children, once your hope and joy, are numbered among the dead, or what is far worse, profligate or ungrateful; though your property has wasted away or your riches suddenly taken wings and flown like the eagle of heaven; though your bodily diseases and pain distress you, still trust in the divine promise, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." Though friends die, God forever liveth.—Ex.

To indulge anger, is to admit Satan as a guest; but to indulge malice, is to close the doors upon him as an inmate; in the first he finds a transient lodging; in the other a permanent home.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY: AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME

VOL. LVI. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1883. NO. 1

THE THREE WATCHWORDS.

To watch, to wait, to work;
Ah, me, the fiery sun,
The level, treeless, barren, dew-drained fields—
I would the work was done!

To watch, to work, to wait;
Ah, me! the tedious roar
Of wreck-strewn oceans over-roofed with clouds—
I would the watch was o'er!

To wait, to work, to watch;
Ah, me! thou absent Friend,
Comest thou quickly? So thou saidst. I would
The waiting had an end!

My soul, be still and strong!
Sight follows after faith,
In all advancement of the true and good;
He cometh as he saith.

My soul, be still and strong!
Here on thy Lord's estate
No place is useless, no experience vain—
Work on, watch on, and wait!

THE GREAT METALLIC IMAGE.

BY L. BOUTELL.

The book of Daniel is a wonderful book; full of miracles and God-given measurements of this world from the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, till the God of heaven should set up a kingdom that should never be destroyed.

The explanation of a dream forgotten, which none of the wisdom of this world could interpret or explain until the king's wrath was about to be executed in the destruction of all the wise men of Babylon, when Daniel interposed in their behalf, and assured the king that after sufficient time he would tell the dream and give the interpretation thereof. Presumptuous Daniel! Hebrew prognosticator! Foretelling events hidden from the wisest in all the Chaldean kingdom! Bringing to mind the king's forgotten dream! All exclaim, Impossible! But the task is before him. The dream or death! Is this possible? We shall see. Daniel is now seen wending his way to that isolated room, frequented by a few Hebrew captives, to offer sacrifice upon the altar of their God. Behold the firm confidence! the strong faith! the prayer-meeting! Get your ear so near as to hear. No formalism; but all in earnest. They call; they cry. No giving it up. It is their God, the true God, they are pleading with. The meeting is over. They retire to rest. "Then was the secret revealed to Daniel in a night vision." "Then Daniel blessed the God of heaven." Do you wonder? The lives of all the kingdom were saved. And that is not all; the dream and its interpretation foretells the history of all future generations.

This is a God-given image in answer to [illegible] prayer; and it is to "make known to the king what shall be in the latter days." [illegible] upon thy bed are these." "As for thee, O King, thy thoughts came into thy mind upon thy bed what should come to pass hereafter; and he that revealeth secrets maketh known to thee what shall come to pass." Here is the miraculous revelation from God himself of what should come to pass hereafter, for the special benefit of future generations. Hear it. "Thou, O king, sawest and behold a great image; this great image, whose brightness was excellent." The form thereof was terrible." This is a God-given symbol of Bible instruction, to give us, historically, the fulfillment of events transpiring through four universal monarchies that were to exist or "come to pass hereafter." These were to cover more than twenty-five hundred years from the days of king Nebuchadnezzar. Its brightness was excellent. It gave a vivid description of the downfall and passing away of the mighty kingdom of Babylon; and as clearly depicted the rise and downfall of those that were to follow, "till the stone cut out of the mountain without hands should smite the image upon the feet." "Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, the gold broken to pieces together and become like the chaff of the summer threshing-floors; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them. And the stone that smote the image became a great mountain and filled the whole earth." Dan. 2: 35. It was terrible because it gave the destruction of all earthly kingdoms.

Now this wonderful symbolic prophecy foretelling the history of these events has been so manifestly fulfilled before us that the world recognize its accuracy and concede its historic fulfillment in the past, as applied to these monarchies. "Thus the great God hath made known unto the king what shall come to pass hereafter; the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure." Dan. 2: 45. Now when God himself has spoken to this generation so miraculously, so plainly, and so minutely, and has made the purpose of his speaking so definite, to make known to the church, with eyes to see, so as to be the light of the world, can any be justified not to know where we are to-day in the fulfillment of prophecy? Everybody knows or ought to know, these monarchies are in the past, except that part covered by the horn power, and should know what is coming next. Shut our eyes as closely as we may, and say it is Adventism, and none but the poor believe and see it; yet God has spoken to this generation by these symbols in an unmistakable voice, coupled with other signs, making it certain that we are emphatically in the last days, so that all those watchmen that are on the watch tower will see the sword coming and warn the people; else the blood of the unwarned and unsaved will be found in their skirts. Terrible responsibility to meet! How applicable to the watchmen is Jer. 6: 17: "Also I have set watchmen over you, saying, Hearken to the sound of the trumpet. But they said we will not hearken. The sword is coming. The watchmen that do not warn ... and he die in his iniquity, his blood will I require at thy hand." [illegible] we hear the voice calling, "Watchman, what of the night?" How plain the response to him that has been attending to the voice of God in the fulfillment of his blessed Word, demonstrating it as by a pillar of fire, so that he can confidently say, "the morning cometh and also the night." "Cast not away your confidence, for it hath great recompense of reward." "Yet a little while and he that shall come will come and will not tarry." How the last mould is filling up! Startling scenes of thrilling interest are just before us. Yea, the moorings of Bible faith of the last century are drifting, and there seems to be a religious inquiry, what shall we believe? And infidelity takes the advantage, and would take from us the God of the Bible; the God of our fathers. But the Word of God abideth forever. And, abiding in it, we shall abide the perils, and abide forever. "Now the just shall live by faith," faith in Daniel's God; he that can give a forgotten dream and tell the interpretation thereof; he that can shut the mouths of lions; he that can stop the violence of fire. This is our God. Can we say it? Then away with your idols; away with the infidel's God, that is no wiser than he himself. Our trust shall be in the Bible God, that knows the end from the beginning, and has given us a reliable history from paradise lost to paradise restored; the home of the saints. Then let this God-given image speak to us, and by us to others, till the stone cut out of the mountain has done its terrible work in smiting and obliterating this whole image, and has driven it so far away that no place can be found for it; and the stone kingdom shall fill the whole earth. This our God can and will do. "There is no other God that can deliver after this sort."

A FEW THOUGHTS CONCERNING PSALM 90: 13.

BY M. BATCHELOR.

"Return, O Lord, how long, and let it repent thee concerning thy servants."

It is supposed that Moses wrote this psalm, and it looks to me as though he did it at the close of his work as leader of Israel. Only Caleb and Joshua were to live to go into Canaan of all those that came out of Egypt above the age of twenty years. Moses looked over the tribes of Israel to see all that came out of Egypt. Above the age of twenty there was Caleb, Joshua, himself, and perhaps Aaron. A whole generation had passed away. "All our days are passed away in thy wrath. We spend our years as a tale that is told. . . . Return, O Lord, how long? and let it repent thee concerning thy servants."

Moses knew that he was not to go into the land. Deut. 31: 2—"Thou shalt not go over this Jordan." Num. 20: 12. He went upon the mountain to see the land and then die. This is [illegible] we passed near forty [illegible] ing. We [illegible] to meet the Lord. Then we thought we should in a few days go into the kingdom, as several thought they should go into Canaan in a few days; but forty years passed away, and all above the age of twenty had gone but Caleb and Joshua, that came out of Egypt. So we have passed near forty years waiting, and but few are left of all that went out to meet the Lord. But all the generation shall not pass away until all is fulfilled. Luke 21: 32.

We have passed the signs. History has fulfilled prophecy. Time, as far as we can see, ends about here. Our prayer is now, Return, O Lord, change the course of thy providence toward us; bring deliverance by sending thy Son to take the throne, and put an end to these awful scenes of suffering and death. Yes, let the groans of earth's millions enter the ears of earth's Deliverer. Let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end. The Lord will not come until you will be glad to have him; and we shall have to live by our faith, and perhaps stand alone. I feel we have arrived at that point. Now our hope is in God alone, and in the speedy coming of our blessed Lord.

I anticipate much at the Conference at Worcester. We cannot have an old-fashioned meeting unless we have the old-fashioned faith in exercise. How few there are who are cut loose from the world and really expect to meet the Lord. Farewell. Yours waiting.

New Bedford, Mass.

HOLINESS.

BY B. PERHAM.

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." These words were spoken by one of the most lovely beings that ever walked on this earth; and of course every word is truth, and plainly implies that those who are polluted by sin and harbor sin in the heart will not see God. There is no way that the heart can be made pure only by a full surrender to God, that he may purify it by the power of the Holy Ghost. But is it necessary that we should be pure in heart in order to enter heaven? In Heb. 12: 14 we read "without holiness no man shall see the Lord." God said unto Abraham (Gen. 17: 1), "Walk before me, and be thou perfect." And our Saviour tells us in Matt. 5: 48, "Be ye perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect."

In order to be a true Christian, purity, as a principle, must be established in the heart. It should regulate all our actions, and it should lead us to avoid all the ridiculous and corrupt fashions of the present day, and all unholy actions by [illegible] profess to follow Christ. The influence of fashion seems to spoil everything that is good. As the declarations of our dear Saviour are so plain, his word will judge us at the last day. It becomes us to be on our guard every hour, and examine ourselves by the Word of God, to see if we are fully ready for the coming and kingdom of our dear Saviour.

Hartford, Ct.

THE picture of Christ's sufferings and death should melt every human heart to most loving tenderness. Christ's [illegible] personal. Every one looking at this picture can say in truth, "For me the Saviour [illegible]

SIGNS OF THE NEAR COMING OF CHRIST.

Dr. G. W. Weldon, Vicar of St. Saviour's, Chelsea, England, says: Prophecy fulfilled, is the history of the past. Unfulfilled, it is the history of the future. Each accomplishment of any one predicted event, is not only a guarantee for the accomplishment of future ones, but affords cumulative evidence of the truth of our Christian faith. A candid, humble, prayerful examination of prophecy, shows to us one of the most exalted and delightful views of the divine economy in the history of the world. When we think of God looking through the mists of countless ages, beholding generations yet unborn, depicting, as in a photograph, not only their actions, but their very words and thoughts, and making the conflicting plans and jarring passions of perverse human hearts fulfill to the letter the minutest details of his almighty will, we have a wonderful and magnificent illustration that the Most High ruleth in the kingdoms of men, and is Governor among the nations.

The most casual observer of events now transpiring in the world must be constrained to admit that we are living in an age of rapid transition. Events develop themselves now in a single year, which, a century ago, would not have appeared in twenty years. Just exactly as a stone rolling down the mountain-side increases in its velocity in proportion as it approaches the termination of its course, so, as each succeeding year glides on toward the consummation of our hopes in the coming of Christ, events develop themselves with increasing interest and progressive speed. And, therefore, as we look around us now in the present age, and take up our Bibles, and read of certain signs which are to transpire in the last days; if we can find such signs actually in existence around us, we are warranted in saying that we are in the last days, and are approaching the advent of our long-expected and absent Lord.

St. Paul says, in his epistle to Timothy, "In the last days perilous times shall come," and then he gives some of those signs. And Peter says: "In the last days scoffers shall come." Now our modern skeptics and scoffers are not coarse, but educated mockers—men of science—of whom it may be said, They have everything, except God in spirit and in truth. Many of them apparently possess amiability, kindliness of disposition, and gentleness of heart; and these very qualities in themselves tend to rivet the intellect, and fascinate the hearts of the youthful, and to make them think that this pretended science, so called, is going to displace the Word of God, and to usher in an era of something better and more attractive. St. Peter tells us that such scoffers shall be willingly ignorant [illegible] one of these modern scoffers, a noted physiologist, speaking of the Bible, and the account it gives of the creation of the world in Genesis, says: "These accounts of the creation of the world are fossil forms of thought, and, after a time they will take their place as the fossils in the history of our geological strata." Another noted scientific man in the department of chemistry denies altogether the efficacy of prayer. He says that prayer never painted a flower or photographed a sunbeam; and he calls the Mosaic record of creation "the beautiful myths of the Bible." Another conspicuous modern writer of this school calls the Bible a fairy tale.

Now here are three representatives of the world's modern philosophers (although falsely so called) who are "willingly ignorant that God in the beginning made the heavens and the earth, and without him was not any thing made that was made." The dismal infidelity of such so-called learned men of science is one of the signs of the last days, in fulfillment of the scoffers predicted by Peter. Another—the author of a well-known work—in giving an account of the world, how it came into existence, writes as follows: "The air was black, night eternal illumined only by lightning or volcanoes, the earth unconscious of the sun's existence. But the crust thickens, the atmosphere brightens, and the sun's rays penetrated to the earth." And thus he accounts for the origin of our globe.

And, as regards mankind, he says these strange words: "The ancestors of man were dots of animated jelly." He stigmatizes prayer as folly, and calls belief in the resurrection a "sweet, fallacious hope of a barbarous and poetic age!—illusions still cherished for mankind while yet in its romantic youth." But he adds—and these are words that probably find their desponding echo in the [illegible] to believe it; the shortness of life would comfort us, and we should welcome death. But we do not believe it, and so we cling to our tortured lives, dreading the dark nothingness, and dreading the dispersal of our elements into ever unconscious space." Oh! how different from St. Paul's joyful assurance, "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle be dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens;" and, "If in this life only, we have hope in Chr[ist, we are of all men] most miserable." Th[illegible] is stigma[tized] ... version o[illegible]

But these [illegible] who skeptically [illegible] ecies of the [Bible] [illegible] selves prophets of things to [illegible] nowhere revealed except in their [illegible] inations. One of them, in his philosopher[illegible] speaks thus [illegible] "We are going to have great inventions in the future—motive force to take the place of steam; aerial locomotion to transport labor at a trifling [illegible] of most from [illegible] by a chemical process. Food [illegible] will then be cheap, and our enlightened posterity will look back upon us just as we look back upon savages. Poetry and fine arts will take the place of religion. Science will transform our bodies into something wonderful. Disease being extirpated, the secret of immortality will be discovered. Man will be perfect, but even then no nearer to the First Cause, the inscrutable mystery, God." Here we have the dreams of a scientific, or deistical, skeptic, who would shut Christ out of the world which he created, and reach an imaginary state of perfection by human discoveries and inventions. But, in opposition to such dreams, we know that nothing but the personal advent of Christ will bring the earth to the state of millennial perfection and Edenic bliss which, as restored, it is destined to [illegible]

As the en[illegible] which, we must expect wickedness [illegible] in the disease of consumption, in proportion as the victim approaches the grave, the body becomes more and more the seat of the disease, until, at last, it sinks a prey to the fell destroyer; so we, may expect that, as time advances, the various forms of iniquity and developments of evil will appear in an intensified and aggravated degree. The history of the antediluvian world will repeat itself in these last days. "As it was in the days of Noah, even so shall it be in the days of the Son of man." St. Paul says there will be in the last days some "having the form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." These are the modern Pharisees and superstitious formalists, who equally with the skeptical Sadducees flourish like a green bay tree in these latter times. They may be seen on Sunday mornings at fashionable churches, acknowledging, in the general confession, that they are miserable sinners, and have gone astray like lost sheep, and in the afternoon promenading at the Zoo, arrayed in purple and fine linen, with every outward adornment of wealth and luxury; and on week days attending performances at the theatre or opera, or dancing polkas and waltzes in brilliant ball rooms.

We find Romanism and ritualism putting forth their seductive attractions to deceive, if possible, the very elect; and society for most part becoming more and more worldly, with superabounding luxury, and extravagance, and lavish display, colossal fortunes, and idolatry of life. These, with other things too numerous to particularize, strangely coincide with St. Paul's prediction: "In the last days perilous times (shall come); for men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, incontinent," etc., "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." 2 Tim. 3: 1-5. [illegible] of the final crisis of this dispensation. We have much reason to believe that the six thousand years from the creation of man are very near their termination, and that we are on the eve of the appearance of our Saviour Jesus Christ, to establish the glorious fifth monarchy predicted by the prophets. Dan. 7: 9-14.—Signs of the Times.

PATIENCE.

BY B. JOHNSON.

This grace is enjoined on the Christian perhaps as strongly and as earnestly as any grace in the Scriptures; yet it seems to be sadly neglected by our best preachers and teachers. Yet of what vital importance it is! It embraces the true spirit of Christianity. The result of impatience is strife, divisions, sedition, and death. It makes trouble in families, neighborhoods, towns, States, and nations. Wherever found it is source of trouble. We are living in a time of impatience; men and women, impatient of constancy, get divorced and seek other mates; children, impatient of restraint, rebel to their own destruction. Professed Christians, also, impatient of the restraints of the gospel, run after seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, following the imaginations of their own will. The apostle knew well the importance of patience when he said, "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations, knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing. James 1: 2-4. Hear the apostle Paul in Rom. 5: 3-5; . . . "We glory in tribulations also, knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope; and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts [illegible]." All this through patience. The inspired apostle says, God will render eternal life to them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality." Patient continuance in the things of God insures success against bad temper, and also against fretful dispositions, which, if a man allow, will soon eat out all his spirituality and power, for the Spirit of God will be withdrawn.

Patience insures success in prayer. We too often ask God for what we think we need, and if our heavenly Father does not at once bestow upon us the blessing we request, we cease to pray for it, and often lose the blessing which God was more than willing to bestow if we had patiently continued to pray. Please read our Lord's parable to the end that men ought always to pray and not faint. Luke 18: 1-8. My brethren, if [illegible] a request which we are satisfied our [heavenly] Father is wishing to bestow, such [as] his Spirit, or the salvation [of our] enemies, or anything that [is] according to his Word, patiently continue [illegible] the Lord and he will hear. [We] have some illustrious examples of this patient continuance in prayer. The first we [illegible] our blessed Saviour. He [illegible] Matt. 26: 36-44; Luke 22: 44.

"And being in an agony, he prayed more earnestly; and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground." Then Elijah prayed on the top of Mt. Carmel, and sent his servant seven times to look toward the sea before he perceived any signs of rain. Compare 1 Kings 18: 42-44 with James 5: 17-18. Other cases might be cited where the Bible saints patiently continued in prayer and wrestling with God as did Jacob. Go thou and do likewise.

ADOPTION AND BIRTH.

BY S. M. ANDREWS.

Humanity is divided into two families; the children of God and the children of the devil. See 1 John 3: 10; Matt. 13: 38; Rom. 9: 8 What makes people the children of the devil? Jesus says to the Jews, "Ye are of your father the devil, and his works ye will do." Having in the heart a will to do the works of the devil makes one his child. John says "whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of (the family of) God."

How can the members of one family become members of the other? By adoption, or a new birth, as taught in Scripture. When does adoption, or new birth, take place? Some say only at the resurrection, and quote the following Scripture to prove it: "Waiting for the adoption (to wit) the redemption of our body." Those holding this view cannot avoid the conclusion that none are actually the children of God here, but have only the prospect of becoming children at the resurrection. It is said we are only called the children of God.

Man is represented in Scripture as having an inner man. The hidden man of the heart, which Peter calls a meek and quiet spirit. Paul says this man needs to be strengthened. Eph. 3: 16. It also needs renewing day by day. 2 Cor. 4: 6. Paul speaks of renewing in Eph. 4: 23 on this wise: "Renewed in the spirit of your mind." This inner man cannot be an immortal soul, because it needs strengthening and renewing. It can only be the man's will (or spirit) personified; and when this will is to do the works of the devil, it is called the old man; and when the will is changed, and is bent on doing the works of righteousness, it is called the new man. Conversion does not change the outer or physical man. He sickens and dies the same as before conversion; but it does change the inner or spiritual nature of a man radically; and a man having this change has had the inner man or spiritual man adopted or born into the family of God. See Rom. 8: 15. Ye have received the spirit of (spiritual) adoption, whereby ye cry, Abba, Father." Ye are God's spiritual children, and God is your spiritual Father. Read Heb. 12: 9 and its connections.

To show that we are now actually God's spiritual children, we call your attention to the following scriptures on the point. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God." 1 John 3: 2. "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God." Rom. 8: 16. "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." Gal. 3: 26. "And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba Father." Gal. 4: 6. "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." And without the spiritual adoption or birth ye are none of his family, but belong to the family of Satan.

Conversion does not redeem the outer or physical man from the effect of sin, but it does redeem the inner man (the nature, spirit or will, personified) from all iniquity. See Titus 2: 14. When will the physical or outer man receive the new (spiritual) birth or adoption? At the resurrection. Then will be the adoption, to wit the redemption of our body; then we cannot sin because there remains no seed of sin in the moral or physical nature.

Beloved reader, God invites all to partake of the Spirit here, by which we are made conscious that we are sealed his children. After ye believe, ye are sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise. Then you can understandingly pray the Lord's Prayer, "Our Father which art in heaven."

Biddeford, Me.

SEPARATION FROM THE WORLD.

Salvation is full of grace. Yet these things are required: "Let him that nameth the name of Christ depart from all iniquity." "Whosoever would be my disciple, let him take up his cross, deny himself daily, and follow me." "Ye cannot," says our Lord, "serve God and mammon." Shrink not from the pain these sacrifices must cost. It is not so great as many fancy. The joy of the Lord is his people's strength. Love has so swallowed up all sense of pain, that men took joyfully the spoiling of their goods, and martyrs went to the burning stake with beaming countenances, and sang their death song amid the roaring flames. Let us by faith rise above the world, and it will shrink into littleness and insignificance compared with Christ.

Sometime ago two aeronauts, hanging in mid-air, looked down to the earth from their baloon, and wondered to see how small great things had grown. Ample fields had contracted into small patches; the lake was no larger than a small looking-glass; the broad river with ships floating on its bosom seemed like a silver thread; the wide-spread city was reduced to the dimensions of a village; the long, rapid, flying train appeared but a black caterpillar slowly creeping over the surface of the ground. And such changes the world undergoes to the eyes of him who rises to hold communion with God, and anticipating the joy of heaven, lives above [illegible] and ever joyful to part with all for Christ—"this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."—Thomas Guthrie.

THE VISION OF HABAKKUK.

BY WM. [illegible]

Habakkuk introduces his vision by [illegible] "The burden which Habakkuk the [prophet] did see;" and so what he saw was hi[s] [illegible] He then gives an introductory to [illegible] saw, and says, "Behold ye among [the heathen], then, and regard, and wonder marv[elously]: for I will work a work in your d[ays which] ye will not believe though it be t[old you]. For, lo, I raise up the Chaldeans, t[hat bitter] and hasty nation; which shall mar[ch through] the breadth of the land to posse[ss the dwell]ing places which are not theirs. [They are] terrible and dreadful: their ju[dgment and] their dignity shall proceed of t[hemselves]. Their horses also are more swi[ft than the] leopards, and are more fierce tha[n the even]ing wolves; and their horsemen sh[all spread] themselves, and their horsemen s[hall come] from far; they shall fly as the [eagle that] hasteth to eat." Chap. 1: 5-8.

The first invasion of Judea aft[er] ... in the eighth year of the reign of [illegible] when Nebuchadnezzar came u[p against] him, "and Jehoiakim became h[is servant] three years;" and then rebelled, [and Neb]uchadnezzar came up again, and [illegible] and put him to death, and placed [illegible] upon the throne. 2 Kings 24: [illegible] Josephus' Antiquities, Book 10, [illegible] Sec. 1. But after Jehoiachin ha[d reigned] "three months and ten days," he w[as taken] and with many others carried off [illegible] 2 Chron. 36: 9; and Matt. 1: 12. [In] this captivity Habakkuk refers as [illegible] "They shall come all for violence: t[heir faces] shall sup up as the east wind, and t[hey shall] gather the captivity as the sand. [And they] shall scoff at the kings, and the prin[ces shall] be a scorn unto them: they shall [deride] every stronghold; for they shall he[ap dust] and take it."

Thus we find that the vision of H[abakkuk] begins with the supremacy of Nebuc[hadnez]zar, just where Daniel's vision of Ne[buchad]nezzar's dream begins. And it [illegible] from thence down to the end of t[illegible] Habakkuk says, in continuation, [chap. 1:] 12, "O LORD, thou hast ordained [them for] judgment: and, O mighty God, th[ou hast] established them for correction." [This] judgment is chronologically stated [by Jere]miah as follows: "And it shall [come to] pass, when seventy years are accom[plished], that I will punish the king of Baby[lon, and] that nation, saith the Lord, for their [iniquity], and the land of the Chaldeans, a[nd will] make it perpetual desolations." [Jer.] 25: 12. Thus their judgment, seen [in vis]ion by Habakkuk, to be visited on th[e Chal]deans, extends down to the end o[f time], when the stone cut out of the [mountain] without hands smites the image on t[he feet], when the clay, the iron, the brass, [the silver] and the gold of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, is broken to pieces togeth[er and] become like the chaff of the summer [thresh]ing-floors, and the wind carries them [away], and no place is found for them. [We] conclude that Habakkuk's vision is [illegible] out, and made plain by the prophet[s]. Compare Hab. 2: 3, with Jer. 25: [illegible] Dan. 8: 14; 12: 11-13. Amen.

WONDERFUL LOVE.

BY E. F. [illegible]

How strikingly wonderful is the [experi]ence of every true child of God! I[t is in]expressibly and infinitely unfathom[able], the love and sympathy of those [of like] precious faith"—those who have been [made] one by the immersion of the Spirit [illegible] oneness of the Spirit is where the u[nion of] all true believers begins; and it end[s when] this Holy Spirit is withdrawn. "If a[ny man] have not the Spirit of Christ, he is [none of] his." How many in these days of s[ectarian] and craft mistake "a name to live" fo[r the] love of God shed abroad in the hear[t by the] Holy Spirit which is given unto us. [illegible] the true children of God are born not [of flesh], not by blood, but by the Spirit o[f God] dwelling in the heart. "For if Christ [be in] you, the body is dead"; not is dying, but "IS DEAD." Christ is the hope [of the] Christian; and to be a Christian Chri[st must] be "formed in you the hope of glory."

There is a vast difference between [union] of name and union of Spirit. If we [have] the one Spirit, then we will, yea, [we are] one; "for the Spirit is one." The[re is no] schism in the body of Christ. The[re may] be schisms in man-made bodies, bu[t Christ] has but one body, and all who are b[aptized] by one Spirit into one body remai[n mem]bers of the body of Christ while the[y have] the Holy Spirit in their hearts. Th[e Holy] Spirit is the vicegerent of God [and] Christ "the Son of the living God." [He] dwells in us by his Spirit. Some [illegible] do not retain this Spirit long after [illegible] sion. "Grieve not the Holy Spirit [of God, by] which ye are sealed unto the day of r[edemp]tion." This Holy Spirit holds every [mem]ber in living union with Christ the [head of] the church. And being united to [illegible] we are brought in sweet communi[on with] God our heavenly Father; and me[illegible] Holy Spirit holds in sacred union an[d com]munion every member of the body of [Christ]. God will give them their place as it p[leases] him.

Some are only members by profes[sion], dead branches, which bear no fruit [to the] glory of God; "eye servers," dress-p[arade] Christians. Such have such deep lo[ve for] the dear brethren and the "blessed [illegible] that they keep away, only when it [suits] self and selfish ends. Let a man or w[oman] get the Holy Spirit in the heart, and [they] will not have to flatter them into the [church] like a balky horse. They will share [and] bear their part of the burden. They [will] come to every prayer and public servi[ce] [illegible] upon God, filled with the Spirit [illegible] will show everywhere that they have [passed] from death into life, because they love [the] brethren. This love will be manifested [in eve]ry act and word.

We ...y this not to charge the pulpit with a ...sign to misrepresent the case, but for the ...rpose of vindicating the gospel's power to ...ave communities from the demoralizing ...sults of easy and frequent divorces.

It is a fact that while the pure gospel will raise the moral standard in any community, a diluted and corrupted gospel will as certainly demoralize a community, and introduce strife in families and war between nations. The proof of the last statement is found not only in the Bible but in the history of every nation where a corrupted gospel has been received. It is a very alarming fact that while the statistics of the moral department in New England show a very sad increase of crime, it is also true that the standard of theology and of Christian character is also radically changing. It is very obvious from the nature of the case and all the history of the past that the changes of religious beliefs and ritualistic habits which have been experienced in New England for the last fifty years, have resulted in a sad corruption of the gospel and a wide departure from the former spirituality and consecration of the professed Christian church. This dark picture represents the most thoroughly Christianized part of our country; but the truth of the Bible, connected with these circumstances, now being attacked by infidels and false-hearted professors, to prove that the true gospel of Christ has failed to elevate society, should be met with sound arguments to show that any religious standard which corrupts society is a false gospel.

The gospel of Christ is true, and teaches that "in the last days" "many shall depart from the faith (the faith that saves from domestic strife), giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." This scripture is being fulfilled before our eyes, and expresses the source of the difficulty causing this alarming movement of the moral barometer, which indicates the approach of a fearful storm of infidelity and wickedness. RESURRECTION OF CHRIST.

Being overtaxed this week with Revival Meetings every night, at the Boston church, in addition to our daily office work, we substitute for our usual Editorial the following on the resurrection of Christ, by C. H. Spurgeon. E. A. S.

CHRIST'S RESURRECTION.

"But now is Christ risen from the dead."—1 Cor. 15: 20.

The fact of Christ's resurrection is exceedingly well attested. It was needful that it should be beyond dispute, since it lies at the very basis of our holy faith. It is consoling to think that it is so; for thus our foundation standeth most secure. Our Lord was careful to show himself after his resurrection to those who, having known him before his decease, would be able unflinchingly to answer for his identity.

Our Lord, to put the matter beyond controversy, took care to appear many times, and to numerous companies. Our apostle gives a summary of these appearances which had most fully come under his own notice: "He was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve; after that, he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once; of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep. After that he was seen of James; then of the apostles. And last of all he was seen of me also, as of one born out of due time."

From the evangelists' reports we are led to believe that Christ appeared no less than twelve times to his disciples; for some of these instances which the apostle Paul mentions under one head may include two or three appearances, [illegible] "of the twelve" may denote his two visits to the apostles; for you remember he first appeared to them when Thomas was absent, and afterward when Thomas was present. Isaac Ambrose gives a summary of these appearances to this effect. He showed himself to Mary Magdalene apart, then to all the Marys; next to Simon Peter alone, afterwards to the two disciples journeying to Emmaus; to the ten apostles when the doors were shut; to all the disciples when Thomas was with them; to Peter, John and others while fishing in the lake of Tiberias; to five hundred brethren at once; to James, the Lord's brother; to the eleven disciples in Galilee; to all the apostles and disciples at Olivet before his ascension; and lastly, to the apostle Paul on the road to Damascus. There may even have been more than these, for we have no proof that all his appearances are on record. Enough, however, we have, and more would answer no useful end.

So clear is the evidence of Christ's resurrection, that when Gilbert West—a celebrated infidel—selected this subject as the point of attack, sitting down to weigh the evidence and to digest the whole matter, although filled with prejudice, he was so startled with the abundant witness to the truth of this fact, that he expressed himself a convert, and has left as a heritage to the church a most valuable treatise, entitled "Observations on the Resurrection of Christ." He went to the subject as though he had been a lawyer examining the pros and cons of any matter in dispute; and this, which is the fundamental doctrine of our faith, seemed to him so exceedingly clear that he renounced his unbelief, and became a professor of Christianity.

Does it not strike you that very many events of the greatest importance recorded in history, and commonly believed, could not in the nature of things have been witnessed by one-tenth as many as the resurrection of Christ? The signing of famous treaties affecting nations—the birth of princes—the remarks of cabinet ministers—the projects of conspirators and the deeds of assassins—any and all of these have been made turning points in history, and are never questioned as facts, and yet but few could have been present to witness them. The most recent political event, I venture to assert, had not nearly so many witnesses as the resurrection of Christ; and that if it came to a matter of dispute, it would be far easier to prove that Christ is risen than to prove that the Earl of Beaconsfield is dead; if it came to the counting of the witnesses who saw the Earl die, and could attest the identity of the body now resting in the vault with that which they saw fever-stricken in the bed-chamber, it strikes me they would turn out to be far fewer than those who saw the Lord after he had risen, and were persuaded that it was Jesus of Nazareth who was crucified, and had burst the bonds of death.

If this fact is to be doubted, there is an end to all witness, and we may say deliberately what David once said in haste, "All men are liars;" and from this day forth every man must become so sceptical of his neighbor that he will never believe anything which he has not himself seen; the next step will be to doubt the evidence of his own senses; to what further follies men may then rush, I will not venture to predict. I believe that the very best attested fact in history is the resurrection of Christ. Historical doubts concerning the existence of Napoleon Bonaparte, or the stabbing of Julius Cæsar, or the Norman Conquest, would be quite as reasonable as doubts concerning the resurrection of the Lord Jesus. None of these matters have such witnesses as those who testify of him—witnesses who were manifestly truthful since they suffered for their testimony, and most of them died ignominious and painful deaths as the result of their belief. We have far more and better evidence for this fact than for anything else which is written in history, either sacred or profane. Oh! how should we rejoice, we who hang our salvation wholly upon Christ, that beyond a doubt it is established that "Now is Christ risen from the dead."

CORRECTION.

In our last issue we made Brother A. P. Moore say that Bro. Miles Grant had been assisting him in revival meetings; but what he did say was that Bro. M. L. Miles had been assisting him. E. A. S.

TRUST IN GOD.

Like everything else, the lesson on trust may be misapprehended and perverted. That old maxim so often [illegible] at as self contradictory, "Trust in God, but keep your powder dry," [illegible] principle after all; meaning, [illegible] all you can yourself, and trust God [illegible] the balance. I once knew a man who carried this principle of trust so far, that though he was dependent on daily labor for the support of his family, he would not look for work, but trusted that God would send men after him to invite him to work. This, of course, brought him to want. Many act on a similar principle. As well might we trust God to plant our corn for us while we are in health and able to do it ourselves; or to dig our potatoes for us. We have no right to trust God for what we can do for ourselves. David's advice was: "Trust in the Lord, and do good"; that is, work while we trust. Paul, while in health, sometimes engaged in manual labor, but kept preaching the gospel, and never once cast a wishful eye to the more lucrative position of his fellows, as lawyers, who had been brought up at the feet of Gamaliel with him. If God's cause brings hardships, still work and trust. Popular fare is seldom coupled with an unpopular cause, and God's cause has always been unpopular. It is not best to treat God as though we were our own masters, and will consent to work for him if he will come to our terms; rather let us be his servants, and work and trust. W. S.

THE REASON WHY.

"If the prophetic numbers are ever to be understood, why did not the apostles explain them?" This question is sometimes propounded with an air of triumph, as though it had invalidated all efforts to explain this branch of prophecy. Let us see. If the metallic image is ever to be understood, why did not the apostles explain it? But they did not. Again; if the four beasts are ever to be understood, why did not the apostles explain them? But they did not. Sometimes the government sends a ship to [illegible] opened till reaching certain points of latitude; then the seal is removed, and the instruction comprehended. So in the prophetic programme certain things were sealed up till the time of the end; and the church has been carrying sealed instructions for centuries in the past; but having reached the latitude when "knowledge should be increased"; implying a gradual unfolding; prophetic truth is coming more and more to be comprehended; and a few discordant notes concerning the details, is no proof that it ought to be discarded as a worthless and dangerous article. Prophecy, like other features of truth, may be turned into a speculative channel by its mistaken friends; but should it therefore be abandoned? No; prophecy is God's light to the church, and must be allowed to shine. W. S.

DANIEL'S 2300 DAYS.

Wm. Sheldon: Dear Sir,—Will you please explain, through the columns of the Crisis, the meaning of Dan. 8: 14 as generally understood by Advent Christians; i. e., concerning the 2300 days, their commencement and end, dates, etc.? Also what was meant by sanctuary and the cleansing, etc.? Explain the above, and you will greatly oblige

Yours very truly, N. W. CARPENTER.

REPLY.

1. While Adventists are generally agreed that the 2300 days are prophetic, they are not so generally agreed as to the time of their commencement and termination.

2. Our own view is, that if they are connected with the 70 weeks, they must have started when Nehemiah began to fortify Jerusalem, in the 20th of Artaxerxes, B. C. 418–17; and that if they are not connected they could not have commenced later than the 32nd of Artaxerxes, at which time the Jewish sacrifice was fully restored, if not before; and the 2300 days measure this restored [illegible] desolation that followed its termination, the aggregate measure [illegible] being 2300 days, as argued in our Chronology.

3. The sanctuary is evidently the place where the shekinah glory once manifested the Divine presence among men. It will return when Christ comes and the curse is removed. W. S.

RESTORING THE SICK.

"The prayer of faith shall save the sick." Faith on the part of the infirm one was required in the day of miracles, even when Christ and his apostles were officiating. When Jesus was on earth blind men importuned him to heal them: "And Jesus saith unto them, Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea, Lord. Then touched he their eyes, saying, According to your faith be it unto you." Matt. 9: 28, 29. When Paul met the impotent man at Lystra, he did not heal him till he perceived that he had faith to be healed. Acts 14: 9. At another [illegible] "Trophimus have I left [illegible]" 2 Tim. 4: 20. Why did he not heal him? Probably because Trophimus had not [illegible] to be healed." Now [illegible] good people [illegible] exercise this faith else they would never die. James also required faith on the part of the sick person, by saying: "Let him call for the elders of the church" [illegible] an experiment [illegible] have faith, but if [illegible] not, the apostle would leave him unhealed. Nor can greater results be expected in modern times. "The prayer of faith" must be preceded by the faith of the invalid. W. S.

A STARTLING ANNOUNCEMENT.

Professor E. Stone Wiggins, L. L. D., Astronomer of the Canadian Finance Department, is reported as having sent a warning of an approaching disastrous storm to President Arthur. He says, "No vessel, whatever her dimensions, will be safe out of harbor, and none of small tonnage can hope to survive the tidal wave and fury of this tempest. As the wind will blow from the north-east, the New England States will also suffer severely from the wind and floods. No point outside of harbor, in the whole area of the Atlantic, especially north of the equator, will be a place of safety, for this will be pre-eminently the greatest storm that has visited this continent since the days of your illustrious first president. In view of this event, therefore, I take the liberty of representing to your excellency the advisability of ordering all United States ships into safe harbor, not later than the 5th of March till this storm be passed." Professor Wiggins also predicts that this storm will strike the Gulf of Mexico the 9th of March, 1883, and will pass over the entire continent in a north-westerly direction.

Although weather prophets are sometimes erroneous in their statements, yet it is advisable to properly consider their statements. The time was, and now is, when with some goose-bones and hog's milts were the sure indicators of mild and severe seasons. But science is gradually doing away with superstition, as the law of cause and effect is becoming more generally understood. Mr. Vennor once predicted that on the 15th of Oct., 1880, there would be a heavy fall of snow. People laughed at his prediction; but on the day designated, a heavy snow storm prevailed in many Western States and reached as far east as Rochester, N. Y. True, Mr. Vennor's prognostications are sometimes false, but that does not prove that there is no soundness in his methods. It only shows that he does not yet fully understand all the causes and various combinations of weather changes, but that so far as he does understand them, he is correct in his deductions. The same has always been true regarding the developments of steam and electricity.

While Prof. Wiggins may not be correct in his conclusion pertaining to this coming storm, yet undoubtedly he has good scientific reasons for believing as he does. But of one prediction we are very positive regarding its fulfillment about these times. When the Great Royal Astronomer of Heaven was here, he said, "And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars: and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things that are coming on the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory."

What course President Arthur will take regarding the warning and advice sent to him we cannot say, but probably he will take no notice of it. However, if the prediction should prove itself true, he would then rue [illegible] coming. Our [illegible] advised us regarding it. If we believe his statements and prepare ourselves, we shall escape its fury. But whoever neglects to make proper arrangements, will be overwhelmed in its billows. Instead of howling winds, falling rain, and dashing waves, it will be a trembling and upheaving earth, with hissing, crackling, and roaring flames of fire, around, above and beneath. Let us arrange to enter into an eternal harbor for safety. R. H. B.

ERROR.

BY O. R. FASSETT.

The Advocate and Guardian is an excellent journal in many particulars, and the object of its publication most worthy, specially in advocating "whatsoever things are pure, lovely, and of good report." But we are grieved at its doctrine, persistently held forth, respecting a future life, which we regard neither pure, lovely, or of good report. It is found in the Scriptures, it is true; but it is of bad origin. Gen. 3: 4.

Noticing the death of an estimable lady, and of earnest mission zeal, in the State of California, who deceased at the early age of thirty-seven years, the Guardian remarks: "She was fit for heaven and was wanted there. We weep, but heaven is richer for the transfer. A mourning church, bereaved friends, and our band all weep over her departure." Is it true that in order to enter heaven saints must die? What if "sin" had not "entered into the world, and death by sin," would any have ever gone to heaven? Some seem to think that death is the only way to reach heaven, and they sing:

"Death is the gate to endless joys."

If this be so, it is well that Adam sinned, and that "death is passed upon all men, in whom all have sinned"; and there is hope of all men, save Enoch and Elijah who never, as yet, have passed through that wide gate! They are the unfortunate of our race. Is it true as satan said, "Ye shall not surely die," or did God affirm the truth against all possible negation, "Thou shalt surely die"? Which statement was true, the affirmation or negation? Our Lord declared of the devil, "There is no truth in him. . . . He is a liar and the father of it." John 8: 44. This settles the question as to Gen. 3: 4. That decision cannot be reversed. Why weep and mourn for the dead if "heaven is richer for the transfer"? A California minister has it rightly—"We [illegible] when good [illegible] see them [illegible] in the [illegible] for the [illegible]—where [illegible] is one event to [illegible] the wicked . . . They [illegible] that they go to the dead" . . . [illegible] no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in sheol—hades—whither thou goest." Eccl. 9.

If "heaven is richer for the transfer of dead saints, why does not God transfer all his good and faithful saints as soon as possible, that [illegible] may enrich heaven with their ardent mission zeal [illegible] less zeal? Why have patriarchs, prophets, apostles, and thousands of the most faithful men of all time been confined to this field of labor "till a good old age"? What is most surprising is, that this esteemed Christian worker was, as we are told, "caught up to meet the Lord in the air."—"These words would persistently come as we think of this dear sister," adds the Guardian. Words used by Paul when writing concerning "the dead in Christ" who "shall rise first," and those alive at the personal coming of the Lord from heaven, who "shall be caught up together . . . in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air," when "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God."

These words are applied at the death of an individual! Is there any reasonable excuse for an enlightened Christian writer to so "wrest the Scriptures"? Error blazoned from Christian lips and by pen, appears the more hideous in form. "Her work on earth is done, and she has gone to her reward," we are gravely informed. Then she will not need to be called by "the voice of the Son of God" "at the last day," nor be rewarded when "the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels, to reward every man according to his work." Matt. 16: 27; John 5th and 6th chapters; Rev. 22: 12. Nor will she "be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." Lk. 14: 14. Her case will be an exception, if the doctrine of the Guardian be true. "She has passed through the portals of death into the heavenly city, the New Jerusalem, where God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away."

If all this is realized when a saint dies, what need of "a new heaven and a new earth" to succeed the present 'heavens and earth" after the final conflagration and dissolution? Or the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven" upon the new earth? Rev. 21: 1–7; 2 Pet. 3d ch. "Passed through the portals of death into the heavenly city." This is foreign language to the Bible. Where is it found, or the like of it? In a poem written by Longfellow, who claimed no special divine revelation, or his admirers for him, we read:

"There is no death! What seemeth so is transition.
This life of mortal breath
Is but the suburbs of this life elysian,
Whose portals we call death."

But for Christians the Bible is the creed, and Christ the only door. John 10: 1, 9. "Beware of seeming truths that grow on the roots of error."

OMENS.

The following is what the New York Independent, January 29th, 1883, says of the events this year:

"The year has opened with a series of terrible warnings of the fragmentariness of human life. The old year is uniformly dismissed without regret as wearisome and disappointing, if not downright unlucky. The new year is hailed with eager haste as one that may be destined to stand out in human memory as a brighter and happier period, in which the depressing influences of unforeseen calamities and economic disasters may be avoided. 1883, however, has dawned with leaden skies and portents of evil. In France the greatest republican has been stricken down, and his death has been followed [illegible] signs of political incapacity. On the Continent [illegible] devastation and misery in their train. From every quarter there are tidings of disaster. The hotel fire in Milwaukee, the circus catastrophe in Russia, the railway accident near Tehichipa Pass, the loss of two staunch ocean steamships, and numerous other disasters on sea and land, are not only appalling horrors, but omens of depression and gloom. The year is barely a month old, yet the cup of misfortunes seems brimming already. Men are already saying in their hearts: 'It will be a disagreeable year, if nothing worse!'"

Dark clouds are rising over this world that indicate the approach of a terrible storm upon the ungodly; but the time has arrived for the saints to lift up their heads, because their "redemption draweth nigh." Praise the Lord. M. G.

STRANGE TALK.

The following is reported, in the New York Independent, as a part of the sermon of Dr. Brown, the Jewish Rabbi, in New York, who preached the dedication sermon in a house the Jews have purchased, that was formerly occupied by the Methodists:

"The congregation," he said, "has taken a house that has been used by the Methodist Episcopal worshipers. Therefore, in business parlance, this is simply a reopening. The old firm consisted of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost. Now the partnership is dissolved. The Son and the Holy Ghost have stepped down and out, but the business still will be conducted by the Father, the old head of the firm, the one you always have trusted. The same goods will be offered for sale. We shall continue to deal in charity, brotherly love and all the virtues, and we appeal to all the old customers to continue their trade."

When the leaders of the Jews talk in this way, what better can be expected from those under their influence? M. G.

A CARD.

For reasons best known to myself, I have, after mature consideration and prayer, decided to sever my connection with the church in Chicago as its pastor, to take effect after the first Sunday in February. This step is entirely voluntary on my part, as I have the love, sympathy and prayers of all the members of the church, and they are loth to part with me; and to their praise I can say that our relationship as pastor and people has been most blessed. I became their pastor a year ago last November, and though our pastorate has been a short one, it has, thank God, been a good one. Our labors have been abundantly blest to the conversion of many souls to God, having enjoyed a continued revival spirit among us. It has also been a very profitable service to me. [illegible] sulted, mentally, spiritually [illegible]; the last, though not the least, has been abundant.

We part with the best of feelings, hoping and praying that it may be for their good, and for the furtherance of the gospel in Chicago. May the dear Lord send them a pastor who will be able to build them up in the most holy faith, keeping them in the bonds of peace, and be instrumental in the conversion of many souls, is the prayer of their retiring pastor, J. AUGUST SMITH.

P. S. I have not yet decided where to locate, or what to do. I desire to please the Lord in all things, to be led by his [illegible] and to preach his Word. J. A. S.

AN OLD NEW BOOK.

NOW READY.

The Treatise on Matthew 24th and 25th Chapters, by I. C. Wellcome, has had a wide sale (eight editions), and has given great satisfaction to thousands; has led hundreds into the faith of Christ's soon coming, from whom we have testimony. The plates were burned in a Boston fire. It was out of print. It was still called for, and as there are thousands who need it, we have enlarged, improved, and republished it in a better form. We have added new and important facts, more than enough to pay the cost of the book even to those who have had the former. Our Lord's last great prophecy of the history of the gospel dispensation, and of the signs to brethren of his coming, are of great importance, and should be carefully examined by all. This Treatise is sold by I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me., and Ozias Goodrich, Box 5140, Boston, Mass. Price postpaid, 30 cts.; four copies for $1.00.

THE CHURCHES IN MINNEAPOLIS.

The following letter, together with what has been previously said in the Crisis, will, we trust, make all plain in regard to the two Advent churches in Minneapolis. We have but one feeling and one desire in the matter, viz., that Bro. Bursell and his church and Dr. Mathewson and his church may be most grandly successful in their respective spheres of activity. The Crisis would on no account do either of them the slightest injustice. E. A. S.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 26, 1883.

DEAR "CRISIS":—From notices you have recently published, it is evident that there is a want of correct information respecting the Advent churches of this city. That there may be a clear understanding of the situation, I wish to say, there are, and have been for several years past, two regularly organized Advent churches in Minneapolis. We have what is known here [illegible] Street Advent Church," of [illegible] also the "Nicolet Avenue Advent Church," of which Elder D. Mathewson is now Pastor. Both of these churches are connected with the St. Paul District Conference, and are each in their respective places of worship holding up the light (respecting our soon coming King) in this rapidly growing city of the North West. C. T. WOODMAN.

AN ADMISSION.

BY L. C. MC. KINSTRY.

At the late session of our P. Q., Northern Vt. and Northern N. H. Conference, the pastor of the Free Baptist Church where our Conference was held, when making an address of fraternal greeting, said among other good things, "You [Adventists] would never have had an existence if the other churches had done as they should." Now we have always known this to be true. God would have these last-day truths preached, but the churches, although at first friendly, shut their doors against us, and we were forced out thus, by PROVIDENTIAL CIRCUMSTANCES, to declare truth which was suppressed by those who should have heartily co-operated in proclaiming the wondrous cry—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" We, therefore, have an existence because we were forced to have it; and it was only an admission which was due to truth, that we should "never have had an existence if the churches had done their duty by us"; and, as we have an existence thus as a people, we should be distinctive, and keep up our character as Adventists, and keep in the work of proclaiming the near return of our Lord.

A HUMBLE CONFESSION FROM HORACE M. YORK.

To the Christian People and the World:—I make this confession to you. Holding at one time, as many will know, a position in our heavenly Father's church, in an unguarded moment I fell from grace. In that fall I realize the disgrace and reproach I have brought upon the cause of Christ. The grief and pain that has been brought to my brethren and sisters' hearts never can be imagined. Wherein by this fall I have brought grief and pain into the hearts of my dear brethren and sisters I am very, very sorry, and humbly ask the forgiveness of all, which I hope will be as freely granted as I received from God through my blessed Jesus only yesterday. As I have returned to my dear Father once more, I feel in my heart to forgive all those who may have erred toward me in the past.

Trusting this acknowledgment is all that is required of me, I ask the earnest prayers of all the dear saints scattered abroad that I may be kept to the journey's end, and find a home with you all in that land where one will not be overcome by appetite.

Dear sinners, you may be permitted to read this. Let me say to you, Come to Christ for shelter. You will need him in the day of judgment. You need him even now. Then come.

Bible Banner and Christian please copy.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Bro. George R. Kramer writes:—"The Lord is wonderfully blessing 'The Church of the Blessed Hope' in Brooklyn (N. Y.). Congregations growing. Six baptized Sunday, Jan. 28th, and nine new members—same date—received into the church. Praise the Lord. Glory to Jesus."

Bro. C. E. Copp writes from Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 28th:—"I suppose the true soldiers of the Lord love to know how the battle is going along the line often. Well, it is going well here. There were over seventy-five in our little vestry at the regular prayer-meeting last Wednesday night. To be sure the pastor had been away ten days to the Worcester Conference, and more came out on that account to greet him probably; but aside from that there was nothing unusual to call them out. Young men and women are taking hold nobly. Every now and then in comes some wayward lamb, driven into the fold by bitter experiences outside. We mean to keep the door open invitingly. Four are to join the church next Sabbath. The pastor preached a stirring discourse this afternoon from Psa. 68: 13, 14—an uncommon but good text; read it—showing that the true church has ever been the reproached one, and will be the glorified one."

PASTORS AND PREACHERS.

We learn that Sister O. R. Fassett by heroic persistence and through great exposure to the intensely cold weather succeeded in reaching the Conference at Elk River in season to participate in its business and its religious services; and she is still there preaching in the Baptist Church by invitation of the pastor.

We understand that Bro. Geo. F. Haines, pastor of the church at Fairhaven, Mass., has been invited to the pastorate of the church in Chelsea, Mass.

Mrs. L. Darman writes from Newburgh Village, Me: "Please permit us through the Crisis to express our heartfelt thanks to the dear ones who have so kindly remembered us in our affliction. Husband is a little better, but still confined to the house. Your letters of good cheer have wonderfully refreshed him. I will reply to each separately, as desired, as soon as possibly convenient. I am very poorly myself, and of course have much care, as we are alone; but you have greatly lightened the weary load and the dark prospect, causing tears of gratitude with thanksgiving."

FROM MRS. FANNIE KATTMAN.

Dear Editors:—I feel it a pleasure as well as my duty to let you know how our Lord's work prospers here. He is doing his own work and in his own way. As we are only instruments in his hand, let us be always ready. We have been holding revival meetings for four weeks, and they still continue with increased interest. Our house is crowded every night; and last night there were so many rose for prayers that I could not count them. The people here are becoming more interested in Bible truth, and in the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ; and many have readily accepted the true Bible doctrine in spite of their ministers and priest. Our greatest opposition is from ministers, who say they are sent to preach; yet they have forgotten that our blessed Saviour warned his disciples, yet they preach it.

In our sailor work 188 have taken the pledge to abstain from drink, and have kept it since last October. Thank you again for your tracts and dear Crisis; all who read it want it again; and I am trying to make it go as far as possible. I send this because I see you get no other word from here, or near here, and thinking your readers might be pleased to hear from their sister in the Lord, and hoping they will not forget us in their prayers,—although we are strangers here; yet when Jesus comes, then we shall know as we are known.

"The Industrious Stone."—A very curious and almost ridiculous example of adjusting the Scriptures to the theory of converting the world by the "industrious" use of present agencies, is found in Rev. C. S. Robinson's late expositions of the Great Commission. He says: "We see the certainty of the world's conversion. The industrious 'stone' shall fill the whole earth." (Dan 2: 35.) Suddenly and tremendously "industrious" indeed will be that Mighty Stone which smites the image with a grinding blow, so that it is broken in pieces, and becomes like the chaff of the summer threshing-floors.—Rev. E. P. Marvin.

Obituaries.

Shaw. In Kobe, Japan, Nov. 22nd, 1883, of quick consumption, Sarah Lizzie Burnham, wife of Rev. W. H. Shaw, of the American Board of Foreign Missions.

She was born in Haverhill, Mass. Her mother died when she was five months old. She lived in Essex, Mass., in her earliest years, and in Braintree, Mass., with her aunt, Mrs. Wm. F. Locke. At the age of fifteen she began to teach school, and this was her occupation until her departure for China. She was married Aug. 4th, 1880, and the 19th of the same month left for North China by the way of San Francisco. She lived in Paoting Fu most of the time. She learned the language and taught [illegible] children the way of life. She was of a remarkably cheerful and happy disposition, and won hosts of friends. She was converted at an early age under the preaching of Dr. Storrs of Braintree, who took a deep interest in her. A son was born May 15th, 1882. Soon her health seemed to fail, and the physicians said a change of climate was needed. She had every care in the fine city of Kobe, but too late. As the time drew near, she made every arrangement with calmness, and her husband said she was the happiest sick person he ever saw. She left messages for her friends at home. A few hours before her death the babe was brought in, and she kissed it and waved her hand good-bye, and sank into unconsciousness, and died with a smile upon her face. The grief of her young husband was almost overpowering. The next day after the funeral he started with the babe on his long voyage to North China. Her age was twenty-five years. Her mother sleeps on the banks of the Merrimack, and she in a foreign land. But when the trumpet sounds what a meeting that will be!

ALBERT S. BURNHAM.

Deane. [illegible] Hamlin, Kansas (no date), Jennie Deane, aged twenty-seven years.

She was baptized into the Advent faith one year ago, and ever since, under many difficulties, has lived for Jesus. Her illness was short but severe. She talked of the white robe Jesus would give, and the marriage supper she should attend. A mother is deeply grieved at her departure, and many friends mourn her loss. Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth.

S. Mathews.

Baxter. Fell asleep in Jesus in Pomfret, Ct., Sept. 11, 1882, Joseph Baxter, aged eighty years. Also Nov. 25, 1882, Sophronia, wife of Joseph Baxter, in the eighty-second year of her age.

Bro. and Sister Baxter gave themselves to God at about the same time. Twenty-five years ago they became identified with those in Abington who "turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come." Our brother would often refer with pleasure to the former days, when living near the old tabernacle and chapel. Their home was a resting-place for the servants of God in their journeys through these parts. Brethren will no doubt remember that quiet home. Distance and the infirmities of age prevented their meeting much in the house of God after the erection of the new chapel; but they retained their hold on God as long as mind was given them. Our brother was very anxious to outlive his companion, as she was suffering from dementia, but fell asleep eleven weeks before her; yet God provided kind friends to do all mortals could for her comfort. They now rest together until the voice of the archangel shall call them to immortality and eternal life. Words of comfort were spoken at Sister Baxter's funeral by the pastor, Rev. A. C. Johnson. We were called to speak to the living when our brother was laid away. Only a little while and we will sing the new song.

H. Davis.

Smith. At Raymond, N. H., Oct. 14th, 1882, Sr. Betsey W. Smith, wife of the late J. Moody Smith of South Rochester, N. H., aged seventy-two years.

She subject of this notice was visiting a friend or relative at the time of her death, where she was taken sick and died of pneumonia. Her sickness was only of eight days duration. As soon as she was thought to be dangerously ill, her only surviving child (a married daughter, with whom she was living at South Rochester) was sent for, and arrived in due time to witness the death of her dear sainted mother. She suffered but little apparently, could speak audibly, and wished to get well, for she wanted to die at home. Christian brethren and sisters will miss her hospitality. Much might be said of her deeds of charity, but we forbear. Many knew her and her works. May God in his mercy sustain the lonely daughter, husband and grand-children, and bring them into the everlasting kingdom.

Mrs. J. M. Hackett.

Lowell. Fell asleep in Jesus near Eugene City Oregon, Dec. 22nd, 1882, of pulmonary consumption, my brother, E. D. Lowell, Sr., aged seventy-four years.

He was a skeptic until he heard Bro. P. W. Hough preach a few years ago at Burns, Wis. He then accepted the doctrines we advocate, but did not accept Jesus as his personal Saviour until about two months before his death. I was with him five weeks trying to alleviate his sufferings, which he bore with marked patience and Christian fortitude. By his exhortations to his friends he showed that he had passed from death unto life. He often spoke of Jesus' coming and the resurrection with joy, and longed for the day when death would be conquered and there would be nothing left but life and peace. He leaves a wife and one son here, and a son and daughter near Assyria, Barry Co., Mich.

S. C. Lowell.

Reynolds. In Exeter, R. I., Oct. 16th, 1882, at the residence of her son-in-law, Rev. E. B. Wood, Mrs. Hannah Reynolds, widow of Capt. Samuel Reynolds, aged eighty-eight years.

Dear grandma died of old age, after being confined to her bed for twelve weeks. She was, in her last sickness, the same as in health, ever kind, patient, and trusting in the Lord. Her many kind words and always cheerful manners will not soon depart from the memories of her children and grandchildren. Her funeral was attended from the Advent Chapel on Exeter Hill, by Rev. A. Durfee. We expect to meet grandma again by and by, where she will help swell the songs of the redeemed which she so well loved to hear.

P. P. W.

Lapham. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Logan, Mass., Jan. 31st, 1883, Allen [illegible] in hope of a resurrection unto eternal life when the Lord shall come.

E. McCulloch.

Married.

MOORE—DAVIS. In Worcester, Mass., Feb. 1st, 1883, by Eld. M. A. Potter, Mr. Horace S. Moore and Mrs. Lucy M. Davis, both of Worcester.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Oxford and Androscoggin Co. Conference met at East Stoneham, Me., Dec. 30, 1882. The election of officers resulted as follows: Jared Whitman, Pres.; Joshua Howard, Sec.; Heber Kimball, Treas.

Reports of preachers were mainly encouraging. A general drowsiness and lack of interest among the people in some places was considered a sure indication that we were in the last days, and we were exhorted to cling closer to Jesus, and closer to each other, with heads uplifted, believing that our redemption draweth nigh.

Jared Whitman, President.
Joshua Howard, Secretary.

SECULAR NEWS.

Out of 4400 burials which occurred in Paris last November 1207 were devoid of religious ceremony.

London, Jan. 29. The Times, commenting on the resignation of the French Ministry, says: "The news is of a most momentous character. Even its immediate consequences cannot be at once divined. The resignation of the Cabinet exhibits a catastrophe which threatens the political arrangements of the country and renders the substitution of a more powerful Ministry a matter of exceeding difficulty." The Times continues: "There can be no doubt the Government has found a clue. The crisis of the struggle over leaves the Government on the winning side."

A vigorous war against drunkenness has been begun at Copenhagen. The public houses are to be reduced from 1350 to 300. Sales to minors or to intoxicated persons are forbidden, and there is a unique provision in the law which directs that a drunken person shall be conveyed to his own dwelling in a covered carriage at the expense of the landlord at whose house he drank the last glass.

Bismarck is subject to fits of dejection, when he declares that his life has been a failure; that he has never made any one happy, neither himself, his family or the nation at large. "If it were not for me," he once said, when in a despondent mood, "the world would have seen three great wars less, and eighty thousand who died in their bloom might have lived, and how many parents, brothers, sisters, widows, would have been spared their grief and tears."

Nashua, N. H., Feb. 1. At Edgeville a man whose name, by a Brookline tax bill found upon his person, is believed to be James T. Barker, threw himself in front of the 1.30 train that was approaching the city and was instantly killed, his body being terribly crushed and mangled. The Coroner decided it to be a case of suicide. The deceased was about forty years of age and nothing is known about him here.

This young year is pregnant with events of deep and dire significance. The leaders of power in England and Germany are old men tottering on the verge of the beyond; Queen Victoria is not young; the Emperor of Russia sleeps on dynamite; France is feverish, and awaits a crisis; Spain and Italy play at monarchy; Turkey is still the sick-man, and the entire continent of Europe is in a condition which is favorable at any moment to an outbreak and radical change in the condition of affairs. A single night might alter the destiny of kings.

Bristol and Plymouth Quar. Conference.

The next session of this Conference will be held with the Advent Christian Church in the city of New Bedford, commencing Tuesday evening, Feb. 27th, and holding over Friday, March 2nd. A cordial invitation is extended to the brethren and sisters in these two Counties and vicinity to be present. Come in the name of the coming One to a feast of fat things. Come to work for God. Ample provision will be made for all who come. This is the annual meeting, and officers will be elected for the coming year. It is hoped that all the preachers in this section will make an effort to attend, and that all the churches will be represented.

E. S. Moulton, President.
Benj. Irish, Secretary.

Conference Notice.

Providence permitting, the third New Hampshire Quarterly Conference will be held at London Village, N. H., commencing Wednesday evening, Feb. 21st, and hold over Sunday, Feb. 25th. We hope to see a good delegation of the army of the Lord, both of preachers [illegible] who will come [illegible] Zion [illegible] are out of C[illegible] will [illegible]

Notice.—The next meeting of the East Maine Missionary Association will be held at New Harbor, Bristol, in the Free House, to commence Thursday evening, Feb. 15th, and continue as long as the interest may demand. The object of the meeting is the salvation of the perishing, strengthening of the saints of God, and warning the world of soon coming judgment. Eld. G. W. Weeks and F. E. Blaisdell will be there to preach the word of life. Strangers will call on Harrison Curtis.

Eld. G. W. Weeks, President.
Jer. Carr, Secretary.

Notice.—The Rhode Island and E. Conn. A. C. Conference will meet in annual session with the A. C. of Providence the first Wednesday in March, at two o'clock P. M. Eld. A. Durfee will speak in the evening of this day on "Pastoral work and church order." Let all the churches see to it that their delegates are chosen and sent, and that their letters be duly forwarded.

Elder A. Durfee, President.
Norman P. Cook, Secretary.

Notice.—If the Lord will, a series of religious meetings will be held at Woonsocket, R. I., to commence Sunday, Feb. 18th, and continue Sabbaths and evenings for two weeks. If each one of us who are watching for Jesus to come, and expect to attend these meetings, will make them a special object of prayer and holy living, we can witness glorious results in the conversion of sinners.

H. K. Flagg.

Notice.—There will be a Church Quarterly Conference of the Advent believers held in Brodhead, Wis., beginning Friday evening, Feb. 16th, and holding over Sunday, and the meetings will be protracted two weeks thereafter. An effort will be made to secure good help. All are specially invited. "Truly the Lord is in this place."

Geo. M. Button, Pastor.

Notice.—The Knox and Lincoln Conference will hold its next session with the church in Bremen, at the Osier school-house. Thursday evening, Feb. 22d. Call on A. P. Chaney.

C. O. Smith.

Conference Notice.

There will be a semi-annual Conference of Southwest Iowa and Northwest Missouri A. C. Conference at Lewis, Cass Co., Iowa, commencing Thursday evening, Feb. 15th, and holding over Sunday, Feb. 18th. We appoint this Conference with the assurance that brethren and sisters will make it a point to be there. We have the assurance that the brethren from Troublesome Creek, Milford, Elliott, Red Oak and Atlantic, and all over the Conference district, will be in attendance. Come, brethren and sisters, to the rescue. Elder H. G. McCulloch is expected, and Elds. D. Q. Kent and Adair are invited, and any others coming in the name of the Lord. Business relative to future Campmeetings will be considered. By request.

Wm. McCulloch.

Conference Notice.

The Lord willing, the second Quarterly Meeting and Conference, District No. 2, of the South West Iowa and North West Mo. Conference, will meet with the Nodaway church, Taylor Co., Iowa, Friday evening, Feb. 23d, and continue over Sunday. We earnestly request the churches in the district to be represented at this Conference, and a cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of divine truth. Come to this meeting.

Nathan Miller, President.
I. J. Showalter, Secretary.

P. S. We changed date of our Conference from Feb. 16th to 23d, on account of Semi-Annual Conference.—N. M. & I. J. S.

Conference Notice.

The Northern Indiana and Michigan State Union Conference will be held at the Divine church in the township of Woodbridge, Hillsdale Co., commencing Feb. 8th, and holding over Lord's day. There will be teams at Reading depot on the Fort Wayne and Jackson R. R. to meet friends on Thursday only, unless notice is sent to Warren Smith at Cambria Mills. All are cordially invited to attend.

J. P. Bristol, President.
G. E. Pullen, Secretary.

Notice.—The Lord willing, I shall commence meetings at North Limington, Me., at the Union House, Thursday evening, Feb. 8th, and continue evenings through the week, and over Sunday, and longer if duty demands. We expect Sister Kilborn will be present to assist in the work, and we hope the brethren and sisters will come from abroad and lend a helping hand.

M. Stevens.

Notice.—The A. C. Conference of District No. 2, State of Kansas, will meet with the church at the Townsend school-house, six miles southwest from Waterville, in Washington County, commencing Feb. 15th, and continue over the following Sunday. Brethren, let us hear from all the churches, and see as many present as possible. P. O. address, Waterville, Marshall Co., Kansas.

W. H. Shriner, President.

Notice.—The first Quarterly Meeting of the A. C. Conference of Northern Illinois will be held with the church in New Rutland, Ills., commencing Tuesday evening, Feb. 20th, and closing Friday evening, Feb. 23d.

D. S. Clark, President.
J. August Smith, Secretary.

Notice.—Although re-engaged by the call and vote of the A. C. Church and Society in Palmer, Mass., I feel an increasing conviction and desire to seek another field of effort. I am at liberty to visit with churches near or far away, as an itinerant, or to re-engage in pastoral care and labor.

H. C. Smith, Box 337 Palmer, Mass.

Notice.—Preaching brethren wishing to preach at Haverhill, Mass., will please correspond with J. R. Towle, Box 296, or C. R. Bailey, corner of Washington Street and Avenue.

"A GOOD CONFERENCE."

Such is the exclamation on every hand with reference to the session of our P. Q. and Northern Vt. and Northern N. H. Conference, which has just been held in the Free Baptist Church in Newport Centre, Vt. We were invited there by Bro. Cowell, the pastor of the church, and his people; and they, with the Adventist preachers and brethren in the vicinity, gave us a hearty welcome, and contributed much by their accommodation of us at their homes to make our Conference a success; and a success it was, too, such as is always desirable, but is not always experienced. It was in mid-winter, commencing Jan. 10th, and holding over Sabbath the 15th; and up in these northern latitudes, where the thermometer ranges down among the twenties frequently, we had, with deep snows and high winds and a fearful blow a part of the time, the genuine rigors of an old-fashioned winter. But this was no hindrance to the hale, hearty people who, without paved walks and horse-cars and electric lights, came for miles around with their teams, and in cars when too far away to otherwise reach the place in season to attend this Conference session. The house was of ample size, but it was well-filled, and crowded at our preaching services. A good revival had been in progress among the people of the community, and this was no small thing to conduce to the interests of our meetings. Sixty, and more, gave in their testimony each evening after a sermon had been preached; and on Friday evening one hundred and fifteen testimonies were given for Christ after the sermon. The gospel was preached, too, by the power of the Holy Ghost.

We were not favored by the presence and aid of any ministerial brother from a distance, yet we had, within our own borders, meat in due season. There was preaching by Brn. Gregory, McClewer, Heyer, Smith, Marsh, Magoon, Mc.Kinstry, and Sister M. Mc. Kinstry. Bro. Drown preached during the Conference an excellent and comforting funeral sermon of an estimable young girl, who had died in the vicinity and was buried from the church during the Conference. Our esteemed President, Bro. Dow, gave us as his annual Conference address an exposition of the Conference Constitution, which is to be printed in pamphlet form for the use of the Conference.

One of the members of the Conference had died during the year—Elder W. G. Ladd of Stanstead. Several were granted a license for the first time; a number of licenses were renewed, and two excellent brethren were ordained to the work of the gospel ministry, viz.: Addison P. Drown of Wolcott, Vt., and Chas. McClewer of North Troy, Vt., who are recommended to the churches and people, everywhere, as faithful servants of Christ.

The officers of the Conference were chosen for the ensuing year as follows: C. P. Dow, President; C. W. Heyer, Vice President; L. C. Mc.Kinstry, Secretary; M. Mc.Kinstry, Assistant Secretary, and Loren Marsh of Sweetsburg, P. Q., Treasurer. District officers were chosen, and delegates to the A. C. Association, and delegates to the N. H. and Vt. Conferences and the F. B. Yearly Meeting. On Sabbath evening the services closed with a sermon by Eld. D. W. … appearances, … of the twelve" may denote his two visits to the apostles; for you … Sornberger, of the Adv… ence, and a social servi… Secretary.

PURE RELIGION.

Dear Editors:—I have been thinking of late that the religion of Christ, the pure, undefiled, unadulterated religion of Jesus, is something worth having. Oh, what a change, what a great change it will make with the individual that is in possession of it! The pure religion of Jesus down deep in the heart will make a dishonest man or woman an honest one; it will make the untruthful man tell the truth; it will put a new song into the mouth of the profane man, even praise to the Most High God; and the Sabbath-breaker will learn to remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy; and the intemperate man will break away from his intemperate habits and become a sober and a temperate man. This, Christian friends, is just what the pure religion of Jesus will do. It will cleanse from all filthiness of the flesh; it will turn out the buyers and sellers; it will clear out the rum, tobacco and cider; and make a clean sweep of every filthy habit. I can say with all my heart, Glory to God for such religion as this! What do you say, Christian friends? I care not for religion unless it will do all these things. It has done it; and, glory to God! it will do it. It will make a new creature from head to foot, inside and outside, all over. Old things will be done away, and behold all things will become new.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The first Quarterly Session of the A. C. Conference of Northern Pennsylvania and Southern New York was held with the church of God at Shongo, N. Y., commencing Friday evening, Dec. 22nd, 1882, and held over Sunday. The opening sermon was preached … Sorenson.

At a business meeting held Saturday, at … A. M., the following ministers answered to their names: E. H. Eggleston, A. H. Briggs, R. Kelsey, R. Sorenson and C. W. Stephens. Later in the session Eld. D. B. Hunt appeared and reported. All of the churches in the Conference were present by delegates. Bros. S. Gardner and S. Munroe, honorary members, were present.

The reports of the ministers were substantially the same as at last session, with the addition that Eld. A. H. Briggs held a public discussion on the Eleven Mile, Pa., with Eld. J. H. Leach of the United Brethren on the nature and destiny of man. Eld. A. H. Briggs unsheathed the sword and in a masterly way swept aside the Pagan mysticism of inherent immortality, and showed by a "thus saith the Lord" there is no eternal life outside of the Son of God. The reports of the churches were very good.

Voted, to hold the next Quarterly Session with the church at Bingham, Pa., to commence Friday evening, March 16, and hold over Sunday.

Voted, thanks to the church at Shongo and friends for their kind hospitality to us during our sojourn with them.

Voted, to have the minutes published in the World's Crisis, and respectfully ask the Bible Banner to copy.

Preaching and conference meetings afternoon and evening, also preaching Sunday A. M.; after which the Lord's Supper was administered, and a goodly number partook. The preaching throughout was timely, and the exhortations cheering.

C. W. STEPHENS, Secretary.

SERVICE.

BY W. C. HICKS.

What is acceptable service to God? It is not the service of a hired man, i. e., for what we will or hope to get; if so, we would be serving ourselves. Can it be from fear of incurring his displeasure and punishment? If so, would we not again be serving ourselves? If these motives are removed, what is left? Please read Rom. 6:18, 22. You will find that we serve God from a hearty realization and the full assurance of his Word of our freedom from sin. This assurance puts in our hearts and on our tongues the divine cry, "Abba, Father." Sinking into his arms we render him a joyful service, feeling that if he be for us, who can be against us? Because, greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world. This realization will create in us a respect unto the recompense of reward; we will serve him as a son, knowing that he who made us a free gift of his own Son Jesus, has also promised to freely give us all things. And if at times his hand rests heavy … perverted. … remember that he deals with us … at as self … for our profit. His provision … but keep … He is able to keep us. Trust … princi… him.

I. L. L. TO J. A. L.

Often I halt upon my weary way
To hear thy voice, or listen to the lay
Thou singest in thy rhyme;
And like sweet tones to music-loving ears
Thy song has been unto my heart for years,
As I have counted time.

Plaintive, pathetic, mournful it has been Ofttimes; but then the cheerful has flowed in,
And sometimes true heart mirth,
Such as creation feels at breaking morn
When a bright, cloudless day to earth is born,
Rejoicing at its birth.

A pilgrim poet 'mong a foot-sore band,
Each leaning forward toward a looked-for land
To be their home some day;
Cheering them on amid thy sorrows deep,
Leading them oft, that they the path might keep,
And none there go astray.

They hear thy voice—not like the trumpet's blast
In battle fray, where men are falling fast
And dying in their gore;
But as He spake who came to Galilee
And said to humble men, "Come follow me,"
As they stood on its shore.

Here on we press together, looking back
Full oft, to gaze upon the devious track
Our tempted feet have made;
The resting-places where we took new breath,
And others where we tarried near to death,
And where our dead were laid.

But cheer thee now: our future way may be
No darker, rougher than the one we see,
And have come strangely o'er;
He who hath heard us in our deep distress,
And led us thus far through the wilderness,
Is still gone on before.

FROM BRO. F. R. BANKSON.

Dear brethren and sisters:—I wrote last for our loved Crisis in September, and as this is the last day of the year, how thankful I am that I am alive and in the vineyard of the Lord, and still have a mind to work for my Master. I will report from September till now.

Bro. Livingston, Bro. Roberts and myself started for our Annual Conference that convened with the Cedar Grove church near … Stevenson, … opened till … and after … days hard riding, we arrived there, and found the church in a lifeless condition. After preaching Jesus to them, they soon "came to the help of the Lord against the mighty." Glory be to God! Some were happily converted; backsliders were reclaimed, and gave God the praise. Then we went to Harmony church and continued meetings for several days. Three were converted and at the next meeting I baptized three. Since that time I have been preaching from one place to another all the time I could.

The Conference has appointed me evangelist to work on the southern side of the Tennessee River without the promise of a cent. I am going to try to discharge the duties faithfully they have placed upon me. In conclusion, my brethren, I am not discouraged. If we are faithful we shall be well paid when Jesus, our absent Lord, returns. May God bless you all, and help you to sound the gospel trumpet. I am not ashamed my brethren, to beg for tracts. Please send me some if you have any to spare. Direct to Hurley's So. Che., Ala.

ALONE WITH GOD.

It is a sign of superficial piety when Christians are almost always seeking the excitement of public meetings, and have no desire for solitude. It shows that there is little preparation of the soul and spirit, by secret prayer and meditation, for discharging the duties and meeting the trials of daily life. It is for the want of this preparation in solitude that there are many failures and stumblings in the lives of the generality of Christians. And it is the want of this that renders meetings for prayer and for the preaching of the Word less interesting and less useful than they would otherwise be. There is a sense in which we shall have to die alone; but if we cannot endure to be alone now, communing with our own spirits, or communing with the Lord, how shall we be when we have to … these great … to be searched through and through, that no lurking evil may be hidden from us, and that a thorough regeneration of our whole souls may be wrought by the power of the Holy Spirit.

Frequent seasons of loneliness or solitude are necessary for the strengthening of our virtues, the maturity of our characters. Solitude is necessary for purifying our tempers and behavior, for meditation on the Word, for contemplation of the divine attributes, for fellowship with God or intercession for the saints and for sinners, for our establishment in the faith, for getting knowledge, fortitude, courage, power and unction for Christian work. "The solitude that has Christ in it," says Dr. F. D. Huntington, "renews man's strength. It fortifies his resolution. It establishes his peace. It clears away the dust of the earth's day-dilusions and the damps of its night-sorrows. It enables us to look ahead with an … eye on the future. It makes the mind populous with beautiful imagery from regions of the invisible. It sends the thought on cheerful pilgrimages to all holy shrines of the Bible and the universe. It lets in happy memories through the open doors of our affections to console our misery, and blessed promises to animate our faith. The Father is with us."

If a Christian would rise in purity above the generality of professors,—if he would escape from the corruptions, that have the sanction of the Christian name,—if he would be constantly ready and waiting and looking for the appearing of Jesus, he must be much alone. There are many things in our churches, our institutions, our associations, our societies, and our social customs, unfavorable to entire devotion to God. The various practices and habits of the present times, if fully complied with, will leave but little time for shutting the door of our closet, and getting a fuller, a more blessed experience of divine and perfect love. A frequent solitary walk or a walk alone with God, is necessary to deep spiritual mindedness. Many by neglecting this, are walking in a fog while they might walk in bright sunshine. —Silas Henn.

SCRIPTURE CONFIRMED.

An English clergyman who traveled through the Holy Land a few years ago, in company with Dr. Moses D. Hoge of Richmond, Va., describes one of the scenes in their travels in the following words: "When Jesus sat by Jacob's well he could see the long, dusty path across the plain which he had traversed. On his right … he looked back, stood close … till … most … object in si… Wiggins also predicts that … surely … strike the Gulf of Mexico the 9th of Ma… 1883, and will pass over the entire co… nent in a north-westerly direction.

Although weather prophets are some… erroneous in their statements, yet … We … after ascending to the summit of Gerizim, tested the acoustic property of the valley between the two hills, on which were set the blessings and the cursings. I was on the slope of Mount Gerizim while Dr. Hoge went some distance up that of Ebal—the space between us being between half and three quarters of a mile. Indeed, as I saw the doctor ride down from the spot on Gerizim where we stood, cross the valley, and creep up the side of Ebal, till his horse looked no bigger than an ant, it seemed almost foolish to make the experiment we contemplated. I fancied that it would be impossible even to hear his voice over the chasm beneath us.

We had arranged to give signals. He was to take off his hat, which was covered with large, white puggary, for me to begin; but the distance between us was too great for me to distinguish any such indication. However, at last seeing he had fairly stopped, I read aloud slowly one of the psalms for the day, feeling all the while that I might just as well have addressed the House of Commons from Lambeth Palace. Then I paused. I had understood the doctor to say that he would recite the thirty-first Psalm, and turned to it in my prayer-book. Great was my surprise when from that little dot on the hill-side I heard in his voice across the valley, 'The Lord is my shepherd,' etc. It is the twenty-third!' I exclaimed to his friend whom he had left with me. This was a severe test, and it was made more so by a party of Turkish soldiers who, hearing me, came out of some barracks which lay beneath us, and began talking. When I rejoined the doctor I found he had heard me plainly. Indeed, he remarked on the difference between the versions of the Psalms I had read and that which he was familiar with in America. Two companions who remained in the valley between us distinguished every syllable with th… What a scene and 'service' it must have been when the blessings and the cursings were said by the thousands under Joshua from those hills.—Messiah's Herald.

TEMPERANCE.

AN INEBRIATE MILLINER.—Rev. Mr. Munro said: "A woman who had one of the largest millinery shops in the city, east of Queen Street, was so infatuated with the love of drink that she sold everything for it. She was taken to an institution for inebriates, in Edinburgh, where they gave her Dr. Barnardo's medicine, which cured her. She then left the home, and went into the world relying upon her own strength, with the natural result that she fell. Her friends sent for me. I urged her to abstain until a supply of the medicine which helped her before could be got; but she said, 'I can't do it; if there were drink and the bottomless pit on one side and heaven on the other, I would take the drink and go to hell.' There are many whose real condition is just like this."

I DELIBERATELY declare that in five weeks and a half in England I have seen as many women under the influence of liquor as I have seen men under like influence within the preceding there years. Nor do these women drink beer alone; they, as a rule, drink whiskey. I have in scores and scores of instances seen little children, late at night, at the saloon door, crying for mother to go home, as in our land wives plead for their husbands. At the very threshold of nearly all the grand ruins of palaces, and abbeys, and castles beer and whiskey beg to be swallowed.—Dr. Arthur Edwards.

A LADY has just given $6000 to the temperance cause who a few years ago was told by her husband that as temperance was being agitated in their State (Virginia) he thought he would sign the pledge to help keep the cause. With great pride she said, "I should be ashamed of a husband who would thus surrender his personal liberty." One year from that time he died of delirium tremens, and her sons, learning to drink at their mother's table, have both died drunkards.—Selected.

TEMPERANCE gives nature her full play, and enables her to exert all her force and vigor.

FROM E. G. MUDGETT.

Dear Editors:—Allow me to say a few cheering words to the many sons and daughters of our Lord and Master.

Your kind letters cheer my poor heart, knowing you are looking for redemption very soon. I have been on a pilgrimage some sixty years, and I am not weary, but expect to soon see Him who is to be our King. When the glorious proclamation reached my ears in 1843, my heart responded, "Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus." I have loved the sound of Jesus' coming ever since. I am not privileged with meetings now as in former years, but my heart burns with the love of Christ.

Now, brethren, I have hay and provender enough, and any brother traveling this way is welcome to such as I have. And with your … letters and by your earnest prayers I expect … to "see the King in his beauty."

REPORT.

Statistical Report of Missionary Work in Wisconsin for 1882:—I have traveled 3,606 miles, mostly by private conveyance; have preached 125 sermons; attended 248 meetings; visited a large number of families, with prayers and exhortations; organized one church of eleven members; baptized nine; obtained a number of subscribers for our papers; attended five Quarterly Meetings as District Evangelist,—and have the blessed assurance that in weakness I have done what I could in planting the good seed, and pray the great God to give the increase. Our Society, at their Yearly Meeting in connection with the Yearly Conference, obtained a large number of names for membership for the year 1883, and intend to still work till the Master comes.

I have received from the Society $201.50, and about $60.00 for attending Quarterly Meetings and all other sources. I pray God that in the more enlarged arrangement of missionary workers, in harmony with the American A. M. Society, our work may be increased the coming year.

SECURE.

The winds blow hard. What then?
He holds them in the hollow of his hand;
The furious blasts will sink when his command
Bids them be calm again.

The night is dark. What then?
To him the darkness is as bright as day;
At his command the shades will flee away,
And all be light again.

The way is deep. What then?
For Israel's host the waters upright stood;
And he whose power controlled that raging flood
Still succors helpless men.

He knoweth all. The end
Is clear as the beginning to his eyes;
Then walk in peace, secure though storms roll by,
He knoweth all, O friend.

A FLOWER ON THE TEACHER'S GRAVE.—Mrs. G. S. Reaney recently related the following affecting story: "Some children lost their Sunday School teacher by death. The scholars gathered round the open grave, and the little hands dropped in their wreaths of flowers. They talked afterwards about his goodness and his love, and then considered what they should do to keep his memory bright. One little girl said, 'Let us keep his grave fresh with flowers;' so every Sunday, after school hours, one of the little girls was told off to beg the flowers she could not gather, and lay them on her teacher's grave. Twelve months passed away, and one sultry July morning one of the grave-diggers saw, lying on the grave which had been so tenderly cared for, a little slumbering child of five or six years. He took her in his arms and gently woke her up 'Where am I?' exclaimed the aroused sleeper. Then suddenly recalling why she had come there, she added, 'Oh, I know; it was my turn to put the flowers on teacher's grave last night, and I couldn't find anything half good enough. He used to call me his "little flower," and I thought I would give myself to him, just to show him how I loved him.' In that cemetery there are two graves opposite each other, the one the Sunday School teacher, and the other that of the little girl, and on her grave are these words, 'Little Flower.' She gave herself to show how much she loved him."

"YOUR ROPE'S NA LANG ENOUGH!"—The Rev. James … woman was very anxious about her soul, and applied to a man for guidance. He was a Unitarian, and spoke to her about education, culture, the gradual improvement of our species, and so on. She did not at first understand what he was saying, but when a glimpse of his meaning reached her mind, she indignantly said, 'Gae awa hame, mon, your rope's na lang enough for a'.' The poor body was down in the depths of sin, and knew it. What were education, refinement and culture (good things in their place) to her? It was a mighty Saviour she wanted, to save her at once from sin and the grave, and to such a Saviour—who 'died the just for the unjust'—the Unitarian could not direct her."

A BLOOD-STAINED DANGER-SIGNAL.—At the Fulton street prayer-meeting, New York, lately, the following incident was related: "A tree fell across a railroad track. In a little while two express trains would be due, one on the up track, the other on the down track. A laborer and his wife saw the tree fall and realized the danger. At the wife's suggestion, she took off some of her clothing and tore it in two parts, while the man bled his arm sufficiently to allow of the staining of the garment. Thus they had each a crimson flag, and with this they ran one on the up track, the other on the down track, to meet the coming trains. In each case the engineer of the train saw the danger-signal, and the lives of very many persons were saved—saved by blood. The relator of the incident finished the recital by testifying to his faith in the blood of Christ, and peace through faith."

GREAT MISTAKES ABOUT REPENTANCE.—Some speak of it as deep emotional sorrow for sin, and many try to produce this in their own hearts. Others make out that the simple acceptance of the fact that Jesus has died and atoned for their sins, is a turning from their unbelief, and therefore is repentance, and some do this without definitely breaking with the past, and this leads to miserable so-called conversions, which are the greatest stumbling-block to the real work of God. Real repentance is a final, definite, and determined break with the past at all costs, and a real taking sides with God, and letting everybody know it. These men must "be baptized . . . for the remission of sins," not because outward baptism changes the heart at all, but because in their case it was the act which committed them before all men as the disciples of Jesus; it was the thing which would draw down upon them the reproach of the scribes and Pharisees, and it was, therefore, a testing point as to whether their hearts were right or not. God is no party to a cowardly slipping into faith in Christ, without open testimony. If we have really passed from death unto life, "from darkness to light, and from the power of satan to God," if we have received forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith which is in Christ (Acts 26:18,) it is but due to God that we should proclaim the great things he has done for the sinful and undeserving; and it is due to our perishing fellow-creatures that we should declare to them that God's great salvation lies open to them. Where there is real honesty of purpose, this is the instinct of every saved soul.

PREACHING CHRIST AT GAMBETTA'S FUNERAL.—Amidst all the pomp and ceremony of the interment of the French Dictator, a courageous effort was made to turn the thoughts of the thousands crowding the thoroughfares of Paris, towards the eternal life, by faith in Christ, which is unknown to millions in that city, and without which there can be no real regeneration of the country. Miss de Broen had prepared a paper, headed "Souvenir of the Funeral of Mons. Gambetta," addressed to the "Citizens of Paris, and of all France, Freethinkers, Catholics, or Protestants," calling on them to consider God's Word to each of us, given to our consolation, when death comes into our midst. A number of texts were quoted. The conclusion pressed God's offer of pardon to each, and the acceptance of it, and the addresses of the Bible Societies were added, where copies of the Word of God may be had. An invitation was also given to those who might wish to converse on the truths spoken of in the paper, to come for the purpose to the Iron-room. Sixty-seven thousand copies on large sheets, and in striking characters, were printed, also on doubled cards, easy to slip into the pocket. The result was that the crowd, composed of all ranks, eagerly took them. Manufacturers asked for copies for their workpeople. Miss de Broen, with her helpers, was able, in several instances, to give to officers of high rank, who politely accepted copies, as did some of the police and mounted guards. Many gentlemen stopped to carefully read, and then place the cards in their pocket.

Dear Editors:—Another year has dawned upon us, bringing us nearer home than ever before; and I feel like lifting up my head, for redemption must be very near. Perhaps this year may bring the King in his beauty—him for whom we have so long looked. And while the church are looking and longing for that day, the Bridegroom-King is no less interested. He who has purchased us with his own blood, who so cares for us that he has bade us cast all our cares on him, who ever liveth to make intercession for us, and who has gone to prepare a place for us, has said, "I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." Blessed words! All we can do for him here is naught compared with what he has done for us. Then let us not cling to earthly treasures which must perish so soon, but let us reckon ourselves only as stewards, and remember "to whom much is given, much will be required." Let us go forth without the camp bearing reproach for his name. Though we are not permitted to meet with those who love the Lord, we are trying to witness for him, and hope to meet when the redeemed are gathered.

THEN AND NOW.

"Faith, hope, charity. But the greatest of these is charity."—PAUL.

The end of the commandment is charity out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned. From which some having swerved have turned aside unto vain jangling. (Paul.) I think the Advent people, many of them, have turned from this charity, thinking more of their faith and hope than they do of charity; the love that burns in the heart to man and God. Many of them do not want to hear a word about living holy. I hope Bro. Boutell will give us another "Then and Now" soon.

HOLY COURAGE.—Holy courage characterizes every true life. The possessor of this life looks at the right and says, "With God's help I will do it." He never for a minute asks himself the question, "Will it affect my material interests?" but only, "Is it right?" If the reply to this question is "Yes," he moves right on in the sacred path of duty, though it leads through a "burning, fiery furnace," or a lion's den. The frowns of friends, or the threats of foes, move him not. His position is taken, and from it he will not be driven. When he approaches the portals of the tomb he exclaims, "I have fought a good fight;" and when he is lowered into the grave, the very remembrance of his heroism calls forth the word, "There he lies who never feared the face of man.' Such are the men who triumph over every foe, and are more than conquerors through him that loved us.—Sel.

AN act deserving of imitation has been done by a worthy colored brother in West Virginia. Before his conversion he was addicted to the use of tobacco. But when he became a Christian he could no longer indulge in the filthy habit. He used to spend fifteen dollars a year for the vile weed. Now he religiously sets apart that sum yearly for gospel purposes. If others did likewise, the revenues for supporting churches, Sunday Schools and missionary interests would be vastly increased, and the contributors would be freed from a bad habit.—Sel.

BEHOLD, HE COMES!

Soon shall the flaming heavens reveal
The coming Son of God;
Soon every knee shall bow to him,
And all confess him Lord.

His chariot wheels shall not be stayed
By unbelieving man;
He'll tarry not, the record saith,
Behold, he comes again!

E'en now the glory from his face
Illumes the eastern sky;
With one accord stars, sun and moon,
Proclaim his advent nigh.

He comes, he comes, to call the saints
From earth's prevailing strife;
To give them joy and rest in him,
And everlasting life.

Come, Lord and Saviour, quickly come,
And take us to thy home;
All honor and all praise to thee,
Eternal be thy throne.

FACTS AND SCIENCE.—NO. 2.

BY J. HEMENWAY.

With the facts before us in relation to geminal matter and the construction of living organisms, we reach the all-important question, Whence the life and apparent intelligence of life germs?—a question which baffles science, and leaves us to study cause from effect.

That dead matter is changed into living there is no doubt. It is not electricity, or new chemical combinations, for matter cannot evolve what is not first involved. This is the battle-ground between science and revelation. Tyndal, Huxley, Darwin, Spencer, and a host of skeptical scientists have brought forward their assumptions for the starting point of life, which I need not name here; but true science is knowledge demonstrated. Here they fail, and beat an inglorious retreat, saying it is the "unknown"; and yet claim that life is generated from matter. Here we leave them in the quagmire of bioplastic matter, and pass to study cause from effect.

The first effect of life in matter is discovered in "bioplasm," or "life matter," with "expansive and contractive power." It is first found enveloped in nutrient matter, and soon takes the "cell" form, and proceeds to business in building a material organism of tissue that is formed out of its own death or body; but, like all other living organism, it possesses a pro-creative power, and multiplies its own kind.

Here let me call the reader's attention to a fact. The bioplasm is an entity, possessing life, or a life-entity of itself, and produces only its own kind. The germs that build nerve are nerve germs, and build nothing else. They are like different companies of artisans, each doing their special work in a special department.

This life has a creative or transforming power, changing dead matter into living. It is a power outside of matter that gives life to matter. It is here that divine wisdom stands in the presence of the human, and demands recognition of its power. Divine Revelation throws its light on the unknown, and says, It is God who quickeneth (or giveth) life to all things. When God breathed the breath of "lives" into man it was something more than atmospheric air. It was the life-giving power taking possession of matter and producing living organisms out of dead matter. And when that organism ceases to live, the spirit or life returns to God who gave it.

But just here we are met with a difficult question. Is that life-power intelligent? or is the intelligence a superadded quality? In other words, Is the life-germ intelligent? or is it governed and directed by the intelligence of the Giver of life, outside of itself?

All life-germs build a structure that develops design and wisdom. Take the life-germ from man, bird, beast, and a germ from wheat; place them side by side under the most powerful microscope, and there is no distinction by which we can select one from the other; but each will build its own kind according to the design or plan. Where there is a design, there must be a designer. Is it the germ, or the Creator? If we say the germ, then all life is endowed with intelligence sufficient to design and execute. If we say the Creator, then mind is a superadded quality that is not necessarily an attribute of life. Therefore life may exist without mind, but the mind cannot exist without life; and thus the Creator is the fountain of all wisdom, power and might.

Now let us examine the life-germs in their action. Take, for illustration, the grain of wheat, corn, or any other seed of vegetable organism. In that seed are found life-germs in an inactive state; no indication of intelligence. If not injured they remain alive for ages. Place that grain in proper conditions and what follows? First, the germs put forth a sprout, then rootlets, and each is the work of life-germs, selecting food or material from earth-matter to build a stalk of wheat. Why do they not build an oak or corn stalk? There is design and wisdom in their work; and they select only the material necessary to carry out the design. Who will say there is a power to design in matter? Does the wheat germ think? Is it not the same power that causes bioplasm of man to build nerve, tissue, muscle and bone? The brain is nerve-matter or bioplasm; and if the Creator endowed life-matter with power to select the proper material from food, and ordain that it should build nerve, as a medium to convey sensation in the organism, is it any wonder that God should endow brain-matter with power to reason? Both are supernatural; and one as much as the other. "Does matter think?" Not of itself; but creative power can endow it with mind just as rationally as to endow matter with life. Thus we find that the bridge to span the chasm between living and non-living matter, and between thinking and non-thinking substance, to be the creative power of Almighty God. Who dare limit his power?

Another important question arises here. Is the life or spirit an entity, or power? All the actions of animated beings are but effects; the cause lies in the life-power, and the life-power is deposited in little germs, and each is an entity of itself. Ergo—then life in matter is not one entity, but many. As one may cease to live, so may all; and when that life returns to God who gave it, who will say that it takes representative spiritual nerve, muscle and brain life-germs back to God separate, in distinct character, making one entity? Is it not more rational to say, in the language of Holy Writ, "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return to God who gave it"? The body when dead is not dust as it was, but dead life-germs; life having left it, the organized matter disintegrates back into its original elements, as it was before life changed it into living matter. Science cannot analyze spirit; therefore we must accept the record of the power that gave life; all beyond that is mere speculation and not fact.

The science of life is beyond human science; therefore all knowledge of its nature and origin must be obtained through faith in revelation. Life in matter is a continued miracle of the creative power that wrought by God when he said, "Let the waters bring forth abundantly the moving [creeping] creature that hath life"; "And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind." Thus we find that creative power produced all living things out of earth and water; life not being an element of water or earth; [illegible] put into them, and from those [illegible] living things through the life-germs in matter, until now. Living matter was a miracle then, and is a miracle now. Throughout nature's temple we find the incomprehensible and unfathomable workings of the Divine. So that man is without excuse who rejects the revelation of God. "For the invisible things of Him from the creation are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse."

CRITICAL EXEGESIS.

2 Cor. 5: 1–11. The foregoing reference is to one of those portions of Scripture which in the language of the poet Longfellow is claimed as teaching—

"There is no death! What seemeth so is transition.
This life of mortal breath,
Is but the suburbs of the life elysian,
Whose portals we call death."

In order to understand whether such be its teachings, and what is the true view, let us carefully examine the different views that have been entertained in regard to its meaning. (1) Some claim it means to teach simply the existence of the spirit in death as separate from the body. But we reply, This is not a natural nor a logical interpretation, for it speaks not only of "this tabernacle" being dissolved, but it also speaks of a "building" possessed; not only of being "unclothed" and "naked"—a state not desired—but also of being "clothed upon." So if it refers to the spirit as separate from the mortal body, it logically follows that the spirit in death must have a "building" and be clothed upon by another body.

2. Some [illegible] the force of this objection have boldly asserted another view (without any warrant and in direct antagonism to the teachings of Scripture); i. e., that here is taught the fact that there is an intermediate body with which the spirit is invested after death. To this we object, for it speaks not only of a building to be possessed, but that it is "eternal," which could not be the case if it referred to a body intermediate between the mortal and the resurrection body. The apostle is contrasting not only things seen and unseen, but also things temporal and eternal, as may be learned from the last verse of the preceding chapter. Hence, his mind is not only on some future, but also forever enduring [illegible] touching this view of an intermediate [illegible], the commentator Barnes says: "Some have supposed that it refers to some celestial vehicle with which God invests the soul in the intermediate state. But the scripture is silent about any such celestial vehicle." Not only silent, we would add, but opposed to any such idea.

3. Some have claimed it has no direct reference to man, but that it contrasts this earth with the heavenly inheritance, the present with the future order of things in the world to come. To this view we object, for it reads, "We that are in this tabernacle do groan"; not the tabernacle groans, as we would expect (agreeing with "the whole creation groaneth"), but we (inwardly) groan, referring to a mental condition of the mortal body. This figure of our tabernacling in the flesh and putting it off at death is not an unscriptural one. Thus Job (18: 14) in speaking of the wicked man says, "His confidence shall be rooted out of his tabernacle, and it shall bring him to the king of terrors." (Job, 4: 19, also speaks of men as "them that dwell in houses of clay," teaching the same general idea.) Also the apostle Peter in his 2nd Epistle, 1st chap., vers. 13, 14, teaches the same: "I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by putting you in remembrance; knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle." The context of these two passages shows that the reference is to the change from man's mortal state to that of death. Again the expression in the 6th verse, "whilst we are at home in the body," shows that the reference is to the physical body of man, and not the physical world. An objection to this is that "we" is used here, a plural form with the singular noun "body," and also in 1st verse with singular noun "tabernacle." Hence it is claimed that as "we" could not all dwell in one fleshly tabernacle or body, that therefore the reference must be to the physical world. But we reply, the "we" here is evidently as in many other passages the editorial we, the plural used for the singular, and equivalent to I. Besides, Paul uses "we" so as to teach that what was true of himself was also of his hearers. Furthermore, that the reference is to our physical body seems to be taught in the marginal reading of the revised version, where we have "tabernacle" both in 1st and 4th vers. translated "bodily frame"—an expression not appropriate to the physical world.

Having now determined that the reference is not to the simple spirit in the state of death (for that is the "naked" and "unclothed" state), nor to the spirit as invested with an intermediate body, nor to the physical kosmos, but the rather to the physical body; let us now determine with what this body is contrasted; which leads us to the consideration of still another view.

4. Some, and by no means a small number, hold that this portion of Scripture has reference to mortal man in the natural body as contrasted with man made immortal in the resurrection body, which view we affirm. We have already given our reasons for believing the reference is to the physical body. Now further [illegible] the reference by way of contrast [illegible] the resurrection body is taught [illegible] following statements. In the first [illegible] in the 1st [illegible] from the state [illegible] are to be "clothed upon [illegible] might be swallowed up of life" [illegible] revised version, "what is mortal"). [illegible] the reference is here to the mortal body being raised to resurrection life. Paul elsewhere teaches us that then is the time, not at death, when mortality is to be swallowed up of life, and death in victory. See 1 Cor. 15: 53–55. The expression to which he here uses, "put on" is the very same as "clothed upon." Thirdly, from statement in the 8th verse that he expected not only to be absent from the (mortal) body, but also to be present with the Lord. Now the Lord himself teaches when that will take place, where he says, "I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." Also Paul when he says that by the second coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead, "so shall we ever be with the Lord." Fourthly, that the reference is to what will take place in the second coming of Christ at the resurrection day; and that it is this which the apostle has in mind is taught us from the statement in 10th verse, "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ." For these reasons then we conclude that the reference is to the resurrection body and to man in the future life, and [illegible] in the state of death. This view is also taken by several so called orthodox commentators. Thus Delitzsch: "The heavenly habitation which the apostle refers to is here in no respect the intermediate [illegible] the body of the resurrection [illegible]." Thus Barnes, after speaking of the various [illegible] that have been entertained, makes the admission: "These things will better [illegible] with the supposition of its referring to the future body of the saints than anything else, and probably the idea of Paul is that [illegible] body there will be incorruptible and immortal."

If now the reference [illegible] body, then all [illegible] over the intermediate [illegible] were a blank. [illegible] holding different [illegible] the state of the dead [illegible] "Jamieson, Fausset [illegible] Commentary" says: [illegible] be the resurrection [illegible] earthly [illegible] speaks [illegible] resurrection [illegible] "If this be the correct [illegible] passage throws no light on the [illegible] between death and the resurrection [illegible] treats solely of what is to happen after Christ's second coming." Now both of these commentators admit—and what they admit we would positively affirm—that if the reference is to the future resurrection body (and one of them affirms "This house can only be the resurrection body"), then the apostle passes over the intermediate state and this passage throws no light on the state of the dead.

We cannot better close this article than in the language of one of our own brethren with whose views we fully agree: "Paul is here simply contrasting our mortal life with the immortal life. We now tabernacle in mortal life. This tabernacle is not eternal; we put it off; but in due time we shall be 'clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life'—endless life—and by virtue of this change we shall be 'absent' from the mortal body and present with the Lord in our immortalized state, without mortal bodies, but with bodies changed and fashioned like Christ's glorious body." HOLINESS MADE PERFECT.

BY A. DAMON.

We believe we have the truth; others believe they have it too; yet the difference is great between us. Now we do not like to be called bad names by other Christian people; neither do they enjoy our hard names. Now if we would have friends we must be friendly. The same measure we mete to others will be measured back to us. This has been tested, we hope to the satisfaction of all.

The importance of sanctification may be further argued from the relation it bears to the coming of the Lord. The text first quoted implies this—"Preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." The coming of the Lord is the great incentive to holiness. Paul says (Phil. 3: 9), "And be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith." Also 2 Peter 3: 14—"Wherefore beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless."

In 1 John 4: 17 we read: "Herein is our love made perfect, that we may have boldness in the day of judgment; because as he is, so are we in this world." 1 John 2: 28, "And now, little children, abide in him; that, when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming." John furthermore says, "We know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him [not every one that saith he has it] purifieth himself, even as he is pure." None of these passages quoted have the least reference to death, but to the personal glorious advent of our blessed Lord.

A sanctification that discards the doctrine set forth in these scriptures, has not the least foundation in the oracles of God. It is the belief of this doctrine that incites a true cleansing from sin.

We read that "The bride hath made herself ready"; and "They that were ready went in with him to the marriage, and the door was shut." Beloved, let us all perfect holiness in the fear of God.

DELIVERANCE.

BY R. M. ANDREWS.

[illegible] the disciples to Jesus, teach us how [illegible] as John taught his disciples." [illegible] ye pray, say, Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name, thy kingdom come, thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth. Give us day by day our daily bread. And forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us. And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil" (deliver us from the evil one—R. V.) The word deliver in the above text means to rescue, to free, to save, to release. Did Jesus tell his disciples to pray for a thing that should not be granted them? If Jesus meant to give them the answer to their prayer, he intended to deliver them from the evil one, who goeth [illegible] and down the earth, seeking whom he may devour. Deliverance is past, present and future. Paul in Col. 1: 12–14 says, "giving thanks unto the Father which hath made us meet (fit) to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light: who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated (put us over for) us into the kingdom of his dear Son, in whom we have redemption (deliverance) through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins." How cheering the thought, "the blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin," and that "he hath redeemed us by his blood having forgiven our sins." Now can we sing,—

"I am redeemed— O, blessed state!
I am redeemed from sin;
O love, so infinitely great,
The blood hath made me clean."

The apostle in 2 Cor. 1: 9, 10, says, "we had the sentence of death in ourselves, that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God which raiseth the dead. Who delivered us from so great a death (sentence) and doth deliver (keep us from the sentence of [illegible]) in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us (completely) from the sentence of death. In the seventh of Romans Paul asks, "Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" The answer may be found in 1 Thess. 1: 10. The apostle says of the Thessalonian brethren, "how are ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus which delivered us from the wrath to come." [illegible] power [illegible] to deliver from and to [illegible] from the evil one, is clearly taught [illegible] Tim. 4: 18. "And the Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom." If we have a job of work to be done, it pays to let it to a man that knows how to do it; and while so important a task is to be done as our complete deliverance out of the temptations of the evil one, [illegible] entrust it to the Lord, "who knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations," and the work will be well executed. But if we undertake the task ourselves, we shall fail. In the prayer which Jesus taught his disciples, he tells them to ask for the "will of God to be done in the earth." Among many other things which God wills us is this: "that Christ gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present evil world, according to the will of God." In this present sinful world, those who have received the first fruits of the Spirit, and also the whole creation (Greek ktisis, things made) are groaning for deliverance. Some of the things made by God were made subject to vanity, not willingly, brought under the curse, subjected to death without having any will in the matter; "they, too, shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God."

Dear pilgrims, toiling through this world of sin, remember that the "angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them." And amid the dusty ascent of the mountain, while your brow may be o'ershadowed with care, and your step may be slow and heavy, while your strength may be almost gone, at every step let the heart send forth the glad chorus—deliverance will come!

Let age, not envy, draw wrinkles on thy cheeks; be content to be envied, but envy not. Emulation may be plausible, and indignation allowable, but admit no treaty with that passion which no circumstance can make good. A displacency at the good of others because they enjoy it, though not unworthy of [illegible], is an absurd depravity, sticking fast into corrupted nature, and often too hard for humility and charity, the great suppressors of envy. This surely is a lion not to be strangled but by Hercules himself, or the highest stress of our minds, and an atom of that power which subdueth all things unto itself.—Sir Thomas Browne.

THE MAJESTY OF JEHOVAH.

BY W. M. F.

Dear reader, did you ever stop to consider how great is the majesty of God? or have you thought of him slightingly? or as a kind of bugbear to frighten unruly children unto obedience? or, which is worse, perhaps you think there is no God. If such are your feelings, let me call your attention to a few instances where the Lord revealed himself in such power, majesty and glory that those even whom he had chosen to be his people, were filled with fear and trembling, even while they worshiped him.

When God called Moses to serve him, he appeared to him in a burning bush, "and the bush was not consumed." At first Moses was very naturally surprised at such an unusual sight, and approached nearer to see the cause of it; but when the voice of God called unto him from the midst of the bush, saying, "Moses, Moses," how quickly he answered, "Here am I." And God said, "Draw not nigh hither: put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground. . . . I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob," then he was completely overcome by the presence of the Almighty, and he "hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God." Ex. 3: 2–6.

But Moses, and the children of Israel as well, was yet to behold the majesty and glory of God exemplified in a much more terrifying manner than the burning of a bush, for the heavens and the earth were to bear him witness. Have you ever been in those warm latitudes where the flashing of the lightning and the rattling thunder was appalling even to the stoutest hearts; where the flash and crash came together, and incessantly for an hour or two, and the very earth seemed to quake beneath you, while the air was hot and [illegible], it was as impregnated by sulphurous fumes? If you have ever witnessed such a sight, perhaps you can form some faint idea of the scene on Mount Sinai. The Lord called, and Moses went up into the mount and received a message that the children of Israel should "sanctify" themselves for two days, "for the third day the Lord will come down in the sight of all the people upon Mount Sinai;" he also told Moses to "set bounds" about the mountain, and say unto the people, "take heed to yourselves that ye go not up into the mount, or touch the border of it. Whosoever toucheth the mount shall be surely put to death." On the third day, in the morning, there were thunders and lightnings, and a thick cloud upon the mount, and the voice of the trumpet exceeding loud; so that all the people that was in the camp trembled." And Mount Sinai was altogether on a smoke, because the Lord descended upon it in fire. And the whole mount quaked greatly. . . . And the Lord called Moses up to the top of the mount, and said to him, "Go down, charge the people, lest they break through unto the Lord and gaze, and many of them perish." See Ex. 19th chapter.

What a terrible yet grand sight that must have been to the children of Israel! How they ought to have been, and no doubt were at the time, impressed by his awful majesty and power! It seems to me that, after having witnessed such a manifestation of what God could and would do for them, they never again would have doubted or complained, but would have gone on joyfully, trusting in the promise that they should be brought into a land flowing with milk and honey. Here is a picture of the power and glory of God revealed in its terribleness. Now let us glance at another, where the power and glory are equally great, but less terrifying, yet it fills one with awe by its dazzling splendor.

When the Lord Jesus was upon earth he at one time said to his disciples, "There be some standing here which shall not taste of death until they see the kingdom of God." And a few days after "he took Peter and John and James, and went up into a mountain to pray, and as he prayed, the fashion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was white and glistering. And behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias: who appeared in glory, and spake of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem. . . Peter and they that were with him . . . saw his glory, and the two men that stood with him, . . . and as they departed from him, Peter said unto Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here. . . . While he thus spake, there came a cloud and overshadowed them. . . . and there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son: hear him. And when the voice was past, Jesus was found alone." See 9th chapter Luke.

This must indeed have been a glorious sight to the three apostles who were privileged to see it. It was worth a lifetime of suffering, for it was a miniature representation of that kingdom they were, and we are looking forward to, with Christ as the King, and Moses and Elias typifying the two classes of the righteous who shall inherit it. First those who are "asleep in Christ," and whom he will raise from the dead when he descends with a shout, and the trump of God. Second, "those who are alive, and remain unto his coming," and they "shall be caught up together, and so shall ever be with the Lord." 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17. Again, St. John, in describing the new Jerusalem says, "I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it. And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it, for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof." Rev. 21: 2–23.

Dear unconverted man or woman, which of these pictures will you choose? for, remember, when the Lord shall "appear in the clouds" to judge the world in righteousness, he will appear to the wicked in more terribleness than when he came down on Mount Sinai, for then he came to give them instructions how to live, but next time he will come to destroy those who have not obeyed him. I beg of you choose now, and accept God's free gift, and live forever.

"AS A BRIDE ADORNED FOR HER HUSBAND."

BY A. J. DENNIS.

This most tender and sacred of earthly relationships is taken as a type of the relationship existing between Christ and the church. What can be more lovely than a pure virgin, arrayed in spotless white, whose ornament is "a meek and quiet spirit, which in the sight of God is of great price?" And yet this is the description of the church, as it is to be presented to Christ," without spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing."

Are we looking for the coming of Christ as the time when this condition is to be entered upon? If so, we shall be sadly disappointed; for before he comes, it will be said: "He that is unjust, let him be unjust still; and he which is filthy, (how about tobacco?) let him be filthy still: and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still; and he that is holy, let him be holy still. And behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be."

Are we ready for that fiat to go forth now? We do not know when this proclamation will be made. And when it is made, if we are not "without fault before the throne of God," how shall we be able to stand in that dread day? By this we may have boldness in the day of judgment. (Why?) because as he is, so are we (in the kingdom of God? No.) in this world."

Imputed righteousness may do while Christ is interceding for us with the Father, but it must be imparted, if it ever is to be, before he lays aside his priestly robes, and takes his kingly crown.

Then let us have our lamps of profession trimmed and burning, and our vessels (our bodies, which are the temple of the Holy Ghost) filled with oil (the Spirit of God.) "Be not drunken with wine, wherein is excess, but be filled with the Spirit." "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.

CONSECRATION.

Your grace will be in proportion to your consecration to God. If there is a defect in your consecration, there will be one equally in your experience. Just as you open your heart to the light, the light will shine within your heart. God takes possession of every heart that is fully given up to him. Whatever he takes possession of, he makes holy.

Many who think they are fully consecrated to God deceive themselves. They are honest, but mistaken. They make reservations of which they are not aware. With some, property is reserved. They consider themselves proprietors, and not servants. They use property to gratify worldly ambition and worldly lusts. They say, "It is mine, and I have a right to use it as I please." They ignore the claims of God. What they give to help on the cause of God, is prompted, in part at least, by selfish considerations. Were those professing to be consecrated to God really consecrated, there would be no plea of necessity for renting seats in the house of God, and so shutting the poor out. Ten families as fully consecrated, as to their property, as the ancient Jews were, would be sufficient for the support of a preacher. Now you will sometimes find a preacher crippled in his influence, tempted and discouraged, when there are thirty or forty families connected with his church. Such people are deceived. They do not honor God with their substance. Their piety is superficial and spasmodic. They lack the deep seated principle necessary to take them through. They are apt to become murmurers and complainers, on the lookout for something which they can make an excuse for their covetousness.

There is a great lack of Scriptural feeling and action in regard to consecration of property to God. Some who claim to be fully given to God, use their property through life as though it were their own, and at death dispose of it as though it belonged to the devil. They leave it to ungodly relatives to squander in dissipations, who have already enough to gild their way down to the pit. Even the pilgrim preacher, called on to preach the funeral sermon, has to pay his own traveling expenses.

Beloved, is your property as well as your ability consecrated to God? Is holiness to the Lord inscribed on everything you call your own? Others are not consecrated in their associations. They go—not where they can get good and do good—but where they can be flattered, and their vanity and pride indulged. Those whom the world honors, they honor, and feel honored by the attentions that are in turn paid to them. A consecrated soul honoreth them that fear the Lord (Ps. 15: 4), no matter how humble their position in life may be. In coming out from the world he not only left its fashions and its vanities, but also those who [illegible] the fashions and vanities of the w[illegible] all his associations he consults, n[illegible] pleasure, but the glory of God [illegible] of his fellow-men. REJOICING AND GROANING.

BY C. E. COFF.

Some seem to run away with the idea that the life of the believer in "full salvation" should jingle like sleigh-bells from Monday morning till Saturday night in uninterrupted glee. Well, the apostle mentioned a kind of piety that was like "tinkling cymbals." There is no variation in the sound: it is tinkle, tinkle all the time. Like sleigh-bells they jingle because they get moved by somebody who is really alive and subject to the vicissitudes of life. Now these people think that they must keep in just such a mood because the apostle said that we must "rejoice evermore" "always" and "again," etc. But they should bear in mind that the same apostle had a good deal to say about the groaning of believers. Rom. 8: 22. "For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now."

Every creature is involved in the state of physical unrest in consequence of sin introduced into the world by the fall of man. See the innocent babe groan and cry with pain when it is cutting its teeth; and then again after they are cut, with the toothache; and again when they are pulled. And it seems as though the earth itself shared in the common grief, for perhaps as soon as the sun is risen on a beautiful June morning, and all nature seems to smile, then suddenly the earth groans and trembles in the spasms of an earthquake. How like humanity, who one hour perhaps are rejoicing in high spirits, and the next prostrate on a bed of pain!

Oh, you say, by faith we can skip over all this. No, you can't. Verse 23—"And not only they [creation] but ourselves also, who have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of the body." "Oh, well," you say, "I have no objections to your groaning within, if you don't groan right out." Well, what is inside generally once in a while shows itself without. The earth groans right out at Mt. Vesuvius and elsewhere. June mornings must stand back there. The old earth must groan, and if you want to sit down and rest and fan yourself there upon the crater, it won't stop it. Are we any better than the earth? Weren't we made of it? Aren't we "of the earth earthy?" Then we, the children, in part, of the earth must groan until our mother is redeemed.

"For we that are in this tabernacle [this body] do groan," says Paul (2 Cor. 5: 4) "being burdened: not that we would be unclothed,"—we don't want to die; there is another way out of the trouble: by the coming of the Life-giver,—"but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." We do not want to be swallowed up with mortality; but we want "death swallowed up in victory"—triumphant with immortality bestowed upon us by the coming of our Wellington—Christ Jesus—in this Waterloo of trouble and death. "For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing," says Paul—Rom. 7: 18. Then we shall probably be more or less troubled with it until we get rid of it by not going out of it in a disembodied manner, but by the renewing work of the power of God at the resurrection and restoration.

"He who hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Christ." Are you converted, sanctified, "filled with the Spirit"? Then it is but just begun. What you enjoy is but "the earnest," or proof, "until the redemption of the purchased possession. You are in your minority, and not worth a cent only prospectively—only by promise until you "become of age"—till you come into the inheritance. Your good feelings are not from actual possession, but anticipatory of it. You may therefore rejoice, but "take heed lest you fall" and lose your title, which is conditional until the day of redemption.

True Christian rejoicing is no shallow, external tinkling cymbals nor sounding brass. There is a great deal of high-keyed profession now-a-days. People have come not only to the place where they do not appreciate the apostolic groaning for the resurrection adoption, but they act quite independent about it. And it is quite natural that they should, for they are not taught the difference. To keep the doctrines of the nature of man in life, death, and the future state, and the plan of redemption shrouded in some mystery has been the aim of many Christian teachers. And so they are taught to believe that conversion adopts them into the full possession, with the exception of the part that death plays in sending them to glory. And on other hands, we often hear people say they are so happy that "just a touch of immortality" would be all that was needed. Well, for our part, we want a little more than a touch. We yearn and groan to be built all over under the recreative hand of God. Though enjoying a [illegible] the first fruits of the [illegible] the full ha[illegible] known [illegible] fold[illegible]

A GLOOMY PICTURE.

Mr. Potter, United States Consul at Crefeld, Germany, has communicated some very startling figures relating to the increase of population in Europe, and the prospect of future food supply. He says the increase of population in England and Europe (with the exception of France,) is one and a half per cent. annually. The annual increase would therefore be about 3,375,000 annually, or 36,000,000 in ten years. He says that while the increase of population is large, the capacity of the country for producing food cannot possibly be increased, for every arable acre is now used. He states that the present production of grain is annually fully 350,000,000 bushels short of a supply. Following the above figures, he says:

"Next year the surplus population will be some millions greater, and the deficiency in grain products will be correspondingly augmented; and thus will the difference between consumption and demand continue to rapidly widen as the years roll on. So far as food supply is concerned, the people in the thickly-populated area of Europe appear to be 'living from hand to mouth;' and in each year, before the beginning of a new harvest, it is not probable that there is in the country a supply of breadstuffs which would meet the demands for home consumption for a period of thirty days. The deficiency in the meat supply can be measured by that of breadstuffs and grain. Any disturbance of the elements, therefore, which produces a season of unusual rain, cold, or heat, and which reduces the crops below an average yield, is now justly a source of anxiety, if not of alarm, to European statesmen, who measure the future by the lessons of the past and the standard facts of the present day. When viewed with a prospect of possible war between European States they assume a still more serious aspect; and I have reason to believe that the reports of the able Boards of Commerce in some parts of the Continent have presented facts and figures and drawn conclusions therefrom which the highest governmental authorities have not deemed proper information to be laid before the public. Some of these commercial organizations have been actually suppressed because insisting upon their privilege of reporting and publishing facts and conclusions drawn therefrom. If, according to estimates, the grain crop of the present year falls 350,000,000 bushels below the annual consumption, with a corresponding deficiency in the meat supply, what is likely to be the rate of increase in future demands from foreign sources, and where is the supply to come from?"

He then, as confirmatory of his statements, and to explain the probabilities of future serious trouble, says:

"The steady increase in the price of food for the past ten years, while wages, if not declining, are tottering on the brink of a fall, is a sufficient indication that the food-producing capacity of Europe has been strained to its utmost, and still falls far short of meeting the demands for home consumption. And now the necessity for having a source of supply that will be certain, with adequate arrangements for its economical and rapid delivery, are questions which are being earnestly pressed upon the consideration of the Governments immediately interested."

Mr. Potter also makes a statement relating to quantity of food which will be required for the natural increase of population for the next ten years, excluding from this computation the present population and its deficiencies. In this estimate he includes but two kinds of food, bread and meat, and gives to each person the amount allowed by governments to their soldiers. He says:

"The result will be as follows:

The daily consumption of bread would be, tons	20,089
The yearly consumption of bread would be, tons	7,332,485
The number of bushels of wheat required, at four bushels for one barrel of flour, to make this bread would be, bushels	335,199,116
If in flour, the number of barrels required would be yearly, barrels	83,799,778
Assuming the meat supply to be all beef, the daily consumption would be, tons	8,035
The yearly consumption would be, tons	2,932,775
The number of cattle required to furnish this amount of beef, assuming each to weigh on foot 1000 pounds, and one half of this weight to be merchantable fresh meat, would be (yearly) cattle	13,138,832
The united weight of bread and slaughtered meat to be imported in one year would be, tons	10,265,200
The number of ships, at 1000 tons each, necessary to transport this amount of food would be, ships	10,265 and night, an expert male nailer can earn $4 a week, his wife 74 cents, and his twelve years old daughter 39 cents—total $5.13. From this meagre sum, the earnings of three persons, is taken 36 cents for the carriage of iron and nails, for fire and the wear of tools, leaving the net earnings $4.77. Mr. Porter relates a conversation he had "with a pale-faced, half-starved looking woman with a fresh-looking daughter of sixteen at her side," who had just brought on foot forty-six pounds of nails from their home, six miles distant, to the place where the work is given out. He ascertained that these two women got ten shillings for making these nails, "working six days early and late." From this sum a shilling is deducted for fire and tools, leaving the two women $2.16 for their week's work, upon which they must exist. "That is all we can make," said the woman. "How do you manage to live?" asked Mr. Porter. "We don't live; we hardly exist. We rarely taste meat."

"Many of the nailers actually starve, and cases of the deepest sorrow are not uncommon. 'Misery,' as the London Standard correspondent wrote, 'so deep and dreadful that the most graphic pen can but faintly convey its depth of sorrow, are witnessed.'

Now that I have visited this region, and walked through it, and conversed with at least a hundred of these industrial slaves, continues the writer, I can add my testimony to establish the fact that the poor in England are day by day and year by year getting poorer."

Mr. Porter also describes other classes of workmen, and says of velvet and ribbon weavers in Coventry:

"These people live in houses having two rooms. The front room is the living room, which is furnished with the wife's loom, a bedstead, a chair or two, and a little round table by the fire. The husband's loom and a few miscellaneous articles furnish the back room. The work requires skill and strength, yet the most the men can make is about 2.40 a week, from which is paid from 60 to 70 cents for rent, leaving $1.80 as the net wages of a man who works many hours each day. The weavers, who appear to be intelligent men, say that they are literally dying of starvation, a starvation which does its work slowly because it is the result of insufficient food."

A silk weaver reported thus:

"Working twelve to thirteen hours, perhaps, I may make sixty cents a day. If you were to come in at nine to-night you would find me at work. I don't believe I made more than ninety-six dollars last year. Live, sir? We don't live—only just muddle to keep off dying. When people talk to me about the price of meat, I often say that it wouldn't matter to me if there wasn't no meat at all. We never get none—'cept, perhaps, now and then half a pound of bullock's liver between the six of us."

We have seen the statistics of the wages of weavers in Lyons, France, which is about the same as those in England. When we take into account the present short food supply in Europe, and the fact that there are millions who do not obtain a comfortable supply, together with the fact that this terrible state of things is becoming worse every year, the situation is truly alarming. Added to this hideous picture is the fact that the employers of these half-starved millions are heaping up wealth, the earnings of these enslaved laborers, as never before.

The people of this country do not realize the danger that such circumstances produce, neither do those who expect many hundreds of years in the future of peace and prosperity comprehend what the condition of this country would be if the present increase of population should continue.

We here give extracts from an article from the pen of A. Wilford Hall, published in Wilford's Microcosm, and quoted in Messiah's Herald, with editorial comments, that our readers may understand what would result from the present progression of human affairs if time should continue as many anticipate. Mr. Hall says:

"The political economist and statistician cannot fail to look with interest, mingled even with deep concern, upon the problem of the present rapid increase of the population of the earth, and especially of the United States. What is to become of the people of this country in a few generations when, by manifest destiny, they will fill the whole northern part of this country from the Isthmus to Alaska so compactly that by no stretch of the imagination can we see how food sufficient can be produced for their sustenance." . . .

"It is now manifest, by census figures, that the inhabitants of this country are doubling in numbers in about every twenty-five years. There is therefore no reasonable doubt but by the year A. D. 1900, the United States will contain 100,000,000 people. In 1925: 200,000,000; in 1950: 400,000,000; and by the close of the coming century, 1,600,000,000 inhabitants, all of whom will have to be fed and clothed and sheltered, by the products of the tillable land of the country, since the people of other lands will increase proportionately, prohibiting any reliance upon imports to help sustain our own dense population.

But these figures are only a bagatelle compared with those which another century and a half must inevitably pile up, and whose formidable proportions are the present source of alarm to the political economist. A hundred and fifty years more, or in less time from the present writing than we are now from the landing of the pilgrims at Plymouth Rock, and the United States alone will contain 102,400,000,000 inhabitants, or more than one hundred times the present population of the entire earth! No wonder that far-seeing statesmen of the Pacific slope, from motives of self-preservation for their children's children's posterity, wish to keep out the swarming and rapidly multiplying millions of China and other Asiatic countries!"

We quote an extract from the Herald's comments upon the above as follows:

"The statistical difficulty is easily solved by a believer in the Bible as a revelation from God. That book teaches that as sure as this dispensation had a beginning it will have an end. As one knowing the size of a room can easily calculate how many people it will hold, so a calculation may be made with considerable accuracy as to the time when the earth will be replenished" with inhabitants. Suppose we admit the Microcosm's "facts and figures" to be "here faithfully massed" what follows?

The doctrine of the millennium, or of [illegible] and years of universal holiness and [illegible] on earth, before the second coming [illegible] ist is untrue, for if in "less than [illegible] years" the land would be so [illegible] to be utterly unable to give [illegible] ople, to think of the mul[illegible] ce for a thousand years [illegible] all war, pestilence, [illegible] w abound—is abso[illegible]

[illegible] is at hand. We [illegible] that the gos[illegible] a continuous [illegible] orse a thou[illegible] riod."

[illegible] us statis[illegible] rrect the [illegible] Men [illegible] which [illegible] pulation [illegible] and will cut short the work in righteousness. Worldly scientists may be unable to "look at these figures without a sense of gloom, and even sadness, creeping over their thoughts;" but the Christian need not. If such a crowded state of the world must come in about "a hundred and fifty years more," then be assured, that before that time arrives the Lord will return to close the dispensation by the glorification of his church and the judgment of the world. Something else than "very appalling features" are thus "brought to light by these indisputable statistics." If they are indeed reliable they point to the day being not far distant when the great prayer of the church—"Come, Lord Jesus"—will be answered, and "the redemption that is in Christ Jesus" will have its consummation. "Have faith in God."

The statistics are statements of facts, and they show conclusively that the present progression cannot possibly continue a long time. A radical change must come, and God has told what that change will be.

BRO. FASSETT.

Bro. O. R. Fassett, of Minnesota, is contemplating visiting New England (not England as we previously published) the present season, and it is probable that his wife, a very efficient preacher of the blessed gospel, will accompany him. They expect to start for the East quite early in July, and we suggest that the cause of truth will be benefitted, our churches comforted, and sinners warned and perhaps saved, by their being invited to preach on their way coming and going, and by laboring with our churches and at campmeetings as much as convenient while in the East. Their address is Rockford, Minn. We also expect other faithful and able ministers of the West (we are not able to say who at present) will visit the East this season, and we hope our people will embrace the opportunity to secure their labor as much as possible. May the Lord direct and open the way. J. C.

THAT NEW BOOK.

The book noticed briefly in the last Crisis, entitled THE WORLD'S GREAT EMPIRES, written by Sister M. McKinstry, is before us. We examined some of the work in proof-sheet, and since its publication have given it a cursory examination. We are much pleased with its general appearance, the orderly arrangement of its subjects, the sober and dignified tone of its arguments, its lucid and unambiguous statements, the vast importance of the subjects treated, and its bold and triumphant defence, indirectly given, of the inspiration of the Scriptures. The great effort of the author was to show that God's predictions in the Bible relating to past earthly events have been fulfilled exactly according to the legitimate signification of the prophetic words used, and at the very periods designated, thus showing that none but an omniscient and almighty Being could have been the author of the Bible prophecies. It contains the prophetic lectures, with much additional matter, which Sister McKinstry has delivered to many of our churches with marked acceptance.

The book is principally filled with prophetical scriptural quotations and extracts from history, which are supposed to record the events which fulfilled those predictions. It gives the prophecy and the history in such connection that the comparison becomes very easy. The quotations both from Bible and history, as far as we have examined, we believe are very correct. The histories quoted from are of the most approved class. The arguments are not visionary and speculative, making human opinion the standard of faith, but they rest upon scriptural interpretations governed by rules which have been approved by our standard writers for many centuries.

It will be a valuable work for historic reference, especially to those who are desirous of obtaining the historic proof of the fulfillment of prophecy. We can recommend every minister, who may desire to understand or preach prophecy, to obtain a copy of this work. It should be in every family who love the appearing of Christ, and would know if it is at hand. May the blessing of God be upon the book, and He use it for the comforting of saints and the salvation of sinners. J. C.

HEAVEN—WHERE?—No. 2.

Of the many exalted and imposing occasions in our Lord's life and ministry few touch the heart more profoundly and tenderly than the scene of the last supper. This was the Redeemer's last free interview with his disciples this side his resurrection.

The repast itself was eminently social. But when the feast was finished the Master led the conversation in words of the most lofty and solemn import; opening to the slow apprehension of the disciples the grander purposes of his ministry and the broader and more sublime features of his kingdom, and comforting them with glimpses of future glory of which they had not conceived. He breaks to their disappointed hopes the fact that he must soon leave them in a world hostile to them and to him, and to his gospel; and then comforts them with the assurance that his going away is needful for the full fruition of their expectations, and that he would "Come again" and receive them into "mansions" which he would prepare for them, where they should dwell with him forever.

The following were among his gracious words: "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." John 14: 2, 3.

This scripture makes it plain, first, that the everlasting abode of glorified saints will be a PLACE. If the ethereal regions or the universe at large is Heaven, it is difficult to see in what sense Jesus needed to "go and prepare a place;" as the universe, with all the worlds constituting it, and all the regions and conditions belonging to it, was in full and—excepting our world—unimpaired existence.

It is, moreover, conclusively proved by this quotation from St. John that Heaven, whatever and wherever it may be, did not exist, in a prepared condition, when Jesus went away; for he said, "I go to prepare a place for you." It follows, therefore, that none who had died before the time that the text was spoken had gone to the place which Christ went to "prepare"; and allowing the "place" spoken of by the Saviour to mean Heaven—which we think no one will deny—then it is certain that none of the patriarchs or prophets went to heaven at death, as the "place" was not then prepared.

The text proves, further, that the "place" which Jesus promised to "prepare" for his people cannot be entered upon until Christ comes; for he said, "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself."

Could Jesus have meant by the words, "I will come again and receive you unto myself," that they were to come to him, one by one, at death? Can any one believe that the disciples so understood his meaning? These wonderful words of the Saviour must have carried the minds of his disciples forward to a time when their Lord would really come again for the purpose of receiving them—and all his people—into glorious habitations which—previously to receiving them—he would make ready for their eternal occupancy. Nothing [illegible] could have been rationally infe[illegible] t that their heavenly abode would be [illegible] l, literal mansions not then in existence—certainly not then prepared.

The heavenly abode is called a kingdom. "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." 2 Tim. 4: 1.

And this "kingdom," like the "mansions" is associated with Christ's coming—"at his appearing." And by turning back to the prophecy of Daniel we shall discover where Christ's kingdom is to be and when it will obtain. "And I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came in the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom; that all people, nations and languages should serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." Dan. 7: 13, 14.

Here, as always in the New Testament, the kingdom of Christ is associated with his "coming in the clouds of heaven"; showing that the kingdom of Heaven—will [illegible] the saints at the [illegible] urn of the Savio[illegible] not till then.

And in the [illegible] it is said, "The kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom."

Under—not in nor above—but under the whole heavens the everlasting kingdom of Christ stretched away in prophetic vision. The "stone kingdom," in actual and literal dominion, filled the whole earth. What the prophet saw was the saints' Heaven; and it was on the earth. His [illegible] ted vision w[illegible] enraptured by an Elysium, thronged with bloodless, heartless, voiceless, shapeless spirits; dancing, whirling, quivering amidst ethereal changes, evermore. But his inspired view grasped a universal empire—kingdom—on this earth, renewed; a kingdom as literal and visible as any of the empires now existing. And that kingdom, covering the entire new earth territory, and filled with the glory of God, will be Heaven.

"O the transporting, rapturous scene
That rises to my sight;
[illegible] arrayed in living green,
And rivers of delight."

IN AFFLICTION.

We clip the following from a Cambridge paper:

"There has come to our notice this week the death of an estimable young woman, who has been called hence after a brief illness of pneumonia.

Miss Addie S. Hoitt, on th[illegible] of reaching a majority of years [illegible] a sweet and affectionate dispo[illegible] by family and friends, re[illegible] for her worth of character by her [illegible] ates and other friends, the loved one [illegible] aged and devoted father, has gone to join the mother gone before. All that medical skill could offer was brought into requisition to thwart the fatal consequences of disease, but it was disposed that death must claim its own, and on Sunday last the young life became a sacrifice. The funeral of the deceased was attended by many friends of the family and by the former [illegible] associates of the deceased, who ar[illegible] by the gold beating firm of th[illegible] Cabot of Boston, where the depa[illegible] in service in the booking [illegible] ent. Fl[illegible] tributes, of exquisite ta[illegible] desig[illegible] contributed in great profusi[illegible] one in[illegible] ticular—'The Gates Ajar'—being a con[illegible] uous offering from the establishment of the Messrs. Cabot. The remains were conveyed to the Forest Hills Cemetery. Mr. B. B. Hoitt, restaurateur, Essex street, father of the deceased, has the sympathy of a wide circle of friends in his bereavement."

This be[illegible] falls very heavily on Bro. Hoitt [illegible] family. It is not long since the [illegible] of this estimable young lady was cut down by death. Side by side they sleep—mother and daughter—until the glad hour when he who called Lazarus from the tomb, and who, in his own person, conquered death and the grave, shall come and awaken all the sleepers, and bring his own, in blessed reunion, to a country that will never be invaded by sickness, pain nor death.

Bro. Hoitt is a worthy member, and one of the deacons of the Boston church; and he has the sympathy and prayers of all.

THE SECOND ADVENT.—No. 1.

The glory of the Scriptures is the coming of the Lord. To eliminate this truth from the Sacred Books were like blotting the sun from the heavens. The Holy Word bends under the all-pervading splendors of the promised appearing. Every page is aglow with great hopes, to be realized when the King of glory shall come. Faith and love would lose their charm if the promise of seeing Jesus "as he is" were blighted. The heart would grow cold with doubt and fear and sadness if made to feel that the object of its truest and fondest pulsations must remain forever obscured.

The burden of prophetic vision was the first and second advent—the second to be the culmination of all the divine meaning of the first. Isaiah saw, through the gloom of stormy ages, a "Son," born for the world's redemption, and bearing on his shoulders the government universal. Daniel, in startling vision, beheld amid the last hours of earth's dramatic history, "One like the Son of man," coming in the clouds to receive dominion and a kingdom that should be bounded only by the limit of the heavens. Job, as though looking up from out his grave, covered with the moss of five millenniums, saw his Redeemer, alive and standing on the earth, in the latter day; and the sight revived his mouldering dust into a form of immortal beauty; and with his eyes, and not with the eyes of another, he saw God. And John, the beloved, standing amid the wonders that turned sterile Patmos into a grand gallery of marvelous scenes, of earth and heaven, saw "One like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle. His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire; and his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and his voice as the sound of many waters. And he had in his right hand seven stars: and out of his mouth went a sharp twoedged sword; and his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength."

The full-orbed vision of all the inspired minds was Christ coming in incarnation; Christ coming in glory; Christ reigning, in majesty, in an earthly kingdom, evermore.

DEDICATION.

The Worcester Church will dedicate their new place of worship on SUNDAY, JULY 1st. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited. Order of services will be given in next paper. Per order. E. A. S.

CORRECTION.

In our Editorial of last week the compositor makes us quote Herbert Spencer as saying, "We have need of a Deity," whereas Mr. Spencer says just the opposite—"We have NO need of a Deity." E. A. S.

SINS "GOING BEFORE TO JUDGMENT."

"Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after. Likewise also the good works of some are manifest beforehand." (1 Tim. 5: 24, 25.)

A popular construction [illegible] this text mea[illegible] that si[illegible] rdoned. But is th[illegible] go to the [illegible] before th[illegible] judgment exists? [illegible] pardon precedes the judgment [illegible] is that judgment now in session, [illegible] two reasons why reference cannot be made to the final judgment. Neither does the text say a word about the pardon of sins, nor yet about the judgment day. The text evidently means that temporal judgment is inflicted on some sinners in this life, and likewise some saints receive temporal remuneration for good works, while others wait for the future and final settlement. And all this has been true under the gospel, as really as under the law—some being smitten with blindness for a year, or delivered over to Satan for the destruction of the flesh, or stricken with death. On this principle, in many ways, sins still bring temporal judgment on some before the final judgment. W. S.

THEORIES ABOUT ETERNAL LIFE.

It is so clearly revealed in the Scriptures of truth that eternal life is the portion of the righteous only, and is denied to sinners, that human theories abound concerning what is meant by eternal life, while all agree that it signifies "something immortal in man," let that something be what it may—"something that makes the soul immortal." But if it is really something that makes the soul immortal, it necessarily follows that the soul is not immortal without it, nor prior to receiving it, and consequently that the theory of inherent immortality is untenable; and, furthermore [illegible] involves the [illegible] lost men [illegible] condition, since [illegible] have never [illegible] the eternal life [illegible] said to make the soul immortal; [illegible] is certain that souls cannot live eternally in a mortal state. But what is this "eternal life" that "makes the soul immortal?"

1st. Is it religion, as some tell us? Then the soul is not immortal before getting religion, [illegible] immortal if it should never [illegible] And if this religion should [illegible] eternal life would be [illegible] become of the soul's immortality?

2nd. Is it the Holy Spirit bestowed upon [illegible] others [illegible]? If so, the soul [illegible] immortal [illegible] to its reception, [illegible] the Spirit [illegible] would [illegible] which [illegible] really. Moreover, this [illegible] ordinary claim that man [illegible] ity. When the spirit dep[illegible] life leave the soul?

3rd. Is it the life of the soul, as others claim? If so, then the souls of the righteous only are alive, and those who never become righteous will never have live souls, but souls void of immortality.

To say that "eternal life is something that makes the soul immortal," is to put the result in the place of the cause, for immortality is the basis of eternal life, while eternal life is the result of immortality. Eternal life is a present possession of the saint only in the sense that Christ is his present possession: "This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son hath not life." 1 John 5: 11. Just as it may be said of the owner of a gold mine, "He that hath the mine hath gold," though he has no gold in his pocket. Christ is the Divine reservoir of eternal life, and "When Christ who is our life shall appear," then shall we "reap life everlasting." Sleeping saints will "awake" to "life everlasting." "The gift of God is eternal life through our Lord Jesus Christ," to be imparted when "they that have done good" shall come forth "to the resurrection of life," after which "neither can they die any more." W. S.

ROMAN MONTHS.

A part of the Roman months are named from heathen Deities, a part from Roman Emperors, and a part from the original number of the month as numbered when the year began with March.

1. January comes from Janus, a Roman divinity.
2. February comes from Febru, a feast in which sacrifices were offered to the shades of the dead.
3. March comes from Mars, the name of the dead father of Romulus.
4. April comes from the Latin Aprilis—to open, indicating the season for the earth to open for new fruits.
5. May comes from Maia, the mother of Mercury.
6. June comes from Juno, the name of a heathen goddess.
7. July comes from Julius, the name of an early Roman ruler.
8. August comes from Augustus, the name of another Roman ruler.
9. September comes from Septimus, meaning seventh, it being the seventh month from the original beginning of the year with March.
10. October comes from a word meaning eighth—the eighth from March.
11. November comes from Novem—nine, being the ninth from March.
12. December comes from Decem—ten; it being the tenth month when the year began with March.

Some of these months have changed names several times; and at one time the Romans used movable months, having only ten months to the year, thus causing the same month to fall in different seasons of the year. W. S.

OUR WESTERN CAMPMEETING.

Yes, Bro. Mansfield, we are glad to hear something said about our Western interests on the Campmeeting question. We had such a holy convocation last year at Amboy, that the fire still burns in our heart, and we want our Western people to have another grand and general meeting. As we cannot expect to have as large and efficient a force of our Eastern brethren to help us as we had last year, we need to be all the more earnest in the work. Of course it will take some time for our Committee to locate the site, as they will have many things to take into consideration, but we trust they will do the very best they can. Meanwhile we will encourage them in their work, assuring them that the desire of thousands of our people is that they may be successful in the important trust reposed in them.

Now, brethren and sisters of the West, when you read the long list of Campmeeting notices in the Crisis, and do not see our expected one announced, do not get impatient over it. We believe it will be published in a short time. As we are not one of the Committee, we do not speak with any authority, but simply express our faith in the matter. When the good brethren see that the saints are really anxious about it, perhaps it may accellerate their movements somewhat, as it will inspire them with fresh zeal and courage to arrange for the meeting. So, brethren, you that have this work to do, will receive our prayers, sympathy, and encouragement for its speedy accomplishment, and when the lov[illegible] Jesus and his soon coming kingdom assemble together in the tented grove you may select for them, we hope they will come with sufficient funds to meet whatever expenses may have been incurred for their accommodation and comfort. R. H. B.

BE HOLY.

Again and again we read in the Bible, "Be ye holy, for I am holy." (1 Pet. 1: 16.) Does the dear Lord mean what he says, and say what he means? Does any believer in the sacred Scriptures doubt it? It is a plain positive command, and is applicable to every one who knows there is such a commandment. It takes in all, from the king on the throne, to the beggar by the wayside. No one is allowed to be unholy in the family of the Lord. He is always displeased with unholiness. Holiness is what constitutes the difference between a saint and a sinner, the saved and the lost. Only sin, or unholiness, will prevent a person from becoming an heir to the kingdom of heaven. Only holy ones can live eternally, hence the devil and all his followers must be destroyed. This is God's wise and merciful arrangment.

Holiness is the opposite of sin, and saved is the opposite of lost. The holy will be saved, therefore those who continue in sin to the close of this life, must be lost. There is no salvation for any but holy persons. All who are free from sin are holy, and none others. It would be as sensible to talk about pure filthiness, as to call one a holy sinner. A single sin unpardoned, constitutes a man a sinner. He ceases to be a holy one till that sin is forgiven. And it should be remembered that sin never becomes outlawed, because of its age. The only way of escape is confessing, forsaking, and receiving pardon through faith in Christ.

Would the Lord command us to be holy if it was impossible? Such a commandment would truly be grievous, but we are informed in the Bible that "his commandments are not grievous." Of course, it is not claimed by any Christian that he can be holy without the help of the Lord. We should not be inclined to seek the Lord at all, if it were not for his gracious help, through the influence of the Holy Spirit. [illegible] e can live a holy life independently, [illegible] st first be joined to Christ as the "true [illegible] nd receive from him his strength to overcome the world, the flesh, and the devil. To him belongs all the glory, if we are holy, and thus fitted for salvation. All holy beings are happy, because they are partakers of the divine nature, received from God, through the power of his Holy Spirit. Holiness leads one to love all who are Christ-like. It removes all the sectarian walls, and produces true Christian union. It leads people to love the coming of Jesus, and fits them for the happy day, when he shall appear in all his glory to set up the kingdom of heaven. Praise the Lord for the "blessed hope of seeing Jesus in a "little while." M. G.

RECOMMENDATION.

To all whom it may concern, Greeting:—This is to certify that we, the officers of "Salem Church of God," Lancaster, Penn., hereby give the following:

Resolved; That whereas Elder H. Ziegenfuss has ministered unto us in word and doctrine for the past nine months and in the providence of God he has thought it wisdom to tender his resignation, we do hereby recommend him to be a faithful and earnest laborer in the vineyard, and strong in the faith and hope. We therefore commend him to God, and the word of his grace, cheerfully recommending him to the church at large as a faithful minister of Jesus Christ. Officers of the church:

R. S. Gamber, H. Gorrecht, W. H. Smith, C. F. White, W. H. Gorrecht.

HE who diffuses the most happiness and mitigates the most distress within his own circle, is undoubtedly the best friend of his country and the world, since nothing more is necessary than for all men to imitate his conduct, to make the greatest part of the misery of this world cease in a moment.

Obituaries.

SANBORN. Bro. and Sister A. D. Sanborn, of New Haven, Ct. (formerly of Franklin, N. H.), are in deep affliction in consequence of their loss by death of their only child, Miss Jennie O. Sanborn, aged eighteen years.

She had been in failing health for some months, but under the treatment of skillful physicians her condition seemed to promise improvement; and the air of the country being recommended she was moved from her home in the city to the residence of her uncle in Tilton, N. H. She sustained the journey remarkably well, but soon began to steadily and rapidly decline, until death closed her sufferings on the 14th of May, 1883.

From a child Jennie reverenced the teachings of the Holy Scriptures; and during her last illness in prayer with her parents she committed all to Him whose word "endureth forever." Through life her love for her parents was remarkable, and by all who knew her she was prized for the spotlessness of her beautiful character. While the hearts of dear Bro. and Sister Sanborn bleed "o'er the spoil that death has won" they do not despair, but as true as the needle to the pole their hearts turn to Jesus Christ the "Life of the world" for comfort. Nor do they go to him in vain, for grace has enabled them in this great trial of their faith to feel satisfied with the divine plan for their precious dead to sleep in Jesus until the morning that shall dawn without clouds, when "they that are Christ's at his coming" will "awake in his likeness and be satisfied."

"'Twas sown in weakness here,
'Twill then be raised in power;
That which was sown an earthly seed,
Shall rise a heavenly flower."

The business associates of Bro. Sanborn beautifully expressed their sympathy for himself and wife in this great affliction by sending resolutions and floral emblems from New Haven to them at Franklin, N. H., where the burial took place, by

G. H. WALLACE.

MOULTON. In Groveland, Mass., April 16th, 1883, Sister Ann S. Moulton, wife of Asa P. Moulton, aged sixty-six years.

Bro. and Sister Moulton formerly lived in Deerfield, where she experienced religion in 1849 and joined the Freewill Baptist Church. In 1858 or 1859 she heard Bro. Grant at Pittsfield, and embraced the Advent faith. They moved to Haverhill, where they resided a number of years; moving from there to Groveland, where she died. She leaves a companion, a son and two grand-children to mourn for her. Just before she died she called the family, one by one, to her bedside and talked with them and gave her dying testimony. Her last words were, "I shall rest." The funeral service was at the residence, where the friends, brethren and sisters from Haverhill and kind neighbors gathered to listen to words of comfort discoursed to them by Bro. A. W. Sibley. She was brought to Deerfield, and on the hillside prayer was offered by the writer. We laid her by the side of two daughters to sleep till Jesus comes. May the Lord sanctify this affliction to the good of the mourning ones, and they all be gathered to a land where graves will not be made, is our prayer.

J. M. QUIMBY.

MERRELLS. At Pleasant Valley, Conn., Feb. 22d, 1883, after an illness of one week, Sister Lucia D. Merrells, aged seventy-one years.

Converted in early life, she united with the Methodist Church, and remained with them until 1843, when the news of the speedy coming of Jesus called her out as a pioneer among those who looked for and loved his appearing. This, with holiness of heart, has been the favorite theme of her life. Great firmness of character, combined with large conscientiousness, sometimes made enemies, as she never shrank from what she considered a duty, and was always fearless in speaking what she believed to be the truth; thereby making her a marked character in the community where she lived. Remarkably free from sectarian feeling, she was always ready to lend her influence in sustaining religious exercises among any body of Christians where it was her fortune to be placed. Her heart and hand were ready to respond to the cry of the distressed, so far as lay in her power. The church could illy spare her, but "she rests from her labors, and her works do follow her." May we be ready to greet her in the coming morning.

E. J. RIPLEY.

BUGBEE. In Lowell, Mass., May 14th, 1883, of typhoid pneumonia, Bro. Worcester Bugbee, aged seventy-eight years and three months.

In the demise of this aged pilgrim and father in Israel, the church sustains a loss which will be keenly felt by them, the widow a faithful husband, the children a kind father, and the community an esteemed neighbor and citizen. We laid him away on a beautiful May afternoon, with many affectionate "good byes" of sorrowing relatives and sympathizing friends, till the morning breaks and the shadows flee away. Funeral services conducted by the writer.

"Calm is thy slumber as an infant's sleep;
But thou shalt wake no more to toil or weep—
Thine is a perfect rest, secure and deep.
Good night! Good night!

"Until made beautiful by power divine,
Thou in the likeness of thy Lord shalt shine,
And he shall bring that golden crown of thine.
Good night! Good night!"

H. F. EMERSON.

QUIMBY. At Sugar Hill, N. H., April 14th, 1883, Sister Laura Quimby, aged forty-eight years.

Sister Quimby had for many years been a firm believer in the near coming of Jesus, and lived and died in that faith. Several months before her decease she seemed to have a premonition of approaching death, and wrote letters and sealed them, for the comfort and instruction of her husband and two daughters, after her death. They sorrow and mourn, but not as those without hope. Sermon by the writer, from 1 Cor. 7: 29, 30.

GEO. C. BOWLES.

RIDLEY. At Bowdoin, Me., March 30th, 1883, Mrs. Hannah P. Ridley, aged seventy-three years.

My dear mother has been taken from us, and will be greatly missed by all, both neighbors and friends. She was always ready to go and care for the sick, as she was a great worker; but now is done with the cares of this life, and we have laid her in the grave till Jesus comes to wake the dead; then, by the grace of God, we hope to meet mother again where parting is not known. Sermon by L. C. McKinstry.

[BE]AN. In Warner, N. H., April 13th, 1883, [of t]yphoid pneumonia, Burton Wallace Bean, aged [s]eventeen years.

He was the only son of Alonzo and Rhoda Bean; had been two terms at the High School in Warner Village, and was indeed a promising youth, beloved and respected by all. The blow falls heavily on father and mother, and little sister Mabel, and an aunt who lives in the family and loved him as her own. Burton learned to love Jesus and the hope of the gospel quite young. We believe "it is well with the child." We will soon meet him again. Jesus is coming!

Farewell, dearest Burtie, we grieve for thee sore;
No more shall we meet thee on this mortal shore;
Thy voice now is stilled, hushed now is thy breath;
Eyes beaming with love are now closed in death.

JOHN G. HOOK.

LIBBY. In West Poland, Me., May 25, 1883, Ollie May, daughter of Eld. J. A. Libby, aged six years.

She suffered a great deal for one so young, but she has always borne her suffering with admirable fortitude. She was a very interesting child, mature, intelligent, loving and thoughtful. She loved and trusted in the Saviour. She expected to live till a short time before her death, when she said, "I wanted to live, but I can't." But she will live again. Bro. and Sister Libby feel deeply their loss, but they sorrow not as others who have no hope. Funeral at the Free Chapel, West Poland, Sunday, May 27. Text, 2 Kings 4:26.

AUSTIN W. TAYLOR.

SMITH. In Pepperell, Mass., May 18th, 1883, of consumption, Sr. Clara J., wife of Joseph W. Smith, aged twenty-three years and four months.

Sister Smith was converted some years ago, and was baptized by Eld. M. A. Potter, but lost her first love, until recently she renewed her covenant with the Lord and came out happy in the Lord. She died a faithful, consistent Christian. She leaves a husband and one child to mourn her loss. Services by the writer.

Notices.

Annual Meeting of the Second Advent Christian Association.

The next Annual Meeting of the Second Advent Christian Association will be held at Chelsea, Mass., commencing on Tuesday, August 7th, 1883, at one o'clock P. M.

According to the present Constitution of this Association each Conference co-operating with this Association has a right to one delegate, and one additional delegate for every three hundred members of churches in its membership.

A church or churches in sections not embraced in any Conference limits, may send one delegate.

Any Conference two hundred miles from the place of meeting may authorize one or more resident delegates to cast its entire vote.

Conferences of one thousand miles distance may be represented in entirety by a non-resident delegate.

The Conferences west of the States of New York and Pennsylvania may be represented by the six chosen delegates of the West.

All delegates must individually be acting in sympathy and co-operation with the objects of this Association. For the Board of Managers,

E. A. STOCKMAN, President.
F. BURR, Secretary.

Conference Notice.

The New York A. C. Conference will hold its Annual Session with the church in Springwater, Livingston Co., N. Y. (D. V.), commencing on Thursday evening, June 21st, and holding over the following Sunday. A free invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth. Homes will be provided for all who come to do good and to get good. Dear brethren and sisters, this may be our last gathering before we meet Jesus. Then let us act accordingly. Let all bring a blessing with them, and not come together in a frigid condition expecting to thaw out by the fire of some one else. Let us come together with hearts filled with love to God and to the perishing, that some may be saved as the result of this meeting.

A. P. MOORE, President.
O. M. OWEN, Secretary.

Important Notice.

A committee of five is hereby appointed to decide both the time and place of holding the next General Meeting of the Advent element of Southern California.

Committee: C. I. Blackman, W. L. Shatto, Tustin City. Sarah Abel and James Pratt, San Bernardino. Wm. Henderson, for Riverside and Redland.

Bro. Blackman will act as Corresponding Secretary, and the balance of the committee will make known their mind to him, and he will report to the July meeting.

V. F. HUNT.

Southern California.

The third Quarterly Meeting of the Tustin A. C. Church will convene in their house of worship on the night of July 13th, 1883; the meetings to continue over the Sabbath. Let all interested ones be prompt at this meeting. Heb. 10:25.

V. F. HUNT.

NOTICE.—Parties who may desire the proclamation of the sturdy elements that go to make up the great Advent message in their locality, the coming fall campaign, may find it to the interest of the cause of truth to correspond with VIRGIL HUNT, Box 8, Tustin City, Los Angeles County, California.

Grove Meeting.

A Grove Meeting will be held (D. V.) at Brome, P. Q., in the Taylor neighborhood or vicinity, to commence Tuesday, June 12th, and hold over the following Sunday. We expect Brn. D. W. Sornberger, C. S. Shattuck and Jonas Sornberger to be present to preach the Word. All are cordially invited to attend and join us in this feast, and work for the salvation of the perishing, believing that what we do must be done quickly. The Master is soon coming. Leave all your hobbies at home. Provision will be made for those coming from a distance. Brethren John Ruiter, Wm. Bullard and John Taylor will act as committee on that occasion. Those desiring, can correspond with them at Sweetsburg, P. Q.

I. W. SORNBERGER, President.

Conference Notice.

The third Quarterly Conference of the Second District of Arkansas will meet with the Church of God at Green Brier, Faulkner County, at eleven o'clock on Friday morning before the third Sunday in June, and continue over the following Sunday. Any one that has any business they wish brought before this Conference, that cannot attend, can have the same done by writing to the Secretary. We humbly trust that all the brethren will come with a full purpose of heart to do all they can for the soon coming Lord. Hoping that all of like precious faith will govern themselves accordingly. JOHN W. TEAS, Secretary, Morrilton, Arkansas, P. O. Box 58.

Conference Notice.

The next session of the Penobscot Valley A. C. Conference will be held at the Jackman schoolhouse in Sangerville, Me., commencing Thursday, June 28th, at half-past two o'clock, and holding over the following Sunday. This place is on the direct road from Dexter Village to Sangerville Village, about five miles from either place. There are but few Adventists in this section. It is through a request of the Freewill Baptist Church in this place that we hold this Conference there. It is in a thriving farming community, and brethren and sisters will find good and pleasant homes. Come, all who can, filled with the Spirit of the Lord [illegible]

G. W. BEAN, Secretary.

BEEBE PLAIN ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a General Campmeeting will be held at Beebe Plain, P. Q., commencing June 22d, and closing July 2nd. It is a beautiful ground, with ample accommodations for a large gathering; and such a gathering we hope to have. Brn. Couch, Grant, Goodrich and Mathewson are expected, with others as the Lord may direct. Board by the day or meal; and other provision will be furnished on the ground by the Committee at low rates. Also feed and stabling for horses. Any profits which may come from the boarding-house or stables will go to the support of the meeting as usual. But the profits are small, and the expenses are necessarily quite large—much larger than a great many who attend these meetings imagine. However, the debt on the ground has been greatly diminished in the past two years, and as we wish to make another large payment this year, we hope all who can conveniently do so will pay up the old pledges, which still remain due.

The following arrangements have been made with several Railroads: The Passumpsic R. R. will sell tickets good to go and return at a trifle over half fare. The Boston, Concord & Montreal R. R. will sell tickets for fare one way; these tickets to be purchased of the conductors to Woodsville and return. Cross over to Wells River and purchase a Passumpsic Campmeeting ticket to Stanstead Junction. Those coming over Central Vt. R. R., purchase tickets to points of junction with Passumpsic R. R.; then purchase Campmeeting tickets and receive of the Secretary on the ground return checks on the Central Vt. On the Grand Trunk R.R. fare will be one and one-third. Tickets good to go and return to and from points of junction with Passumpsic R. R., and then purchase Campmeeting tickets to Stanstead Junction. To those coming over Montpelier and Wells River R. R., purchase tickets for Wells River, and then Passumpsic Campmeeting tickets, and receive from the Secretary on the ground return checks over the Montpelier and Wells River Road. Those coming over the So. Eastern R. R., purchase tickets to Newport, and then Passumpsic Campmeeting tickets to Stanstead Junction, and receive from the Secretary on the ground return checks over the South Eastern. Those coming over the Central Vt. R. R., purchase tickets to points of junction with Passumpsic R. R., then purchase Campmeeting tickets, and receive of the Secretary on the ground return checks on the Central Vermont. Those coming over the St. Johnsbury and Lake Champlain R. R., purchase tickets to St. Johnsbury, and then Passumpsic Campmeeting tickets to Stanstead Junction, and receive from the Secretary return checks over the St. Johnsbury and Lake Champlain R. R.

Look well to baggage, and see that it is marked "300 C. M.," in addition to all other checks or marks, as all roads do not check through. All ministers who think of attending the meeting to labor with us, will be entitled to a free pass over the Passumpsic R. R., by forwarding their names to the Secretary, G. W. Clark, Stanstead, P. Q., before the 15th of June. Pray that God's blessing may especially rest on this meeting.

S. G. MATHEWSON, President.
G. W. CLARK, Secretary.

Special Notice.—Postponement.

Owing to the prevalence of the small pox in the regions near Rockford, Minn., the town is quarantined, and no public meetings can be held in the place for the present; hence the Minnesota Annual Conference and Campmeeting are postponed till some future time, due notice of which will be given.

E. K. SMITH, Secretary.

NOTICE.—Elder A. W. Sibley having accepted the pastoral charge of the Advent Christian Church, Haverhill, Mass., will have the exclusive control of the desk. All the correspondence relating thereto should be directed to him, No. 12 Ar[illegible] Street, Haverhill, Mass.

A. D. WILSON, Sec.

NOTICE.—In visiting the East this summer, we purpose to go in time to attend the Tremont Campmeeting, and shall be at liberty to visit and preach the Word to churches that desire it, on Sundays July 22d, and August 5th and 12th.

D. R. & E. S. MANSFIELD, Auburn, Ill.

NOTICE.—Having changed my post office address from Taunton, Mass., to Haverhill, Mass., please send all my postal matter accordingly, and oblige.

A. W. SIBLEY.

Lectures of the World's Great Empires.

We are now prepared, after an unavoidable delay in making some arrangements, to give the lectures on the above themes. Mrs. McKinstry will hereafter give nine lectures in the course instead of eight as formerly, and there will be added other matters of great interest to the subjects. Any churches or campmeetings where the lectures are desired, can be accommodated by addressing as below. These are stirring times, and it is important that the great truths which take every argument from the mouth of the skeptic, and show the significant relation of these times to the GREAT DAY OF GOD be thus presented. Address ELDER L. C. MCKINSTRY, Beebe Plain, Vt. (for the U. S.) Stanstead Junction, P. Q. (for Canada.)

N. B. All arrangements made will be duly published herewith.

NOTICE.

The Pamphlets ordered to be printed by vote of the P. Q. and N. H. and N. Vt. Conference, containing the address of the President, Eld. [illegible], with the CHURCH COVENANT and other matter, will be ready for delivery at the BEEBE PLAIN CAMPMEETING. The price will be about ten cts. each.

L. C. MCKINSTRY, Committee of Publication.

Quarterly Conference.

Our next Quarterly Session of the Kennebec Valley Quarterly Conference will be held with the church at Fairfield, Me., commencing Thursday evening, June 14th, at [illegible] o'clock, and continue over Sunday. All are cordially invited to come and work for God, and to save perishing sinners. Call on Bro. A. H. Clark and Henry [illegible], who will provide homes for all.

H. S. MITCHELL, President.
E. O. DINSMORE, Secretary.

Conference Notice.

The second Quarterly Meeting of the Northwest Michigan A. C. Conference will [illegible] church in Dayton [illegible] of Fremont, [illegible] 15th, [illegible] the [illegible] Fremont on Friday [illegible] Come, ye lovers of [illegible] appearing. Let us have a [illegible] meeting.

JOHN BOWER, President.

Conference Notice.

There will be a Conference of those looking for the "blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ," at Simonds, N. B., commencing June 14th, and holding over the following Sunday. We hope there will be a gathering of the brethren and sisters to work for God. Should be glad to welcome brethren and sisters from abroad, both preachers and laity. For the brethren,

J. R. HALL.

NOTICE.—The next session of the Oxford and Androscoggin Co. Conference will be held with the brethren at Hartford, Me., commencing Friday, June 15th, at seven o'clock in the evening, to hold over the following Sunday.

JARED WHITMAN, President.
JOSHUA HOWARD, Secretary.

Conference Notice.

The third Quarterly Meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y., will be held with the Little Marsh church, in the town of Middlebury, Tioga County, Pa., at the Button school-house, commencing Friday evening, June 15th, to continue over Sunday. It is earnestly desired that all the churches be represented at this meeting.

E. H. EGGLESTON, President.
C. W. STEPHENS, Secretary.

NOTICE.—The Annual Meeting of the Beebe Plain Advent Campmeeting Association will be held on the Camp-ground at Beebe Plain, P. Q., on Thursday, June 28th, at 8 o'clock A. M., for the election of officers for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of all other regular business. It is hoped that all who are interested in the increase of the meeting will be in attendance.

G. W. CLARK, Secretary.

NOTICE.—There will be a meeting in the grove near David Libby's, in Newfield, Me., July 4th, where it was held four years ago. Brethren M. Stevens, J. Gay, — Andrews, and others will be present. It will be a basket meeting. The brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to come, as ample provision will be made for all.

A. WENTWORTH.

NOTICE.—The Advent Chapel at Cape Elizabeth, Me., will be dedicated to the Lord's service on the third Sunday in June, if the Lord will. It is desirable that a large number of our preach[ers] [illegible]

OVERCOMETH!

To him that overcometh—
Oh, word divinely strong!
The victor's palm, the fadeless wreath,
The grand, immortal song;
And his the hidden manna,
And his the polished stone,
Within whose whiteness shines the name
Revealed to him alone.

To him that overcometh—
Ah, what of bitter strife,
Before he win the battle's gage,
And snatch the crown of life!
What whirl of crossing weapons,
What gleam of flashing eyes,
What storm debate with hearty foes,
Must be before the prize!

To him that overcometh
Shall trials aye befall;
The world, the flesh, the devil—
He needs must face them all.
Sweet sirens of temptation
May lure with silvery strain,
And cope he must with subtle foes,
And bleed with fiery pain.

To him that overcometh
A mighty help is pledged;
He wields a sword of purest mold,
By use of cycles edged.
And prophets and confessors,
A matchless, valiant band,
Have vanquished earth and stormed the skies
With that triumphant brand.

To him that overcometh—
Oh, promise of good cheer!
The Lord himself who died for him
Will evermore be near.
Here, dust upon his garments,
There, robes that royal be;
For "on my throne," the King hath said,
"Mine own shall sit with me."

To him that overcometh—
Oh, word divinely strong!
It weaves itself through weary hours
Like some rejoicing song.
For his the hidden manna,
And his the name unknown,
Which Christ the Lord one day of days
Will tell to him alone.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

J. F. C. writes from North Bucksport, Me., May 29:—"Our little church has been greatly refreshed by the meeting of the Penobscot Valley Conference held with us on the 17th of May, and continuing over the following Sabbath. The meetings were characterized by much fervency, and the exhortations were with power. God was truly with us, and our hearts were made glad. Brethren and sisters from Bangor, Rockland, Orrington and other places came in the demonstration of the Spirit and power. The veterans of '43 and '4 were well represented, and their faith in a soon coming King could not be mistaken. The attendance during this series of meetings was good, the Chapel being filled most of the time with an attentive audience. The truth of God has taken deep root in this region, and is destined to make still greater progress. Four persons have been buried with Christ in baptism, and others will soon go forward in the path of obedience. We trust that the Spirit of God will awaken many more, and that a goodly number will be ready to welcome the great King."

[The spot where we first drew breath and opened our eyes upon the scenes of this strange world is in Maine. Our ancestors sleep in its green valleys. At tidings from the dear old [illegible] State a thousand tender remembrances throng on us. We seem again in our childhood days, and hear the ringing laughter of our playmates and schoolfellows as though it were but yesterday. But oh, how the restless years have rushed along! Where are those we loved of yore? We cannot hear [illegible] for the answer. Well, when the restitution dawns, some precious treasures will come from the hillsides and valleys of our dear old Maine. May God bless the army of noble defenders of the Faith throughout the State, and give them success everywhere, as in the Penobscot Valley.—E. A. S.]

BRO. E. M'CULLOCH writes from Salem, Mass.:—"We have good news to report from the church in Salem, Mass. I have been laboring here on Sundays most of the time for a few months past, and the interest has been steadily increasing. The church, under the power of the Holy Spirit, is alive, and unity prevails. Last Thursday evening at the prayer meeting we had thirty-one testimonies and seven prayers, besides a multitude of songs; and yesterday (Sunday) at the conference meeting we had thirty-eight testimonies beside a number of prayers, and the power of God rested down upon us in great measure; and at one o'clock P. M. we repaired to the Ocean Beach, where beneath its surging billows we planted in the likeness of Christ's death seven rejoicing believers; one a young man who had made no preparation for baptism, upon the invitation being given for any one who wished to be baptized to manifest it, came forward and desired to follow Christ in this ordinance, and thus gloriously imitated some who gladly heard the word in the days of the apostles and were baptized. And still the work goes on, and on next Sunday there are several more to go forward in this ordinance. On the whole it was a day of great rejoicing with the church at Salem, while several earnest workers from the church in Lynn were present and most heartily engaged in the good work. The prospect is encouraging. Pray for us."

BRO. E. C. COWLES writes from Savannah, Wayne Co., N. Y.:—"On April 1st, 1883, we organized an Advent Christian Church of sixteen good working members; others are expected to unite soon; several are to go forward in baptism. The prospect for the advancement of the truths we cherish is quite encouraging. The Lord willing, I am to labor with this people for the present year half of the time, the other half [illegible]. PASTORS AND PREACHERS.

BRO. G. W. SEDERQUIST writes:—"After a severe attack of pneumonia for over three weeks I am able to be up and out again. Hope to be able to preach to my dear people next Sunday, June 3d. I have yet a troublesome cough, but my strength is returning, for which I thank God. I owe my recovery to him, and shall try to serve him with all my ransomed powers. My heart's cry is, O Lord, hasten the day of thy coming and give thy people rest. How many weary ones, how many suffering ones! The grave will claim us all in a very little while if Jesus don't come."

[We are very glad that our dear brother has so far recovered his health as to be able to resume his pulpit ministrations. We hope his people will hold him back from overworking, which, with his ardent temperament and his earnest zeal for God, he is inclined to do. Bro. Sederquist has done a grand work in Springfield. May he be spared to see the great battle of the church on earth concluded, and be present at the roll-call when the faithful servants are rewarded.—E. A. S.]

BRO. I. C. WELLC[illegible] cause of gratitude to [illegible] he is drawing some of [illegible] to Christ for pardon and [illegible] at East Rochester, N. H. [illegible] man and wife, volunteered to join the Lord's [illegible] May 27th we preached there again, and found two others enlisted and confessing Christ. These are all volunteers in a time of special need, and when no extra efforts are being made to recruit. There are a few faithful believers and workers in this church, and their sacrifices and toils are being blest to the salvation of a few. Others will come. So let us work in faith."

BRO. C. W. RUSSELL writes from Chicago, Ill.:—"Sunday, May 20th, was marked by interesting services in the Green Street Tabernacle. After singing, prayer was offered by C. C. Ramsay, followed by an interesting sermon by D. S. Clark of Amboy, from James 1:5. After the sermon, J. S. Miller was solemnly set apart to the work of the ministry. Prayer by J. F. Wilcox. Charge by A. P. Moore. The entire occasion was one of great solemnity. Bro. Miller is a young man of promise, and will no doubt make a useful worker in the Lord's vineyard. The church in Chicago is prospering as well as could be expected under existing circumstances. It has no pastor yet, but hopes to have one ere long."

[We are glad to learn of the prosperity of the church in Chicago, that great Western centre. May they be a power for God and the truth.—E. A. S.]

BAPTISM.

BY H. MUNGER.

The Methodists, Congregationalists and Baptists are in a theological squabble about infant baptism. I was amused in our village to hear the argument. The Methodist preacher was more accommodating than any I ever heard before, while the Congregationalists claim that sprinkling of infants and adults is scriptural baptism. The Baptists claim that sprinkling is a papal ceremony and is not scriptural. The Methodist preacher advertised he would preach on infant baptism, Sabbath evening, June 3d. I went to see if he had got new light. He struck between the two extremes by reading in the old law where Abraham was commanded to present his children to the Lord to be circumcised, and claimed that infant baptism took the place of circumcision in children, and that it was apostolic, for whole households were baptized by the apostles hundreds of years before papacy existed; hence was not started by the Papists. He very ingeniously struck between the two extremes by saying, Give your children to the Lord in baptism, as Abraham and others had in circumcision; and when they get old enough to be converted let them be baptized again as they choose, by sprinkling or immersion; and if the parents believed in immersion, immerse your babies by all means; then when converted immerse them again. This is a new branch to Methodism to accommodate all.

I wanted to ask him if baptism was not a type of death, burial and resurrection? If so, how could sprinkling fill it? or circumcision under the law, which was only for a national distinction, as the seventh-day Sabbath was, and died when Christ died?

A PILGRIM'S NOTES.

Dear Editors:—As notes of interest relative to the cause of "present truth" are encouraging to the scattered saints, you will not think it improper for me to ask a little space in the Crisis to briefly recount the results of recent gospel work.

In response to our notice of a western tour, invitations were received from different States, and arrangements made to supply all that our route would take in. But expense and want of time prevented the acceptance of some urgent calls out of the line in travel, which we regretted very much: for the Lord's servants are more than pleased when circumstances favor their meeting the calls of a Macedonian character.

According to previous calculations, we left our home April 16th, committing loved ones to the care of our heavenly Father, and looking to him for protection in travel, and guidance in labor, we expected a degree of success, and safety from peril.

The incidents of our journey and the many things seen in the lines of art and nature would be interesting to relate, but perhaps of no spiritual benefit to our readers; therefore we pass them over to speak in general terms of our satisfaction and mutual blessings experienced in meetings at [illegible] points, for time and space forbid [illegible] calls of the visits made; pleasant ac[illegible] formed, and the interest of a [illegible] character manifested on the part [illegible] fice it to say that many hun[illegible] ted by the word dispensed, [illegible] come again, which we [illegible] the Lord opened the [illegible] ate of Iowa, we [illegible] Michigan, and [illegible] d interesting [illegible] Burlington, [illegible] where we [illegible] d Bro. CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM S. WOODRUFF.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—This is a day of stillness. The people are away at the different graveyards, decorating the soldiers' graves. Many a sad heart among them, and desolated homes many have; and unless our Saviour sits enthroned in the heart, sad and dreary is the way; but the gospel hope cheers and buoys us up while we look forward to a brighter morn. Jesus will surely come, his bride to greet.

Oh, let these days of wars and turmoil pass quickly by that we may see him whom in the past the whole city came out to meet; and when they saw him, besought him that he would depart out of their coasts. We would see him, yea, be made like him to die no more. Nothing in the line of decorating graves over there. None will ever say I am sick. Thank God, death's footprints never w[illegible] r that Eden soil; one eternal day.

Oh, the death-silence of many a home! I am alone to-day, but when I look on high can say, alone, yet not alone. We cannot sink with such a prop. The arm of our Lord is underneath us, therefore we will wait and watch and pray, till Christ's triumphal car we meet, and see an endless day.

The time hasteneth greatly when he the rightful heir of David's throne will in the shining pathway of his glory appear, calling home his waiting people who have waited long for him. Many are the desponding hearts of earth; but remember these are the perilous times predicted in the Word of God. A mighty power there is in the world to turn, if possible, the very elect from the straight line leading to the kingdom of God. But, in the words of the great apostle, we can say, I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me. Then let us stand boldly at our post with the whole armor on; abide the evil day, and having done all, to stand. Yours, expecting to meet you when this little while is passed away. I think now I may be disappointed regarding meeting with those waiting, praying hearts in June next. The good Lord direct us in all things.

FROM SISTER P. M. FERRELL.

Dear Editors:—The Crisis has always been welcomed by us with great interest, but since our meeting with so many of the household of faith last September at Amboy, we look forward to its weekly arrival with redoubled pleasure, for there upon its precious pages we see name after name of the dear brethren and sisters with whom we met and received words of loving cheer and Christian encouragement.

Since the attendance of my husband and myself at the Amboy campmeeting, my heart has gone out with more than [illegible] affection for all those of our heavenly Father's family who are anxiously waiting and watching for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Yes, the same Jesus that ascended to the right hand of the Father more than eighteen hundred years ago has promised to come again, to raise the sleeping dead and change the righteous living. "Seeing we look for such things let us be diligent that we may be found of him in peace, without spot and blameless." I have long desired writing a few words of Christian greeting to all those of like precious faith, but various hindrances have interrupted my doing so until the present time, and now, while enjoying the hospitalities of dear Bro. and Sr. Wallace of Volga, the home of our beloved Sister M. Tibbets, I rejoice to say the little church here, so pure and white, bespeaking the principles inculcated within, is regularly presided over every Sunday by Bro. Coopnider and Porter, and while there is no unusual effort being put forth at the present time, yet there is unity and love existing with that degree of faith so necessary for the growth of Christians.

I was much pleased with Bro. Hemenway's article in last week's Crisis on a "Pithy Gospel." True it is, the pith of preaching is to have the truth in the heart as well as the head. To convince the sinner of his lost condition, that he needs a Saviour, that Christ is our Life-giver, Christ is our Redeemer, is the first great effort to be accomplished. Secondly, his (Christ's) claim upon us—having suffered and died for us. That in the dear Saviour we have an intercessor, an advocate with the Father, and one who has bid us "Fear not," and with loving entreaty has said, "Come unto me," with the blessed assurance that those who come he will in no wise cast out.

In conclusion I will add that the Lord willing, we expect to be present with you all at the Eastern campmeetings—that is, Springfield and Alton Bay. The glorious meeting of last fall lingers with us in such joyous remembrance that we feel to hasten the time to enjoy such days over again. We return to Louisville, Ky., next week. Our church there, for want of a regular preacher, suspended meetings during the [illegible]

[illegible] then it is certain that no [illegible] or prophets went to heaven so desired could [illegible] "place" was not then pr[illegible] First Day, and [illegible] further proclaimed by Bro. [illegible] Your [illegible] mised [illegible] rist.

FROM [illegible] VICKROY.

[illegible]—I have thought for a long [illegible] a few lines for the paper [illegible] ly. It seems to me like [illegible] meeting to read the testi[illegible] and another of like precious [illegible] a few in our place that [illegible] with anticipation to the [illegible] our King to establish his [illegible] as King supreme. I am [illegible] May we be the wheat [illegible] in, and have an abundant [illegible] city of God. Let us keep [illegible] amidst all the storms [illegible] safe. Yours, trying [illegible] of Christ.

[illegible] CONVERSE.

[illegible] about one year since I wrote [illegible] the Crisis. Since that time [illegible] gone to the silent tomb [illegible] died March 22, 1883, [illegible] sixty-sixth year of her age, being the mother of twelve children; ten are still living, and attended her funeral; a noble family of [illegible] en. It was heartrending to see father and children weep over her remains. We felt to weep with those that weep, for she was a good mother and an excellent neighbor; and we shall all miss her; but she has passed from a world of trouble. May the bereaved family so live that they may meet her in a world where parting with loved ones will be unknown.

We have but little preaching in this place only what we get through the papers. We may have different views, but if we are destitute of charity, it will be like sounding brass or tinkling cymbal. Your brother in hope of immortality and eternal life at the appearing of the Life Giver.

TRUST IN JESUS.

BY G. P. SIMONDS.

Art thou passing through the furnace,
Trust in Jesus, he is nigh;
He who said I'm with you always,
He will hear his children's cry.

Does thy heart grow sad and weary,
Sighing o'er the loved ones gone?
Whisper to the Man of sorrows—
Once he wept in grief alone.

Is thine earthly temple falling?
Shows it signs of quick decay?
Listen, and thou'lt hear him saying,
Trust in me, I am the way.

Tell him all thy heart is feeling;
Waits he now to grant relief;
Lists he ever to thy calling,
Feeleth all his children's grief.

In this mortal life be patient,
Watch and strive to overcome
Every wrong and sinful pleasure,
Till we gain our heavenly home.

INFLUENCE.

BY A. J. WHEELER.

Half the sickness, misery and sin that fill the world are due to the influence of some one, who use their powers to overcome the sound judgment of their fellow men. Many a man would go home sober if left to himself, but the influence of his associates entice him to partake of the intoxicating cup; and many who might have been virtuous, upright and happy to-day, have yielded to influences of the sinful and the vile, and been swept away to utter ruin.

Now do not be fooled by this soft talk about your having influence. You do have an influence, and you are exerting that influence day by day either for right or wrong, either for God and his blessed truths, or for the devil and his lies. When the scales balance even, it is not difficult to decide the case as it should be decided. But when personal influence is cast into the balance on the side of indulgences and excess, the equilibrium is destroyed; the will which was strong enough to resist the influences, becomes too weak to withstand the additional power of social attraction and kindly entreaty; and so the ill-judged kindness of well-meaning friends works ruin on those whom it [illegible].

We have no right to yield our judgment to the influences and tem[illegible] of our friends; every man must bear his own burden; and if we, by weakly yielding to the influence of others, impair our own health, diminish our usefulness, or peril our lives, we must endure the results of our folly; and none of those who have misled us can feel the sufferings which their influence have occasioned.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Second Advent Conference of Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan met with the church at Sumption Prairie, Ind., according to appointment. Bro. Jones Winchell, Vice President, in the chair. The following ministers were present, and preached to us the words of life: Jones Winchell, T. McLane, Alfred McDonald, W. C. Hicks, S. P. Hayward, of Massachusetts, E. H. Pullen, of Northern Indiana and Michigan Union State Conference.

Eld. George W. Wright, President of this Conference, reported by letter, tendered us his resignation, and asked for a letter to Western New York A. C. Conference, which was granted. The Secretary was instructed to forward the Conference resolutions to his address:—Rochester, N. Y.

The Tract Society was instructed to issue a sheet setting forth the Scripture evidences of our hope and faith, hoping and praying it would be a means of attracting attention to our Second Advent Message, and thus to glorify God.

The following names were added to the Missionary Board: Bros. Tillman, Ruple, T. McLane and Jones Winchell.

The meeting throughout was characterized by loving tenderness in the Lord, and a searching for the old paths. Those who enjoyed it say it was the best meeting held there in twenty years. Tears flowed freely, hearts were rejoiced, brethren were strengthened, and we hope and trust God was glorified.

On Monday morning we gathered around the bedside of our dear old Father Ruple, to celebrate the Lord's Supper for perhaps the last time. Our brother is stricken down with paralysis in his limbs. He lies here, cheerful and contented, in the everlasting arms of the Lord. Patient saint! Praise God. "When [illegible] be called, he'll be there."

THE SECOND COMING.

Mr. Moody while speaking recently on the above subject in the city hall, Glasgow, Scotland, advanced the following ideas: If this doctrine was to bring young converts into a fog, why did Paul write so much about it? There are only 260 chapters in the New Testament, and yet 318 different passages refer to our Lord's coming. What makes the doctrine so sweet in the 15th chapter of I Corinthians? Why, it not only speaks of Christ's burial and resurrection, but tells us of his coming. "Behold I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall be changed." Some Christians would never taste death, but would be caught up and changed. We have the same authority of his coming back that we had for his burial. He went up unexpectedly, and would return unexpectedly. If we were ready for death, of course we would be ready for the return of our Lord, but we would rather look for his coming than for anything else in the world.

Our Lord's second coming was not so mysterious and wonderful as his first coming. If some one had declared fifty years before Christ's birth that he was to be born in a manger, that he was to be rejected and crucified, he did not think there was a man on the face of the earth who would have believed the story—it would be too incredible. Although he came suddenly, we would meet him with joy. The wife whose husband had been away received a communication that he was coming; and though she did not know the exact time, yet how glad would she be when he returned. So it would be when our absent Lord returned. It would not be long, because with him a thousand years were as one day. Looking forward was the attitude of God's children from all time. For four thousand years they looked for the promised One, and for nearly two thousand years we have been looking for his return. There was not anything which would take a man more out of the whirlpool of this world than this doctrine. If a man went up in a balloon the earth seemed smaller; so it was when we came nearer to God—things of time looked little indeed. With regard to the objection that this was teaching a doctrine that discouraged work, to this he replied that for himself, he had done three times more work ever since he realized this doctrine. Indeed, he had never got hold of anything that had stimulated him more. He now looked upon the world as an old wrecked vessel, and as doomed to destruction.

Perhaps the last words that Paul penned were those when he said that in the last days perilous times would come. "As the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." They would be eating and drinking till the flood came and took them all away. They did not look as though there was going to be a millennium before Christ came. And if we walked the streets of Glasgow on a Saturday night, we would see much of the same eating and drinking. Mr. Moody pitied from his utmost heart any man who could not see this blessed comforting doctrine, that our Lord was coming to set up his kingdom, which should be from the river to the ends of the earth. Man has had his day, and God would have his. We did not go there to examine ourselves. It was a mistake to do so, because we made ourselves wretched at the Lord's table. We went to remember his death till he came back.—Ex.

FASHION.

When people join the church, they profess to give up the spirit that gives rise to the fashions. They profess to renounce the pomp and vanities of the world, to repent of their pride, to follow the meek and lowly Saviour, to live for God. And now, what do they do? You often see professors of religion go to the extreme of the fashion. Nothing will satisfy them that is not in the height of fashion. A Christian female dressmaker who is conscientiously opposed to the following of fashions, cannot get her bread. She cannot get employment even among professing Christian ladies, unless she follows the fashions in all their countless changes. God knows it is so, and they must give up their business if their conscience will not permit them to follow the [illegible]. This conformity is a [illegible] approval of the spirit of the [illegible].

What is it that lies at the bottom of all this shifting scenery? What is it [illegible] that produces all this gaudy [illegible] and display? It is the love of applause. And when Christians follow the changes of fashion, they pronounce all this innocent. All this waste of money and time and thought, all this feeding and cherishing of vanity and the love of applause, the church sets her seal to, when she conforms to the world.

Nay, further, another reason is, that following the fashions of the world, professing Christians show that they do in fact love the world. They show it by their conduct, just as the ungodly show it by the same conduct. As they act alike, they give evidence that they are actuated by one principle, the love of fashion.

When Christian professors do this, they show most clearly that they love the praise of men. It is evident that they love admiration and flattery, just as sinners do. Is not this inconsistent with Christian principle, to go right into the very things that are set up by the pride and fashion and lust of the ungodly?

Conforming to the world in fashion, you show that you do not hold yourself accountable to God for the manner in which you lay out your money. You practically disown your stewardship of the money that is in your possession. By laying out money to gratify your own vanity and lust, you take off the keen edge of that truth which ought to cut that sinner in two who is living to himself. It is practically denying that the earth is the Lord's, with the cattle on a thousand hills, and all to be employed for his glory.

Now suppose a person loved God, and the souls of men, and the kingdom of Christ, does he need an express prohibition from God to prevent him from spending his money and his life in following the fashion? No, indeed, he will rather need a positive injunction to take what is needful for his own comfort and the support of his own life. Take the case of Timothy. Did he need a prohibition to prevent him from [illegible]? So far from [illegible] express injunction from God to make him drink a little as a medicine. Although he was sick, he would not drink it till he had the word of God for it; he saw the evils of it so clearly. Now show me a man or a woman, I care not what their professions are, that follows the fashions of the world, and I will show you what spirit they are of.

Where the principal members, the elders and leaders in the church, and their wives and their families, are fashionable Christians, they drag the whole church along with them into the train of fashion, and every one apes them as far as they can, down to the lowest servant. Only let a rich Christian lady come out to the house of God in full fashion, and the whole church are set agog to follow, as far as they can, and it is a chance if they do not run in debt to do it.

If professing Christians would show their contempt for these things, and not pretend to follow or regard them, how it would shame the world, and convince the world that they are living for another object,—for God and eternity! How irresistible it would be! What an overwhelming testimony in favor of our religion! What thunders it would pour into the ears of the world, to wake them up to follow after God.—PRESIDENT FINNEY.—Selected.

TIRED.

Tired! so tired of life's contest;
Of the world's deceit and strife;
Of the endless worry and trouble,
That go to make up one's life.

And so I sit in the twilight,
Glad that the night has come;
Glad that the day's work is ended,—
That I'm one day nearer home.

For my heart is heavy laden,
And I fain would be at rest;
But now comes the [illegible] of Duty—
"Work on, and thy life shall be blest!

"Work on, though thy courage fails thee,
And dreary seems the way;
Do right, and the darkness of midnight
Will be lost in the dawning of day.

"The crown is for those who conquer
Through sorrow, toil and pain;
Tired heart, cease your repining—
Take up your burden again!"

Then the solemn voice ceased speaking;
But the words, so hopeful and strong,
Filled my heart with a flood of sunlight,
Till it breathed a happy song.

And my burden seemed to grow lighter
As I cheerfully went on my way;
For the shadow and darkness of midnight
Was lost in the brightness of day.

REPORT OF CONFERENCE.

Pursuant to notice, the "Second Advent Christian Conference" of North East Nebraska, South East Dakota, and North West Iowa, convened at the Barto school-house, in Dixon County, Neb., May 19th, 1883.

Owing to a heavy rain, and almost impassable roads, the attendance was very slim. Conference opened in due form. Prayer and reading of Scriptures by Eld. E. H. Carman. On motion of Eld. T. B. Hicks, E. H. Carman was admitted as member of this Conference, pro. tem.

On motion, it was resolved as follows: That the boundaries of this Conference be so described as to include North East Nebraska, South East Dakota, and North West Iowa.

On motion, proceeded to elect officers for the ensuing year. For President, J. H. Culver, of Sioux City; Vice President, H. S. Carpenter, of Big Springs, D. T.; Secretary and Treasurer, N. S. Ketchum, of Sioux City; Directors, E. H. Carman, H. O. Austin, and Sister Rachel Richardson. Bro. George W. Ketchum reported by letter.

On motion, it was decided to call a Quarterly Conference, to convene on June 30th, 1883, place to be designated, and notice given in due time.

INTERESTING PARAGRAPHS.

NOTEWORTHY EVENTS OF 1882.

"The first was the English victory in Egypt, which marks the end of the Ottoman power. The credit of Turkey failed years ago, and now its character is likewise gone. England has no doubt learned, as she never knew it before, the hollowness and hypocrisy of 'the sick man,' whose presence in European politics has so long been a stumbling-block. The mutual jealousy of rival powers, the disinclination manifested by all the governments of the West to let Turkey die because of the trouble there would be in dividing up its possessions, will never again have the influence which the Sultan has so craftily and successfully used for his own protection. And apropos of this, it may be said that an English writer—a prominent clergyman—has called attention to the fact that, from the [illegible] of the Mohammedan power to the date of Lord Dufferin's dispatch to the English Premier announcing the fall of Alexandria, was 1,260 years to a day.

"The second is the passing away of the last vestige of the Pope's Temporal Power, its final and complete obliteration. The highest Italian court—from the verdict of which there is no appeal—has recently decided that the Vatican lies within the jurisdiction of the State. The narrow precinct to which the Pope's sovereignty, once universal, had been gradually reduced, has now entirely disappeared. His supremacy, by virtue of which kings and emperors were for centuries but the vassals of Rome's bishop, cannot now legally awe even a sheriff or a policeman who holds a commission from the State to enter the papal residence. This decision was quietly announced. It was, moreover, in violation of pledges made by the civil government, and therefore it is all the more surprising. It looks like the shadow of an inevitable destiny.

"And thus it has come to pass that the two great institutions, namely, Mohammedanism and the temporal power of the Papacy, which rose almost simultaneously, and which grew to such marvelous size, have fallen together. The same year has witnessed the downfall of both."—Churchman.

A MOTHER'S LAST LINGERING LOOK.—A short time since, a brilliant and much admired lady who had been suffering for some time with a trouble of the eyes, was led to fear a speedy change for the worse, and immediately consulted her physician. An examination discovered a sudden and fatal failing in the optic nerve, and the information was imparted as gently as possible that the patient could not retain her sight more than a few days at most, and was liable to be totally deprived of it at any moment. [illegible] occur to one about to commence so dark a journey of life, and then had her two little children, attired in their brightest and sweetest costumes, brought before her, and so, with their little faces lifted to hers, and tears gathering for some great misfortune that they hardly realized, the light faded out of the mother's eyes, leaving an effectual picture of those nearest to her on earth a memory of bright faces that will console her in many a dark hour.—Zion's Watchman.

RESIGNATION to the divine will does not imply stoical indifference under afflictive providential dispensations. We cannot but feel the stroke of the divine hand, which is sometimes very grievous. But while we suffer, and it may be very keenly, we may very sincerely say in the spirit of true resignation, in imitation of Him whose example should be our pattern, "Not my will but thine be done." We may not be able to comprehend the dealings of our heavenly Father with us, but we know that he careth for us, that he knows what is best, and that he would not chasten us if it were not for our good. A man who undergoes a severe surgical operation cannot but feel the pain, although he may be fully satisfied that it is necessary, and will promote his health. So the Christian, although his trust and resignation may be complete, cannot but realize the bitterness of the cup placed to his lips.—Methodist Recorder.

HOMESICK.

We often think of the touching old German "beatitude": "Blessed are they that are homesick, for they shall get home." To pilgrims and strangers in this land of the dying, the thought of an everlasting home is sweet and precious. As the years go by, and the heart grows into clearer fellowship with Christ and heaven, and as loved friends and companions pass out into the better land, the longings of the soul often deepen into homesickness, and the song wells forth:

"Jerusalem, my happy home!
Oh, how I long for thee!
When shall my labors have an end,
In joy and peace in thee?"

A certain writer says he was standing one day with a Swiss mountaineer in sight of a rugged hill, in this country, when the man suddenly stopped work and gazed long and earnestly toward the hill. A deep groan came from his longing heart as, with tears in his eyes, he said: "Yonder hill reminds me of my home. I am here in this country without a friend. My family are all there, and I have a desire to return, that I may see their faces once again, and roam in the free air of my mountain home. No one can tell the homesickness there is in my heart, and I will stay here but a short time and then return."

Our best friend is in our Father's house on high. Our hearts and our treasures are there. Why should we not "look up and lift up our heads" toward the land where we shall "see the King in his beauty," and meet the dear ones who are waiting our coming?

"Jerusalem the golden!
I languish for one gleam
Of all the glory folden
In distance and in dream!
My thoughts, like palms in exile,
Climb up to look and pray
For a glimpse of that dear country
That lies so far away."

—Selected.

IT is a truth which men are slow to learn, that there is a divine detective system in the universe, by whose workings "all things are naked and open to the eyes of Him with whom we have to do." It is easy to deceive the world. Men may consider us generous, when in reality we are pinched and small in our charities; they may call us self-sacrificing, when in fact self-pleasing is the sovereign motive of our lives; they may esteem us devout, when we are cold and formal; but what is our trickery that gains us credit on false pretenses worth, so long as there is One who knows us altogether, and that one the one to whom we are to give an account? The psalmist had risen into the realm of this great and awful truth when he said, "Whither shall I go from thy Spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence?" This silent watch, this secret inspection, this perfect knowledge of all our ways—how much men need to realize it, to hold them back from the sin they are encouraged to commit by the hope that it will never be discovered! Men cannot measure our consecration to God. Pretense may pass with them for reality, and avarice may congratulate itself that it has purchased the reputation of sainthood with "part of the price;" but, all the while, He with whom we have to do is perfectly informed in regard to us, and will judge accordingly. What a wonderful day that will be, when the secrets of all hearts are made known! Men ought always to live in the light of the great white throne; for that throne is built, and what we really are and have done will in the end be revealed.—Selected.

A WORD FITLY SPOKEN.—A fine example of a word fitly spoken is found in Dr. Bushnell's biography. An intelligent but not religious young lady, after spending a social evening with the good doctor's family, was escorted home by her courteous host. On their way the brilliant starlight led them to talk of astronomy. The doctor spoke of the law of harmony which held each little star in its appointed place, and then turning to the bright-minded girl, with a winning smile, he said, "Sarah, I want to see you in your place." This was all he said that was personal, but the thought thrilled her young soul as if it had dropped upon her from the skies. Its effect was to win her to discipleship. "A word spoken in due season, how good is it!"—Zion's Herald.

OUR race at longest is soon run. Even now "the day is far spent." With many the dim shadows stretch already far away from the sun, that is near its setting. "Get out your heavenly charts and maps. Make no mistakes or mishaps as to the journey. Eternity dawns!" Time with its hurried moments is fast waning. The evening twilight is here. Art thou ready?

BECAUSE we are "of little faith," therefore we are not content to plan and work, and having planned and wrought, to [illegible] wait; but must fidget ourselves about that which, may be, until [illegible] is like a worm, and our [illegible] picturing disasters in the [illegible] like fire.

TREATISE ON THE 25th OF MATT.

BY J. M. STEVENS.

"Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom. And five of them were wise, and five were foolish."

Our Lord gave many metaphors or parables to illustrate the kingdom of God during the gospel age, and without a parable spake he not unto the people, but in none of them is there so definite a chronological position given in the history of our world as in the above. There is no getting away from the time when its fulfillment would take place. Mark the language, "Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened," etc. When? at what point of time? Evidently after the signs have taken place that should immediately precede his second coming. We read in the 29th verse of the 24th chapter, "The sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken: and then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." Then if that evil servant shall say, "My Lord delayeth his coming," and smite his fellow-servant, then there must be some servants proclaiming, "My Lord is coming."

At this time the religious world becomes arrayed one against another like two great armies. This is the going forth to meet the Bridegroom. The world is agitated, aroused and stirred to its very centre over the subject of the Lord's second coming. The smiting commences and goes on with great fierceness, and often with great enmity. [illegible] can [illegible] appreciate what I say. Even [illegible] men engaged in discussing the subject, in shops, on steamboats, cars, the wayside, and in churches; even in countries where the Word of God was but little known, and among the slaves, who were not permitted to have the Bible. God deeply impressed the inhabitants that something awful was about to take place. A deep solemnity pervaded the whole world, and thousands turned to the Lord. It was a time never to be forgotten by those who passed through it.

What was the cause of this great movement, or going forth? Time. Had it not been for the preaching of definite time, it never would have produced any opposition, or smiting of the fellow-servants, or arousing of the virgins. What may we understand by going forth? What do we mean when we say one nation is going to war with another? We mean the whole nation is aroused. The parable is, "The kingdom of heaven shall be likened unto ten virgins." "The kingdom of heaven" here I understand to mean the whole Christian world, or those having any hope of the future whatever. They were all more or less agitated on the subject of the Lord's coming—some for, and some opposed. Our Lord gives at this point the ten virgins as a representative body. There are but two classes, the wise and the foolish. The wise took oil; the foolish neglected this.

As I have said, time was the great moving power, and it culminated in forty-three, or the fall of forty-four. The Bridegroom did not come as expected, and they all fell asleep, that is, the subject was dropped, and a profound silence followed, so that for years nothing was said, especially on time.

At midnight there was another cry. Midnight—please notice the expression or figure. Midnight is not when the virgins fall asleep, nor is it near morning, but in the middle of our sleeping time. Now if the Israelites' sojourn of forty years in the wilderness, after coming out of Egypt, before entering the promised land, be a type of our being called out to meet our Lord in forty-three, as I fully believe it was, then that would be to us the forty years of night, or sleeping time.

If this position be a correct one, then "Behold the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him!" must be made again somewhere in the midst of the forty years. Then the question comes, What would arouse the true virgins? I answer, time, and nothing else. Was there such preaching or cry about that time? Yes, most assuredly. Various times were published to the world—sixty-eight, seventy, seventy-three, seventy-five, and so on. Seventy-three was a very strong point. The objector may say they have all failed. Suppose they have? that is not the point. It was intended to arouse the virgins to trim their lamps, which they did.

Now let me illustrate: In a large city one cries "Fire!" He locates it at a given point; another takes up the same cry, and locates it at another point; so it spreads. Each one has a different point. There is fire, but they have all failed of the precise location. As the firemen pass the various points designated, they feel more confident than ever that they are drawing near the fire. So with us, dear brethren and sisters, the good and true are the wise virgins. Those that have passed through this move-ment feel a sweet assurance, such as we have never felt before, that we are probably nearing our eternal home. The arousing again can never be so universal as at first. Why? Because it is given at midnight, and we all know the difficulty of awakening a sound sleeper at midnight. The foolish virgins were to arouse at the same time, but how wretched their condition! They have no oil to replenish with, so they grope their way in the dark after oil.

Was there any excitement among those who rejected the time movement at or about the same time? Yes. When and how? By the formation of the "Young Men's Christian Association," and their [illegible] only in this country, but in other lands. Also the world's week of prayer, the four-o'clock prayer-meetings, and the great noon-day prayer-meetings, when thousands of business men dropped their pens, and rushed into the largest halls that were to be had in our great cities, to spend an hour to hear a few prayers, and then return to business. The telegraphs, too, were used to announce the fact from city to city that from three to five thousand have met to-day at a given hall for prayer, producing great excitement all over the world, and thousands were apparently converted. It was truly wonderful. What was the burden of these prayers? "We want the Holy Spirit." That was the great burden.

Where is all this great movement to-day? They have gone to buy oil. The Holy Spirit is none other than the oil represented in the parable. We do not claim that all the wise virgins are among those who believed in time, or that all were foolish virgins who rejected time, but that the great majority of the wise virgins were among those who believed in time: so, on the other hand, the foolish virgins were among those who rejected time.

As I have said before, this was to be made at midnight, and this cry greatly differed from the first which was to go forth; but the second is more commanding: "Go ye out to meet him." This is a solemn injunction, and one that cannot be disobeyed. The virgins have arisen and retrimmed their lamps. "Go ye out to meet him," is still in the future. "For he shall send his angels to gather his elect from the four winds of heaven." But, says the objector, "we are to be translated in the twinkling of an eye at the last trump." So we will be at the proper time. If we are to be translated from the bed, or field, or housetop, what would be the use of sending his angels, [illegible] sleeping"? "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh." I apprehend it will be just as our Lord has said in 1 Thess. 4: 16, "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ will rise first." And then will he send his angels, and they will gather the resurrected ones, and those that are living at that time. "Where, Lord?" the disciples ask. Wheresoever the body is, there will they be gathered. It will be at some designated point. I apprehend all will be translated at once in the twinkling of an eye.

What a test it will be to the saints living of their faith and loyalty to Christ! The angels will come while we are sleeping, or on the housetop, in the field, or at the mill, call you by name, and say to you, "Come." Then will come the trial. Do we love father, mother, wife or children, houses, lands, or anything more than Christ? Will we seek to save our life, or take our goods?

The Saviour, in Luke, is speaking of his second coming when he gives this solemn warning: "Remember Lot's wife." These texts could not have been fulfilled at the destruction of Jerusalem, as the man on the housetop would have to come down to make his way out, and there was nothing inconsistent in their taking all their goods when they left that doomed city. We read in Ps. 50: 5, "Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." Also Isa. 5: 26–30. "And he will lift up an ensign to the nations from far, and will hiss unto them from the end of the earth: and behold, they shall come with speed swiftly: none shall be weary nor stumble among them: none shall slumber nor sleep: neither shall the girdle of their loins be loosed, nor the latchet of their shoes be broken: whose arrows are sharp, and all their bows bent; their horses' hoofs shall be counted like flint, and their wheels like a whirlwind: their roaring shall be like a lion, they shall roar like young lions: yea, they shall roar and lay hold of the prey, and shall carry it away safe, and none shall deliver it. And in that day they shall roar against them like the roaring of the sea: and if one look unto the land, behold darkness and sorrow, and the light is darkened in the heavens thereof." This quotation looks like the way in which the saints are to be brought together, swiftly, like eagles flying to the prey.

Dearly beloved brethren and sisters, do you think it a strange thing that our Lord should test our faith and love to him, when he has done so in all ages past? God says to Noah, "Come thou and all thy house." Who knows but what Noah had several miles to travel from his home through a scoffing multitude before he reached the ark; and dear old Abraham was called out and obeyed, not knowing whither he went; and righteous Lot was hasted away by the angels; then, Elijah, though he knew he was to be translated, was first called to go to three different points before he was taken away.

Dearly beloved in the Lord, if the position we have taken of our Lord's teachings in this parable be the correct one, and God raised up Bro. Miller with his co-laborers to warn the world, and this be the generation that shall not pass away until all these things be fulfilled, how solemn the thought!

[illegible] A few more short [illegible] bring the history of this world to a close. Who of us will be ready for that awful [illegible] hand? "Who shall ascend the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully. He shall receive the blessing from the Lord, and righteousness from the God of his salvation." Ps. 24: 3, 4, 5.

DIVISIONS AND OFFENCES.

[illegible]

"Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them."—Rom. 16: 17.

I have been impressed to write a few words on the above heading, "Divisions and Offences," taking for a text the above. The apostle Paul was one who took a deep interest in the brethren, or the churches, as we see in all his epistles. What love he manifests toward them in not failing to make mention of them all in his prayers. Many passages we might cite to prove his love for them, but space will not admit of our citing them here; so we will stick as closely to our text as we can, intermixing other passages which will be necessary to bring out the thoughts we wish to.

The apostle Paul commences, "I beseech you, brethren." To beseech one is to entreat, to beg, to implore. In exhorting them with this word beseech, shows love in his heart for them. I beg of thee, brethren, mark them which cause a division. Take notice of them; not take notice of them to embrace them to your heart, but to notice them as one who is seeking to and will in time break up the little flock that is united, by introducing some pet hobby; all the time crying out to the flock of God, "New light, new light." [Would to God such ones would walk a little more by the old light—that light which was to the apostles a shining light—the light which kept them united together by love.]

"Mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye had learned." Just here we wish to ask the question, What doctrine was it they had learned? We see it must have been a doctrine that united them together, and kept them united too. This was the one doctrine found all through the blessed Holy Book, viz., the doctrine of Jesus the Lord; the doctrine which was brought to earth at the birth of Christ the Son of God; the doctrine [illegible] ried back to that time. We almost imagine we were there with the shepherds on Judea's plains, listening to that grand chorus of voices which sang, "Glory to God in the highest; on earth peace, and good will to men!" This was the doctrine they had learned—the doctrine which is brought to view in the 13th chapter of 1st Corinthians, which "suffereth long and is kind; envieth not, vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil, rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth," etc.

This doctrine of Christ is all made up in the chapter from which I have just quoted, with the exception of the fall of man and his future state, and how brought about. When men will go into places where the saints of God are loving one another, and introduce some hobby, and by this means divide a flock of God's sheep, I believe that judgment awaits them. Some may take them into their affections, and call them holy men and holy women. How can they do it? How can men who are holy do such things? Paul said, in writing to the church of the Philippians, "Many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ; whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things." We can say of a truth, these passages will apply to any and all who cause a division (by hobby riding) of the flock.

One may say, How do you know you have the truth in this matter? We answer from 2nd Epistle of John: "And this is love, that we walk after his commandments. This is the commandment, That, as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it"; that is, in love. Can we walk in love toward our dear Saviour and his flock, if we are the means of a division? The apostle Paul says, "Avoid them." To avoid is to shun them. These are plain words; but shall we say Paul did not understand what he was talking about? We think he knew what he was talking about, and meant just what he said. Let us all be very careful, then, how we bid such persons "God speed."

It has been my lot to go among different churches where hobbies have been introduced, and could cite you to a number of said churches, and sorry I am to say it, but such is the fact, that where they once loved, they now hate one another. When a true overseer of the flock sees the devil's agents coming among the flock, how sad he feels! It causes him to shed many tears; it causes him many hours of anxiety.

Do not think, dear churches, for a moment that your pastor is too set when he is not willing to ask one of these persons into his pulpit. Do not think he wishes to usurp any authority over you. No, no; such are not his feelings. Your pastor is more afraid of wolves in sheep's clothing. Let us all be careful to maintain good works, remembering that everybody is saying, "Where are there any Christians at the present time?" "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

[illegible]

[illegible] truth which would [illegible] and lightly treated or [illegible]

In seeking for a scope of theme embodied in the caption [illegible], it behooves us to occupy a [illegible] exegesis; for we would [illegible] condemnation at the door of [illegible] unauthorized, knowing that "the W[illegible] shall judge us "in the last day"; and without strict adherence to the principles of faithful practice set forth in that W[illegible] vain will be our expectation of future joy and immortality. "Therefore in lowly [illegible] boldness combined we will "reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and doctrine," though "the time" has come that "men will not endure sound doctrine," and the person who talks and writes it [illegible] for unpopularity, and a [illegible] from the company of men; but if [illegible] "respect unto the recompense of reward" there is nothing to fear.

Righteousness in [illegible] natural sense comprehends holy princ[illegible] reflections of the heart, and conformity of life to the divine law." Hence, according to our text, any violation of these principles, or transgression of this rule [illegible], and when we think how easily the avenues of sin are opened, and the liability of being deceived by satanic power, we do not wonder that so many warnings and admonitions are given through the inspired writers of Bible truth. Taking into consideration the successful career of sainted characters who are set forth as examples to us, forming a great cloud of witnesses, we are exhorted to "lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and to run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith." All persons have their [illegible], though heeded, ruin is inevitable [illegible] to be successful in the race, weighed down with the things of corruption, is impossible; and those indulging in sin who occupy places of trust and prominence in Christian association, expecting the Lord's approbation and final salvation, are only deceiving themselves, if not others.

To be exempt from all unrighteousness, which is sin, purity is indispensable. There must be no corruption by fraud, seduction, or vicious habits. Hence every deception practised with a view to gaining unlawful or unfair advantage is at variance with the principles of Christianity. That man who indulges in the various phases of seduction, and is given to licentious principles under the garb of religion, only makes a fool of himself, blights his cause, and disgraces humanity by his unrighteous course. Surely it would be inconsistent to train in the devil's company. How does the professed Christian, addicted to stimulants and intoxicants, compare with the Master in righteousness? Certainly he looks in vain for salvation, for no drunkard can inherit the kingdom of God; and those who are moderately stimulated by common beverages are in a degree violating the law of righteousness, which sin may possibly exclude them from the beatitudes of saints.

If time and means are wasted in the gratification of lust and appetite by the use of opium, morphine, snuff, tobacco, unrighteousness is committed, and a blight upon humanity, hereditary in its results, is produced, while the cause of religion which they profess to love is made to languish and become the butt of ridicule. Think of the low, vile and corrupting influence upon our youth exerted by gray-headed Christians in name, who are addicted to these habits so debasing. Is it any wonder that the rising generation [illegible] acquire these vicious habits, and are scarcely affected by the prayers and exhortations of these church members, when such corrupting examples are set?

Let all whose eyes fall upon these lines watch and pray, that they may escape these corrupting evils, and live so as to be lights in the world. "Little children, let no man deceive you: he that doeth righteousness is righteous, even as he [Christ] is righteous. He that committeth sin is of the devil: for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested that he might destroy the works of the devil. Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him; and he cannot sin, because he is born of God. In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil: whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother. For this is the message that ye heard from the beginning, that we should love one another." Surely the Lore grants no license to sin in this scripture; and as the subject is negatively considered in the context, it is obvious that no brother or sister could reasonably be offended at the exposure of these corrupting evils, who have an honest desire to do right. Any violation of divine or natural law measurably blunts the mental faculties, and the finer sensibilities of our natures, renders our powers for good, and more or less neutralises the efforts put forth in behalf of others.

Brethren, let us who wait for God's Son [illegible]

[illegible] INQUIRY AND INVESTIGATION.

[illegible]

[illegible] arbitrarily inserted [illegible] term "daily sacrifice" must be erroneous, and consequently misleading, as used in said text. Our proof, that our translators have arbitrarily inserted sacrifice, consists in the facts that there is nothing in the Hebrew text—no word there that conveys any such meaning as is conveyed by the term sacrifice; also, there is no example in any other Hebrew text within the lids of the Bible by which daily sacrifice is expressed as a proper term, and is never so rendered.

If we should assert that the terms—"the sacrifice and the oblation," in Dan. 9: 27, were proper terms to express daily sacrifice, we should assert that which would be false, unless we could show that two separate things meant one and the same thing. (See Calmel's Bible Dictionary on Offerings and Sacrifices.) Moreover, the greater part of Jewish sacrifices were on their great feast days—at the Passover, the Pentecost and the feast of tabernacles. Therefore the term daily sacrifice does not express the same as "the sacrifice and the oblation"; for this latter includes the whole; the other only a part. According to these marks of distinction, there can be no correspondence in the meaning of the terms "the sacrifice and the oblation" of Dan. 9: 27 with "the daily" of Dan. 8: 13; nor do either have the signification—daily sacrifice.

Tah-mid, rendered "daily" in Dan. 8: 13, is never joined with Zeh-vagh, rendered sacrifice, once in the Bible; but tah-mid is joined with peh-shag in Dan. 8: 12, and should there have been rendered "continual transgression," and not "daily (sacrifice)," as in the English version. (See Tafel's interlinear translation.) This example given in Dan. 8: 12 joins continual, or daily, with transgression instead of with sacrifice: therefore gives us the authority of joining "the daily" of Dan. 8: 13 with transgression, in[illegible] reason that "the continual transgression," and "the transgression of desolation" of Dan. 8: 13, constitute the two grand elements of the vision of said chapter, and are not alike in character; for the first represents the Pagan element of the vision, but the second the Papal element; and certainly the Pagan element was "taken away" from Rome, and the Papal element established in its place; and who will dare deny these facts?

If we have stated facts in the foregoing, it follows as an absolute certainty that there is not the semblance of a shadow of correspondence in the meaning of "the daily" in Dan. 8: 13 with that of "the sacrifice and oblation" in Dan. 9: 27. Also such facts show that by the restoration of the Jewish sacrifice, can furnish no basis by which to date the 2300 year vision of Dan. 8. But if any proof could be given that the restoration of Jewish sacrifice furnishes a basis by which to date the vision of the 2300 days, said restoration took place as early as the sixth year of Darius the Persian (see Ezra 6: 15–17), which date would have ended the 2300 days many years in the past. We have no account given of the temple being destroyed after it was built again in the sixth year of Darius, until it was destroyed by the Romans in A. D. 71, and the Jews continued to offer there their sacrifices from the sixth year of Darius until it was destroyed by the Romans, although several interruptions occurred as late as the days of Antiochus and Pompey, B. C. 165–60.

A KNOWLEDGE OF GOD.

BY H. SIBBERNESS.

"Awake to righteousness, and sin not; for some have not the knowledge of God: I speak this to your shame."—1 Cor. 15: 34.

A large proportion of mankind hope to escape responsibility by wilfully rejecting all knowledge of a Creator, when the fact is that it is as reasonable to deny our own existence as creatures, as to deny a Creator. Man is the effect of a cause. Whether we have seen or heard of the cause or not, the effect is absolute evidence of the existence of such cause. When we behold a grand, useful and intricate piece of mechanism, and should find some one to deny that it had an inventor, all mankind would be ready with the verdict, "Thou fool!" Yet many living under the blazing, accumulated light of the nineteenth century are thus opposing themselves and facts as they exist.

Man was in the mind of the Creator before he was created; hence he is a creature of predetermined thought, in the same sense as an inventor predetermines in thought to produce a piece of mechanism, and accomplishes a fact by the production from his meditations and the necessary material a useful invention, which is then the creature. Where is the man silly enough to question the right of the inventor to the absolute control of his creature invention? Hence God, the Creator of man, the grandest and most wonderful piece of mechanism in existence, has the unquestionable right to demand obedience; and to present ourselves "a living sacrifice" is reasonable, right, and well-pleasing in the sight of God and all well-disposed persons. We find the effect adequate to the cause. Hence God must be the author of creation, animated being, which man is unable to produce, proving the superiority of the one over the other.

[illegible] from the face of the earth with the sower. Satan has influenced men to seek out and invent many strange gods, even down to an intangible, immaterial essence, yet filling the immensity of space; anything but the God of the Bible. All who wish can worship these strange gods, and finally receive their wages—eternal death. But we will worship and trust the God of the Bible, and patiently wait for our wages—eternal life.

Danville, N. Y.

"THE HIGHER LIFE."

Is this anything more than a true Christian life? Does not every follower of Jesus live a higher life? Is the school of Christ graded, and do its members occupy different departments, some lower, some higher? Are there degrees of purity of heart? Are some fully saved, and others only partially cleansed from sin? Do some occupy a higher position in the affections of Christ than others?

The phrase higher life is not a scriptural term; but there can be no objection on this account to its use, provided it is made to mean what is in harmony with the gospel of Christ. The meaning generally attached to it seems to be this: A high degree of spiritual enjoyment; a condition above the plane of common Christian life, and where there are few or no temptations; a state of rest, in which the trials and sorrows that affect the greater number of Christians are not permitted to disturb the peace of the soul; a complete victory over the world and the flesh.

It is thus indirectly taught that there is something more to be obtained than what is found by simply coming into Christ and being in him—a higher state and separate from this. But the idea that there are two lives in Christ, a higher and a lower one, [illegible] harmony with the gospel, are separated, some in a higher [illegible] than others, the former rising there either by their own efforts, or special favor from Christ. One of the most eminent and advanced Christians in this dispensation wrote: "The life I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me." The life that he then lived was in contrast with the one he lived before his conversion and coming into Christ. The former life was the lower, the natural; the latter life the higher, the spiritual. But this higher life of the Apostle did not free him from toil, care, sorrow, trials, afflictions, persecutions. In his higher life (and no man ever lived a higher), all these were experienced. He says: "We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed; always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body. For we which live are alway delivered unto death for Jesus's sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh."

By this experience Paul's higher life was more conspicuously manifested; and by it he also made manifest the life of Christ. How could this have been done by him in any other way? Again he says: "Great is my boldness of speech toward you: I am filled with comfort, I am exceeding joyful in all our tribulation. For when we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on every side; without were fightings, within were fears."

This was a part of Paul's experience in the higher life. Would those who in this day speak of the higher life (making it a distinct experience from conversion and a faithful serving of Christ), be willing to be made perfect by such an experience as the Apostle's and that which the best men in all ages have had? In the higher life where they walked the flesh had no rest. It was a continued conflict with the world and the powers of darkness. Witness the patriarchs, the prophets, Christ, the apostles and the martyr church; also that of the Reformation, and even later. Where has there been rest and tranquility in the higher life of the true church of God?

The higher life begins at conversion. They who are converted commence a new life, a higher than the one they have lived; and if they are faithful to Christ, whether they are joyful or sorrowful, afflicted or blessed, at rest or troubled, they are in the higher life, because in Christ. On the mount or in the valley; in the raptures of the transfiguration or in gloom and sadness on the way to Emmaus, they are in the higher life, walking with Jesus. VERITAS.

It is the privilege of the Christian to be closeted with God, and open his heart to him. To tell him of his needs and to claim the supply of all his wants. What a wondrous privilege this is. Alone with God. Talking with him to his face as a man with his friend. Why is it that this wondrous blood-bought privilege is not more fully improved? Why is it that we do not get better acquainted with God? Oh, for a race of prevailing Jacobs who shall become princes with God.

AFFLICTIONS are blessings to us when we can bless God for afflictions.

[illegible] cause of unbelief [illegible] brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God," and ye also perish by [illegible] lack of faith in him who hath called you to be heirs of that inheritance among those "who through faith and patience inherit the promises."

Is it not much better, then, my beloved brethren, to follow in the footsteps of the worthies of old, whose faith we read so much of in the Word of God? for it was by their unwavering faith in the living and true God that the elders obtained a good report," and received thereby the blest assurance that they pleased God and were accepted of him as fit subjects for his everlasting kingdom (though they have not as yet received the promises.) It is said, also, that Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, and the Lord had respect unto Abel and to his offering, accepting it as coming from a sincere and grateful heart.

So we see by this, brethren, that "without faith it is impossible to please him, for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him;" and let us therefore draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having "our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water; and let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, for he is faithful that promised, so that when he returns to earth again to "make up his jewels," we may be found among the number of his faithful ones, "not having on our own righteousness, which is of the law, but the righteousness which is of faith," then we shall be able to look up rejoicing and exclaim, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for him; we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."

GROWTH IN GRACE.

We hope that none of our readers will ever fall into the error of asserting that there is little or no growth in grace before we are entirely sanctified. On the contrary, if we are faithful to God and to our every religious conviction, we grow rapidly from the very moment of our conversion. Our faith groweth exceedingly, and our love toward one another aboundeth more and more. How could it be otherwise, if we are diligent in searching the Scriptures, constant and reverent in our attendance upon the means of grace, public, social and private? Do we not learn wisdom by the very things we suffer? Does not the trial of our faith work patience, if we count it all joy when we fall into divers temptations, and let patience have her perfect work? If we beware, lest being led away with the error of the wicked, we should fall from our own steadfastness, do we not by our very watching unto prayer, not only keep ourselves from temptation, but also grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ? . . .

Mr. Wesley, in his plain account of Christian perfection, page 37, says in reply to the question: "Do they not gradually die to sin and grow in grace till at, or perhaps a little before death, God perfects them in love? Answer. God usually gives a considerable time for men to receive light, to grow in grace, to do and suffer his will, before they are either justified or sanctified. But he does not invariably adhere to this. Sometimes he cuts short his work. He does a work of many years in a few weeks; perhaps in a week, a day, an hour. He justifies or sanctifies both those who have done or suffered nothing and who have not had time for a gradual growth either in light or grace! God may cut short his work, yet there is a gradual work both before and after that moment. So that one may affirm the work is gradual; another it is instantaneous; without any manner of contradiction." In explanation of this, on page 22 of the same tract, he says, "A man may be dying for some time, yet he does not, properly speaking, die till the instant the soul is separated from the body. In like manner he may be dying to sin for some time yet he is not dead to sin until sin is separated from his soul."

Doubtless our growth in grace is almost infinitely more rapid after our entire sanctification than before. We soar more swiftly on the wings of faith and love toward the central sun of righteousness. Yet before we are sanctified and even before we are justified, as Mr. Wesley intimates, men may receive light, grow in grace, do and suffer God's will.' Even before our conversion we may swiftly improve the preventing, awakening, drawing grace of God to bring us quickly and surely to the foot of the cross and to the saving knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. Let us then, in this matter, "hold fast the form of sound words."—REV. E. I. D. PEPPER, in Chris. Advocate.

I LOOK with scorn upon the selfish greatness of this world, and with pity on the most gifted and prosperous in the struggle for office and power; but I look with reverence on the obscure man who suffers for the right, who is true to a good but persecuted cause.—Garfield.

PULPIT FIDELITY.

It is held that the pulpit is not an agitator but an educator; and that what the people—especially the church—do not wish to hear ought not to be preached. That the supporters of the pulpit have a right to dictate the character of its instructions; or, in other words, that the people are privileged to determine what sort of religious teaching they will patronize and accept. The potency of this sentiment is alarmingly apparent, even in the most highly christianized (?) portions of our world. The pulpits which most adroitly avoid any collision with the popular taste are rewarded with multitudes of delighted patrons; while any doctrine, precept, example or warning, however scriptural it may be, and, however much needed, which in any effective utterance disturbs the smooth current of popular religious thought and feeling is at once stamped out by open indignation or starved to death by cold neglect. And so the pulpit, quick of popular instinct, has become, largely, the mere echo of the pulse-beat of the pews. Its ancient front and port and sublime embassage, as the mouthpiece of God and [illegible] painfully wanting.

Had the apostles adopted the rule of expediency which now so generally prevails, the glorious gospel would have sank into a miserable appendage of effete Judaism; and a Christianity, with all that is divine in and of Christ left out, would have cursed our race. But the devoted and heroic successors of our Lord found themselves impelled to preach Christ and the resurrection whether men would "hear or forbear," with a boldness and power which, though it cost them their lives, shook the moral world from centre to circumference, and vibrates still in the hearts of all the real followers of the God-man. Peter's majestic answer to the high priest: "We ought to obey God rather than men," glows with a Christian heroism which forever banishes every suspicion of policy seeking by the apostolic ministry.

What if Peter, standing up with the eleven, on the sublime occasion of the pentecost, had interpreted Joel's prophecy so as to please the Jewish rabble! What if the eloquent proto-martyr Stephen had softened and qualified his inimitable argument, based on quotations from the ancient Scriptures as predictive of the Messiah, so as not to have offended his Jewish inquisitors! He would have saved his own reputation and life; but the gospel would have lost its ablest and grandest defence, and the church of succeeding ages the inspiration of a martyr loyalty to God which has supported faith and hope in the darkest and bloodiest periods of christian conflict.

Think of St. Paul,—"left at Athens alone"—as he stood in the Agora surrounded by the wonderful creations of mythology, in every form of beauty and grandeur; amid the temples, the altars, the statues [illegible] gods of Greece; speaking to an audience of Athenian philosophers—Stoics and Epicureans—think of our great apostle, at the centre of the world's culture, hesitating, faltering, quailing; accommodating his august message of "Jesus and the resurrection" to suit the conceptions and tastes of the Grecian Sophists! His learning and eloquence might have encircled his own name with renown; but his massive and magnificent ministry, as the great defender of Christ's gospel; and his glorious epistles, already translated into more than two hundred languages, whose glowing pages are read, in the raptures of faith and love, by tens of thousands, while only here and there a few remain to trace the speculations of Plato or the orations of Cicero,"—these all would have been lost to the church and to God, and the gospel itself would have been seriously impaired. Judas could turn traitor and fall out of the ranks of the disciples, but the defection of Paul would have fatally marred the completeness of the Christian system.

The early success of the new faith was due, under God, to the fidelity and devotion of its apostolic advocates. Had the vacillation, timidity, policy-seeking and tampering of these times befallen Christianity in Paul's day, it would have been wrecked past recovery long before it had shaken the thrones of the Cæsars. If there is anything in the grandeur of lofty example, modern Christendom ought to go to its knees in contrition and shame. The great want of the hour is pulpit fidelity. Not learning, or eloquence, or moral character, but FIDELITY, faithfulness of interpretation, and fearlessness in application. Pulpit tampering with divine truths is destroying the very fabric of the Christian religion. The pulpit is giving away the gospel to skepticism. Pulpit expediency invites popular unbelief. Large portions of the Bible are ignored because they are not palatable to the religious tendencies of this age. Prophecy is treated with contemptuous neglect. The second advent of Christ and the resurrection of the dead—themes which are the burden of the New Testament as the grand counterparts of the first advent and the atonement—are scouted as the shibboleths of fanatics. The signs of the times, which were pointed out by Jesus and his apostles with such solemn emphasis as the immediate precursors of the day of judgment, are laughed at as "scares" by means of which the people are foolishly frightened. Any pastor who has the temerity to preach frankly and squarely on the coming of Christ "in the clouds of heaven with all his holy angels" to raise the dead, judge the world, and set up the everlasting kingdom promised of the Father, will be in imminent danger of an early dismissal.

But above the voice of hostile criticism which challenges the loyalty of those who would be true to God, and the bland applaudits which cheer on the "evil servant," are heard the inspiring words of Jesus—"Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his Lord has made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing."

Adequate, grand, eternal will be the reward, in the day of the Lord Jesus, of those ministers of his Word who "from the mouth of God their awful charge receive," and faithfully, fearlessly, lovingly pronounce the divine message, without equivocation or abatement. A chief need of the church today is PULPIT FIDELITY. E. A. S.

FOR GOD—WITH GOD.

There is an essential difference between working for God and working with God. Many good people do what seems to them right and wise and useful, and call it working for God. It is very easy to pronounce the prosecution of our own plans and desires working for God. It requires but a breath to say, "The Lord wants me to do this." But claiming the divine sanction for our acts is a very serious matter. We have seen many courses of conduct covered by this pretence which were anything but harmonious with the spirit and teachings of the Lord Jesus. To arrogate the divine sanction for conduct not strictly Christian is doubly sinful.

We only work for God when we work with God. The Lord has outlined all he requires his people to do. The Holy Word is the standard and test of human conduct. No claim to divine endorsement is entitled to respect that does not harmonize with the spirit and scope of the written Word. When one is really working and walking with God there will be little need of professing divine direction; this will be "read and known of all men"—certainly of all good men. E. A. S.

MILLER'S MISTAKE. [illegible] ED.

[illegible] Gazette of Sept. 18th thus reports a discourse given by a Seventh Day preacher:

"Elder Goodrich, at Reform Club Hall, last night, took for his text Dan. 8: 14: 'Unto 2300 days, then shall the sanctuary be cleansed.' The speaker said: 'This text is the great foundation upon which William Miller based his calculation that the second coming of Christ would take place in 1884. His conclusion was reached thus: An angel was commissioned to make Daniel understand the vision of chapter 8. In this explanation the angel said, Dan. 9: 24, Seventy weeks (490 years) are cut off upon the Jews from the 2300 years. And this period was to begin at the going forth of the commandment to restore and rebuild Jerusalem, from which point of time to Messiah the Prince, or the time when Christ was anointed, which took place at his baptism, should be 69 weeks, or 483 literal years. The commandment to restore and rebuild Jerusalem went forth in 457 B. C., according to Bible chronology, Ezra 7. Add 483 to 457 B. C. and it brings us to A. D. 27, when our Lord was baptized and began his public ministry, saying "The time is fulfilled." Of the remaining week of the 70 which were cut off upon the Jews, the angel says, Dan. 9 27, "He (Christ) shall confirm the covenant with man for one week (seven years); but in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease." Christ confirmed the covenant with the Jews himself the first half of the 70th week. From the time of his baptism in A. D. 27, autumn, till his crucifixion in the spring of A. D. 34, 490 years taken from 2300 leaves 1810, to which add 34, and we have 1844.'

The speaker said: 'We claim that Mr. Miller was mistaken in the event to transpire, but that he was correct in his chronology. He supposed that the earth was the sanctuary, and that its cleansing would be by fire at Christ's coming.'

The elder stated that there is not a text in the Bible where the earth is called the sanctuary. He then quoted several texts to show that the sanctuary of this dispensation, which was to be cleansed at the end of the 2300 years, is the heavenly sanctuary, the great antitype of the earthly sanctuary, which Paul says was a 'pattern of things in the heavens;' and that its cleansing began at the end of the 2300 years, when Christ our High Priest entered the most holy apartment of the sanctuary above, according to the type.'"

1. It is true that Miller ended the 70 weeks at the cross, instead of allowing them to run to the end of the war against Jerusalem, and also ended the 69 weeks at the Messiah's baptism, instead of ending them at his real advent into the world, treating these two distinct measurements as parts of one with the same beginning.

2. He also began to reckon from the 7th of Ezra, which incorrect chronology sets down as 457 B. C.; but no commandment to restore and rebuild Jerusalem can there be found.

3. He made the last week to span the time between Christ's baptism and crucifixion, instead of allowing it to reach to the end of the war against the city, as stated by the angel, and also made Christ confirm the covenant, instead of the Roman Prince.

4. By this process he made the 2300 days end in 1843–4; but the Seventh Day people now insist that the 2300 days ended in the autumn of 1844, and at this place the crucifixion in the spring of A. D. 34, in which year the Passover fell on Tuesday, and Christ was certainly crucified at the time of the Passover in whatever year he died; so as truly as Sabatarians are correct in ending the 2300 days in 1844, so surely Christ died on Tuesday, and there is no way of escaping the conclusion; but we know that Christ was not dead five days, and consequently we know that the 70 weeks did not end in A. D. 34 if they marked the crucifixion; and therefore we also know that the 2300 did not end in 1844. So if the theory of the cleansing of an upper sanctuary were true, it would still be untrue that the time of its cleansing was in 1844. We repeat, to end the 2300 days in the autumn of 1844 is to place the cross at the Passover of A. D. 34 on Tuesday, which is positively untrue, as that would keep Jesus in the grave five days instead of three.

5. The "sanctuary" to be cleansed at the end of the 2300 days, instead of being a sanctuary in heaven, was simply that which was "cast down" by the Roman horn, after he had taken away the "daily sacrifice" connected therewith (Dan. 8: 11), and certainly no "daily sacrifice" was ever taken away in heaven, nor sanctuary "cast down" there. The effort to make it appear that there was need of a cleansing work in heaven by quoting Heb. 9: 23, is a failure. While the text reads, "It was therefore necessary that the patterns of things in the heavens should be purified with these; but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these," the word "purified" here means, as in the 18th verse, "dedicated." "Neither the first testament was dedicated without blood," so the heavenly things were simply dedicated with blood. When under the law blood was applied to inanimate things, it was for their dedication, and not to remove pollution. If the claim is correct that the heavenly sanctuary is "trodden down" in the sense in which the Son of God is trodden under foot by sinners who spurn him, it certainly has just as really been thus trodden down since 1844 as previously; for while the cause which produced the result continues, the result also will continue. This fact is too apparent to be overlooked, and emphatically nullifies the claim of a spiritual treading down of an upper sanctuary up to A. D. 1844, unless it admits also its present downtreading in the same sense; and this admission would also invalidate the argument. When God cleanses the sanctuary now trodden down by the Roman horn, he will first destroy the horn, and the cause being thus obliterated, the effect will cease.

That Mr. Miller was mistaken in the event, instead of the time, is totally incorrect. Following Prideaux both in chronology and in the application of the weeks, Miller was premature in his reckoning. A hasty glance at the angel's testimony will make this clear.

1. Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people, and upon thy holy city to finish [margin—restrain] the transgression." So much time was assigned to Daniel's people, the Jews, and to their city, Jerusalem. At the time the angel gave this testimony Jerusalem was in ruins, and the Jews were far removed therefrom in captivity. But their city should once more exist, and after coming into existence again, they should have a 70 weeks' history therein—490 years [illegible] and exterminating [illegible] from again exterminating the [illegible]. This "restraint" did not begin in their favor till they began to fortify their city, under Nehemiah, in the 20th year of Artaxerxes, which we place 418–17 B. C. (the Persian year taking in a part of two Roman years), reaching forward to the 4th year of Vespasian, A. D. 74, when the last Jewish fortification fell—just 490 years from the time they began to fortify against their enemies under Nehemiah. There is no hint given by the angel that the crucifixion should come at the end of the 70 weeks, but they measure the restraint due the Jews and Jerusalem in their new national history.

2. Preparatory to the beginning of this new history of 490 years, and before it could begin, the angel says: "Know therefore [for the reason that the Jews and Jerusalem should finally have allotted them 490 years] and understand that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem [an event to precede their promised new history] unto Messiah the Prince, shall be 69 weeks"—or 483 years. This begins, not with the 70 weeks, but with an event to precede the new history of Jerusalem, an event that should pave the way for it, and that event was the "going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem;" and we show that it was given by Cyrus, B. C. 488, the 483 years thus reaching to B. C. 5, where Jesus was born, the year before Herod died, B. C. 4; and between B. C. 488, and B. C. 5, there are just 483 years. Angels announced Jesus as the Messiah at his birth, and that was the time the 69 weeks ended, and not at his baptism.

3. The angel then specifies another epoch, from which he gives another measurement, reaching to another and different event: "The street shall be built again, and the wall, even in troublous times. And after 62 weeks shall the Messiah be cut off, but not for himself." Jerusalem's wall was finished in the 32nd of Artexerxes, which we make include a part of B. C. 406 and 405; and from the latter part of this year, the 62 weeks, or 434 years, reach to A. D. 30, just where we prove that Jesus died; for in that year, and only in that year during Pilate's administration, did the Passover day begin on Thursday; and as Jesus died at a Passover, and on a day of the week that would allow him to remain dead three days, this is clearly the time of the crucifixion.

When Christ entered upon his public ministry he began by saying, "The time is fulfilled"—not the time of his being slain as the Lamb of God, but simply the time of his manifestation as the Lamb of God, for John had just exclaimed: "Behold the Lamb of God." Now this Lamb of God was not only to be slain at the end of 62 weeks, but as in the case of the typical lamb which must be taken up the fourth day before being slain, so this prophetic Lamb must be made manifest on the fourth prophetic day before being slain; and that was at the time of his baptism; he was then manifested as the Lamb of God to be slain on the fourth prophetic day following; and this manifestation Jesus could say, "The time is fulfilled"—he had entered upon his [illegible] manifestation [illegible] crucifixion, or execution as the [illegible] of God. This [illegible] the only time [illegible] by the Savior—the [illegible] his manifestation to the people at [illegible].

[illegible] then specifies an event further [illegible] of time: "And the [illegible] that shall come shall [illegible] the sanctuary [which [illegible] horn "cast down;"] [illegible] shall be with a flood; [illegible] of the war desolations are determined. And [illegible] the prince that shall [illegible] confirm the covenant with many [illegible] week: and in the midst of the week [illegible] cause the sacrifice and the oblation [illegible]." Here the angel affirms that [illegible] week [7 years] of Jewish history [illegible] should be a week of "war"—[illegible] certain prince should come with his [illegible] or army, and destroy the city of Jerusalem and its "sanctuary;" that in the midst of that week the sacrifice should cease. [illegible] fulfillment of this the Roman prince led [illegible] people against Jerusalem, destroyed [illegible] cast down its sanctuary, spent [illegible] week in doing this work of ruin [illegible] midst of that week he caused [illegible] and oblation to cease."

It is a gr[illegible] to suppose that Messiah is the [illegible] should cause the sacrifice to cease [illegible] because he never did do it [illegible] because the Roman prince [illegible] leaving a part of [illegible] on to the close of the w[illegible] in vain to attempt to put the [illegible] between Christ's baptism and crucifixion, for he was baptized in "the 15th Tiberius'" full reign; and crucified in [illegible] 19[illegible] of his full reign; or baptized [illegible] of his sole reign, and crucified in the 17th of his sole reign; and this allows only four current years between his baptism and crucifixion, instead of seven. The Roman prince confirmed or verified God's covenant of wrath against the Jews for their disobedience, bringing upon them the full threatened curses till the week of war expired; and there ended the 70 weeks, and he began the treading down of the sanctuary.

Although it is true that the whole earth is never called the sanctuary, except in the sense of being the antitypical "worldly sanctuary"—the place in the type where the minor priests officiated, and the place in the antitype where the antitypical minor priests should "offer up spiritual sacrifices"—while heaven itself is the antitype of "the holiest," into which Christ, our antitypical High Priest, entered 1800 years ago; yet it is true that there was a sanctuary in Jerusalem that will remain trodden down as long as "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles," even "till the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled;" and although this sanctuary is not the whole earth, it is a component part of it, and together with it must be "reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men," after which the glory of God will not only again be manifested at Jerusalem, but will also fill the purified earth; and after this cleansing the Lord will "beautify the place of his "sanctuary, and make the place of his feet glorious;" and then this sanctuary [illegible] worldly sanctuary," was the place where the minor priests officiated; and in the antitype Christians are a "royal priesthood to offer up spiritual sacrifices" in the antitypical "worldly sanctuary"—the place where we live; for there is no department in heaven for the antitypical minor priests to officiate, and no minor priests there to officiate; for we are the officiating priests in the antitype of this department while Christ, our High Priest, officiates on the other side of the blue veil—the atmospheric curtain between the two departments. Heaven is not divided into two sanctuaries, with minor priests in one, and an High Priest in the other.

The notion that Christ in 1844 quit the seat that he has occupied for over 1800 years in heaven, and went to another locality, is simply a senseless monstrosity, and squarely opposed to Scripture testimony. Paul affirms: "We have such an High Priest, who is set on the right hand of the Majesty in the heavens." (Heb. 8: 1); or, "is set down at the right hand of the throne of God," (Heb. 12: 2.) But for how long? The Father said to him: "Sit thou on my right hand until I make thy foes thy footstool" (Acts 2: 34); not merely till 1844 should arrive. So his position of 1800 years so will remain unchanged till the time arrives for his foes to fall—an event not due till he shall cease his mediatorial work, which did not end in 1844. When it ends the Father "shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heaven must receive until the restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets." Acts 3: 21.

In the type, when the High Priest went into the Most Holy place he always went from the department where the minor priests daily officiated; so 1800 years ago, Jesus went from "the antitypical worldly sanctuary," where the antitypical minor priests are now offering "spiritual sacrifices," into heaven where the High Priest only is allowed to go. But he did not, in 1844, leave a realm wherein antitypical minor priests were officiating, as if it were true that he then changed quarters; for there is no such realm in heaven, nor are there any antitypical minor priests there. So if Jesus really did not enter the Most Holy till 1844, he did not then go from the department of the minor priests in harmony with the type. Either the type or the theory must be wrong, and it is not hard to determine which is at fault. W. S.

A WONDERFUL MIRAGE was visible on the coast of Maine a few [illegible] ago. The day had been warm and [illegible], and waves of heated air seemed to vibrate with great intensity on the sea. Suddenly the ocean assumed a wonderful appearance. NOW READY.

The Blessed Hope Quarterly, containing the Sunday School lessons for the last three months of this year is sent out to its subscribers, and a few more copies are still on hand for any who may order them. This number is a good sample of what the Quarterly will be made for the next year, if the Lord will. Some improvements may be made, but the present number is a fair specimen of what its appearance will be. Some changes may be made in the introductory pages, and also we intend to publish some questions especially adapted to discussion by adults, such as may be considered knotty questions. Therefore all who wish to indulge their argumentative powers will do well to take the Blessed Hope Quarterly for the coming year. FRANK BURR.

SPECIAL REQUEST.

The Second Advent Tract Society connected with the Advent Christian Church in Boston—E. A. Stockman pastor—respectfully request all who are interested in promulgating Bible truth among sailors and others, to send the Crisis and Young Pilgrim—after they have read them—to the address of W. E. Nutter, Boston, Mass.

W. E. NUTTER, President.
J. E. HUDSON, Secretary.

[This tract work being done by our Boston Tract Society is really a most important phase of Christian activity. On any Sunday morning there are hundreds of vessels lying in our port. These vessels are from all parts of the world, and our tract distributors visit them every Sunday morning, and give tracts and papers to every one on board. One brother visited thirty vessels one Sunday morning, and made a very interesting report at the noon prayer meeting. By means of this work not only those on board the vessels are reached, but the tracts and papers find their way to all countries. Those of our brethren who may be disposed to comply with this request of our Boston Tract Society will be sending the gospel of the kingdom to all parts of the world.—ED.]

TRACTS FOR ROME!

There is a call on me for tracts for Rome, Italy, in the Italian tongue. I take this means, by permission of our editor, to ask, Is there any reader of the Crisis who is a scholar in that language, or who knows of one who would translate a tract into that tongue? If so, please write to me about it. Let us visit Rome and all Italy with this gospel of the coming Lord and kingdom. Also the Danes are calling for our tracts in their tongue. Who among us can properly translate into that tongue?

Yarmouth, Me. I. C. WELLCOME.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Eld. Frank Burr reports a visit to the New Bedford church Sept. 20th, and found them doing well. The services were well attended, and the meetings were spiritual. They "know whom they have believed."

JOURNEY EAST.—No. 4.

BY O. R. FASSETT.

[illegible] the State of Maine I returned to [illegible] of Vermont and found M[illegible] and kind [illegible] in Bro. Allen's family resulted in giving herself and all of us cheerful hope of her speedy recovery. This beautiful mountain retreat, with its good air and affectionate Christian society, all aided toward this desired end.

Sunday, Sept. 2nd, I preached again in Vernon, Vt. There were good audiences both at the morning and afternoon services. This beloved Christian people enjoy Christian fellowship, union, and love unfeigned. Believers in Jesus have formed a "Christian alliance," constituted of members of different denominations, and they hold their meetings together, and different clergymen of the several sects represented preach the Word to them in regular order. This is a well arranged plan where no one denomination is able to support the means of grace, and where charity abounds; and should be followed by believers in the Lord in every thinly settled town and small village in the country. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." Ps. 133. They have in Vernon a Union Sabbath School which is quite flourishing.

Sept. 6th, we left the hospitable home where Mrs. F. had tarried three full weeks to her great advantage, and departed for Castleton, Vt. We found on our arrival at C., Bro. Atwood at the depot waiting to convey us to his house. Bro. Wallace was absent from his pastoral charge attending Campmeetings, taking advantage of my being present with his church on a visit to recruit his health and strength, which I learned with sorrow was materially suffering from overwork. I did not see him as I desired and expected. Bro. Wallace is greatly beloved by his people in Castleton and vicinity, and highly esteemed by the community, and is doing a good work in his region. I preached for the church in Castleton Sundays September 9th and 16th. I had designed to spend the 16th in Sandy Hill, N. Y., but failing to receive intelligence from Bro. Phelps in time, I had to be denied the pleasure of seeing the dear Christian friends in S. H., and they were disappointed in my not visiting them, no doubt. If I ever come East again I will surely remember them.

Sept. 12th, I went to Poultney, Vt., to visit Bro. and Sr. Rogers and other Christian friends, and preach the Word in the evening. I found Bro. Rogers and his son waiting for me, and in affliction with their families, Bro. Rogers' son having lost a lovely little child of six months of age. The funeral was held at the residence of the afflicted parents Sept. 13th. A very large concourse of sympathizing friends and neighbors besides the relatives were present at the funeral services. A discourse was preached by me designed to comfort the afflicted and bereaved, and to edify others in attendance concerning "that blessed hope," the resurrection from the dead. Thirty-three carriages followed in procession to its last resting-place, till the trump of resurrection sounds, this little precious jewel a distance of three miles and a half. The occasion was an impressive one not soon to be forgotten, and it is sincerely [illegible]

On the 16th Sept., I preached at Castleton in the morning; at Poultney, a distance of eleven miles, in the afternoon; and in the Baptist church in Hydeville, a distance of ten miles from Poultney, in the evening. The pastor of the church was present and a good congregation to hear the Word. At the close of the service the Baptist minister heartily approved the sermon, and declared himself much interested, which was somewhat a surprise to me, considering the character and plainness of my discourse. While remaining in Castleton we made our home with Bro. and Sr. Atwood whom we count among our life-long friends. They spared no pains to make our visit most agreeable. Bro. Sherman we were sorry to learn on our arrival in Castleton was very sick with pneumonia. We saw him several times during our stay, and tarried a day and night with his beloved family, by earnest solicitation, though Sister Sherman herself was quite feeble. Bro. and Sister Sherman ministered of their abundance to our every want. Oh, how we love those who love the Lord! We want to meet the dear friends in Castleton, all of them, and spend an eternity with them in the kingdom of God.

Brother Wiswell and family at Hydeville showed us much kindness, with whom we spent two days. Bereaved of a devoted wife and a kind [illegible] taken from them by death, they mourn her loss, but in hope of the resurrection of the dead. A day was spent with Bro. and Sister Phelps of Fair Haven profitably; but owing to continued rains I was disappointed in visiting Low Hampton, where lies the body of William Miller, and where are surviving Advent friends whom we intended to see.

While at Castleton and vicinity I attended one day the Methodist Campmeeting, by the kindness of Bro. Atwood, who conveyed me to it in his buggy. I had the pleasure of hearing Mrs. Barney of Providence, R. I. I never saw or heard this earnest, zealous Christian worker before; and her sermon was a treat to me. Her discourse was based upon a historic account in the Old Testament, of which she made a practical use to happy effect. Her whole heart and energy of mind was bent on the salvation of souls. Without fanaticism, intelligent and earnest in her life-work, with feminine modesty and graceful address making appeals to her congregation, with the power of the Holy Spirit resting upon her, the effect was most remarkable. Stout hearts were melted before her persuasive powers. She is an efficient lecturer in the temperance cause, and gave one upon the encampment that was productive of good. The Lord bless her in her Christian work is my prayer.

While hearing Mrs. Barney, it called to mind the privilege I had while in Auburn, N. Y., as I passed through that city, of hearing that worthy divine, Rev. Mr. Cuyler, who was on a visit there. His sermon was based upon an Old Testament historic account, repeated with effect before his audience, and from which he preached an admirable and effective practical sermon. I thought while hearing him and also Mrs. Barney, why they and the ministry generally [illegible] of the word of God, and improve them in the same way to good effect. How happy would be the result! How blest to them and the hearers would be the fruit of the study of the prophecies, and the practical lessons they could enforce to lead men to repentance and a life of holiness, and a preparation for the coming of the Lord!

O that "the watchmen lift up the voice; with the voice together sing." O that they might "see eye to eye" as they will "when the Lord shall bring again Zion"! "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth." Isa. 52: 7, 8.

A CHANGE.

A special change is coming over the minds of many Christian people in relation to the standard of fellowship. The time has been when the members of different denominations were expected to avoid mingling together in Christian work. It was claimed if they united their efforts to save the perishing, that by so doing they sanctioned what they considered false in the theology of the church. For instance, if Baptists and Methodists united together in revival work, the Baptist union men would be charged by some of their brethren as giving sanction to sprinkling for baptism, and open communion, while the Methodist unionists would meet with censure from some of their brethren, on the ground that by laboring with the Baptists, they had been giving countenance to their teaching on the subject of baptism and close communion, and that such a union was calculated to weaken Methodism. But the time has now come when the true friends of Jesus begin to see the importance of tearing down all sectarian walls, which Satan has built up between the Lord's children, and of uniting against the common foe of the church of Christ.

A glance over Christendom to-day shows the fact that most of the successful work in the vineyard of the Lord is being done by union men, whose test of fellowship is Christian character, or heart purity, instead of some disputed theological dogma about which good men differ. The Spirit of Christ is what produces true and constant Christian union. Creeds never produce divine love. Such love is always the fruit of the Holy Spirit. When one is "filled with the Spirit," then they necessarily, and without effort, love God with all the heart, and their neighbor as themselves.

When speaking of the late Christian Convention in Farwell Hall, Chicago, conducted by Bro. D. L. Moody, Sept. 18th, 19th, and 20th, the Chicago Daily Inter Ocean of Sept. 20th, says:

"The change which has been going on gradually has pervaded all denominations. No one has escaped, not even the papal priesthood. There is remarkable freedom from trials for heresy at the present time, but this is due to the prevalence of heresy, rather than to any exemption from it. The writer in the New York Tribune already referred to cites a large number of cases in all the leading denominations showing the utterance of sentiments which would not have been tolerated by our fathers."

The people are calling for a live Christianity, which really makes a man "a new creature." They are getting tired of counterfeits and cold formalism. When Jesus' disciples love him with a pure heart, they cease their contention about creeds, and can then unite in earnest work to save the unsaved. The Lord is at hand. Let all his faithful ones unite to build up each other in the highway of holiness, and thus be ready to meet the Saviour when he shall come in glory. M. G.

NOTICE.

Any one wishing to send the Crisis for THREE MONTHS to any person or persons who have never taken it before, can do so for 35 CENTS. We cannot allow any commission on the above offer. J. HEMENWAY, Agent for A. C. P. Society.

NOTICE.

We have a large quantity of back Nos. of the Crisis and Pilgrim, that we will send as ordered, free, on reception of money to pay the postage. AGENT.

NEW TRACTS.

We have just published FIVE NEW TRACTS, No. 1, 2 and 3 Gospel Leaves, by J. Hemenway, each containing four pages. They are just the tracts for revival work and free distribution. 10 cts. per dozen postpaid.

Also, one Tract by H. Munger, entitled "IMPORTANT THEOLOGICAL QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS." This tract has 16 pages. The questions are put in his particular quaint style, but they are right to the point, and we believe them Biblical. 3 cts. single copy, or 25 cts. per dozen.

Also one Tract entitled "INFIDELITY ON THE [illegible]" [illegible] and is one of his best. It contains [illegible] pages. Single copy 3 cts., or 20 cts. per dozen. AGENT.

BEHOLD THE BRIDEGROOM.

GO YE OUT TO MEET HIM.

This is a pamphlet of 96 pages, written by Henry A. Chittenden. It is an examination of the Scriptures of truth, showing that the end of this age or world is in the immediate future. Every one should have a copy of this book, as it is full of prophetical instruction, and is thoroughly an Advent publication. Price per copy 20 cts. postpaid. Address J. HEMENWAY, Box 5140 Boston, Mass., or H. A. Chittenden, Mont Clair, N. J. AGENT.

"WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?"

The above is the very appropriate heading of an article by Bro. S. Roberts, in the Free Methodist. Bro. Roberts is an able and devoted man, and the leading one in the Free Methodist denomination. Many of the [illegible] Christians in all churches [illegible] convic[illegible] at our doors. This conviction is continually growing deeper. Let every true disciple of Jesus beware of those who cry "peace and safety" in these hours of great danger. Satan is marshaling his hostile forces in all directions, and preparing for a terrible conflict with the little remnant of Jesus' disciples, who will not conform to this world. M. G.

Bro. Roberts says: "It cannot be other than that there must be a great variety of opinions as to the moral and spiritual condition of the church and the world at the present time. As far as I can judge of the matter, the idea seems to prevail that the world is rapidly being converted to God; that through the instrumentality of missionary, Bible and other societies, the light of the gospel is being rapidly disseminated, and that as a result of the multiplied machinery of the church, we may expect the ushering in of the long looked for millennial morn. Ministers proclaim from the pulpit and rostrum, that "the sun never shone on so good a world as it did this morning," notwithstanding the fact that the myriad tongues that sins, and suicides, and murders, and famines, and burning towns, and blazing cities, and calamities by sea and by land, earthquakes and floods were never so numerous nor appaling as within the lifetime of the present generation.

National and world's peace societies convene and congratulate themselves and mankind at large, that "we have now reached an era of peace, and arbitration has been substituted for the sword in the adjustment of national differences and wrongs. The lion and the lamb now, or soon will, lie down together." But scarcely have these conventions dissolved, and the good men that composed them reached the quiet of their own homes, ere "grim-visaged war rears again his wrinkled front," and the lurid glare of pillaged and smoking hamlet and town proclaims the fact that they were honestly mistaken and that Satan still reigns among the children of men. The tumult of war, the shrieks of the wounded [illegible] are borne on the same gale that carries from peace societies the swelling notes that "henceforth the contest between nations shall be bloodless, and that the destinies of empires have been transferred from the battle-field to the forum.

It is possibly true that the lion and the lamb do lie down together, but if so, the lamb will be found inside the lion. Looked at from our stand-point, we see the world increasing in wickedness as the years roll onward. The modern church machinery so confidently and persistently applied to convert men to God, and make them new creatures in Christ Jesus, is an utter and miserable failure. Some may take us to task for these sentiments, and pronounce them heresy, but the Word of God and the living facts of to-day announce in language too clear to be misunderstood, that as the world increases in years, the abominations and wickedness of men in their multiplied and innumerable forms will continue to increase also, until the divine patience is exhausted, and all nations shall be forced to drink of the wine cup of God's fury. It is my firm conviction that for many years past the Holy Spirit has been gradually withdrawing himself from the Protestant churches of America, until the land is filled with hundreds of thousands of church members that were never converted to God. Is not the Free Methodist Church also becoming as

"SUFFER IT TO BE SO NOW."

Wronged, oppressed, misunderstood,
Hearts would do right if they could;
Toil, and poverty, and pain
Fall to some as free as rain;
Hard it is sometimes to bow,—
"Suffer it to be so now."

It is hard to look abroad
O'er the perfect works of God
Marred by bloodshed, hate and wrong,
Suffering weak, and boasting strong;
God does right we must allow—
"Suffer it to be so now."

Carnal are the ways of men,
Self rules heart, and tongue and pen;
Justice, principle and right
Seldom greet the yearning sight;
Falsehood smites truth's open brow,—
Suffer it to be so now."

When the end comes, by and by,
We shall know the reason why
Some must suffer pain and blight,
Groping here in tears and night;
Though we know not why, nor how,
"Suffer it to be so now."

There shall never fall a tear,
There our knowledge shall be clear;
Judged before our Father's throne,
We shall know as we are known.
Help us, Saviour, meek as thou,
"Suffer it to be so now."

"HE WILL GUIDE YOU INTO ALL TRUTH."—John 16: 13.

BY ARTHUR P. MOORE.

We mistake when we think this text means that the Holy Spirit will reveal new truths to us. The assertion is that he will guide us, not reveal to us. We must do the finding; see the truth when we come to it. He will point out the way. The canon of revelation was designated as full when a penalty was pronounced upon him who added thereto or took away, that we might ever know that all subsequent professed revelations were spurious, for the one given to John reaches to the end, and we need no more. But we need to know very perfectly the truth that is revealed. Let us then trust the heavenly Teacher.

A comprehensive survey of man's efforts to arrive at truth unaided gives us but a melancholy picture of failure. Talent and genius have sought by powers of reason to find out truth, but we only know what we have lived, and can only trust what God has revealed. Hallam, remarking on the genius of Descartes, says that man cannot frame a syllogism with a correct conclusion unless the fact involved in the conclusion is known to him, and that though logic may be excellent to teach the truth, it is powerless to find it. In accordance with this the Bible tells us "grace and truth came by Jesus Christ," and the whole tenor of the gospel shows that it was necessary he should reveal it, because man's reason could not reach it. "For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost," or ruined. Luke 19: 10. Not only could man not pray for reinstatement in innocence, but could not find God's ways. Rom. 11: 33. Hence Christ came to make the payment and show the way, tell what was right and truth, and his Spirit is with us to lead us into this truth, and open up to us the Scriptures, and make us understand them.

Inasmuch, however, as men of modern times claim to have modified the interpretations of Scripture, or set it entirely aside by their processes of inductive philosophy, let us examine a little with regard to their facts, and grounds of surety. Mr. Edison, of high authority in experimental philosophy, is quoted from the New York Herald of Dec. 31, 1879, as saying: "They (the text-book) are mostly misleading. I get mad with myself when I think I have believed what is so learnedly set out in them. There are more frauds in science than anywhere else. * * * Take a whole pile of them that I can name, and you will find uncertainty, if not imposition, in half of what they state as scientific truth. They have time and again set down experiments as done by them—curious, out-of-the-way experiments—that they never did, and upon which they have founded so-called scientific truths. I have been thrown off my track often by them, and for months at a time. You see a great many, and you believe in it. Try the experiment yourself, and you find the result altogether different. * * *

Professor this or that will controvert you out of the books, and prove out of the books that it cannot be so, though you have it right in the hollow of your hand all the time, and could break his spectacles with it." O Science, falsely so called! How abject upon exposure! We well remember, in illustration of the above, the time when a young medical student went before the professor in Physiological Chemistry for final examination, and was asked why the starch in a seed was changed to sugar in the process of assimilation by the young plant, and though he knew the answer expected, said he did not know. The professor graciously gave him the very proper and time-honored reason, "To render it soluble." "But," said the student, "the 'dextrin,' into which it must be changed before it becomes sugar, is soluble." "Ah, yes, that is so," said the professor, and the examination to much greater length was not carried. Inductive philosophy failed that time from misapprehension of the facts.

Tyndall's name is great, but here is what President McCosh, of New Jersey, is quoted as saying of him: "Eminent as he is as a scientist, there is no proof that he has studied philosophy." "He talks of Empedocles 'noticing this gap in the doctrine of Democritus,' whereas every tyro in philosophy knows that Empedocles comes before Democritus." (Reply to Tyndall, page 4.) Prof. Tyndall has great fame, but his wave or undulatory theory of sound will not hold, for when the air is colored by smoke, etc., so that its motions can be seen, no such "to and fro excursions" of the air around a tuning-fork as he describes are found; neither can I move forty-one thousand tons of air with my voice, as would be the case if sound were undulations of air, for I cannot move a thousand pounds clear from support with my whole body; nor does the theory account for the resonance of sounding-boards, whereby the original tone seems increased in volume and force, for the sound does not increase in all cases in proportion to the trembling or undulations in the sound-board or resonator. It would seem more reasonable to suppose that sound was a radiation of peculiar particles, or a movement of molecules, the microscopic or finer forms of which, it is assumed that all matter is composed. But science does not as yet know what sound is, nor am I aware that God has revealed it.

Again, Dr. Lionel Beale, of London, "is authority all over the world on physiology, and ought to know whereof he speaks." He is quoted as saying of Herbert Spencer's books that they "contain so much false physiology that they will not be read ten years after his death, except as literary curiosities." And yet Herbert Spencer is an ardent advocate of the modern so-called science; evolution, spontaneous generation and all; an authority upon these subjects with many who delight to believe them true, and some who have not taken the trouble to prove them untrue.

The grand trouble with the arguments of evolutionists is, they are not true to the facts of anatomy and physiology. The so-called gill-arches which are said to connect the human embryo with the fish as to origin and descent, are not gill-arches at all, and the fish embryo has true gills in addition to these same marks common to both. So high a standard as Prof. Carpenter, who is authority on physiology in medical colleges, says: "It is incorrect, therefore, to speak of the vascular arches in their necks (the higher vertebrata) as bronchial (gill) arches, since no bronchiæ or gills are developed from them." In other words, there is no such thing as rudimentary gills about man, or in him, to show his descent from fishes, and thus the biggest evolution argument breaks down. But Rev. Joseph Cook, President McCosh, and others, through inadvertency or cowardice, or both, swallow the Theistic (?) evolutionary dose without a squirm.

Let us see how they mix it, and what it is good for. Prof. Huxley follows the atheistic theory to the logical end, and concludes that the "living must have arisen from the not living:" but Rev. Joseph Cook proposes to put God in somewhere, if he cannot give him the first place; and while the Bible says God formed man of the dust of the ground, he says man was developed from some animal, and that "it is a physiological fact that every human being once breathed by a membrane, then by gills, then by lungs." Yet they never breathed by gills of fish, but by what (according to Prof. Carpenter) may be compared to the gills of something lower than fish, a mollusk. Man first breathed (or took in oxygen as an egg does) through a membrane, and then through what Mr. Cook pleases to call gills, because from the nature of things nothing can or does commence to breathe (take in oxygen) in any other way, and every animal, without exception, begins in that way, because there is no other way, not because it is descended from one that used that method. Well-posted physicians may be materialists, but they are not all evolutionists.

Again, President McCosh is quoted as saying, "Suppose it proven that there is such a thing as spontaneous generation, would religion thereby be overthrown, either in its evidences, its doctrines, or its precepts?" Well, I am proud in the face of that to stand up before Princeton Theological Seminary and say I am an Adventist, for if any among us had put on cloth ascension robes, it would not be more ridiculous than the sentiment advanced by the renowned President of Theology. Yes, religion would be overthrown in one of its evidences, for in the first chapter of Genesis and 21st to 26th verses, it is distinctly stated that God created every living [illegible] brought forth, and every winged fowl, and that God made the beast of the earth, and the cattle, and everything that creepeth upon the earth; and in the 27th verse we read that God created man in his own image, in the image of God, not after the image of an orang-outang or a fish. He made them all in six days (see Isa. 48: 3), and it can be proved that geology has not yet found them anything but six natural days. It would seem that these eminent ministers could never have been so thoroughly befogged in matters the facts of which are so plain, if they had not, like Eve, followed the devil instead of the Spirit of the living God. Evolution and Spontaneous Generation are flat contradictions of the Bible and of science, and it behooves the Christian to pause if he cannot understand, and let God lead him in the matter. Under the guidance of the Spirit he will find the truth if he perseveres. Some of the most eminent savants of France, after long and exhausting experiments, have decided against Spontaneous Generation, and yet some of the same would be willing to decide the other way. Each argument for evolution can be taken up, and an absurdity or a missing link can be found somewhere in it, and God's Bible vindicated. Thank God for that. And when he comes "We shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly.

THE HOLY NAME.

BY M. B. ENVEY.

"Holy and reverend is his name."—Psa. 111: 9.

This title is given to our heavenly Father, the one who inhabiteth eternity, and is only once used in the Bible; and he alone is worthy of worship and due respect, and his name should not be used without reverence, for the command is, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain." With this command how often we hear his holy name blasphemed and taken in vain by the wicked, as though it was only a by-word. And may we not be in fault at times when we use that holy name without duly considering that we are in his presence, and must give an account for every idle word we say?

I have many times shuddered when I have heard the "God bless you," and "May God help us," and "God Almighty knows that this is God's truth," and so on, without seemingly realizing that his name should be reverenced, neither consider what we say, or upon whom we are calling. When we thus speak, let us pause for a moment and consider that he is holy and reverend is his name, and that the Lord will not hold us guiltless if we use his name in vain, any more than those who do not profess to be his, who by use profane that name who gave his dear Son's life for us all, and in whom we all live and have our being.

But there are times when the hand is grasped and from a full soul is pressed out "God bless you," and "May God's blessing be upon you," when the Spirit of Him who is holy fills the soul, and that Spirit bids us speak. Oh, with what reverence and meekness it moves the child of God! How softly he walks before the Lord! With what fear of quenching that blessed Spirit! Blessed and holy is his dear name. Reverenced may it ever be by us, dear reader, is my prayer.

GOOD NEWS.—NO. 13.

FROM INDIA.

We have recently received several very interesting letters from India, which we have not found time to transcribe for the readers of the Crisis. We now give you one. Others may follow. I. C. WELLCOME.

Yarmouth, Me., Sept. 24, 1883.

MADRAS, EAST INDIA, AUG. 9TH, '83.

My dear Bro. Wellcome:—Your very kind letter, dated July 9th, reached me to-day, and as I have a few moments I reply at once by the outgoing mail. And now allow me to very heartily thank you for the deep interest you have taken in the work of the Lord in this far-off land. And please tell my thanks to all who have helped you to send books and tracts in such abundance, and now to send money to me for the spread of the good news of God's love to send "his Son into the world, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life," and is to send him the second time to restore all things.

I have received the post-office order you advised me of, which is for Rs. 128, which means $51.50. I shall take immediate steps to have your "Scripture Finder," "The Gospel Key-stone," and "Bible Creed," translated into Telegoo language. I will write Bro. Massillamani and learn whether he has any correct translation at hand of any of your works in Tamil; and if I find the translations suitable, I shall put it into the printer's hands at once. Your tracts—"Scripture Finder," "Gospel Keystone," and "A Bible Creed," are just the tracts to have translated and sent through the length and breadth of India, and especially among native Christians. But I would first give the "Scripture Finder," as the Orthodox fold can object the least to that. Then I shall give them the "Bible Creed," and afterward "The Gospel Keystone." And I shall make as large editions of each as possible. I may have an edition printed in English, if I have money to do so. I shall let you know in a month's time what steps I have taken to have the money turned into the gospel.

You were informed by my postal card that myself and another brother have been baptized by Col. Armstrong. We plainly saw that none of the sects would baptize us, because of our belief. So Bro. Hamilton had a small baptistry made in the yard of a house that he rents for gospel purposes, and on Sunday morning of July 29th we both obeyed the Lord in being baptized. We had been four or five times refused by the Baptists. Very truly your brother in Christ, J. SPENCE.

Following the above are some very interesting narratives of cases of conversions to the truth of several prominent persons who have become advocates of the good news, one of whom is a public worker and doing much in circulating our publications. But it is prudent at present to withhold some details, as opposers are watching to defeat the work. Let us work, and praise the Lord for his work. I. C. WELLCOME.

REPORT OF THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE VT. A. C. CONFERENCE FOR 1883.

Sept. 29th, Conference opened at 4 P. M. by Pres. Chedel. Prayer by Eld. O. Beckwith. [illegible] Moore was appointed Secretary pro tem. On motion, the Chair appointed a committee on credentials, consisting of Elds. Geo. F. Earle, P. G. Lord and C. W. Jackson, who found the following members present, viz.: Elds. B. B. Chedel, A. F. Moore, H. C. Holt, O. Beckwith, J. Harding, Wells Hadley, D. D. Page, D. P. Perkins, L. H. Brigham, A. S. Williams, Geo. E. Brown, Geo. F. Earle. Licentiates: P. G. Lord, C. W. Jackson. Delegates: From Bridgewater—Lawson Hammond, Charles Wood, Jr.; Milo—E. Wood; North Sherburne—Geo. Hutchins; North Shrewsbury—W. F. Guild; Vershire and West Fairlee—W. F. Harding. Other churches should have been represented, but failed to appoint delegates, and of course the Conference had no power to appoint them. Members of the State Committee were, W. C. Bugbee, Chairman, Daniel Johnson, S. W. Heath, A. K. Hubbard, Chas. Doubleday. Treasurer, J. T. Edson.

On motion, the Chair appointed Elds. H. C. Holt, Geo. F. Earle and D. D. Page as committee on order of business. The Secretary's report was read, corrected and adopted. The Chairman of the State Committee reported his settlement with the State Evangelist, having paid him $116.25 for his services to the Conference; also paid the three delegates to the Association, $24.75 for their car fare to and from the meeting; also that he had received for the State Evangelist of No. Sherburne church, $12.56; of the Bridgewater church, $15.80. The orders given by him appear in Treasurer's report.

Bro. Brigham reports good results from the quarterly conference at East Roxbury. Bro. Beckwith reported that there was no call issued for a quarterly conference in his district, and none held, for he was unable to attend to it. Bro. Earle reported the third quarterly conference which was held at No. Shrewsbury with indifferent results, but excellent meetings. One was baptized. Not much indifference about that.

The Tent-master reported that the tent had not been put up since the last annual conference, and the Tent committee reported nothing done. The report of the Treasurer showed over $90 in the treasury, and about $100 was raised for the spread of the gospel in the State the coming year. Also Eld. A. F. Moore was appointed as collector to raise additional means for the purpose, which means are all to go into the hands of the Treasurer, and be accounted for. Bro. Moore will call upon the brethren as opportunity offers, and solicit subscriptions and donations to this fund.

The reports of the ministers and delegates, State Evangelist, etc., were very interesting, and listened to with attention. May God bless our ministers, and make them a power in the State of Vermont, and may they shine in the kingdom of our Father.

The Conference elected the following officers for the coming year: For President, Eld. H. H. Tucker, who also joined the Conference. For Vice President, Eld. D. D. Page. Secretary, Eld. A. F. Moore. Treasurer, Bro. J. T. Edson. State Committee: W. C. Bugbee, Daniel Johnson, A. K. Hubbard, S. W. Heath, Chas. Doubleday. Ministerial Committee: Elds. L. H. Brigham, O. Beckwith, H. C. Holt. Tent-master, [illegible] Lord; assistant, G. F. Earle. State [illegible] Eld. H. C. Holt, who is paid $1.25 per day of actual service, besides private donations. A tent committee, consisting of Elds. Lord, Earle and Moore, was appointed to hold meetings in the tent the coming year, each member to be paid $1.25 per day, besides necessary expenses and private donations, and the State Evangelist and Tent Committee are instructed to ascertain in all cases whether donations to them are intended for their private use, or the general fund in the treasury of the Conference, and act accordingly.

Eld. Geo. F. Earle was elected delegate to the meeting of the Second Advent Christian Association, to be held in the West next year, and he has power to cast three votes, also to provide a substitute in case he cannot go. It was voted that all licenses of exhorters be yearly. The old quarterly conference committee was re-elected. A hearty vote of thanks was given the retiring President for the past years of his service, and also one to the Secretary, and the minutes of the session were directed to be reported in the World's Crisis.

The Camp-meeting held in connection with the Conference was blessed with a loving spirit, and numbers, though thin at first, gradually swelled until they filled the camp-ground. Elds. Hemenway and Tucker labored in preaching the Word with force and acceptability; [illegible] opened to the beauties of the Bible, and their [illegible] some instances to feel its truths. Backsliders took a new start; old and wicked habits were thrown off, and some started the first time to serve the Lord, we believe. The meeting closed with a "love feast" which was truly a feast of love, followed by the communion service—the supper of our Lord. May we soon drink it new in the kingdom of our Father.

A. F. MOORE, Sec.

THE CHEERFUL GIVER.

Receive thou freely, freely give;
Give of thy [illegible] part;
Not grudgingly, for God doth love
A cheerful giver's heart.
If thou hast [illegible], give plenteously,
Of little thou possessed,
If offered in the Saviour's name,
Each little shall be blest.
The widow's mite was not despised;
Christ said this offering small
Is more than the rich men's gifts—
It is the widow's all."
If like the widow thou dost say,
"Of silver [illegible] is mine;"
Such as thou hast of that bestow,
Thy labor, [illegible] time.
Not all have gifts they can bestow,
Not all have [illegible] to spare;
Yet none may [illegible] they've nought to give,
For all can [illegible] a prayer.

FROM ELD. L. BOUTELL.

Bro. Stockman:—Leaving home by way of the Cheshire railroad, in seven hours we found ourselves with friends in Rutland, Vt. Spent the night and most of the next day there. I saw but a few of like precious faith, but saw the new chapel, which is nearly finished on the outside. I should think in six or eight weeks they would be able to occupy it with the sound of this gospel of the kingdom, and its being established at Christ's coming. I did not see Bro. Drury. [illegible] Once it was [illegible] ful to see the contrast between vegetation in Mass. and here. There everything scorched and dried up, so the cattle seemed to look in vain for a bit of green grass, and with tears heading towards the barn. But here the grass was fresh and green, the cattle and sheep satisfying their hunger with but little effort at feeding. Everything thriving. The corn is hurt a little by frost, but not by drought. At six o'clock, [illegible] were welcomed at Bro. Wm. Howden's, Bristol, Vt., where I was to preach Sunday at the Advent church, under the care of Bro. Williams.

Sunday was pleasant. At the sound of the bell we went to their chapel, a very neat place of worship, and it was well filled. Our Baptist preaching Bro. being away on vacation, his people came in, helping fill the seats, and there were a good hearing congregation, who were anxious to show them that the "great God" had given them the history of this world from Nebuchadnezzar's day to the setting up of God's everlasting kingdom. I preached again in the evening, and we had a good time. We have three or more evening meetings the present week. Bro. Williams is working man on the old line, and has a working church, a good Sunday School, and a seeming harmony among the brethren, looking for redemption and hoping it will come speedily. An age of probation after death, or salvation after the Lord comes, finds but few followers here. They are laboring to save the lost by repentance toward God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, and expecting extermination of death and the devil when Jesus comes.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The thirteenth Annual Session of the A. C. Conference of Northern Penn. and Southern N. Y. was held with the Church of God on [illegible] Mile, Potter County, Penn., commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 6th, and continuing over Sunday. Eld. D. B. Hunt preached the opening sermon.

At a business session on Friday, the following ministers appeared and reported their services in the vineyard: B. Butler, D. B. Hunt, E. H. Eggleston, A. H. Briggs, H. Ziegenfuss and C. W. Stephens. The following churches were represented by delegates: Westfield, Bingham, Young Hickory, Shongo and Seven Mile.

After the appointment of the usual committees, the following officers were duly elected: President—Elder A. H. Briggs; Vice President—Eld. D. B. Hunt; Secretary—Eld. C. W. Stephens; Treasurer—Bro. E. Peet. Later in the session the following business was transacted: Brn. A. A. Johnson, A. Mallory and E. Peet were elected a Finance Committee. Eld. H. Ziegenfuss, Bro. J. J. Potter and C. W. Avery were appointed a committee to solicit subscriptions to purchase a tent for the use of this Conference. Eld. C. W. Stephens was elected District Evangelist. Eld. Randolph Sorenson's name was dropped from the roll by his request in writing, and a letter of Christian character voted.

Voted, to hold the first quarterly session with the Church of God at Bingham, Potter Co., Penn., to commence Friday evening, Dec. 14th, and hold over Sunday. Thanks were voted to friends for their kind hospitality.

On Sunday the Lord's Supper was celebrated. It was a refreshing season. The brethren rejoiced, and received new courage, each feeling that it was a profitable session and good to be there.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Kennebec Valley Quarterly Conference met with the brethren at Briery school-house, according to appointment, and enjoyed a blessed season of refreshing from the Lord. The brethren and sisters were strengthened, and sinners deeply convicted of their need of a Saviour, but to our sorrow and grief none yielded to their convictions. The preaching was meat in due season, and a deep sense of the imminence of the second coming of Christ pervaded the entire meeting. A goodly number of brethren and sisters came in, with large attendance from the vicinity of the meeting. Quite a large force (some ten or twelve) of preaching brethren attended.

The territory and number of this Conference is so large, that action was taken, to be carried into effect at next annual session in January, to divide the Conference.

It was voted to hold an extra session at North Topsham, Graves' school-house, in October. Also that the annual session be held at Booker meeting-house, Gardiner.

ASSAILANTS OF THE BIBLE.

Some of the most noted assailants of the Bible's claim to inspiration have been remarkably ignorant of the contents of the book of books. Strange as this statement may appear, it is indisputably true, and with thinkers is wondrously damaging to their assaults. Dr. Johnson says that David Hume admitted to a clergyman in the bishopric of Durham, that he had never read with care even the New Testament. Thomas Paine was once questioned as to his knowledge of the Bible. His reply was "I keep no Bible." Carlyle declares that Voltaire's testimony against Christianity is worthless because of ignorance of the subject against which he testifies—that he ardently and with long continued effort warred against Christianity and the Bible, without understanding, beyond the mere superfices, what Christianity is, or what the Bible teaches. Halley, the astronomer, once avowed his skepticism in the presence of Sir Isaac Newton. The venerable scientist replied: "Sir, you have not studied these subjects, and I have. Do not disgrace yourself as a philosopher by presuming to judge on questions you have never examined."

This is wholesome advice to modern scientists, the observance of which would sweep from the minds of many their groundless disbelief of the Scriptures. If the thinkers who have doubts respecting the authenticity of this book would lay aside their prejudice, and give it a careful examination, doubtless they would be driven to say with Coleridge: "I know the Bible is inspired for it finds me at greater depths of my being than any other book."—Selected.

TEMPERANCE.

TEMPERANCE IN INDIA.

[illegible] and there is great need of it there even in the Christian church. The devil has taught the people in all lands the mean and filthy habit of using tobacco and drinking rum. He seems to know that all his other arts and devices fail to destroy human life and happiness as fast as he wishes, so tobacco and rum have become the chief gods. Please read the following letter of reform in India.

I. C. WELLCOME.

Dear Bro. Wellcome:—Your 'Tobacco Plug and Cigar,' and ten crance tracts have reached me. I was a Christian worker and tract distributor. You will be glad to learn that I have given up the use of tobacco, and the drinking of alcoholic drinks. In smoking I used to indulge very freely for the cure of dyspepsia, and I used to drink alcoholic drinks to give me an appetite; but I am now getting on very well without either. You quite put me into a corner with your pamphlet, 'The Tobacco Plug and Cigar,' as I was circulating it with your tracts, and I could not give it out with a clear conscience until I practiced what it taught. But I am able now to do any amount of distributing for you in either the temperance or the tobacco line; and I feel very much freer than I did before, as I can go to all men as an abstainer from both tobacco and intoxicating drinks.

TRACT DISTRIBUTOR.

East India, Aug. 9th.

WHAT IT COSTS.

Between seventeen and twenty-three there are tens of thousands of young men damaging themselves irretrievably by tobacco. You either use very good tobacco or cheap tobacco. If you use cheap tobacco, I want to tell you why it is cheap. It is a mixture with burdock, lampblack, sawdust, colt's-foot, plantain-leaves, fuller's earth, lime, salt, alum, and a little tobacco. You cannot afford, my young brother, to take such a mess as that between your lips. If, on the other hand, you use costly tobacco, let me say I do not think you can afford it. You take that which you expend and will expend, if you keep the habit all your life, and put it aside, and it will buy you a house, and it will buy you a farm to make you comfortable in the afternoon of life.

A merchant of New York gave this testimony: "In early life I smoked six cigars a day at six and a half cents each; they averaged that. I thought to myself one day, 'I'll just put aside all the money I am consuming in cigars, and all I would consume if I kept on in the habit, and I will see what it will come to by compound interest.'" And he gives this tremendous statistic: "Last July completed thirty-nine years since, by the grace of God I am emancipated from the filthy habit, and the saving amounted to the enormous sum of $29,101,93 by compound interest. We lived in the city, but the children, who have learned something of the enjoyment of country life from their annual visits to their grandparents, longed for a home among the green fields. I found a very pleasant place in the country for sale. The cigar money now came into requisition, and I found that it amounted to a sufficient sum to purchase the place, and it is mine. I wish all American boys could see how my children enjoy their home as they watch the vessels with their white sails that come along the sound. Now, boys, you take your choice, smoking without a home, or a home without smoking."—Rev. Dr. Talmage.

No man can be a true temperance man and oppose constitutional prohibition.

THE LIQUOR BILL OF THE UNITED STATES.

I put in one hand all the money we spend for our civil service. It is an enormous amount—about four hundred millions a year. Will that weigh down what we spend for liquor? I put in this right hand scale the liquor bill of the United States, and the left hand scale goes up. I add to what we pay for the civil service all we pay for the army; the left hand goes up yet. All we pay for the navy; it goes up yet. All we pay to Congress, including the river and harbor appropriation bills; it goes up yet. I add all we pay to county governments and to city governments; this scale with all these weights in it, goes up yet. I add all we pay to town governments and for common school education out of the taxes on school districts, and yet this scale goes up.

The National Census bureau informs us that about seven hundred millions is the amount put into the left hand scale under the circumstances I have named; but the most careful staticians say, and the New York Tribune brought these facts before the country not long ago, that at least eight hundred millions is the annual liquor bill of the United States.

I undertake to maintain unflinchingly what Mr. Gladstone has said, that the intemperance [illegible] injured us more than war, pestilence and famine. We are the most drunken nations on earth. It is not too much to say that if we could shake off intemperance as thoroughly as the Hindoos and Turks have done we should probably double the income of the United States and of the United kingdom. I am not declaiming. I insist upon it that these are carefully verified statistical results of our recent investigation.—Rev. Joseph Cook.

READ AND THINK BEFORE YOU SMOKE YOUR NEXT CIGAR.—Five-eighths of all the cigars that are sold in New York city are made in the East Side tenements by Bohemian families, who perform all the various processes of manufacture in their dirty rooms, where they not only work, but also eat and sleep. The tobacco is wet down and spread upon the floor at night, and is trodden upon meanwhile by the family in the pursuit of their domestic operations. In the morning, while it is yet damp and soiled, it is stripped from the stem by the children, while the women make the fillers, and the men of the family roll and trim the cigars, turning out seven hundred a day, which are duly branded with some high sounding Spanish name, and sold for an imported article.—New York Tribune.

[And if some horribly nauseating drug were put into each cigar that would make the smoker desperately sick—for a day or so—we would be very glad.—ED.]

TWO YEARS ago Judge Bartlett, of Trimble county, Kentucky, refused to license any sellers of intoxicating liquors on the ground that if he issued any licenses he would be morally responsible for the damage done in consequence of the liquor thus sold. An appeal was taken from his decision, but the court decided that [illegible] sults; there is not a criminal case on the docket in Trimble county, not a criminal in the jail and no paupers for the county to support. What a pity that our mayors and aldermen cannot see their duty and responsibility in the same light.

OURS is called a Christian nation, and it is probably as well entitled to that distinction as any nation on earth, and yet there are in our land to-day four times as many grog shops as churches, and six times as many bar-tenders as ministers. Progress in the right direction under such circumstances demonstrates that a church is more potent than a grog shop, and a minister than a bar-tender; but the grog-shops ought to be closed, and the bar-tenders converted. Let us labor and pray to this end.

INTERESTING PARAGRAPHS.

THE PREACHER IN THE SICK ROOM.

There is no place to which the minister is summoned where he so much needs special gifts and grace as in the chamber of affliction. Most men do not prefer to go to the sick chamber. There is something in facing death from which we shrink, even though our hearts are full of sympathy and love for the dying.

To every home sickness and death come betimes. With these visits the minister of Christ is expected to be familiar. He must not shun the house or place of bereavement and sorrow. The duties of the preacher in the sick-room have two relations. The first is to the afflicted or dying person. To these he must be able to carry the right atmosphere, the proper spirit and the most fitting words. While he is not expected to possess the skill or knowledge of the physician, he ought to know enough about disease and the [illegible] in frame to discern the probabilities and dangers of the sufferer as the case progresses. Without this he will be liable to excessive fear and timidity and lack the true helpful courage on the one hand, or he will be too hopeful of recovery on the other and allow the best chances to pass unimproved.

It is a solemn hour to a minister of Christ when he enters the sick chamber and utters the last words of reproof, comfort, admonition or consolation that the dying man or woman shall hear. It is a moment fraught with the weight of eternity when the preacher utters the last words and the last prayer the dying man or woman shall hear before reaching the judgment seat of Christ. There must be no flattery, no false hope, no delusions indulged in there. It is an awful hour. How the minister and the bereaved friends will feel it presently. What there is beyond the departed alone can tell. In such an hour the preacher must have a tender heart, an awakened heart and a mind and tongue with the right words. Some preachers are actually dumb as a stone while in the presence of the dying, to whom eternity heaves in sight.

Then the minister in that hour must bear a message to the bereaved. How the wife and children look pleadingly into the face of the pastor for some consolation, some word of hope, as husband and father is grappling with death? How withered, blasted hopes, and crushed, bleeding hearts cry out to the minister of Jesus for some pitying help. Father, mother, husband, wife, child, brother or sister is dangerously ill, dying—alas, is dead. Hungry, bursting hearts cry out from the depths of unutterable anguish: "What shall we do? Where shall we go? Who will help us? Oh, is there no help?" Amid such scenes of wrecked hearts the minister must go. He will be often hard put for the right words. The utterances he has used elsewhere will do no good here. He must be able to command the situation. He must take into account the meaning of the hour in a glance. He must show the blinded eyes the star of hope. He must know how to tread softly but firmly, and to utter the sweet words of promise and hope in Jesus which alone can lift up the heart. He must know how to put a foundation under hearts which are sinking in a bewilderment of sorrow.

Is there a preacher whose eyes run along these lines who has not experienced the conflict of such seasons? Let these be matters of study and prayer. He who lives constantly in the presence of Jesus will be at home in the sick-room.—Religious Telescope.

THAT DEAR NAME.

The universal testimony of the true saint, whether living or dying, is, that there is no name among men so sacred, so precious as the name [illegible]. How sweet to live with Jesus' love in the heart and die with his name on the tongue. So it was with the church [illegible] ing, Feb. 27th, 1876, just as this servant of God had closed an earnest, impressive sermon, he gave a look upward and with clasped hands, ejaculated; "Jesus!" sank back on his seat, and died. His experience was the wish of the dying Wesley, who sung:

"Happy, if with my latest breath
I may but gasp his name;
Preach him to all, and cry in death,
Behold, behold the Lamb!"

Oh, let us teach Jesus' name early to our children. Let us hallow it reverently with our lips day by day. Let us whisper the musical syllables in our hearts in prayer. Let us write about, talk about, and sing about Jesus. His name is a tower of strength, a song of beauty, a talisman of safety. Let the right hand forget its cunning and the tongue cleave to the roof of the mouth, but do not forget the dear name of our Saviour, Jesus. It is the "Sweetest sound on mortals' tongue,

Sweetest strain in seraph's song,
Sweetest carol ever sung,
Jesus, Jesus flow along!"

—D. T. Taylor, in The Christian.

TRIUMPH AT HIS COMING.

At the age of seventy-three, Rev. Thomas Rawson Birks, professor of moral theology in Cambridge University, England, died July 22d, 1883. He was an able writer, and an earnest "pre-millennialist." In a notice of his death in Messiah's Herald, we find the following extract from his book "The Four Prophetic Empires:" "Will it be a smooth and gradual progress by which the fallen world shall slide into happiness, it knows not how, and, after the storms of six thousand years, like a cradled infant, rock itself to rest? Is it by the common efforts of [illegible] only of a noble triumph, and [illegible] By the strength of my hand have I done it, and by my wisdom, for I am prudent? No, such is not the lesson of past experience; nor are such hopes confirmed by the true sayings of God. A great work is indeed allotted to the church, but of the first-fruits, not of the harvest; of preparation, not of the full triumph. The redemption will be assuredly complete, but will dawn in righteous judgments. It is through a dark cloud that the bow of the covenant will shine forth in its brightness on a fallen world. Before the stone shall become a mountain and fill the whole earth, 'the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver and the gold must be broken to pieces together,' and be driven away like the chaff of the summer threshing-floor. The Son of man must first appear in the clouds of heaven, and his true saints and servants be gathered into his presence, to render their account, and then to receive their kingdom."—Selected.

THE WORK OF A TRACT.—Years ago, before any missionaries had visited the Karens, one of the tribes of India, a small tract found its way into one of the homes of these people. The man and his wife who possessed this tract had never heard of our Bible, and knew nothing of a heavenly Father or a loving Saviour. But they studied the tract carefully, with no one to show them the way; they followed its directions and gave their hearts to the Lord Jesus.

Year after year they tried to serve God, living just as faithfully as they knew how. No missionary came near the place where they resided, and they had no guide to heaven but their tract. After a long life, the old Hindoo man at last lay upon his bed dying, and, as he knew he must soon pass away, he said, "When I am dead put the little tract near my heart, and bury it with me. It has told me of Jesus, it has shown me how to live and how to die."

So, when the good man was laid to rest in his coffin, beside him was placed the tract which [illegible] not have cost more than a few pennies to print it; but those pennies, given by some one, saved two souls. So when you cheerfully give your pennies to help poor heathen people, the Lord will see that they do not fail to help some one.—Heathen Woman's Friend.

ENOUGH TO POISON A PARISH.—A Protestant little girl being asked by a priest to attend his religious instruction, refused, saying it was against her father's wishes.

The priest said she should obey him, not her father.

"Oh, sir, we are taught in the Bible—'Honor thy father and thy mother.'"

"You have no business to read the Bible," said the priest.

"But, sir, our Saviour said, in John 5: 39, 'Search the Scriptures.'"

"That was only to the Jews, and not to children, and you don't understand it," said the priest.

"But, sir, St. Paul said to Timothy, 'From a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures.'" 2 Tim. 3: 15.

"Oh," said the priest, "Timothy was then being trained to be a bishop, and was taught by the authorities of the church."

"Oh, no, sir," said the child; "he was taught by his mother and his grandmother."

On this the priest turned her away, saying she knew enough of the Bible to poison a parish."—Selected.

asylum for those wounded, and not healed by the Divine Spirit?

That we are living in the perilous times of the last days is commonly conceded by many of the ablest writers and thinkers of modern times. That kingdoms and empires should exist until all are destroyed by the little stone cut out of the mountain without hands, is clearly revealed in the Bible. The world, as such, will never be all converted to God, nor do the Scriptures anywhere teach it. In my opinion, the church generally is receding from God, and the radiant light of the Spirit is being obscured by the glare of worldly pomp and splendor. Without appearing to know or care that "Ichabod" is written on her door-posts, she points with pride to towering spire and frescoed walls, to gilded dome and crowning arch, to a large, gaily dressed, worldly throng, as so many evidences of her advancement in holiness, and of her readiness to welcome her returning Lord. She welcomes a Dives with supple knee and a fawning smile, but [illegible] thrust a Lazarus or a publican from [illegible] gilded portals. And shall we but add one more to the long list of those "whose glory is departed?"

A SPECIAL REQUEST [illegible]

[illegible] servants—Bro. E. Hartl[illegible] sick, and unless there is an interp[illegible] divine power, I fear he must go down. [illegible] is too good a soldier to fall a prisoner to the enemy, and too useful to be spared from among us. Now, dear brethren and sisters, will you make his case one of special prayer that God will restore his health?

Yours fraternally, E. M. ANDREWS.

BRISTOL AND PLYMOUTH COUNTY CONFERENCE REPORT.

The second quarterly session for the present year of the Bristol and Plymouth Counties A. C. Conference was held with the church at Mattapoisett, Mass., from Sept. 11th to 14th. The attendance from abroad was not as large as we hoped to see, but was better than it has been at some former sessions, and we are encouraged to think that our church are taking more interest in this organization, which was formed for their special benefit. We had good preaching and excellent social meetings throughout, all the saints present seeming to receive some instruction and encouragement.

Preachers present: J. S. White, E. S. Moulton, G. F. Haines, F. W. Blackmer, C. H. Sweet, and Mary S. Ransom. Sister Ida M. Chandler has commenced laboring with Sister Ransom since our last session, and was recognized as a "helper" in the good work.

Sister Ransom reported a good work at Attleboro Falls, which had resulted in establishing regular meetings, and in beginning the erection of a place of worship. She requested the Conference to aid her in organizing a church there. G. F. Haines, C. H. Sweet, and J. S. White were appointed a committee to draw up a paper in harmony [illegible] ing Committee on Home Mission, [illegible] considerable time was devoted to a consideration of this important subject. It was finally Voted, That Bro. G. F. Haines be appointed a committee of one to visit each of the churches within the limits of this Conference, for the purpose of preaching to them a sermon on the duty of believers to give of their means to help carry forward Home Mission Work, take up a collection for this object, and endeavor to arrange for regular contributions to the Home Mission Fund.

Voted, That Bro. Haines be authorized to appoint a substitute in case he cannot attend to this work himself. It was also voted that at each of our quarterly sessions one service be wholly devoted to Home Mission Work.

Bro. E. S. Moulton having moved beyond the limits of the Conference, tendered his resignation as President, and as a member of the committee on Home Mission Work. These resignations were accepted, and Bro. Moulton was given a rising vote of thanks for his past faithful services. Bro. G. F. Haines was chosen to fill both vacancies.

Voted, That Bro. G. F. Haines be requested to preach at our next quartarly session, a sermon for criticism, on the subject of sanctification.

Voted, That Bro. James B. Ransom be requested to make an effort to secure a reduction of the R. R. fare to and from our Conferences.

Adjourned to the call of the President and Secretary. C. H. SWEET, Sec.

NOTICE.—With the best of feelings and interest in the church, and after two years labor among them, we deem it best to resign our work in Brodhead. They need a pastor. The best of work could now be done here. Correspond with A. Teneycke, or H. W. Button.
GEO. M. BUTTON.

NOTICE.—The Lord willing, I will preach at Sherman, Brookings Co., Dakota, Sunday, Oct. 14th, and remain as long as duty may require. Let earnest prayer be offered for the revival of the Lord's work in this new field.
PHILO HITCHCOCK.

NOTICE.—After the 15th of Sept. I expect to devote all my time to revival and missionary work, as the Lord may open the way. Any desiring my services can address me at Leon, Decatur Co., Iowa, giving me at least four weeks notice.
J. F. ADAMS.

NOTICE.—Chicago, Ill., Green Street, in revival meetings with Bro. A. P. Moore, as long as the interest demands. MILES GRANT.

Conference Notice.

The Maine A. C. Conference will meet in Annual Session (D. V.) with the church at Richmond, Me. (Reed meeting-house), Wednesday, Oct. 10, at 7 P. M., and hold over the following Sunday. Sec. 2, Art. 3 of the Constitution reads as follows: "Each Church or Society shall be allowed one delegate, and one additional delegate for every twenty actual members, said delegates to be elected by the church or society which they represent, and to be provided with a certificate of election attested by the recording officer of the same. The recording officer shall also, with the certificate of election, certify to the actual membership of the church or society." The Maine Central Rail Road will sell tickets at all stations to Richmond and return for one fare, good from Oct. 8th to 16th. Ask for tickets to Advent Conference.
E. M. ANDREWS, Secretary.

NOTE.—The last Annual Meeting was held in Biddeford, and was one of the best meetings ever held in Maine. The afternoons and evenings were devoted to religious worship, and the power of God was felt in the meetings. Let every church and society send their full quota of delegates. Come, one and all, to work for God. Let every minister in the State attend. E. M. A.

Lectures of the World's Great Empires.

Mrs. McKinstry will hereafter give nine lectures in the course instead of eight as formerly, and there will be added other matters of great interest to the subjects. Any churches where the lectures are desired, can be accommodated by addressing as below. These are stirring times, and it is important that the great truths which take every argument from the mouth of the skeptic, and show the significant relation of these times to the GREAT DAY OF GOD be thus presented. Address ELDER L. C. MCKINSTRY, at the time and place of the lectures where a lecture is to be given.

KENNEBUNK, ME. (Lower Village) from Sept. 30th to Oct. 7th inclusive, from Oct. 7th to 14th inclusive.

BIDDEFORD, ME., from Oct. 14th to 21st inclusive.

PORTLAND, ME., from Oct. 21st to 28th inclusive.

At each of the above places Eld. McKinstry will occupy the first Sabbath, giving lectures of the LAMB AND THE SEED, illustrated by paintings. Lectures of the WORLD'S GREAT EMPIRES, by Mrs McKinstry, commencing on Monday evening. Other arrangements will be duly published.

Conference Notice.

The next session of the Oxford and Androscoggin County Conference will be held at South Livermore, Me., Thursday, Oct. 18th, at seven o'clock P. M., to hold over the following Sunday. We hope to see a large delegation from the surrounding country, and all the preaching brethren especially. Let us pray much that the blessing of God may attend this effort, and an interest be awakened that shall result in the salvation of many souls.
JARED WHITMAN, President
JOSHUA HOWARD, Secretary.

Annual Meeting.

The Annual Meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Central Illinois will be held with the Auburn Church in the new Chapel, four miles west of Auburn, on the Prairie, commencing Wednesday evening, Oct. 10th, and continue over the Sabbath. It is expected that every church belonging to this Conference will send delegates, if possible; otherwise a letter. Also any brethren habitually meeting together for religious worship, organized or unorganized, may send a delegate or letter. Direct letters to the Secretary at Auburn, care of D. R. Mansfield. Brethren coming from the North or South on the Chicago, Alton and St. Louis R. R., will stop at Auburn, and find conveyance to Conference on Wednesday or Thursday. Let this meeting be made a subject of prayer, that the Holy Spirit may rest upon us, and sinners saved. The night is far spent, the day of eternal glory is at hand. Are we ready?
D. R. MANSFIELD, President.
M. MCCULLOCH, Secretary.

Conference Notice.

The Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan A. C. Conference will hold their next Quarterly Meeting with the church at Olive Branch, Ind., commencing on Thursday evening, Oct. 11th, and continuing over the next Lord's day. Brethren, please to remember there will be a business session on Friday the 12th. Please come at the first of the meeting. Those coming by R. R. to South [illegible] liberations and in our labor of love. Those coming by R. R. to South Bend will save us and them trouble by sending a P. O. card to Daniel Bailey or Tillman Ruple, South Bend., Ind., or to the Secretary, Union Mills, Ind.
J. N. WINCHELL, President.
W. C. HICKS, Secretary.

NOTICE.—An extra session of the Kennebec Valley Quarterly Conference will be held with the brethren at North Topsham, Graves school-house, commencing Thursday, Oct. 18th, at 6½ o'clock P. M. A cordial invitation is given to all to come and enjoy another blessed season in the Lord. Let much prayer be made that not only God's people be strengthened and built up, but that conviction may rest upon the unsaved, and they be brought to Christ before it is everlastingly too late. E. O. DINSMORE, Secretary.

NOTICE.—The semi-annual meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Nova Scotia will be held at Litchfield, Annapolis Co., on Thursday, Oct. 4th. Meetings to be continued over the Lord's day. We would just say to the household of faith, come in the name of the Lord. You are always sure of a warm welcome at Litchfield.
J. M. TOZIER.

NOTICE.—Any brethren in Oregon wishing help in gospel work will please address James A. Orchard, Portland, Oregon, as I am ready to preach the gospel in other parts as much as in me lieth.
J. A. ORCHARD, Portland, Oregon.

NOTICE.—Having concluded my labors with the church at Scitico, Conn., I am at liberty to supply churches as the Lord directs. My address will be as usual, 173 Austin Street, Worcester, Mass.
M. A. POTTER.

NOTICE.—Brethren of East Michigan, I expect to make a trip into Eastern Nebraska about the 23d of Sept. Any who would like to have me preach for them, will please address me at once at Mt. Etna, Adams Co. B. FORESTER.

NOTICE.—A Quarterly Meeting will be held in Chickasaw Co., Iowa, at the school-house now used by Eld. B. J. Goodwin. This meeting will commence Friday evening, Sept. 28th.
P. W. HOUGH.

NOTICE.—There will be a meeting in Sutton, N. H., at the house of Bro. J. Hazen, the 2nd and 4th Sundays in each month, if the Lord will. Geo. W. Brown, Chairman of the Ministerial Committee of the New Hampshire S. A. C. Conference.

A BASKET MEETING will be held at Frankfort, New York district (so called), beginning Friday, Oct. 5th, to hold over the following Sabbath. R. STEPHENSON, E. THOMPSON, G. W. BROWN.

THE CONVERSION OF THE WORLD.

BY REV. [illegible] C. CLARK.

The church in these last days has very generally settled down to the expectation that the world is all to be converted prior to the coming of Christ. What it means by conversion it would be difficult to decide. To save a tedious array of definitions, some idea may be formed, perhaps, from the following tabulated statement, which I have several times met with going the usual round of our religious papers, and never yet seen an analysis of it.

"A high authority—Sharon Turner—has prepared the following [illegible] of the progress of Christianity. At the close of each century the number of believers is given:

Century.	About	Century.	About
First	500,000	Tenth	50,000,000
Second	2,000,000	Eleventh	70,000,000
Third	5,000,000	Twelfth	80,000,000
Fourth	10,000,000	Thirteenth	75,000,000
Fifth	15,000,000	Fourteenth	[illegible]
Sixth	20,000,000	Fifteenth	100,000,000
Seventh	[illegible]	Sixteenth	125,000,000
Eighth	30,000,000	Seventeenth	155,000,000
Ninth	40,000,000	Eighteenth	200,000,000

During the present century it is estimated that the church has doubled [illegible] communicants"—which would give [illegible] four hundred million. As showing the progress of nominal Christianity during the last eighteen centuries, [illegible] do perhaps. Unfortunately for itself, however, it purports to be a statement of the numbers of actual believers, otherwise loosely dubbed communicants, members of the church. What then? Are all these myriads of professed Christians genuine believers in Christ? Are these so-called communicants all certainly regenerated by the Spirit of God? [illegible]

A Christian in name only is generally regarded as rather a poor specimen of Christianity, with no scriptural or any other just title to the distinction. Numbers count for nothing in such a case. In fact there are only too many such in the church in every age. It is certain Christ never owns them as his followers. God holds them in supreme disgust. Tares all, worse than nothing, fit only to be weeded out of the kingdom of heaven, when the time proper arrives. Barren fig-trees, useless cumberers of the ground, what a shrinkage of numbers will that be when God shall take in hand the work of revising the list! Can it be, therefore, that the universal extension of such an abnormal state of things, postulated on such a quicksand basis of facts and figures, is what our friends are looking for and call it the millennial reign of Christ?

The figures are calculated to blind and mislead us every way. The prodigious extent of the evil thus briefly summarized (an unconverted membership) does not begin to appear till we have penetrated to the underlying mode of computation. We do not demand perfect statistical accuracy; we have no objection even to a rough guess in certain cases. But when it is sought to create the impression that these hundreds of millions, amounting to a third of the entire population of the globe, are already and truly converted, we have a right to know by what mode of reckoning such an astonishing result is arrived at. This I shall attempt to show.

It is the mode which in times past has extensively prevailed in countries ruled by the State in conjunction with the church, a mongrel system of government, under which every subject is born in the church and bound by law to support it. No surer mode of corrupting and debasing the church with a spurious offspring was ever devised. However modified in some of its more obnoxious features the system may have latterly grown under the pressure of modern intelligence, the theory and the practice still prevail, in all Roman Catholic countries more especially, of counting the adherents of the church by the census of the population. It is thus that Rome boasts of her two hundred or two hundred and fifty millions in various parts of the world, where hers, by a questionable species of courtesy, is still called the "established religion," no account, as a general rule, being taken of any little dissenting sects that may occasionally intrude within her sacred borders. Question, therefore—Of what kind of Christian people or peoples are these millions made up? Look at Mexico; look at South America; look at the whole continent of Europe, and wherever else the system of scooping up and sweeping into the church with its universal [illegible] the more free to speak my mind on this most vital subject, inasmuch as those who ostentatiously parade these figures for the purpose of showing "how the world is growing better" and how "the gospel is gaining on the world" (I quote their own language) are the very men, who, with a different object in view, seldom miss an opportunity of airing their own orthodoxy by denouncing the deadly heresies and iniquitous practices of this mortal foe to Christianity. Not among the least of their inconsistencies is their advocacy of special missions to convert those who are already converted, if they are true believers. But the worst indictment is yet to come.

If it be not wise heedlessly to exaggerate the number of Christ's actual followers, it is nothing short of a barefaced absurdity to count upon his side his arrant personal foes [illegible] and the greatest obstacles in the way of his kingdom. Once more, I ask, Who are these myriads of Christian soldiers enlisted under the banners of King Immanuel and fighting in his name? Rome claims by far the greater part of them; the Greek Church in point of numerical force comes next; and the Protestant contingent brings up the rear. The two former constitute two branches of one great apostasy, which was to arise in the Christian church, and did arise as prophesied in due time. The readers of Ecclesiastical History are tolerably well acquainted with this singular phenomenon. Daniel first pointed it out, and he, Paul and John have each described it in language not to be misunderstood by any fair-minded interpreter. Assuming the name of Christianity, and usurping the place of Christ in the very temple of God, the Scriptures have over and over again stamped it with "blasphemy"—as "drunk with the blood of the saints," and "the Mother of all abominations." As if to make assurance doubly sure, this scarlet woman of Babylon is represented as not only a harlot herself, living in adulterous union with earthly monarchs, but as "the Mother of harlots," manifestly referring to those Protestant communions which, in imitation of Rome, maintain the [illegible] connection of church and State, [illegible] like pernicious results.

Anti[illegible] the one most expressive name for [illegible] and her daughters—[illegible] name which stands before [illegible] historically and prophetically, [illegible] impersonation of an [illegible] to Christ in the very [illegible] end, we are told, is to be [illegible] at his coming. How is it [illegible] knowing these things, have [illegible] face of them to include in [illegible] roll of Christian forces for the [illegible] world that arch enemy of Christ [illegible] came so near quenching the [illegible] Christianity itself forever? The [illegible] transparent—their quicksand [illegible] has all at once become a Serbonian [illegible] and shall we allow the roll to [illegible]? No. Mortifying as it is, truth compels us to say that when we have sifted [illegible] mongrel churchmen and followers of Antichrist—a very small remnant only remains, and nothing to boast of, especially at this late day.

Away with boasting, then. We want no more muster-rolls of forces existing only on paper, or what is worse, stealing the enemy's roll and calling it in the camp of the Lord. It is that sort of vain boasting which counts more on numbers than real piety. Hence the cry, The crowd! we must get the crowd, or the world will never be converted, even if for that purpose we have to turn the church into a theatre, with the pulpit for a stage, and spectacular plays instead of the gospel.

THE ATTITUDE OF THE CHURCH IN REGARD TO THE LORD'S COMING.

BY A. C. ORER.

The attitude of the Church of God at the Saviour's first advent was one of bitter hostility. The acrimonious feeling of the church against Christ was intensified by every reproof, every precept, and act of kindness and good will toward the people, until it culminated in the Saviour's death. And so intense was their hatred against him, that they readily assumed all responsibility of his condemnation and death, and said, "Let his blood be on us and on our children." He came to his own, and his own received him not."

We now inquire: Will the church receive him at his second coming (or perhaps it will be better to say, the announcement of his coming) with gladness of heart, singing, and making melody unto the Lord? or will she assume a spirit of hostility as bitter as that of the church against Christ in his first advent? We are not left in doubt in regard to this question. The Scriptures assure us that the attitude of the church in the last days in regard to Christ's coming again into our world will be one of hostility, and a feeling of acrimony will characterize the church to that degree that she will become exceedingly hostile to those who believe in and preach the doctrine.

I refer to the following passages for proof. Matt. 24: 48–51,—"But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to smite his fellow-servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken; the lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of, and shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." It is a serious mistake to apply this prophecy to the world. The scoffers belong to the church, "having a form of godliness." Bro. Boutell, you and I can [illegible]

But what I desire to know is this: how shall we deal with the churches, or what shall be our attitude toward them, knowing their opposition (hatred) to the doctrine? Occasionally I see many different religious papers, holiness papers and Sunday School papers of other denominations, and non-sectarian, yet in all these I never read a word about our Saviour's coming again, nor a single quotation from our Advent papers, nor a good word said of us. If anything is said, it is to condemn and speak evil of us. And should any one preach or publish a gospel sermon, they are very careful not to mention, or give Adventists any credit for any light they might have. While on the other hand, Adventists make extensive quotations from any and all religious papers, giving the authors full credit for all they publish. Sermons, and every good [illegible]

[illegible] Saviour's coming that the Jews did, we should do [illegible] the apostles and Christians did toward the Jewish church. Walk in their footsteps. And if God has committed a work to us, let us do it, and not turn aside for [illegible]. It seems to me that some of our Advent preachers are leaving their work and trying to work in [illegible]. I believe that we should work independent of the churches. Preach to them; preach to the world; convert all you can; prepare as many as possible to meet our Lord in peace. Bring the churches up; don't go down to them. Say to the church as Christ said, "Repent, and believe the gospel." Let their creeds and organizations go for naught. We have naught to do with them. You will, I hope, excuse me for the liberty I have taken in trespassing on your good graces. I have a kindly feeling for all old veterans, though I have not seen them.

HOLINESS—REVERENCE.

BY ARTHUR S. MOORE.

If I am holy, modesty should keep me quiet about it, and I should confess Christ and not my own attainments. See Matt. 6; 1; 5. I must confess Christ and my faith in him. What he has enabled me to be, people will find out better than I can tell them. "It will profess itself."

Hear the angels around the throne cry—"Holy, holy, Lord God of Sabaoth; the whole earth is full of his glory." And again "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come." The redeemed are not pictured as singing around the throne [illegible] worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth."

And again, myriads of angels take up the strain, "saying with a loud voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing." And every creature in the universe echoes and re-echoes the chorus: "Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth on the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever." "Where is boasting? It is excluded by the law of faith." "Hast thou faith? have it to thyself before God. Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that thing which he alloweth." Rom. 14: 22. "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven," is the precept of him who should "not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the streets," and so he charged them that he had healed "that they should not make him known," should not "tell what the Lord had done for them" (Matt. 12: 16); but he "went about doing good."

The fathers in the church and the old Puritans caught up the spirit of the Bible and of God, and their hymns are filled with the grandeur and majesty, the reverent worship, of the angel songs. They are radiant also with the majestic adoration of the Hebrew seers of old. May the inspiration of the holy God bring us more of them, and save us from modern self-conscious vanity. Holiness is not emotion; it is sanctification, and sanctification is separation, consecration. Both words are sometimes used to imply purity, and if one is wholly consecrated to God, he will be pure from all his former evil practices. It does not imply that he may not be "overtaken in a fault"; and if he is, those who are spiritual are directed to "restore such an one in the spirit of meekness."

Now religion is a system of faith and worship—any system of faith and worship. Christianity is a system of faith and worship based on Christ and his mission. The elements of the Christian religion are faith, repentance of what is called in the Bible sin, and holiness or sanctification. Holiness and sanctification are translated from the same words in the Old and New Testaments, and hence they mean one and the same thing, whatever that is. Young's Analytical Concordance says they both mean to be separate. So "without faith it is impossible to please God." Heb. 11: 6. Repentance is necessary "for the remission of sins." Acts 2: 38 and 3: 19. And with [illegible] supper are also obligatory. Acts 2: 38 and 1 Cor. 11: 24, 26. "This do in remembrance of me." [illegible] man who believes on the Lord Jesus Christ, and who repented of his sins, and separated himself from sinful associates and sinful habits, is a holy man, or sanctified man. Holiness is one of the elements of Christianity and involved in the only step by which a man can be saved. If a person repents we say God will surely pardon him. If he is forgiven no Christian doubts that he is in a saved condition, and that if he should die immediately after repentance and pardon he would be saved in the kingdom of God (the thief on the cross [illegible] instance). But he is a holy man if [illegible] saved man, for without holiness no man shall see the Lord. God will not pardon a rebel, a disloyal person, but as soon as he puts away his disloyalty, he is on the [illegible] side of the question, hence separate from [illegible] rebellion and sin, [illegible] please remember, [illegible] process of salvation, and a pardoned man is holy. As to the matter of perfection Paul says (and he said it two years before his reputed death and after being an apostle for about thirty years),—"Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect"; also in the next verse, [illegible] brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but . . . I press towards the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded." Phil. 3: 12, [illegible]

My dear brothers and sisters, the more we think of it, the more we find that God does not build with a carpenter's square and a mason's plumb line. When he makes trees they do not grow all alike, the pillars of a portico, but they are gnarled, and knotted, and dissimilar. The branches are not set with that mathematical precision which so stiffens and formalizes man's highest works of art. [illegible] beautiful is the "deep tangled wild wood," and almost the only thing which since the fall retains nearly its Edenic beauty. [illegible] his deepest inspiration, and his [illegible] grandest emotions of reverence, while communing with God in the garden which was not made "by art and man's device." And God makes his Christians like his trees, gnarled and knotted some of them, and not at all as men would carve them out like so many images made in a mould, but with diversities of gifts (1 Cor. 12); and let not the "head say to the feet, I have no need of you."

Who would say God has not made his trees in a perfect manner, defaced by the fall though they may be? "Charity is the [illegible] than thou; come not near to me." The Lord says that those who do so are a "smoke in his nose." Isa. 65: 5. Let us remember that Moses became very angry at one time and did not "sanctify the Lord in the eyes of the people," so that God refused him admission into the promised land, but it is said, "he endured as seeing the invisible," and God was the pastor at his funeral.

"And had he not high honor?
The hillside for his pall,
To lie in state while angels wait
With stars for tapers tall
And the dark rock pines, like tossing plumes,
Over his bier to wave;
And God's own hand, in that lonely land,
To lay him in his grave."

Dear brothers and sisters, God loves us, and commendeth his love to us, in that, while we were yet in our sins, in due time Christ died for the ungodly (Rom. 5: 8); and his apostle said, "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." Rom. 10: 9. That pins the matter. Let us go on in peace and "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ," just as the one who believes in his heart always does grow.

THE FUTURE HOME OF GOD'S PEOPLE.

BY J. M. ELLIS.

Home! How much there is that hangs around that word. Men of all lands and ages have sought to find and enjoy its comforts. When a man becomes so low that he will not cherish his home, shun him as a bad man. It is there a man expects to find rest and comfort; there he expects to find love and sympathy; there where he can confide his cares.

A home must consist of a place of abode, and companions, and support. We must have all these in order to [illegible] that it is home. We can do without some of these when we are upon a journey, but when we are at home we must have them. Now the people of God are looking forward to an eternal home. God has promised this, and what is this home? Where is it to be? and what are to be the associations and the surroundings?

The Word of God, as found in the Bible, which is our chart, shows that this earth was made for man; that God in his wisdom made it, and fitted it up in the best possible manner for the home of man. Everything was good. There was plenty of substance, and beauty for the eye, and with all these man was placed in his home; but God in his wisdom placed man there as a mortal being, requesting of him obedience to his Creator. God gave him a law, also a penalty, and by disobeying, man lost his title to his home, therefore man to-day has [illegible] But God in his great goodness has had compassion upon his condition, and has given him a chance [illegible] reinstated in his lost home [illegible] he may be [illegible] therefore [illegible] rest for the people of God. There remaineth [illegible] people of God. Now [illegible] to be? [illegible] Where [illegible] rest upon the earth, [illegible] promised [illegible] by disobedience. [illegible] had his [illegible] a certain tree he should [illegible] life of [illegible]; he ate and died, and therefore lost his title to his home.

Then God, to save man and his home, gave his Son to come down to earth and become the same as the first Adam, except that Christ [illegible] both human and divine, [illegible] overcame sin by living a sinless life; but the debt could not be paid without blood, so Christ had to die to redeem man and his lost home. Although he died, yet God raised him from death, and death has no more dominion over him. He lives forevermore, and all that was lost in Adam will be restored in the Son of God.

What was lost? Man and his home; so they both must be restored. Now where will this home? Upon the earth, therefore, if [illegible] same place. [illegible]

[illegible]

We read that God's beautiful city will be there, with its streets of pure gold, and gates of pearl, and walls of jasper, and this will far surpass anything ever seen before. Then there will be the river of life, and the tree of life, with its twelve manner of fruits, and its healing leaves. So we see in this we have a home, as a place of abode, and associations, and support, and comfort. Does not this look worth having? One has told us, "Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, [illegible] the things that God hath prepared for them that love him." Is this a true picture? It is, according to God's Word. Can we look for it? We can, and will, by our heavenly Father's help.

MELCHISEDEC PRIESTHOOD.

BY JOHN BOWER.

It is argued by age-to-come Adventists, that, as Christ Jesus was made a priest after the order of Melchisedec, he will, in the ages to come, be a priest and king at the same time upon his throne, and as king he must have subjects to reign over, for whom he will officiate as priest; therefore there will be mortal nations to be ruled and saved. They say also, that those over whom Christ reigns as priest-king cannot be the saints, they are saved now, and are to be made immortal, and [illegible] kings and priests and reign with him. This is one of their strong arguments for probation in the subsequent age.

It is true that in the patriarchal age, and under that priesthood, both priest and king were invested in one person, viz., the head of the family, and the head of the family was supreme ruler and priest over his own posterity as long as he lived; and as the life of man was prolonged several hundred years, his posterity became very numerous while the founder of the family yet lived. Adam lived 930 years; he was contemporary with Methuselah 230 years, and with Lamech of the ninth generation, and father of Noah, 46 years. Had Adam been obedient, and retained the right to the tree of life, he would have been the everlasting father for all mankind, and priest forever. After the flood Noah was the divinely recognized priest and king. Noah lived after the flood 350 years; when he died his authority and priesthood passed to his sons, each one becoming king and priest over his own descendants.

The patriarchal age ceased with Jacob, and is to be renewed in Christ, the second Adam. And as Christ is priest after the order of Melchisedec, who was king of Salem (which is king of peace) and priest of the most high God after the patriarchal system, he will be the supreme ruler over the regenerated family out of Adam's lost race. None others are children, hence do not belong to Christ's family. St. Paul says, "Whose house (family) are we if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end." Heb. 3: 6.

To be regenerated there must be a begetting and birth. Being begotten (Revised Version) again, not of corruptible seed but of incorruptible, by the Word of God which liveth and abideth forever" (1 Peter 1: 23), and born of the Spirit by the resurrection, which will bring up from the grave a spiritual, incorruptible body, to die no more—this will constitute the house over whom Christ, our Priest-King, is to reign forever; "And of his kingdom there will be no end." Luke [illegible]. Heb. 3: 1–6.

The patriarch [illegible] not reign over any that did not belong [illegible] by right of birth, marriage, or bought with their money. [illegible] Christ's family, over whom he will [illegible], are those he has redeemed by his own precious blood. 1 Peter 1: 18, 19; Rev. 5: 5–10; 1 Cor. 6: 19, 20. Before Christ will commence his reign of peace the judgment will sit, and all nations will be gathered before him, and every one receive his reward according to his work whether good or bad. 2 Cor. 5: 10; Matt. 13: 42, 49, [illegible] and 25: 31–46.

There are but two families represented; one [illegible] the seed of the serpent developed in Cain, who was "of that wicked one" (1 John 3: 12), and represented in the Saviour's parables by tares, bad fish, goats, etc. The other family, the seed of the woman developed in Seth, and called the sons of God, and represented in the Saviour's parables by wheat, good fish, and sheep. The tares are burned up in a furnace of fire. The wheat (righteous) are gathered into the garner, and shine forth as the stars in the kingdom. The bad fish are cast [illegible] to the goats (wicked) he says, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Of the wicked it is said, "These shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." Thus the righteous, with Christ, their Melchisedec, and their Father, as head of the regenerated family, will reign on the earth [illegible]

"TRY THE SPIRITS."

BY W. M. PIERCE.

These are extremely trying times in which the church is living; not so much on account of the great wickedness among the [illegible]

[illegible] and every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world." 1st John 4: 1, 2, 3.

How truly could the apostle, by the Spirit of inspiration, look down the future ages, and see these very times which are come upon the ends of the world. Without doubt [illegible] society, modern spiritualism, and its progenitor, "immortal soulism." But modern spiritualism is the most debasing, and soul-destroying element, under the name of Christianity, outside of the Mormon and Roman churches, with which the true Christian worker has to contend; for it works in secret, and seemingly mysterious ways; and a very large proportion of the people are ever prone to accept, in spiritual affairs at least, that which seems the most mysterious, and we might add, ridiculous. The Bible term for spiritualism is "familiar spirits," or "spirit of divination" (see Lev. 20: 27; Acts 16: 16) and in olden times dealing with them was forbidden; and when those who practiced this business were apprehended, they were put to death. A man also or a woman that hath a familiar spirit, or that is a wizard, shall surely be put to death." Lev. 20: 27. And again, Moses commanded them, saying, "There shall not [illegible] among you any one that maketh his son or his [illegible] through fire, or that useth divination, or an observer of time, or an enchanter, or a witch, or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer. For all that do these things are an abomination unto the Lord." Deut. 18: 10, 12. All these come under the one head of what is now known as spiritualism.

If any are inclined to doubt whether God will punish all who deal with such trickery, just let them read the fate of King Saul. The Lord saw fit to take him from his lowly position in life, and raise him up to be the ruler of His chosen people; and promised to aid him, and help him in everything so long as he should obey. Many a battle the Lord fought for him, and utterly routed his enemies, even when they far outnumbered the Israelites. And then again, king Saul could call upon the Lord and find out just what to do, and how it would terminate, instead of attempting to act on his own judgment. In this there is a beautiful, and practical lesson to every true follower of our Lord Jesus Christ; for if we are in full accord with him we may know his will concerning us, just as easily as did Saul, or any of the prophets; for he has sent the Holy Spirit into the world, and he will guide you into all truth; for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak; and he will show you things to come." John 16: 13.

But there came a time when the Lord would not hear king Saul because of his great wickedness; he had, like many another Christian since then, wandered so far from God that the Lord refused to hear him. But it was his own fault; he, as well as others before and since then, have full warning not to depart from the Lord; and if they do depart, to return before it is too late, for he says, "My Spirit shall not always strive with man." Gen. 6: 3. When the king in his great strait failed to get an answer from the Lord, he commanded his officers to find him a woman "having a spirit of divination," or a "familiar spirit, "that he might enquire of her;" and when one had been found, he requested her to bring up "Samuel the prophet." And [illegible] followed that scene of witchcraft which is written in the 18th chap. of 1st Samuel. But it was of no avail; his doom was sealed; the hand of the Lord was against him, and all the spirits in the universe could not change God's plans, and in the great battle that followed he ended his miserable career, which at the first gave promise of so much good. In 1st Chronicles 10th chap. we read, "So Saul died for his transgressions which he had committed against the Lord, even against the word of the Lord, which he kept not, and also for asking counsel of one that had a familiar spirit, to enquire of it; and enquired not of [illegible]

[illegible] plain statement of God, which says, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." (Ezek. 18: 20), they are branded as vulgar materialists, and are ridiculed without mercy. Well, I am satisfied to be called hard names for the truth's sake, for by and by all who have suffered for the sake of truth and righteousness are to receive a reward.

The burden of [illegible] is overwhelmingly against "spiritism." [illegible] "Abraham looked for a [illegible] God" (Heb. 11: 10), and certainly, if he looked for a city having foundations, it must be a material city, and consequently no place for an immaterial spirit to dwell; and we read also that he, with thousands of others, died without having received the promise; but God has provided "some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect;" consequently they must still be waiting, and will wait until all are ready who are to be perfected. Poor patient old Job when longing for death to relieve him of his troubles, said, "There the prisoners rest together." Again, "But man dieth and wasteth away: yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he? As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up, so man lieth down, and riseth not: till the heavens are no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep. Oh, that thou wouldst hide me in the grave, that thou wouldst keep me secret until thy wrath be past, that [illegible] appoint me a set time, and remember [illegible] and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them." Job 14th chapter. "They shall lie down alike in the dust, and the worms shall cover them." Job 21: 29. "All flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again into dust." Job 34: 15. Then he sums up the whole matter in these words: "For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth, and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." Job 19: 24–26.

Now if Abraham and Job, and all the prophets knew that they had got to "lie down in the dust," and wait for this "city which hath foundations," I think it is safe to receive, and abide by their testimony, and "try the spirits," and see if they are of God. Let no man despoil you of your inheritance.

REST.

BY H. R. S.

O weary, burdened, care-worn one, why bear that heavy burden longer? Why toil and struggle wearily along beneath a load of care so much too great for thy feeble frame to bear? Didst thou never read those blessed words, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest"? Matt. 11: 28. Yes, many times you have read them, and longed for that rest. You even came and asked the dear Saviour for it; asked him that he would take the burden from you and give you rest. And then, when he so tenderly and kindly reached out his arms and enfolded you, you—perhaps without knowing it—clung to him with one hand, and to your heavy cares with the other, thus robbing yourself of the blessing he so freely offers.

One thing we should remember, Jesus never takes our burden from us. It is for us to cast it on him; then he carries it for us. O the bliss of casting all our care upon him, and knowing that he careth for us. 1 Pet. 5: 7. Then we need not have a fear or be troubled at all. We may be sure that our blessed Jesus doeth all things well. Then unclasp the fingers so tightly clinging to that load of care. Trust it all to Jesus. Let him care for you. Be faithful to him in all he requires, and you will find rest and peace that "floweth like a river."

THE COMING OF THE LORD.

The crowning grandeur of the Christian economy is the second coming of Christ. Until the Nobleman's promised return all is preparatory, or, at largest, initiatory. In the order of the Scriptures the personal advent precedes the resurrection; and the resurrection is a chief element in the restitution; and there can be no "kingdom and dominion under the whole heavens" till the regenesis of the "whole creation." There can be no universal jubilee until Christ's last enemy is destroyed; and "the last enemy that shall be destroyed is DEATH."

The doctrine of going to heaven at death is absurd on any other hypothesis than that the dead will never rise; and Paul says, "If the dead rise not, then is not Christ [illegible]; and if Christ be not raised your [illegible]in, ye are yet in your sins; and [illegible] which are fallen asleep in Christ [illegible] perished." [illegible] 15: 16, 17.

There can be no [illegible] the King takes the sceptre and begins to reign. Jesus cannot reign as King [illegible] Advocate. If, therefore, saints [illegible] to heaven at death, they will find themselves [illegible] a kingless kingdom. The second coming of Christ for the destruction of death in the resurrection of his saints (and all men) is the gate to heaven. Death [illegible] gate to the grave. The coming of the Saviour is the destruction of death, and the way—the only way—into the dominion "under the whole heavens."

To oppose the second advent of the Lord is to court eternal death. To disprove the second coming is to impassably bar the only egress from the grave, and annihilate every hope of immortality. Since the Christian age began a more deadly heresy has not been preached than the non-reappearing of our Lord Jesus Christ in this world. And to say that Christ will come a second time otherwise than personally and literally is nonsense; for who can conceive of an impersonal advent of a Saviour who is and forever must be possessed of human flesh and form. The second advent of Jesus links together the whole Christian system, and crowns redemption's plan and work with triumph.

If the coming of the Lord could be accorded the prominence in the pulpit which it holds in the Bible, a revolution in thought and feeling, in faith and practice, would sweep through Christendom as grand and healthful as the Reformation—and quite as much needed.

Let the ministers of Christ who are enlightened in regard to the fulfillment of the prophetic Word, and who can discern the "signs of the times," make the glad tidings of the kingdom at hand resound wherever there is an ear to hear. If there was ever a subject and a time demanding of God's watchmen to "cry aloud and spare not," this is such a time, and the second advent is such a subject.

ANGELIC MINISTRIES.

(Concluded.)

Good angels attend good people. "Sent forth to minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation." Heb. 1:14. The personal experiences of saints are made radiant by oft repeated angelic presence. They walk with us, with steps unheard, when our way lies amid shadows. From their wings of light they shed gleams of beauty and of glory on our sadness and darkness, turning oft our sorrows into joy. They may sometimes answer, in personal ministries, the desires of the godly, as expressed by the pious bishop Kenn:

"O may thy angels, while I sleep,
Around my bed their vigils keep,
Their love angelical instil:
May they celestial joys rehearse,
And thought to thought with me converse."

They turn our feet away from danger; they warn us of the presence of enemies; they help to carry our burdens in our extremest weaknesses; they lighten the wasting cares and anxieties of the sick chamber; they relieve our despondencies by suggesting peace and bliss to come; they bear one end of our crosses when they prove too heavy for our fainting flesh; and when our last agonizing look on the faces of our dead is turned away, they perchance shed tears on the cold brows of those whose "guardian angels" they were in life, and whose precious forms they will not cease to watch with tender care till they shall rise in a flush of beauty which the grave cannot blight.

They deliver. They are God's physicians in the healing of our diseases. They fight back the fiends who throng our weary steps, and deliver us from the snare of the fowler. They sow darkness into the eyes of those who seek to do us evil. They took ship with Paul, and seized the helm when the wild storm baffled the captain's skill. They followed John to Patmos, nor left his side till he saw visions of coming glories too resplendent for unaided human sight. They went with Daniel into the lion's den, and charmed the hungry beasts till they licked the prophet's feet like fawning kids. They seized the patriarch's hand and shook the glittering knife out of his iron grasp, when his faith was tried. They found poor discarded Hagar in the woods of Beer-sheba, weeping over her ill-starred boy dying of thirst, and brought her water from the springs of God. They are "all ministering spirits." They follow where our dearest friends cannot go. Ironclad gates and prison bolts they pass at will, eluding the keen vigilance of the wakeful sentinels.

"Walls within walls no more their passage bar
Than unopposing space of liquid air."

How grand the angelic ministries in final [illegible] angelic tongues will an[illegible] groom King, surrounded by all the shining legions, will be proclaimed the heir to David's throne and rightful Ruler of our world by archangel voices. Solemn shoutings of the heavenly hosts will attest his last plea finished. Grand acclaim of twelve legion of seraphic tongues will herald his descent from the place of advocacy near the throne of power, to the possession and glory of everlasting empire. The "voice of the archangel" blending with "the trump of God" and charged with Christ's life-giving power, will break the death sleep of the ages. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first." 1 Thess. 4:16.

Angel bands will throng all the hadean valley, to welcome with banners and song the rising saints, and escort them to the appointed meeting of the Lamb, mid-way the heavens. Christ's field marshals, they will not fail to bring home every risen saint, both small and great, from land and ocean bed. And when the ransomed stand around the throne, expectant, angel hands may place on royal brows the crowns of life. And in the mighty shout proclaiming the Crucified King of kings and Lord of lords, angelic notes shall mingle, swelling the hallelujah universal.

Let us be cheered. We do not walk this weary vale of tears alone. God's shining messengers attend us when we wake and when we sleep. They smile on us through the shadows. Touched with a sympathy half divine they weep with us when we weep, and rejoice when we are glad. They help bear our burdens and share our sorrows.

During the Papal persecutions in France a frail boy in his teens was put to the torture to make him disclose to the Inquisition his father's secret retreat. He bore his terrible sufferings without a murmur until his [illegible] tormentors said, "The gods are with him," and in fear released him. His few friends surrounding him asked, "Was it not hard to bear?" and he replied, "It was indeed hard to bear, but at the worst of it a beautiful angel came and stood beside me" (pointing his finger up to heaven), "and all the pain left me."

If so they minister to us here, will they not come to us sometimes in the new creation, and bear some joyous part in our ever fresh delights? E. A. S.

FELLOWSHIP.

Christian fellowship should not be restricted to those who have received the same theological enlightenment that we have accepted, but should take in all who ardently love and cheerfully obey our Lord Jesus Christ, so far and fast as they com[illegible] nation comes by degrees, while heart purification is a short work; and a man with a heart divinely rectified, even though poorly instructed in the details of theology, is approved of the Lord, and consequently is entitled to the fellowship of the saints. Heart cleansing is one stage of true religion, and brings its possessor into communion with God, and into fellowship with the family of God; while enlightenment concerning the testimony of God on various themes, enabling us to comprehend his purpose, is another stage in Christian experience, and is obtained by degrees, so it is possible for a man to secure a clean heart while his intellect is still beclouded with reference to certain features of controverted theology.

The safe rule is to let our fellowship take in all who have rectified hearts, and then seek to rectify their heads by presenting to them the truth of heaven in the [illegible] right, however, of its Author [illegible] men who have not received the dispensational truth now due the world, to conclude that it makes no difference whether a man believes this truth, or not. It does make a difference, and it is our duty to let the light shine upon their minds. Truth rejected, unless rejected in blindness, will bring condemnation; but we must be careful in passing judgment as to who has wilfully rejected the truth—we may make mistakes: "Judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come." Let Jesus do the judging at the right time. We have no right to take this work out of his hands, nor to do it before the time arrives for judging. W. S.

THE REJECTORS REJECTED.

Christ was rejected by the Jews at his first advent, and he in turn rejected them, saying: "If thou hadst known, the things which belong to thy peace; but now are they hid from thine eyes. For the time will come when thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and shall hedge thee in on every side, and lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within [the midst of] thee; because thou knowest not the time of thy visitation." Not knowing the time, they rejected the Messiah, and he read to them their fearful doom. In a touching parable he charges them with the crime of killing the Son of the great King, informing them that in consequence of this act, he would "send forth his armies and burn up their city." As God once used Assyria as the rod of his anger with which to chastise rebellious Israel, so in this case the Roman armies were used for the purpose of punishing the Christ rejecting Jews, and at their hands Jerusalem met its predicted fate. But Jesus said to his friends: "When ye therefore shall see Jerusalem encompassed with armies, know that the desolation thereof is nigh; then let them which are in Judea flee into the mountains." The disciples fled, and were safe, while wrath overtook those who rejected Christ.

This first visitation of the Messiah was faithfully announced beforehand by John the Baptist, yet they "knew not the time of their visitation, because they would not believe this divinely appointed forerunner, and so they rejected him when he came. John probably did not know the exact time when his coming was due, or rather when he should begin his work, though at his baptism he had said, "Behold the Lamb of God;" for after his imprisonment he sent men to interrogate him: "Art thou he that should come, or look we for another?" He knew that he was due about then; and the works wrought by him confirmed his claim to the Messiahship.

But there is another "visitation" of the Messiah about due, and the announcement of the fact has been made, and is still being [illegible] vastly larger scale [illegible] proclamation of the [illegible] mission of Christ; but as then, so now, the great majority disbelieve the message to their own injury. Even his own nominal friends, to a large extent, [illegible] the Jews treated [illegible]. Then the kingdom [illegible] "at hand" in a comparative [illegible] the Messiah, or prospective King, was then to begin the preparatory work, and has gone into "the far country" to finish this preparatory work, from whence he will return to overthrow his enemies; now "the kingdom of heaven is at hand" in the emphatic sense.

One "visitation" of the Messiah was necessary as a preparatory step, and another "visitation" is needed for the establishment of the kingdom for which the preparation has been made. The gospel of the kingdom is now being sounded out. To reject it [illegible] the message now due from heaven [illegible] to know the time of this approach [illegible] at least approximately, [illegible] divine disapproval. To reject the [illegible], is to render ourselves liable to be rejected, as in the case of the Jews. We can close our eyes to evidence of the nearness of the second advent much stronger than John had to give of the first advent, but is it wise to do so, and thereby incur divine wrath? W. S.

WHY IS IT SO?

The following item appears in several papers in New England, and is significant:

"Clergymen, professors of colleges and others, are discussing the question why a smaller proportion of our young men are preparing for the ministry than formerly. The last graduating class at Yale consisted of one hundred and forty-nine members, of whom eighty-five were professors of religion, but only five express an intention to study for the ministry. This is a much smaller number than usual, and a somewhat similar report comes from other colleges. We venture to suggest that one of the reasons for this condition of things is the idea that has gained such extensive credence of late, that he who does not accept salvation in this life may have still another opportunity proffered him in the life to come. There are many men in the ministry who are not there because they prefer pastoral work to any other, but because they realize something of the peril of men out of Christ, and want to save them. Lessen the conviction of this danger and enable them to feel the peril after all is not imminent and they will then turn their attention to some other pursuit as employment. There will be very little of the feeling, 'woe is me if I preach not the gospel' when there is no conviction of impending danger. We must return to the old fashioned, unadulterated gospel if we would multiply candidates to the gospel ministry."

The fact that there is a general religious retrograde movement in every part of Christendom is too manifest to be concealed. [illegible] the main cause. There are tributary causes, of course, including such as are here mentioned, with many others. Doubtless the theory of final restoration is calculated to abate the zeal of those who accept it as correct. But we doubt exceedingly whether the proposed "return to the old-fashioned, unadultdrated gospel," even if general, "would multiply candidates to the gospel ministry" of the present type—men who make preaching a trade, or simply a means of getting a living—for this calling is evidently becoming less lucrative. The present "milk and water gospel" which caters so much to the carnal relish, and to human tradition, is an article of which men "make merchandise," yet, as a financial experiment, it is generally being depreciated as a lucrative calling for young men; and certainly the ancient gospel, minus of these human [illegible], would prove far less [illegible]. W. S.

ENDING THE 2300 DAYS IN 1844.

In the Crisis of Nov. 28, Bro. L. D. Small thinks I am incorrect in the supposition that our Sabbath friends ended the 70 weeks at the cross, although they placed their end in A. D. 34, in which year the Passover fell on Tuesday, saying that they place the cross in A. D. 31, and then says: "Please tell us on what day the Passover occurred A. D. 31."

We briefly respond: We were aware that a portion of them, like Andrews, put the cross in A. D. 31; but Mrs. White says: "I have seen that the 1843 chart was directed by the hand of the Lord, and that it should not be altered; that the figures were as he wanted them. That his hand was over, and hid a mistake in some of the figures, so that none could see it till his hand was removed." Experience and views, p. 61. And all know that the 1843 chart ended the 70 weeks at the cross; and these figures "should not be altered" by her people.

The mistake in figures is thus given by a speaker reported and indorsed by Eld. White in his Life Incidents: "The entire body of believers had been united, agreeing with William Miller that the 2300 days dated from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem B. C. 457. This point settled, the figures 1843 were readily found: From 2300, take 457, and there remain 1843. But the speaker showed an error in this calculation. He stated that it would require 457 full years before Christ, and 1843 full years after Christ, to make 2300 full years, so that if the 2300 years commenced with the first day of 457, they would reach to the first day of 1844." Then argues that they commenced in the fall, and consequently would reach to the fall of 1844.

2. But suppose we let a part of them, in spite of Mrs. White's vision, alter the figures on the 1843 chart which ended the 70 weeks at the cross, and put the cross in A. D. 31; what have they gained [illegible] transaction? It would [illegible] jumping out of the frying [illegible] the fire, for it turns out that the Passover fell on Tuesday in A. D. [illegible] also, not only by my computation, [illegible] by the computations of the best astronomers in England and America. So if the 70 weeks really ended in A. D. 34, in the autumn, and the cross was in the midst of the last week, 3½ years earlier, or in the spring of A. D. 31, it follows that Christ must have died on Tuesday, and therefore must have remai[illegible] dead five days, instead of rising on the [illegible]d day.

We care not [illegible]ich horn of the dilemma they take, the [illegible] the same:

1. The theory that [illegible] the 2300 days in 1844, also ends the [illegible]0 weeks in A. D. 34, and if they put [illegible] there, the crucifixion is placed on [illegible]day.

2. The theory [illegible] the 2300 days in 1844, also end[illegible] weeks in A. D. 31; and if they put [illegible] there, they make Christ die on [illegible]day, and make him rise on Friday, inst[illegible] the first day of the week, unless he w[illegible] dead five days. To escape the result, [illegible] must abandon the claim that the 2300 [illegible] ended in 1844. W. S.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK.

Shall we make [illegible] a success, and wipe out the reproach that is upon us for not doing more earnest work for the young? We cannot afford to let [illegible] work languish, and our children go [illegible] ignorance of the blessed truths God has committed to our trust. If our people would [illegible] their children embrace the truth and be [illegible] something must be done to keep them among us, and interest them in the work. It is a sad aspect of our work to see children going to other places because there is a lack of interest for them in our churches. The Lord will call the parents [illegible] to account soon for neglecting [illegible] little ones. What a fearful responsibility it will be to those who have withheld their influence and money, through indifference! Interest yourselves in others, and the Lord will be interested in your affairs, and help you in basket and store, as he promised to Israel of old.

Come, brethren and sisters all over the land, let us have a grand rally for Sunday School interests. You have responded nobly to the appeals, but not sufficiently to carry us along. We need more subscribers for our Sunday School papers, and then they will be self-supporting. Get your children interested in the Young Pilgrim. Let them have a paper through the post-office as their paper and you will see their interest increase. We now offer premiums for every new subscriber to the paper of a nice little book, that will wake up interest and leave a [illegible] impression. Let our Sunday Schools supply classes with the paper where the children cannot get one, but set the children at work getting subscribers, and we will soon have means to publish a larger and better paper for them.

We will give a Library of ten volumes, called the "W[illegible] LIBRARY," for ten new subscribers at [illegible] cents each. We will give one volume, as advertised in the Young Pilgrim, to any little boy or girl who will subscribe for the [illegible] Pilgrim for one year.

We frequently receive letters and hear people say they desire to do something for the Lord's cause. Here is an open door for you, and you may be the means of guiding some little one in the path that leads to life. Will you do it? When? Begin now, and increase our list of subscribers, and cheer the hearts of the little ones. "Inasmuch as ye have done it to these, [illegible] we have done it to me." AGENT.

FROM INDIA.

Good news from a far country is of much interest to those who rejoice in the truth. We have another good letter from our native missionary brother in South India who is preaching in the pulpit and by the press that our Lord is coming soon to judge the world, and give immortality and eternal life to his people. The Lord is opening a wide door of usefulness before him, and he is fully disposed to occupy it. The Lord has also raised up others through his labors to enter upon the work with him. Others will see the truth and obey it. Let us praise our God for his loving kindness, and continue to help in this work. I. C. WELLCOME.

"NAGERCOIL, SOUTH INDIA, SEPT. 1, '83.

"To Eld. I. C. Wellcome:—My dear Brother in Christ:—It is with much thankfulness that I acknowledge the receipt of your letter, and the packets of books and tracts sent by you. May the blessing of the Lord be upon you. The World's Crisis is regularly coming to me now. The most of the books and tracts have already been sent out and circulated in various parts of South India, and in the Island of Ceylon. They are very much liked. I tender my sincere thanks for your big efforts to get funds to enable me to carry out my plan proposed in my last letter to you. May God bless you for your instrumentality in the eternal salvation of many souls in India. A well-educated young man who was first convinced of the glorious truth through me, is now a sincere believer in the pre-millennial and life t[illegible]s. He is a great help to me in circulating the Tamil, and also the English tracts [illegible] send to him to distribute in his district. The Lord has enabled me to stand the ridiculous clamors of the enemies of truth, and through the pecuniary help of Col. E. Amos [illegible]ng and James Spence, I have been able to publish twelve numbers of the Tamil Bible [illegible]ner, and shall continue it another year. About twelve hundred and fifty copies have been printed. I have been greatly encouraged in the Lord's work by our Christian brethren in England and America, who have sent me many excellent books and tracts, pamphlets and papers. Through the circulation of these books and tracts in English and Tamil, as well as through my preaching, this truth of the glorious gospel is rapidly spreading in various parts of South India and Ceylon. Some who have become believers in the conditional immortality and Advent truths now come forward to help me in the Lord's work. Your brother, working and waiting for Jesus' coming. E. MASSILLAMANI."

FROM SR. FOX OF KANSAS.

Bro. Stockman:—Please say to our many friends that our son is still sick, but we think rather improving, yet our hopes may be turned into sorrow in a few short days. He has been [illegible] We desire the prayers of all the dear brethren and sisters in his behalf, that he may soon recover his health if it is the Lord's will. Also, I wish to say that Mr. Knox has left all in the hands of the good Lord, and gone to his mission out west. [illegible] in your prayers. [illegible] you will re[illegible] ago, yet it was hard to leave [illegible] home. This we all find is a world of [illegible]tion, cares and trials.

HEARTY RESPONSES.

Dear Bro. Hemenway:—I am glad to see so many hearty responses from our Sabbath Schools to the call for funds, with which to sustain The Blessed Hope Quarterly and our Sunday School publications, in last week's Crisis. Send in your pledges and cash, and let the column of acknowledgments be greatly enlarged. Bring this matter before your Sunday Schools and others who are interested, at the earliest possible opportunity, and let there be forthcoming heart-cheering answers to the call of our Business Agent. The children must be cared for; they have been neglected too long already. What Sunday School will next send along a pledge? May God stir up our hearts to earnest and decided action in relation to this important matter. A. W. SIBLEY,

Secretary S. A. C. Sunday School Union.
Haverhill, Mass., Dec. 6, 1883.

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

Brethren and Sisters:—Your servants in the Foreign Mission Board feel that their work is a great and responsible one. We need your prayers and help—prayerful help, financial help. Therefore we have a request [illegible] in secret and at your family altar for ten days, beginning Dec. 27th. Asking first, that the Holy Spirit shall direct your prayers. Second, that the Holy Spirit move in the foreign lands upon the people more fully to search the Scriptures pertaining to the second coming of our Lord. Third, that our Advent people may be awakened by the Holy Spirit to the fact that the blessed Christ is soon, very soon coming. Fourth, that the Holy Spirit may impress the people of their needs; also that the Holy Spirit move the people to supply the needs of this work so far as in them lies. Fifth, that the whole church be aroused to the fact that something must be done for the backslidden at once. For soon one will be taken and another will be left. Your brother, expecting soon to see the King in his beauty.

H. H. TUCKER.

FOREIGN MISSION CORRESPONDENCE.

Ukkaamkotter, Manoor, Patamcottah, South India, Oct. 1, 1883,

Dear Sir:—I think it would be advisable to introduce myself to you through these few lines. I am a native pastor, under the Right Reverend Bishop Sargent, D. D., of Church Missionary Society in Tinnenelly, Madras Presidency, South India, residing at Ukkaamkotter. I have in charge 720 members of churches, of whom 630 are baptized, and 195 are communicants. There are 368 members of Christian churches in my station at Ukkaamkotter, of whom 356 are baptized, and 130 are communicants. I am also one of the Premillennialists, and am very fond of reading about the second advent of Christ. As I was so anxious to know all about the second advent of Christ, I was introduced to W. E. Blackstone, Esq., Oak Park County, Ill., through a copy of the book named "Jesus is coming," who is the author of it. I am thankful to say that he sent to me gratuitously the following books, viz., Jesus is coming," "Maranatha," "Premillennial Essays" "The Coming of our Lord." "The Second Advent of Christ," "Twenty Reasons for Believing that the Second Advent is near." I was very much encouraged by these books, and was enabled to spread out the truth of our Lord's second coming to my country people.

Last month I happened to see at Patamcottah a copy of the American Quarterly Journal of Prophecy and Mission Advocate No. 3. Have read it, and found it very interesting. I shall feel very much obliged if you would kindly send me gratuitously a copy of the Journal [or more (if you could spare) from first number, so that they may be useful to me, and to be circulated to my country people. [illegible] other publishers, besides the books I have mentioned above.

I am thankful to announce that there are twenty-four villages under my charge, of which there are twelve villages that have Christians; of these Ukkaamkotter is my headquarters, and where I am stationed. A rich substantial church was built here, measuring sixty-five feet by thirty-five feet, at about 4,000 Rs., raised entirely by voluntary contributions. It is still requiring a belfry, a bell, and a set of communion vessels. There are 368 members of Christian churches, of whom 344 are baptized, and 130 are communicants. There are three services conducted on every Sunday. About two hundred will attend in the first two services respectively, and one hundred in the evening, and so will attend in every other day. Now and then the members of the adjacent villages will attend. I am thankful to say that I have new accessions, about forty in number, at the beginning of this year. I earnestly request you to remember me and my feeble efforts in your prayers, that the Almighty may enable us to watch and wait for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. I remain, dear sir, yours faithfully,

A. JAMES, Native Pastor, C. M. S.

P. S. Dear brethren scattered abroad who love the second coming of our blessed Lord Jesus Christ, and who also love to scatter the blessed truth of his return, there is opening a wide door to do good among the people of other nations. You will see by the above letter what the wants of our brethren in foreign fields are. Shall we supply them with reading matter? Shall we preach the blessed coming of the Just One by the means of these publications? The above letter contains a call for information on this great subject. Jesus says: "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come." And it seems to me that God is opening the way for these witnesses to go forth. From India, Africa, China, Syria, and the islands of the sea, come the requests for these Quarterly Journals because of its breathings of the second coming of Jesus Christ to this earth to remove sin's curse, bring in everlasting righteousness and peace.

Beloved brethren, sisters and children, who are making yourselves interested in this foreign work, may the Lord bless you for what you are doing in sending the Journals free to those who are longing to read and hear on this all important subject. We feel quite sure that our work is now a short one. Time is closing, probation is ending. The Lord help us to be faithful to our mission. I wish we could do more than twice what we did last year. There is four times as much call for the Journals this year as last. Brethren, pray for us, especially in this work. Yours in Christ.

H. H. TUCKER, Corresponding Secretary and Business Agent of F. M. Board.

FROM MRS. C. W. WELLS.

Dear Crisis:—Thrice welcome are your weekly visits laden with words of cheer and encouragement from those of like precious faith, and abounding in faithful expositions of the Word of God, which, if rightly understood and received in good and honest hearts, will indeed be "a light to our feet and a lamp to our path." I prize it more than perhaps I should, were I favored with hearing the truth of the near coming of our Saviour, brought out in a different light! To me it is "The blessed hope." If he is coming to save those who accept the gospel terms of salvation, I desire to know what they are to be saved from. If "the wages of sin is death," what shall we have if we forsake sin and come to the Saviour? We read, "The gift of God is eternal life," and I think we can, with a well grounded hope, look forward to his coming for life, eternal life, free from pain, weariness and decay.

The blessedness of the Bible hope of the believer was brought very forcibly to my mind at the M[illegible]g Campmeeting, as I looked around on [illegible] forms and furrowed faces of the old veterans of the Advent movement in '43, one of whom has since fallen asleep, Elder Isaac Blake, and I shall not soon forget the testimony that he gave for the faith he had in the promises of God, neither the words of Bro. J. Chapman when he arose and said he had lost his health, but not his hope. Bro. Wallace was not the only one whose heart was thrilled with his trembling words.

I want to say a word about a sermon I listened to from Bro. Bowles at St. Johnsbury Oct. 21st, from Isaiah 54:17. The brother showed himself a workman approved of God, rightly dividing the word of truth, and bringing things new and old from the storehouse of God. We then engaged in a very interesting Sabbath School, after which another sermon from 2 Peter 3:9. In the evening went to the prayer meeting, and as one after another of the brothers and sisters arose and testified to God's faithfulness and care, I could not help contrasting the service of the world with that of the Master. In the first, each one seeks to exalt his own name; in the last another's, and that the name of Jesus, and willing to be anything or nothing if only accounted worthy to sit at the feet of the Master and learn of him.

I felt greatly encouraged and strengthened to endure the hardship of the way, that I might at last be numbered with his jewels and reign with him on the new earth. O, let us each be faithful, and in a little while, we will sing "the new song."

Sutton, N. H.

A RESPONSE.

Bro. Hemenway:—I have read your "Appeal," and as we are interested in the Blessed Hope Quarterly, myself and niece will send five dollars to help continue the work. We have never given it one thought that the Adventists could get along without the Blessed Hope Quarterly, since we have taken it. It is such a grand work that every family and Sunday School should take it that are worthy the name of Adventists. We are sad to think the Society has so little money to work on, and our people are indifferent regarding so good a work. I hope others may do more than we can, and relieve you of such embarrassment speedily. Please give us credit for the amount. With much respect,

MRS. D. C. WILLIAMS, and niece, C. BEEBE.

CHURCH VENTILATION.

The new Advent Chapel at Hollis, Maine, will be dedicated on the 20th, and we do hope the Lord will move the hearts of those having the matter in charge to admit pure air at the top of the large windows. Each one should [illegible] the old school-house, and many social meetings have been ruined by keeping out what the Lord designed for us in all its purity—the air we breathe; and no doubt some have been made sick by being compelled to use air second and third handed. FROM JAMES PERRIN.

Bro. Stockman:—I wish to say a few words through the Crisis to the brethren and sisters in Christ—those who can say, I have kept the faith. Over forty years have passed since I heard the cry, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh!" I grasped it with all my might, and can say to-day, that it is as a well of water springing up into everlasting life, and can say truthfully that I have kept the faith.

I wish to say to all that if they wish to be grounded and settled in that kind of faith that Jesus had when he walked up with that little few to the grave of Lazarus, and hear the two sisters say, "Lord, if thou hadst been here my brother had not died." "Only believe," was the reply, "and you shall see the glory of God." Thus the resurrection is the glory. O for that unwavering faith! And it looks to me that it is impossible to have unwavering faith without research; or, in other words, we cannot be Christians until we are Christ-like, and that cannot be until we know the record of Christ as recorded in the New Testament. "Search the Scriptures," is the command. [illegible] dispensation of the fulness of times." Eph. 1:10. There is no writer among us that has set this whole matter in so clear light as he has in as few pages. Let every one get one of these books.

I leave this place this week for Wayne, Detroit and Saginaw, where I expect to stay until the first of February; thence to Lockport, N. Y. I have been holding meetings in a school-house the past summer, and in this section there are but few who want to hear anything about the Master's return, unless it comes from their side of the house.

A mighty effort is being put forth by all the denominations to build up "our" church. I wonder sometimes that the prophets saw this very time. Hab. 1:14-16—"And makest men as the fishes of the sea. . . . They take up all of them with the angle, they catch them in their net, and gather them in their drag . . . because by them their portion is fat, and their meat plenteous." They apparently do not want Christ to come.

When the Baptist minister gave out my appointment last spring, after reading that I would give my reasons for believing that Christ would come during the year 1884, he cast his eyes over the audience and said, "Brethren, should Christ come into this church now, there would not be a pane of glass left in these windows; you would break them all trying to get out. Yet you pray for him to come." All eyes were at once fastened on the writer. In his sermon he alluded to the return of the "Nobleman" several times. Let those who wish to compromise these dispensational truths for the sake of union with the churches do so; the writer dares not do it.

DIGEST OF LATEST NEWS.

DOMESTIC.

Fears of a typhoid fever epidemic have been entertained at Yale College, New Haven. Three students have died, and one or two others have gone home ill. President Porter addressed the students last week on the subject, saying that the cases had not originated in the college, with the exception of perhaps one; and that there was no cause for the alarm, noised abroad and much exaggerated. The same fever is reported to be raging in Forestville, Conn., where the public schools have been closed in consequence of the disease.

"Sojourner Truth," the most remarkable colored woman that ever lived, died last week at Battle Creek, Mich., at the ripe age of 112 years. For years her name was a household word in many sections of the country.

If the deposits in New England savings banks were divided among the entire population, each person would receive $113,17. In New York state the proportion would be $81.08 to each individual.

A large number of Mormon representatives are said to be in Washington, their motive being to "lobby" Congress against making further attempts to stop the practice of polygamy. But Senator Edmunds is on the war path, and the Mormons will hear from him before the frost is out of the ground.

Attention is now being attracted by the Kentucky oil fields. The district lies on the boundary line of Kentucky and Tennessee. All the test wells so far drilled in this district have only been put down to the first sand; but it is now the intention to drill to the fourth sand, if such there be in the district.

The Mormons claim that they have made 2,000 converts in the Southern States during the present year.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 12. Some days ago Secretary Frelinghuysen cabled Minister Lowell that, upon an examination of the question of citizenship of O'Donnell, he had become satisfied that he was an American citizen, and that he (Mr. Lowell) should so consider him in treating with the British government. Supplementary instructions were cabled Minister Lowell yesterday to have the matter presented at once. Mr. Lowell will call the attention of the English [illegible] by this country to-day, and that an answer will be sent at once to the secretary of the state. The United States proposes to take a decided stand on the subject and will demand that justice be done O'Donnell.

A combination [illegible] grocers' clerks has just been discovered in New York, by means of which employers were systematically swindled. [illegible] member was to procure by fair [illegible] foul, $125 per month, which was meant [illegible] a common fund. At the end of the [illegible] members were to be allowed to draw [illegible] $2500 to go into business with.

FOREIGN.

Affairs in Tonquin have at last assumed an active, warlike appearance. On Nov. 23d Admiral Courbet reconnoitered the approaches to Sontay on the Red River. He captured a junk near Halphong, which was laden with combustibles. The French Government expects to hear at any time that he has captured Sontay, Bach, Ninh and Hong-hoa. The Chinese, restless under the advances of the French, made a night attack on Halphong, but were frustrated. They advanced near enough to burn an outlying village; but French gunboats and troops were dispatched to the scene, and the Chinese were routed. All foreigners in Canton have been informed that war between France and China is imminent; and an order has been issued for the massing of all available land and sea forces for the protection of Canton. The French Government, on the other hand, has chartered a steamer to take to Tonquin twenty-seven officers and a cargo of war material.

In France 200,000 people are employed in lace-making.

The crowning of the Czar piled $15,000,000 on to the Russian national debt.

The lower house of the Prussian Diet has had under discussion a motion to introduce secret voting at elections for members of the Diet and for members of communal bodies. The measure is strongly opposed.

The Crown Prince of Germany is being entertained in Seville at the beautiful palace of the Duc de Montpensier, the uncle of the ex-Queen Isabella. The Crown Prince, on departing from Madrid, left gifts of five thousand dollars to the servants of the royal palace, and ten thousand dollars for the Spanish military asylums.

London, Dec. 13. The Times in its leading editorial to-day says there was never a more uncompromising defiance flung in the face of the English nation or government than when Mr. Parnell, in his speech in the Rotunda at Dublin on Tuesday evening, declared war upon constitutional principles and the connection between England and Ireland. It is impossible for the public men of England to regard this renewal of Irish warfare with indifference or contempt. The situation is serious and will tax the ability of English statesmen to the utmost.

London, Dec. 13. The solicitors and friends of O'Donnell have found five of the jurors who convicted him. Three of these desire that a meeting of the whole twelve should be held in order to explain their verdict and arrest the execution of the condemned man. It is believed that unless the other jurors are found by to-morrow it is scarcely probable that the execution will be stopped. The Crown authorities have refused to give the addresses of the jurors to O'Donnell's friends.

Six members of the jury have now been found. Three of them say that their verdict was influenced by the Judge's dictum. One of them has offered the use of his house for a meeting of the jury to review the matter. The Government refuses to give the addresses of the jurymen because of the recent threats of the newspapers, United Irishmen against them. If a meeting of the jurymen were possible the Crown might be forced to mitigate the sentence, but there is no hope of tracing the remaining members of the jury in time to prevent the execution of the death sentence. It is now understood that the jury stood seven for murder and five for manslaughter before the dictum of Judge Denman was delivered.

The wedding ring given by Martin Luther to Catherine von Bora is still in existence, and has been placed on exhibition in Frankfort-on-the-Main. It bears a representation of Christ upon the cross, and in it is set a small ruby. The inscription is: "Dr. Martin Luther; Catherine Bora, June 13, 1525."

Obituaries.

WHITE. In Westfield, Mass., Oct. 16th, 1883, Bro. Ruel O. White, aged sixty-eight years.

He leaves a wife, four sons and one daughter. Bro. White was converted in the winter of 1853 in Pleasant Valley, Ct. He came out clear and decided on the truth as believed by Adventists, and earnestly contended for "the faith once delivered to the saints." He was a contributor to the World's Crisis from the first. Some of our older ministering brethren will recollect his labor of love, especially in transporting them to their appointments, etc. Being of a strong and vigorous nature his idiosyncracies were active and pressing, or, in common parlance, of the "go ahead" style. Possessing a voluminous and musical voice he entered into music in divine worship with a zeal becoming the "child of a king." But for years he has sung but little. Just before leaving Connecticut for this place some twelve years since he met with a sad casualty which injured his spine and affected his brain. For two or three years past his disease increased, causing at times great depression of spirit. A year or more since they buried their youngest daughter, Clara, of eighteen summers, who fell a victim to that dire scourge diphtheria, which served to enhance his disease. As physical weakness increased his mind became more and more enervated, and somewhat unbalanced. He could only endure company but for a very brief period, but never failed to request his pastor to pray with him when he called, remarking emphatically, "If I am saved, it must be by the merits of Christ." He lay in a semi-unconscious state many days before he fell into that sleep from which only the trump of God can awaken him.

"So fades a summer cloud away;
So sinks the gale when storms are o'er;
So gently shuts the eye of day;
So dies a wave along the shore."

In contrast to the distressed expression disease had so long imprinted, his friends were solaced by his sweet, composed and even youthful look as he lay in his casket environed by rich flowers prepared by loving hearts. His funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Eld. S. G. Mathewson. Subject, the brevity of human life,—Rom. 8:20.

MARTIN. In Rockford, Minn., Oct. 27th, 1883, Allen Martin, aged sixty-one years.

Our beloved brother in the Lord needs this record. Bro. Allen was born in Nova Scotia, moved to Wisconsin when a young man, thirty-one years ago, and was married in the fall of the same year to his present widow. He was converted to God under the preaching of the Advent faith about twenty-three years ago, and was baptized by Eld. Wm. Sheldon at Viroqua, Wis. He joined the Advent Church at West Salem where he lived, organized by Eld. Hough, and was ordained and served as a deacon of that church. From Wisconsin he moved to Southern Minnesota twelve years ago, and from there to Rockford, Minn., one year since. Three daughters with their families preceded his own, and became residents of the village. Bro. and Sister Allen moved among us to enjoy our meetings, and have the pleasure of having all their household near each other in one region of country. [illegible] of the vanity of earthly hopes in this mortal life and ever-changing world. Stephen, their oldest son, a dutiful and faithful child, a Christian young man, was taken sick on the journey and soon after their arrival died with that dreaded disease diphtheria. And now the father and husband of the family has suddenly followed him, and both lie buried in their graves waiting "the better resurrection," while the remnant are left to pass their days in mourning.

At our last covenant meeting Bro. Allen spoke with great feeling. The tears fell from his eyes and rolled down his cheeks when he said, "My days are drawing to a close. Most of my father's family have died at my own present age," etc. His daughter, Mrs. Thomas, followed her father, and alluded to the ravages of death in their family, and how precarious were the lives of all the household, none of them being very well; but added in the most triumphant faith, "Living or dying, we are the Lord's." To me it was significant that death would soon have another victim in that dear family. Bro. Allen's sickness was but for a few hours, suffering in extreme pain, and of such a nature as to leave no death-bed utterances as a consolation to surviving friends; yet his life and conversation when in health and prosperity testified that his heart was fixed in serving the Lord, and in the patient waiting the coming of Christ his Redeemer, and that now he "sleeps in Jesus." Brother Allen leaves a widow, three daughters with their families, two sons, and other relatives to mourn his unexpected death.

Funeral services were held in the Presbyterian Church, Rockford, Oct. 29th. A large audience, made up of all classes of our citizens, was in attendance. The sermon was preached by the writer. O. R. FASSETT.

TWIGG. In Providence, R. I., Nov. 22, 1883, Mrs. Victoria Twigg, in the thirty-eighth year of her age.

Sister Twigg had been a member of the Hammond Street church for nearly three years in Christian fellowship. Although she was never as active as many, yet we verily believe her earnest desire and effort was to live a true Christian life. May the choicest blessings of Heaven rest upon the dear husband and motherless children in their affliction and loneliness, so guiding and keeping them and all other bereaved relatives and friends, that at last through the abounding grace of God they may be overcomers, and have an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom when Jesus comes. Amen. NORMAN P. COOK.

HUBBARD. In Taunton, Mass., Nov. 21, 1883, Harriet A., wife of Dr. S. P. Hubbard, and daughter of the late Dea. Leonard Barrett of Belchertown, aged fifty-three years, eight months and twenty-six days.

A good Christian wife and mother sleeps till Jesus comes.

[We knew Sister Hubbard well. She was an estimable Christian woman. Many beside the bereaved family circle will mourn her loss. She will re-appear in the "morning."—ED.]

The P. Q., Northern New Hampshire and Northern Vermont Conference.

The Province of Quebec, Northern Vermont and Northern New Hampshire Annual Conference will (D. V.) hold its next session at Ways Mills, P. Q., to commence Wednesday evening at seven o'clock, Jan. 2nd, 1884, and continue over the Sabbath. Preaching each afternoon at two, and evening at seven, and three sermons on the Sabbath. The good people of Ways Mills and vicinity, who were the first to invite the meeting to be held in their beautiful church, expect to sustain it freely and well; and we therefore invite all who can to attend, especially all members of the Conference, as ministers, church officers, and duly chosen and certified delegates. Business sessions each forenoon, ending with Saturday. Come early, prepared to stay to the end. Those who come by train on the Passumpsic from north or south will stop at Ayer's Flat. If you intend so to come, send a postal card at once to Charles Davis, Ways Mills, and on Thursday and Friday morning teams will convey them to the meeting, and return them the next Monday morning. Let those a little out come with their lunch baskets well filled daily, and those having them might bring bags of oats, and so help sustain the meeting. Under all the circumstances, we deem Ways Mills the best place, for special reasons. Thanks to the St. Johnsbury church for their kind invitation. Perhaps we may adjourn to that place. Do not forget to make this meeting a subject of special, earnest, believing prayer, that God may bless it, and make it a great blessing. Come to promote peace and harmony, and thus serve the Lord. C. P. DOW, President of Conference.

L. C. MCKINSTRY, Secretary.

NOTICE.

There will be a service memorial of the decease of the late ELDER ISAAC BLAKE, of Holland, Vt., a venerable father in the gospel, and member of our Conference, held at the annual session of the P. Q., Northern N. H. and Northern Vermont Conference, at Ways Mills, P. Q., on Saturday, Jan. 5th, at two o'clock P. M. An address will be delivered by the President of the Conference, and there will be appropriate remarks by others, and singing. C. P. DOW, President of Conf.

Conference Notice.

The Lord willing, the first quarterly session of the New Hampshire Advent Christian Conference will be held with the church at Franconia, N. H., commencing Thursday evening, Dec. 27th, to continue over the following Sabbath. Be sure that the main object of this meeting may be to strengthen the flock of God, and to gather out some from among the many who shall be saved from the wrath to come. To this end let all lift their hearts and voices to God in fervent prayer.

J. Parsons, J. C. Smith, and C. Pike, Quarterly Meeting Committee.

Maine State Mission Work.

The Maine State Conference in its last session appointed H. B. Sevey, E. O. Dinsmore, S. K. Partridge, Committee on mission work, to solicit and expend money for the spread of the gospel of the soon coming kingdom in new places (and we have many) in the State. We expect to go ourselves as ways are opened, and others are all ready to unite with us in this work, if means are provided so they can leave their families. Now, brethren and sisters, who are blest with goods of this world, and believe this message of the soon coming King, give this mission a helping hand at once, that our preachers may go into these neglected places, and give the cry before Jesus comes, if possible. As you have confidence in the Advent ministry of this State, and in the committee chosen by them, and in behalf of the perishing ones out of Christ, we ask your help. Send in your money or pledges to either Elders E. O. Dinsmore, Richmond, H. B. Sevey, Mt. Vernon, or S. K. Partridge, Whitefield, which will be duly credited and expended to the best of our ability; and if brethren or friends who have places in view where the gospel of the kingdom has not been preached, please inform us, and we will do the best we can to give the cry as the way may be opened. H. B. SEVEY.

Special Notice.

To the dear saints that worship annually at Pottle's Grove Camp-ground, Mechanic Falls:—Your committee have bought the lumber, and have done a part of the repairs. We have raised the roof of the boarding house, and finished the cook room into a pleasant tenement. We have built the ovens over, put on a new roof to the lunch stand, and have got the seating to repair the seats, and the lumber to finish the chambers into rooms to rent. [illegible] do? We voted to raise [illegible] pledged; then [illegible] one hundred and [illegible] paid at the time, and [illegible] thirty-[illegible]; and some of the bills are [illegible] called for, and what shall we do? [illegible] and sisters, these bills stand against [illegible]. Shall I be obliged to carry this load? or will we all take hold together and make it easy for all? Say, brother, will you lend a helping hand? I would be glad to hear from any one, and more pleased to have each one send me one dollar, or five. Now don't delay. C. DENNEN, North Turner Bridge, Me.

Annual Meeting.

The next Annual Meeting of the Northern Illinois A. C. Conference will be held with the church at DeKalb, Illinois, commencing Wednesday evening, Jan. 16th, 1884, and hold over the next Lord's day. We hope to see a good representation from all the churches. This is an important meeting, as we are to elect officers for the ensuing year, also do other business in the interest of the Conference. We hope as many as possible who desire to see the work move forward will be present. Come, brethren, in the name of the Lord, for united help is needed to carry the truth into new fields, where many are perishing for the bread of life. DeKalb is on the Northwestern R. R., about sixty miles west of Chicago, Ill.

D. S. CLARK, President.
J. AUGUST SMITH, Secretary.

Annual Church Meeting.

The Annual Meeting of the Advent Christian Church of Tustin City, Cal., will convene in the church on the evening of the 1st day of January, 1884, at 7 o'clock P. M. Election of pastor of the church for 1884 and of trustees, and a full board of church officers, with other matters, will take place, and all members of the church should be on hand. At the meeting will be decided how many, if any, general meetings for the year.

V. F. HUNT, Pastor of the A. C. Church of Tustin City, Cal.

Annual Meeting.

The Annual Meeting of the Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan Advent Christian Conference will convene with the church at Buchanan, Mich., the second week in January, 1884, commencing on Wednesday evening the 9th, and holding over the next Lord's day. The church at Buchanan extend a cordial welcome to all. Come in the fulness of the blessing of God, seeking his glory and the advancement of his blessed truth.

N. J. WINCHELL, President.
W. C. HICKS, Secretary.

Conference Notice.

The next Quarterly Conference of District No. 1 of the Williamette Valley, Oregon, will be held with the church at Slayton, Linn Co., on Jan. 11th, 12th and 13th, 1884. A cordial invitation is extended to all to come to this meeting, especially to the preaching brethren; and may the Spirit of our Lord and Master be with one and all who shall be present to cheer on the good work. GEO. W. LEMON, Secretary.

Conference Notice.

The Knox and Lincoln Conference will hold its Quarterly Meeting with the church at Martinsville (St. George, Me.), commencing Dec. 27th. Let there be a gathering of the saints of God to this meeting. Call upon Jacob Hupper, Gideon Barter and Wm. Pratt, who will see that homes are provided for all.

GEO. W. WEEKS, President.
H. MITCHELL YORK, Secretary.

Special Notice.

After being engaged in pastoral work for twelve years in succession, I have decided to labor for the present as an evangelist, and would say to churches desiring me to hold revival meetings with them for the salvation of the perishing, or to preach for them on Sundays, that I am now at liberty to do so as the Lord may open the way. May the Lord help us to be deeply in earnest. Every thing betokens that our Lord is about to come and redeem his people. My address is Springfield, Mass. E. MCCULLOCH.

NOTICE.—The first session of Kennebec Valley Quarterly Conference for 1884 will be held at Booker meeting-house, South Gardiner, Maine, commencing Thursday evening, Jan. 10th, at six o'clock. As at this session officers will be elected, and as we voted last session concerning the division of the Conference, let there be a goodly gathering of the brethren and sisters to work for God.

E. O. DINSMORE, Secretary.

NOTICE.—There will be a meeting in Sutton, N. H., at the house of Bro. J. Hazen, the 2nd and 4th Sundays in each month, if the Lord will.

GEO. W. BROWN, Chairman of the Ministerial Committee of the New Hampshire S. A. C. Conference.

THE REDEMPTION, AND THE WORLD'S GREAT EMPIRES.

By Elder and Mrs. L. C. McKinstry.

These two courses are given in each place. The first Sabbath of each appointment is occupied by ELDER MCKINSTRY in presenting THE REDEMPTION, illustrating the theme by paintings and other models.

MRS. MCKINSTRY lectures on THE WORLD'S GREAT EMPIRES, which are consecutively THE BABYLONIAN, MEDO-PERSIAN, GRECIAN, ROMAN, and THEOCRATIC KINGDOMS. She commences on Monday evening and delivers these lectures, continuing over the following Sabbath. The two courses are essential to each other. THE REDEMPTION shows the means of salvation, and THE WORLD'S GREAT EMPIRES the political measurements of the period devoted to the accomplishment of the work, and both finally blend into one theme—the final victory of Jesus, and the establishment of his kingdom. [illegible]

Friends wishing the lectures, please correspond with ELDER L. C. MCKINSTRY, at any place where they are advertised to be given. Write early in the week. Arrangements will be published in due time.

MEREDITH VILLAGE, N. H. (Town Hall) from Dec. 16th to 23d inclusive.

NEW HAMPTON, N. H. (Town Hall) Jan. 6th to 13th inclusive.

LAKE VILLAGE, N. H. (Methodist Episcopal Chapel) from Jan. 13th to 20th inclusive.

SACO, ME. (Freewill Baptist Church) from Jan. 20th to 27th inclusive. (More to follow soon.)

☞ Books on sale at the place of the lectures.

Conference Notice.

The A. C. Conference of North Western Michigan will hold its annual meeting (for the election of officers and to transact such other business as may be for the interests of the cause) with the church in Sylvester, Mecosta Co., commencing on Friday evening, Jan. 11th, 1884, and hold over Sunday. Teams will meet the 1.30 o'clock train at Mecosta on the D. L. and N. R. R. on Friday. We hope to see all the ministers present, and a full delegation from the churches at this meeting. Come, brethren, filled with the Spirit, to do work for the Lord. JOHN BOWER, President.

Conference Notice.

The annual meeting of the York County (Me.) A. C. Conference (postponed) will begin in the new Chapel at Hollis Centre Thursday evening, at 6.45 o'clock, Dec. 20th. (Dedication in the afternoon at two o'clock.) We hope all will come ready to unite together to work for the Master. Election of officers will probably be Friday, at nine o'clock A. M. Trains from east and west arrive at 8.30 A. M. The chapel is but a short distance from the depot. Free return checks over the Portland and Rochester R. R. Entertainment for all who come for the advancement of the cause. T. J. CABLE, Secretary.

Western Board A. C. M. Society.

President—JOHN BOWER, Sylvester, Michigan. D. R. MANSFIELD, Auburn, Ill. A. P. MOORE, Chicago, Ill., 209 Fremont Street. D. O. HINK, Maryville, Mo. Secretary and Treasurer—H. POLLARD, Palmer, Christian County, Illinois.

Correspondence solicited. Remittances in aid of mission work in the West will be promptly acknowledged by the Treasurer.

NOTICE.—Meetings of those looking for the second coming of Christ will be held every Sunday on East Hill, in Kidd District school-house, Dansville, N. Y., at 11 A. M. by Eld. H. Ziegenfuss. All are invited. H. ZIEGENFUSS.

Appointments.

WHAT IS TIME?

BY C. P. DOW.

Time is the measure of our stay,
Time is the space that brings decay;
Time tells our progress to that state,
For which as mortals here we wait.

Time—issuing forth from vast extent,
From an eternity unspent;
To turn again to that vast sea,
Where time's short terms no more shall be.

Time! how philosophers have scanned,
Moralists too its use have planned;
Sages too have sought to explore
Its untold wealth from shore to shore.

Time—its value has sounded forth,
But few alas has told its worth;
The day of doom will it declare,
How many saved will then appear.

Time past, how transient to our view,
Time present, short and passing too;
Its lessons taught seem hard to learn,
So painful, from them many turn.

Time? mark! the child but wastes in play,
Nor knows its worth, it hastes away;
The anxious youth but speeds its flight,
While old age totters into night.

Time? deferred hope but bids it fly,
While wasting pains make such hope die;
Our dreams of bliss arrest its flight,
Until they're lost in darkest night.

Time, to the man condemned to death,
In prison cell, seems fleeting breath;
It hastes to bear him to his doom,
And casts a mantle dense with gloom.

Time! who can tell how long its race,
Nor when shall cease its onward pace;
Nor when its stream shall fall and be
Lost in a vast immensity.

The time will come and now is near,
When the last trump we all shall hear,
That sounds the final knell of time,
And brings the ages so sublime.

Till then we'll wait and watch and pray,
And hasten to the judgment day;
When time as now shall be no more,
His billows break upon the shore.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Bro. A. W. Richards writes from Webster, Mass. Dec. 8th:—"I will inform you what good meetings we are having in Webster. Elder J. E Cross came to this town the 6th of November to preach the Word of God. He is a faithful laborer in the work of the Lord. Sinners are being saved. The ministers of this place take hold with Bro. Cross. The sleepy professors are [illegible] His chalk talks help the people to understand the Scriptures, and when lecturing on the chart, people listen as if spell bound. Webster has not seen so great a revival of religion for years as is now going on. It is good to see Christians of all denominations meeting together in love and unity, helping us with their time and money to carry on the good work. We have a congregation from two to six hundred, and they listen to such themes as the resurrection, and of the kingdoms of this earth, and the kingdom of God, and call it good. The people of Webster want Eld. Cross to remain here as long as he can."

Eld. H. H. Tucker writes from Sugar Hill, N. H., Dec. 13:—"The Lord is most signally blessing the people here. Dec. 2nd we baptized five, and others have voluntarily come over on the Lord's side since. We are holding no extra meetings, but it is very evident that the Lord is doing a work for the people. They need no urging only what the gospel urges them. Thus far all have themselves arisen and desired to find the Lord. It seems to be the old-fashioned way of coming to Christ. Pray for us."

Eld. L. H. Little writes from Cornelius, Washington Co., Oregon:—"I walked to Shady Brook, fifteen miles, on Saturday, Nov. 17th, and preached twice on the Sabbath; found a few who love the coming of Jesus, and are letting their light shine amid the darkening perils of these last days. I received two subscribers for the Crisis. Praise the Lord!"

A FLYING VISIT.

BY L. BOUTELL.

From the Conference at Haverhill I made my way to Portland, Me., to fulfil a previous appointment for Sunday, 25th of November. On my way I stopped over a train at Kennebunkport to be refreshed by seeing some of like precious faith, hearing of their trials as well as of their victories. They feel their loss in the death of their beloved pastor, Bro. Long, who had been in and out before them, a faithful teacher both by precept and example, with but little spiritual help, unwearied in [illegible] the cause of a coming Lord; and his deep desire for the welfare of the people at Kennebunk caused him much prayer and fasting that they might be presented faultless before him at his coming. His letters to me while in active service among them evinced a deep desire for the building up on the most holy faith. For this his life was spent.

As young as he was he wore himself out in this blessed work of saving men by the preaching of "this gospel of the kingdom." His life among his people was an example to us older in years. He seemed almost a fulfillment of Paul's counsel to Timothy: "Take heed to thyself and to the doctrine, continue in them, that thou mayest save thyself and them that hear thee." And when he left them it was with the expectation of soon returning to his charge with doubled vigor, and the hope of seeing more of the exemplification of the power of God in bringing into submission the flock over which the Holy Spirit had made him overseer, and adding to the numbers. But that was not to be. It was only to speak the words of this life to the church at Portland, then return to the mother that cradled and trained him for God and the cause of truth and righteousness. Here, at the homestead of his youth, with the one that gave him birth, he spent his last days of suffering.

Thus fell asleep in Jesus one of the brightest specimens of devotion and piety of a young disciple of Jesus that this age can chronicle. And he was committed to the dust to wait the making up of God's jewels, when he will be spared as a "man spareth his only son that serveth him. Then E. Hartley Long will live again. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord."

After leaving Kennebunkport by their new railroad, I soon found my old stopping [illegible] worship. Here, as best we could, we gave some food for the household, and they fed as though they though it meat in due season. I was with them through the day and evening, and it was a good day to my soul, or to myself. I saw old brethren that had borne the heat and burden of the Advent warfare; but a changed congregation, which brought to mind forty years ago, when meeting old lovers of Christ's coming in Beethoven Hall. Old Dea. Peirson and family, with many others, looking for Jesus and singing, "You will see the Lord coming," all responding, Amen! Enough to do your soul good.

I love to call to mind the former days, the former power, the former brethren. Portland has had her share in this godlike "message;" and she has had her worthies, that sleep in Jesus. Peace to the sacred dust of Levi Stockman, Bro. Pierson and others that have fallen, not ashamed to identify themselves with this blessed truth, and bear reproach for it and Christ's sake; and it is thrice blessed to meet with the living who are still loving to bear reproach for this message with heads uplifted, singing "in expectation sweet;" not looking to see if there is not some way to escape bearing this reproach with this people looking for speedy redemption. Dear brethren, do not look nor go back to Egypt for help. We have left nothing that can help us on in the way to the better country. The denominations—God bless them when he can—have nothing comparatively speaking. We have the best there is, and some who have left, ache to taste the sweets of former days and associations. They that look back are not fit for the kingdom of God. We love them, and the Lord says, Return to me, and I will return to you. This is the way, walk in it. Amen.

EASTERN NOTES.

BY GEO. E. FULLEN.

With the permission of our Editor I will say a few words to my numerous friends East and West. I realize more and more that the Lord is with me, and his service is glorious.

I left my home in Benton Harbor, Mich., on Saturday, Nov. 17th, and stopped over Sunday with Bro. A. P. Moore in Chicago, where I enjoyed two excellent meetings in the Green Street Chapel. In the morning Bro. Moore gave us an excellent discourse on the subject of holiness. In the evening the writer preached on the Christian's hope.

On Monday, Nov. 19, at five o'clock A. M., I left Chicago on the Chicago and Atlantic [railroad], and arrived in Boston on Wednesday, the [illegible] o'clock P. M. Found my way to the Crisis office, where [illegible] the pleasure of meeting Brn. Stockman, Hemenway, Burr, and later on Brn. Ross, Dunbar and Boutell. On the 22d I left Boston for Haverhill to attend a Quarterly Conference. Attended the meeting throughout, and enjoyed it very much. The ministers present were Brn. Couch, Sibley, Dunbar, McCulloch, Sederquist, Boutell, Ross, and Hemenway. The preaching was done by Brn. Couch, Dunbar, Ross, McCulloch and Hemenway. Returned to Boston the day after the Conference closed, and stopped with Bro. Boutell in Chelsea till the 29th. Attended prayer-meeting once here, when I was richly blessed.

On Thursday, Nov. 29, I took the cars over the Old Colony Railroad to Taunton, where I remained until the following Tuesday. Preached twice to them on Sunday. Subjects: Preparation for Christ's Coming and The Value of Godliness.

On Tuesday, Dec. 4, I took the cars for New Bedford, and [illegible] place to Fairhaven, to attend the Quarterly Meeting of the Plymouth and Bristol County Conference. The church in this place is prospering under the faithful labors of their much beloved pastor, Bro. G. F. Haines. The following preachers attended this Conference: G. F. Haines, C. H. Sweet, L. Boutell, M. Batchelor, A. Damon, and F. W. Blackmer. The opening sermon was preached by the writer on The Judgment of the Great Day. On Wednesday Bro. Sweet preached on The Purifying Hope, and Bro. Boutell on The Day of the Lord. On Thursday Bro. Sweet preached on Sanctification, Bro. Batchelor on the Signs of the Times, and Bro. Boutell on the Heavenly Citizenship. On Friday morning the sermon was by Bro. Blackmer on Christian Experience. In the afternoon services were held in behalf of Home Mission Work, when each of the preaching brethren pre[illegible] delivered a short add[illegible] the evening [illegible] an able discourse on The Moral Signs of Christ' Coming.

On Saturday, Dec. 8, I returned to Taunton, and preached twice the next day. The first sermon was on The Purifying Hope, and the second was from the words, "What is our Hope?" While here I was saddened to learn of the death of Bro. Ransom's little son. Bro. Ransom is a doctor by profession, and well known by many in this State. Attended the funeral on Monday morning, and spoke words of comfort to the bereaved hearts.

Thus another precious blossom has been taken away by the hand of the great destroyer. But the Lord has promised to bring all such back again from the enemy's land. The graves shall be opened bye and bye, and these precious buds of promise will appear once more to bloom forever in the glories of paradise and in the presence of the King.

DANGEROUS AMUSEMENTS.—No. 2.

BY A. J. WHEELER.

Gambling. This amusement is generally regarded as a crime. And those who favor the theatre and the dance, make no plea for this. Likewise the law looks upon it as a crime, and none but those engaged in it are willing to be its defenders. Yet there are but few amusements so corrupting and demoralizing, so fascinating and deceptive as that of card playing, which is the beginning of a gambler's life. True it is, there are various modes with which this vice is carried on. While the open gambling hell is not found on every corner, we have the lottery wheels, the fairs, the guess houses, and shooting galleries, which are nothing less than a mild form of that terrible evil.

Within the last few years gaming has become exceedingly prevalent; children are gambling in the streets, their fathers are [illegible] every street your ears are saluted by the sound of the rolling ball, and the clattering dice, and the melancholy evidence of the prevalence of this vice is on every side. And the result will be a community of dishonest men; a vicious, depraved society. Gambling saps the principle of honesty, and makes him who was once the industrious, trustworthy man the desperate, cruel tyrant. And we should shun the gambler as though he were a fiend in the form of man. I appeal to parents to warn their children against this terrible vice.

Social Drinking. A few words upon this subject will be sufficient. Intemperance is insidious. It does not come at once with its burning streams to consume the hearts of its victims, but slowly and gradually it drags itself along, taking one fortress after another, until the social, fashionable, genteel drinker has become the reeling, bloated, degraded drunkard. The young fail to perceive the danger of this practice. They cannot see how it is that a man is led on from moderation to brutal excess, and hence use the wine cup freely, [illegible] without fear of any kind of evil co[illegible]ces. The idea that he shall become [illegible]nkard does not enter the mind [illegible] young man when he sips the poison in taking that social glass. But step by step the habit grows upon him, day by day the fatal spell is thrown around him; deeper he descends into the vortex of wretchedness, until the last lamp which shed its light upon his path will be put out, and the last star of hope sunk in darkness. Remember "at last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."

Haverhill, Mass.

LONELY AND WEARY.

BY S. WOODRUFF.

Thanksgiving day finds me at home. I sit here meditating; waves of tenderness creep over me; I stop for a moment I dare not let my mind remain musing of the past; my feelings would overcome me. What a Thanksgiving day is this when compared to the past years, when cheerful hearts, five in number, gathered around my table, with their mother at my right hand.

But let me not dwell in this dark corner of the picture. Is there not a bright spot in the future? Oh, my Saviour, the death stillness of home to-day! Let me fly to thee for refuge. Let the thoughts of coming glory carry me away from this death stillness. Oh, let me hear the rolling of those chariot wheels which will bring thee quickly down the shining pathway of thy glory, that thy voice may break the bars of the tomb! Awaken thy dear children, that we may see a display of thy power and glory, in bringing to life the dead, and [illegible] the living, for we are lonely and weary; not tired of the way, but in the way. These years of warring against infirmities and a wicked world makes my very life groan within me, while I wait the coming One to give us life, and that more abundantly.

Truly, nothing but God's promises support his lonely, weary ones, warring for the kingdom. There is a blight over the whole creation; yea, our homes are broken; our heart's cry is, "Jesus, come, oh, come and reign on thy throne, to give the lonely and weary rest."

Thou great Shepherd of the sheep, go with me still over the hills and mountains of this doomed world, that I may yet proclaim thy truth, to the saving of some who may have a part in the great reward. I truly feel weaned from this world, to-day my heart is sad. I feel sorely the desolations of earth, and hear its groans indicating the end. The wheels of judgment are rolling near. Oh, ye careless, ruined world, see the day of God approaching! Earth's sons and daughters, get ready. No time to be lost; your day is at hand, the day of retribution. Turn you to the strong hold. The gleaming sword of God's judgment is hanging over this world. Will you fly to the fountain and live? or will the commissioned ones find you with the giddy and the gay? Methinks the last solemn message is being sounded. Let nothing hinder you; get ready.

What a day is before us! Earth struggles for liberty, but all in vain. Christ rejected, a ruined world must meet its doom. Her day is at hand. Nothing but putting on the whole armor can keep the church from falling down in these days. It is an evil time, termed "the evil day" by the apostle. Well, a few more waves of sorrow, a few more strug[illegible] with the enemy, and we [illegible] where no waves of sorrow roll; lonely, weary hours all gone, and that forever. Earth again blooms in her Eden glory; the dear children walk and talk with Jesus. The saved of every nation will be there. The Master calls; who will obey the call and be among the saved?

HIGH PRESSURE AND LOW PRESSURE.

BY C. E. COFF.

There are both high pressure and low pressure engines in use, and both necessary. The former, like the locomotive, runs under a high pressure of steam, and "exhausts" its steam directly into the air, making a good deal of noise, and is seen and heard much; while the latter, like the steamboat engine, exhausts within itself, condensing its used steam again into water, and re-using again and again its own energies. It does not take such a high pressure of steam for this kind on account of its economical use of what it has, and, being covered in, is seldom seen. Speed requires the use of the high pressure and strength and economy the use of the low pressure engines.

There are also high pressure and low pressure sanctification in use; and perhaps, after all, both are necessary. The former "exhausts" into the air a great deal, making considerable noise and attracting much attention, but the zeal of the good cause—the King's business which requires haste—may utilize them to advantage; while the latter exhausts within itself—spending its force more on its own heart—and re-using its energies in producing an even, every day Christian life of right living and doing.

Of course there is but one kind of sanctification, and that is set forth in the Bible; but there is more than one view of it. One man's view is that a certain result is to be attained one way, and another man sees that it can be better accomplished another way. Now there need be no clashing between [illegible] though there often is apparently. Some are so constituted that God can do nothing with them unless it is done under high pressure; and while they bluster and bluster, another may think he has nothing [illegible] But God is working with him on the low pressure system. And perhaps both are turning out good work. A little charity and common sense, a little grace and gumption well mixed together, straighten out some perplexing questions in Christian [illegible]

Nothing is more unwise than to suppose that all experiences are to be alike—run in the same mold—though experiencing the same things and aiming at the same result. Diversity in experience exists in a very wide degree in the physical department. One man goes out into the field to work, and merely touches "mercury," a common plant mixed with the grass which is mown down, and he swells up with the poison and is sick in bed a week but another man rubs it in his hands and chews it in his mouth harmlessly. And so this might be carried out to the poisons of insects, etc., which affect one and do not another. Suppose he that is whole laughs at, condemns, or censures him who is sick in this case—would it be wise? would it cure? No. "Charity covereth the multitude of sins—unavoidable weaknesses of the flesh or spirit.

It is not wise to compare ourselves among ourselves. There is one Pattern; to him we stand or fall. Sin has wrought wonderful diversity in our physical natures, in our judgment, in our minds. Let us conclude that we do well to aim for the unity of the spirit in the bonds of peace.

While some have made the discovery that "perfect love" is all that is required in Christian perfection, let others remember that the apostle James admonished us to aim for perfect patience also. "But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing." James 1: 4. Then he goes on to say, "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God," etc. James went in for that well-rounded Christian perfection which is admirable. And it is the aim which is our concern; God's mercy will take care of the results.

"OUR FATHER WHICH ART IN HEAVEN."

BY [illegible] HOLDEN.

"Hallowed be thy name!" thus day by day,
We lift our hearts to thee, and pray;
Oh, help us, Lord, to duly weigh
The meaning of the words we say—
"Hallowed be thy name."

"Thy kingdom come!" O longed for joy,
When praise shall every tongue employ
To spread abroad thy glorious fame,
And thy redeeming grace proclaim,
"Thy kingdom come."

"Thy holy will be done on earth,
As now by those of heavenly birth";
Still more in this mysterious way," O Lord,
Until we cry with one accord,
"Thy will be done."

"Give us this day our daily bread,"
The bread "from heaven" pure and sweet;
Oh, precious manna from on high,
Who eats of thee shall never die.
Give us this bread.

"Forgive us our debts as we forgive",
Oh, Father, help each soul to live
In charity with all mankind—
Unto each other's failings blind,
"Forgive our debts."

"Lead us not into temptation," but be our guide
Through sin's dark, sullen, angry tide;
Oh, Father, from thy throne on high,
List to thy helpless children's cry—
Lead us aright.

REPORT OF MISSION WORK.

Dear Editor, and Brethren and Sisters in Christ—It has been some time since I wrote to you of the Master's work in this far off North West. But while we have been silent in writing, we have not been idle in scattering the good news of the kingdom beside all waters; and had Bro. Munger been with us, he would have [illegible] some of the Crisis. We should have been glad to have had him with us in traveling and camping over the mountains to Takima City, W. T., and return, distance one hundred and fifty miles. At that place he would have seen some of the contempt of the wicked that he speaks of. For while speaking there, some of the Cain family threw a bomb shell on to the tent over my head, and as it came down at the side of the tent at my back, it burst with a terrific report, causing all in the tent to rise to their feet. I told all to be quiet, as no harm was done, and silence prevailed in our meetings, and after that all was quiet.

Nearly all the infidel settlement came out and listened with attention to the grand truths that are due this generation. We showed them we had not come there to do them harm, but to set before them good things, pertaining to our present and eternal welfare, and that is the goodness of God that leads men to repentance, and that his goodness had been made manifest in all ages, by giving the inhabitants timely warning of great judgments that would overtake individuals and nations, if they repented not of their sin and iniquity. And that the principle that our heavenly Father had acted out in all ages was recorded in Jeremiah 18: 7: "At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom to pluck it up, and to pull down, and destroy it, if that nation against whom I have pronounced turn from their evil, I will repent of the evil that I thought to do unto them. And at what instant I shall speak concerning a kingdom to build and to plant it, if it do evil in my sight that it obey not my voice, then I will repent of the good wherewith I said I would benefit them."

The principle of the Almighty as taught in these verses, is a speedy riddance of infidelity in every form. We have many cases on record where men and nations have repented, and judgments pronounced against them have been withheld, or stayed; but when they have not repented, then the foretold judgments came in love, justice and mercy, to the destruction of sin and the sinner. And thus it will be in the great harvest day. Christ will send forth his angels and "gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them that do iniquity." "He will gather the wheat into his garner," and cast the chaff away. He will destroy the works of the devil. "Those mine enemies that would not that I should reign over them, bring them hither and slay them before me." Then [illegible] (Christ) will "destroy [illegible] corrupt the earth." [illegible] "Surely, the Lord God will do nothing but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets."

Thus God's [illegible] has been made known in all ages, foretelling the evil, [illegible] judgment. But [illegible] people know not [illegible] backsliding [illegible] the judgment of God. [illegible] Sat. 8.

The prophecies [illegible] God's interpretation of them stirred [illegible] in Takima, and infidels confessed [illegible] the truths presented looked the most [illegible] ever heard. A number subscribed for the Crisis, Quarterly Journal of Prophecy, and Advocate.

Since our return from Takima, we have traveled by cars, boat and team, over three hundred miles having meetings at twelve different places. At each place they need workers, and at each place the Lord has signally blessed, and opened a door of utterance. We would love to relate many things to encourage and cheer, but space and time will not permit. There are many doors open for laborers from the east; will they come in Jesus' name, and help in this great work? If so, write to me at Walla Walla, W. T. Bro. Crum and myself have secured quite a number of names for Crisis and Advocate and Prophetic Journal. Pray for us in the work. From your brother and sister in Christ. J. C. and S. E. Smith.

A LETTER FOR BRO. CARGILE.

Dear Bro. Stockman:—My father desires me to say to the readers of the Crisis, that the cause of his long silence is from affliction by sore eyes. For several weeks he has been hardly able to use them at all, especially in writing. He is therefore compelled to postpone his visit to Texas until spring. Although he is unable to study, he starts to-morrow on his second trip to Georgia, the people there being very anxious for his return.

He wishes to say to all kind friends who have sent him donations for the Chapel, that as soon as he is able he will acknowledge the same in the Crisis. He has about forty dollars, and hopes soon to have enough to have it comfortably ceiled. He hopes that the saints will take his case to the Lord in prayer. And I hope that they will also pray for me that I may be a good Christian boy, and have a home with them in God's kingdom. As this is my first effort at writing for the press, I hope you will excuse all errors. Yours in the blessed hope.

Albert B. Cargile.

Stevenson, Ala., Dec. 6th, 1883.

[We very much regret Bro. Cargile's infirmity. We trust the use of his eyes will soon be fully restored to him. Let him be remembered. The Lord bless his young son who writes so well and sensibly.—Ed.]

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Quarterly Conference of District No. 2, Kansas, met at Linn, Washington Co., Kansas, Nov. 8th, 1883, President W. H. Shriner in the chair. Preachers present: W. H. Shriner, S. Shriner, N. Mathews, D. Land, A. Hoagland.

It was moved and carried, that all in good standing in the church act as delegates; and the following resolution was passed:

Whereas, Elder T. R. Comstock did, at our last quarterly meeting held at Palmer, Washington Co., Kansas, Sept. 7th, 1883, request that we erase his name from our list, saying that he had withdrawn from the Foreston Convention, and also from our State Conference, therefore we do grant his request.

It was then resolved to grant license to H. Titterington, of Concordia, Cloud Co., S. C. Anderson, of Linn, Washington Co., and A. Stephens of Marven, Phillips Co.

Adjourned to the call of the Chair.

TEMPERANCE.

A CHINESE BOY.

About [illegible]ty miles from Shanghai, in the city of Quin San, there is a little Baptist church. One of the members is a boy sixteen or seventeen years old now, who before his conversion had formed the habit of drinking wine. He soon saw that this was sinful, so, after asking God to help him, he decided upon the following plan of overcoming the sin which had gotten hold of him. A small wooden box was made, closed all around except a hole in the top, and every day at the usual hour of drinking wine, the "wine man" inside (as he chose to call his appetite), would bite him and want wine. Then he would run to the box and put into it the money he used to spend for wine, exclaiming, "There now! you cant get any wine to-day for your money has gone into the box." Each day this process was gone through until he ceased to want wine; and when the little box was opened he was surprised to find how much money was there, all of which then was given to the church as a thank-offering to that God who had saved him from a strong and wicked habit.

Let us see how many lessons there are in this true story. First, God will give us power to overcome great sins, if we only ask him and do all we can ourselves. Again, we see that much money that is spent in sinful and unsatisfying pleasures might be made to do lasting good by a little self-denial. But there is still a third lesson our story teaches us, and it is this: The gospel of Christ can do for the little boys and girls of China what it does for those in America. Does it make your home bright and give cheerfulness to every passing day? So it does for other homes. When the Saviour said, "I am the light of the world," he intended that the message of love and pardon which he came to bring should be carried by his people to all nations.—Kind Words.

THE STRONGEST DRINK.

Water is the strongest drink. It drives mills; it's the drink of lions and horses, and Sampson never drank anything else. Let young men be teetotalers if only for economy's sake. The beer money will soon build a house. If what goes into a mash-tub went into the kneading-trough, families would be better fed and better taught. If what is spent in waste were only saved against a rainy day, workhouses would never be built. The man who spends his money with the public and thinks the landlord's bow and "How do ye do, my good fellow," mean true respect, is a perfect simpleton. We don't light fires for the herring's comfort, but to roast him. Men do not keep pot houses for laborers' good; if they do, they certainly miss their aim. Why, then, should people drink "for the good of the house?" If I spend money for the good of any house, let it be my own and not the landlord's. It is a bad well into which you must put water; and the beer house is a bad friend, because it takes your all and leaves you nothing but headaches. He who calls those his friends who let him sit and drink by the hour is ignorant—very ignorant. Why, red lions and tigers and eagles and vultures are all creatures of prey, and why do so many put themselves within the power of their jaws and talons? Such as drink and live riotously, and wonder why their faces are so blotchy and their pockets so bare, would leave off wondering, if they had two grains of wisdom. They might as well ask an elm tree for pears as look to loose habits for health and wealth. Those who go to the public house for happiness climb a tree to find fish.—Spurgeon.

THE WORKERS.

Haste, ye workers, to the rescue!
Sin is darkening all the land;
Rum is taking dear ones from you,
Come ye helpers, lend a hand.
Banish wrong and help the right,
Come with armor for the fight.

Children beggared from their birth,
Young men going to the grave,
Old men falling to the earth,
Blighted lives, O seek to save;
Save them from their weakened wills,
Save them from the drink that kills.

PLAIN TALK.

The Lord Bishop of Rochester, at the Episcopal General Convention at Philadelphia, Oct., 1883, said: "There is a subject which lies at the root of all lay work and of all clerical work and of all episcopal work, and all the conventions and all the philanthropic and literary institutions which you have in this country—that is, the battle with intemperance. You may build as many churches as you like, you may open as many free libraries as you please, you may preach as many sermons as you please, you may enlist new armies of lay soldiers of Christ; but so long as you let the demon of intemperance haunt your houses and corrupt the people of this country, so long as you let the bane of liquor continme its ravages among the people without a supreme effort and struggle on your part, the church will be useless, and your sermons will be useless, and your laymen will be useless.

One day I was at St. Louis. I attended a temperance meeting there. A man rose at the end to propose a vote of thanks to me—and he said: 'I have spent my life in St. Louis; I have seen it ravaged by fire; I have seen it devastated by pestilence; I have seen it ruined with civil war, but all the ravages of fire, pestilence and civil war together have not come up to the mischief caused by intemperance.' I believe that he spoke without the slightest extravagance."—Exchange.

The total contributions of all the churches in America for causes does not exceed $77,000,000. For intoxicating drinks, on the other hand, we spend $600,000,000 every year! For tobacco $80,000,000! For ladies' foreign dress goods about $125,000,000! New York city alone spends for theatre-going and other amusements, three times as much as our whole country gives for foreign missions. The kid gloves it imports alone costs ten times as much. The ladies of America actually spend more for artificial flowers every year than do all the churches for the gospel. How does this seem to the conscience? For Christ $77,000,000, for vanity, liquor, and tobacco, $1,105,000,000.—Ex.

INTERESTING PARAGRAPHS.

WHICH SHALL IT BE?

I am sadly conscious that thousands of mothers are so overburdened that the actual demands of life, from day to day, consume all their time and strength. But, "of two evils choose the least;" and which would you call the least, an unpolished stone or an untaught boy? Dirty windows, or a child whose confidence you have failed to gain? Cobwebs in the corner, or a son over whose soul a crust has formed so strong that you despair of melting it with your hot tears and your fervent prayers?

I have seen a woman who was absolutely ignorant of her children's habit of thought, who never felt that she could spare a half hour to read or talk with them. I have seen this woman spend ten minutes in ironing a sheet—there were six in the washing—one hour in fluting the ruffles and arranging the puffs of her little girl's "sweet white suit;" thirty minutes in polishing tins which were already bright and clean; forty minutes in frosting and decorating a cake for tea, because "company" was expected.

When the mother, a good orthodox Christian, shall appear before the great white throne to be judged for the "deeds done in the body," and to give in her report of the Master's treasures placed in her care, there will be questions and answers like these: "Where are the boys and girls I gave thee?" "Lord, I was busied in keeping my house clean and in order, and my children wandered away!" "Where wert thou while thy sons and thy daughters were learning lessons of dishonesty, malice, and impurity?" "Lord, I was polishing furniture and ruffling dresses and making beautiful rugs!" "What hast thou to show for thy life-work?" "The tidiest house, Lord, and the best starching and ironing in all our neighborhood!"

Oh! these children! these children! The restless, eager boys and girls whom we love more than our own lives! Shall we devote our time and strength to that which perisheth, while the rich garden of our child's soul lies neglected, with foul weeds choking out all worthy and beautiful growths? Shall we exalt the incidentals of life to the rank of a purpose, to the shutting out of that work whose results reach beyond the stars?

Fleeting, O mother! are the days of childhood; and speckless windows, snowy linen, the consciousness that everything about the house is faultlessly bright and clean, will be poor comfort in that day wherein we shall discover that our poor boy's feet have chosen the path that shall take him out of the way to all eternity.—Signs of the Times.

CONSECRATION.

Submission is a strong word; consecration still stronger. Surrender is a cessation of resistance; consecration is a transfer of all we have and are to Christ for active service. It conveys person and property, talents and opportunities, and accepts of Christ as leader, manager, friend and Saviour, [illegible] in all the minutiæ of life. There are degrees of consecration, and even entire consecration is progressive, for new interests, cares, burdens, capacities, and opportunities await disposal, and Christ is revealed in new relations, making new demands, offering new privileges, and these await trustful acceptance, so that ever and anon the proposition to devote all to Christ and receive all from Christ, claims fresh attention. Many commit spiritual interests to his care, and worry on alone with temporal concerns; they trust him to save their souls, but hesitate to ask him to [illegible] their business; [illegible] They accept Christ as a Saviour, but fail to apprehend him as a brother, companion, present, constant friend. Consecration is not absolutely perfect until the fulness of our Lord is received, and the fulness of life is devoted to him, for every relation of Christ calls for new devotion from us. The consecration must be as broad as the apprehension, covering the fulness of Christ and the fulness of man.—Times of Refreshing.

Card Playing.—That accomplished writer, the late Dr. Holland, of Springfield, Mass., said: "I have all my days had a card-playing community open to my observation, and I am yet to be made to believe that that which is the universal resort of the starved in soul and intellect, which has never in any way linked to itself tender, elevating, or beautiful associations—the tendency of which is, to unduly absorb the attention from more weighty matters—can recommend itself to the favor of Christ's disciples. The presence of culture and genius may embellish, but it can never dignify it. "I have at this moment," said Dr. Holland, "ringing in my ears the dying injunction of my father's early friend, 'Keep your son from cards. Over them I have murdered time and lost heaven.'" Fathers and mothers, keep your sons from cards in the home circle. What must a good angel think of a mother at the prayer-meeting asking prayers for the conversion of her son whom she allowed to remain at home playing cards for "pastime?"—M. P. Gaddis.

The Bible.—Charles Jacobs, Esq., of Chicago, illustrates the uselessness of the efforts made by unbelievers to destroy the authority of the Bible, by an incident of an Irishman building a wall in a marshy place. On being warned of the danger of its falling, "Oh!" he replied, "I've thought of that, and it is five feet high and six feet wide, so if it upsets it will be a foot higher than it was before." So with the Bible; every new attack made upon it but established its strength as a divine revelation. Mr. Jacobs also said that the great need of the church now is more men. The boys are following their fathers and elder brothers away from the Sabbath School and prayer services of the church. There is a work that women cannot do. There is too much of a spirit of throwing church duties upon them, and feeling that it is all right if the sisters are at their post.—Sel.

"Probably there is no greater need of the hour than that our pastors should impress upon the people of their charges, and especially upon those who have the responsibility of a household, the high and sacred obligation of training their children and youth in the ways of the Lord. This obligation can never be delegated to Sunday-School teachers. God has laid it upon parents, and all the instincts of nature should but serve to strengthen the obligation. It can never be rightfully discharged except by the parents themselves. And the proper place, the heaven-appointed place, is the home circle, the household altar, the family fireside. Nothing in this world can take the place of the household influence when that influence begins early, and is exerted on Christian principles. What the church needs and what all her children need, is true religion in all [illegible] in the progress of her families.—Interior.

Giving begets Loving.—Interest in any thing is quickened by sacrifice for that thing. The giving to a good cause, increases love for that cause, or creates a certain affection for it where none existed before. Father Chidlaw, of Ohio, tells of a woman in his field who declined to give money for a bell for her neighborhood church, because she never liked the sound of bells, and she was glad to be beyond their reach. At last, however, she was over-persuaded and gave five dollars, under protest. When the bell was in place, and sounded out its ringing notes, some one asked this woman what she thought of it. "Well, I've always said that I never liked bells," she replied, "but I confess that's the sweetest sounding bell I ever heard." "Ah!" says Father Chidlaw, "she heard her five dollars jingle when that bell rang. That was why its sound was so sweet to her."—Sel.

How to kill a Prayer Meeting.—Forget all about it until the hour arrives. Come ten minutes late, and sit near the door. Drag the music; slow, painfully slow singing is so appropriate for a dead prayer meeting. When the meeting has begun, wait for others to speak and pray. When you do take part, occupy about twenty minutes. Be sure and bewail the low spiritual condition of the church. When the meeting closes, go out as from a funeral; you can speak with your brethren or the stranger at some other time and place. If you mention the meeting during the week, tell how dull it was. If this does not kill the prayer meeting, stay away entirely for six months or a year.—Sel.

None but those who are conscious of guilt will seek to be forgiven. It is needful, therefore, to preach the law as well as the gospel to show the need of repentance in connection with the doctrine of pardon. "When we preach forgiveness of sin," said an old Reformer, "without repentance, it will come to pass that the people will believe that they have already obtained forgiveness of sins, and thereby become secure and careless. There is truth in this observation, since it is a very easy thing for men with slumbering consciences to fancy that Heaven forgives them as easily as they forgive themselves.

The way to go through difficulties is the same as when we walk through a fog. When we enter all is dark and mist before us, and as we advance we are completely enveloped by the hazy, cheerless cloud. [illegible] enough to show the path a few yards before us, it is enough. On we go, straight through, and we have our reward in the end. So it is with the Christian.—Ex.

When Christians adorn their profession by a godly life, abound in the fruits of holy living, impart their joy, manifest the power of grace to subdue sin and sanctify character—this is more than eloquence; [illegible] preaching as better practicing.—Sel.

REVIVE THY WORK.

BY O. L. RICE.

O Lord, have mercy on us now,
As at thy feet we humbly bow;
Revive thy work in these cold hearts,
And give that seal thy grace imparts.

Help us in every word and thought
To honor thee as thou hast taught;
And be as lights that men may see
That we do know and walk with thee.

Lord, make us wise, that we may win
Some precious souls now lost in sin;
That they may now with us rejoice,
To hear and know thy pardoning voice.

May we by faith this very hour
Obtain thy saving, keeping power;
No longer bound by cords of sin,
But washed all white and pure within.

We come to thee without a doubt,
For thou in no wise wilt cast out
The needy soul who comes to thee,
And groans from bondage to be free.

None ever sought thy grace in vain,
Who would thy saving power obtain,
For thou art ready to impart
Thy blessings to the humble heart.

RETROSPECTION, EXAMINATION, ETC.

CONTINUATION OF WM. MILLER'S EXPERIENCE AND VIEWS OF PROPHECY.

BY L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

One of the strongest implements formerly hurled against Adventism was, that the person who embraced it (especially if he was a minister) was a monomaniac. Mr. Miller had this term applied to him by a physician in his neighborhood; and being one day called to visit a sick child, on the occasion Mr. Miller sat quite mute in one corner, and the physician asked what ailed him. "Well, I hardly know, doctor; I want you to see what does, and prescribe for me." The doctor being unable to decide, again inquired of Mr. M. what he supposed was his disease? "Well," said Mr. M., "I don't know but I am a monomaniac; and I want you to examine me, and see if I am; and, if so, cure me. Can you tell when a man is a monomaniac?" The doctor blushed—"Why," said the doctor, "a monamaniac is rational on all subjects but one; and, when you touch that particular subject, he will become raving." "Well," said Mr. M., "I insist upon it that you see whether I am in reality a monomaniac; and, if I am, you shall prescribe for and cure me. You shall, therefore, sit down with me two hours, while I present the subject of the advent to you, and, if I am a monomaniac, by that time you will discover it."

The doctor, though somewhat disconcerted, reluctantly consented. So Mr. Miller opened the Bible and read from the 8th of Daniel. As he read the description of those beasts and horses, he inquired what they denoted. The doctor had read Newton, and with him applied them to Persia, Greece and Rome, as also did Mr. M. Then he inquired of the doctor the period of time those empires were to last. "2300 days." "What!" said Mr. M., could those great empires cover only 2300 literal days?" "Why," said the doctor, "those days are years, according to all commentators; and those kingdoms are to continue 2300 years." At Mr. Miller's request, the doctor read and explained the 2nd and 7th of Daniel, and applied them as did Mr. M., who then asked the doctor if he knew where the 2300 days would end? He said he did not, as he could not tell where they commenced. He then read at Mr. M.'s request the 9th chap. of Daniel to the 21st verse, to where Daniel saw "the man Gabriel," whom also he had previously "seen in the vision." "In what vision?" asked Mr. M. "Why," said the doctor, "in the 8th of Daniel." "'Wherefore understand the matter and consider the vision.' He had now come to make him understand the vision, had he?" "Yes," said the doctor. "Well, seventy weeks are determined; what are the seventy weeks a part of?" "Of the 2300 days." "Then do they begin with the 2300 days?" "Yes," said the doctor. "When did they end?" "In A. D. 33." "Then how far would the 2300 extend after 33?" Taking 490 from 2300, the doctor replied, "1810; why, that is past," said he. "But," said Mr. M., "there were 1810 from 33; in what year would that come?" The doctor then saw those two periods should be added together, and replied, "1843."

This unexpected result very much disturbed him, and he left Mr. M.'s house under great excitement; but he called again the next day in great mental agony, and said to Mr. Miller, "I am going to hell. I have not slept a wink since I was here yesterday. I have looked at the question in every light, and the vision must terminate about A. D. 1843; and I am unprepared, and must go to hell." Mr. Miller gave him solace by pointing him to Christ, the Ark of safety, and in about a week he found peace to his troubled spirit, and went on his way rejoicing, as great a monomaniac as Mr. Miller. He said afterwards, that till he made the figures 1843, he had no thought of the result to which he arrived.

[Neither A. D. 33 nor 1843 could sustain any proper relation to the ending of the "seventy weeks" of Dan. 9: 24, or the "2300 days" of Dan. 8: 14; because Gabriel referred to no such event as the death of Christ, to end those seventy weeks. The event that Gabriel specified in Dan. 9: 25, as sustaining any specific relation to that period of time, was the ruin of the city and nation of the Jews. When that event occurred, the seventy weeks ended, and 1810 years from that event will end the 2300 years. 1843–4 passed; and should 1884 pass, and we still remain in mortality, it will not affect the validity of the connection between the "seventy weeks" and the "2300 days." All that can be affected in such case would be the legitimacy of the date, assigned by chronologers, for the ruin of the Jewish state and nation.]

In giving an account of Mr. Miller's labors at Three Rivers, Mass., June, 1842, a member of the Baptist church writes to the Christian Reflector as follows: "Dear Bro. Graves:—It is with gratitude to God that I am able to turn aside from the joyful scenes around me, to inform the friends in Zion what God has wrought for us. Rev. William Miller, on the 16th of June last, commenced a course of lectures on the Second Advent of Christ to this world in 1843. The lectures were delivered in our meeting-house, which, however, would hold but a small part of the audience, it being estimated at five thousand; and notwithstanding prepossessions, prejudices, and the slanderous reports circulated about this man of God, the people gave attention to the word spoken, and seemed determined to examine the Scriptures to see if these things were so; and a deep solemnity pervaded the vast assembly. The children of God were soon aroused to a sense of their duty; sinners were seen weeping, and heard to say, 'Pray for me!' The number increased, until one hundred in an evening prayer-meeting were seen to arise, to be remembered in the prayers of saints. Soon converts began to tell us what the Lord had done for them. Some Deists, some Universalists, and many of the thoughtless, of both the middle-aged and the youthful part of the community, have been brought to submit their hearts to God, and are now waiting for and hasting to the coming of the day of God. As to the character of the work, let me say, I have never seen a more thorough conviction of the total depravity of the heart, and the utter helplessness of the sinner; and that, if saved, it must be by the sovereign grace of God, than has been manifest in all that have given a relation of their experience."

The following gives a brief sample of Mr. Miller's poetic discourse:

"When this dark orb shall from its ashes rise,
And the new heavens descending from the skies,
The bride, adorned in robes of righteousness,
Shall with the Bridegroom enter into rest.
Then, O my soul, shall you permitted view
The word fulfilled: 'created all things new,'
And all be banished—trials, sins and fears,
To live and reign with Christ a thousand years.
The beloved city, filled with boys and men,
Will constitute the New Jerusalem.
And there, as priests of God, with Christ to dwell,
While satan and his hosts are chained in hell."

THOUGHTS ON THE 8TH PSALM.

BY A. ROSS.

This psalm, brief as it is, spans the whole period of God's work, from the beginning of the world down through the ministrations of grace and mercy, to the final re-creation and "restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began." It will be noticed the first and last verses read alike. The first verse embodies the grand sentiment of the angelic anthem chanted at creation's birth, "when the morning stars sung," and "the sons of God shouted." The last verse is the echo of the first, and introduces us to a state of things to be experienced when He that sitteth on the throne shall make all things new, and the "ten thousand times ten thousand and thousands of thousands" of saints and angels will be heard, "saying with a loud voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing. And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever."

The opening expression, "O Lord," is that of adoration and worship. The second, "our Lord," is an acknowledgment of the divine sovereignty. "How excellent is thy name in all the earth," indicates a time when every living thing and being on the earth, by some means, poured forth glad acknowledgments of the grandeur and goodness of the great Creator "who didst set thy glory above the heavens." We are taught by this that the place of God's throne is in the heavens, and he ruleth over all.

In these few words is told the story of the first creation, and state of purity which then reigned before the blighting effects of sin were realized. But what a change is pictured before the eye of our imagination on the reading of the second verse—"Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast thou ordained strength, because of thine enemies, that thou mightest still the enemy and the avenger." How happened it that where so short a time previous "truth sprang out of the earth, and righteousness looked down from heaven," "enemies and the avenger" are found in such hot rage of boasting, that he must be silenced by the interference of the Omnipotent One? Who is the enemy seeking to be avenged on God? I answer, the instigator of sin and evil—satan—the first rebel that ever challenged the divine prerogative, and for which sin he was deposed from his heavenly estate, and all he led in rebellion with him. Having broken their allegiance to the King Eternal, they were not permitted to remain longer within the borders of the celestial domain, but were cast out as prisoners of wrath;—not shorn of their power, but disfranchised of any part to act in the divine administration. In this plight satan with his rebel host found himself at the time this terrestrial system was created, and committed to man as his own dominion, where every opportunity was granted him to establish and perpetuate his loyalty to God. The arch fiend, enraged at the action of the sovereign Lord of the universe in deposing him, sought opportunities of fixing his central base of warfare in the celestial regions, but no place being found for him there, he rushed for the beautiful Eden earth, smiling with divine goodness and teeming with life, and succeeded in capturing it, and has made it his base of operation in carrying forward his satanic opposition. He first led man to break his allegiance to God. "Sin entered the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." And what have sin and satan for a record to show for the last six thousand years? The blood and slaughter of innocents, inundations of violence, cities and empires reared in crime, pride and oppression rampant everywhere, the tears and cries of the widow and fatherless unheeded, the altars of God turned over to Baal, truth martyred in the street of the great city, righteousness and judgment turned back from going forth to plead for justice, men careless of their own interest and haters of God, while "the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now."

The great adversary claims for his own all the wealth and grandeur of the nations of the earth, from the time of Nimrod of old, to the days of the gold-decked and scarlet-clad harlot of the book of Revelation, as she is seen being borne to judgment. He has so perverted the human understanding as to turn the current of thought and genius against the beneficence of God, and provoke divine wrath with man's own inventions. But this dire condition of things shall not always continue. The boast and rage of the old calumniator shall be stilled, when unnumbered thousands from the death slumbers of innocent infancy and childhood, together with the sainted host of all nations and all generations, shall leap from their dusty beds to cry "Hosannah in the highest! Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord!" When, in the great judgment scene to which this beautiful prophecy points, satan shall marshal his host under the symbolic name of Gog and Magog, the number of whom is as the sand of the sea, to lead a forlorn hope, Emanuel will exhibit a much greater throng, like the sand upon the seashore and the stars of heaven combined for multitude, from whose lips shall burst the swelling note of "Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb"; responded to by the angelic throng, "saying, Amen! blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honor, and might, be unto our God forever and ever. Amen."

A prelude to this was acted when the Saviour rode into Jerusalem, when old and young spread their garments in the way, and broke down branches from palm-trees and scattered them in the way, and cried, "Hosanna in the highest!" Conspicuous in the crowd were Jerusalem's little ones, who had not yet crossed the line of accountability and rendered their allegiance to satan. Touched with the inspiration of the Spirit of God, which animated them for the occasion, and not swayed by a wave of public enthusiasm, they broke forth in acclamations of joy in the temple, and cried, "Hosanna to the Son of David!" The Pharisees, as insensible of the privileges of children in the great congregation as they were of the part the Master assigned them in the fulfillment of prophecy and promise, said in disdain, "Hearest thou what these say?" "Jesus saith unto them, Yea, have ye never read, Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise"?

We say this is but a prelude to the grand coronation song rolling up like the sound of many waters from the great multitude, "numberless as the sand on the seashore." Where now is thy coronal, O satan, when the Son of God "shall see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied"? Where thy mighty ones of whose glory thou didst boast in the day of his temptation in the desert? It was then thou didst claim for thine own the riches and glory of all nations; and because Deity stood before thee enshrined in humanity, a nature lower than angels, thou didst insult the Divine Majesty with the offer of a vice royalty for one act of homage, to break if possible the allegiance of the Saviour to the eternal throne, and thus perpetuate thy power on earth through all the coming ages. But thou wast vanquished, O "prince of the power of the air," and this defeat is but a forestallment of that which shall come to thee when every trace of thy long satanic rule shall be purged out of the earth.

Dismissing the thoughts that multiply and expand in reading the second verse of the psalm, let us pass to the contemplation of what we find in the third verse and onward. "When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars which thou hast ordained, what is man that thou art mindful of him, and the Son of man that thou visitest him?" Here are two departments of creative power exemplified, with a double object in view. I. "Thy heavens, the moon and stars which thou hast ordained." II. The creature man. First, the inanimate creation utters its voice and bears witness of the divine omnipotence. Obedient in minutiæ to physical law, they reveal to us the fact of a great Law-enactor. "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handy-work. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge. There is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard. Their line is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world. In them hath he set a tabernacle for the sun, which is as a Bridegroom coming out of his chamber, and rejoicing like a strong man to run a race." Second, The creation of man in the image and after the likeness of God, clearly demonstrates the divine intention of bringing many sons unto glory through the operation and development of a moral government on this earth of ours. Hence, God in his great work adapts means to ends. If the design is, through man, to place on exhibition before the eye of this universe a moral government, we may expect for man a nature suited to the accomplishment of the object in view; consequently we find in every sane person a self-consciousness of rationality and moral responsibility. It is that over which he prides himself most; and you cannot heap greater insult upon a man than to call him imbecile, or tell him he is not held responsible for his conduct.

"What is man?" Is this question intended to exhibit man's insignificance by a comparison of him, in his corporeal existence, with the immensity of the physical universe? Some would seem to entertain such a frail thought; but the mind of the Holy Spirit is wider in its range than that. The question relates to man as a rational soul—a morally accountable being under government, at whose hand something is required, and upon whose chosen course of conduct an eternal destiny of life or death is hinged.

We may be allowed to amplify the question as follows: (1) What is man in his first creation? (2) What is man since the fall and the introduction of sin? (3) What is man in his redeemed state? The question involves simply the relation he sustains to things visible and invisible, and is answered in part in the extended statement, "Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels; thou hast crowned him with glory and honor. Thou madest him to have dominion over the work of thy hands." "A little lower than the angels" relates to his corporeal nature. The same is said of our Saviour's fleshly existence: "But we see Jesus, made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death." "Thou hast crowned him with glory and honor," refers to that which was delegated to man as a rational, responsible soul. "Dominion over the works of thy hands," introduces to us the true idea of the sphere or realm of his dominion and power. "All things put under his feet," refers to a lower order of created intelligences to subserve man's interest and contribute to his happiness. "All sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field, the fowls of the air, and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the sea."

Loyalty to man on the part of all these intelligent creatures was voluntary, not coercive, until man had broken his allegiance to God. Then all, over which he had been crowned lord and ruler, revolted; no doubt for a rebuke to him, and a perpetual reminder of his own violated obligations to his God. It seems that man's entire experience in himself, and with the creatures committed to his care, is intended to teach him that rebellion and sin have swept over the earth, and cannot go unpunished. All the unrest and disquietude in the irrational department, and every pang experienced from helpless, innocent infancy to ripe old age, is a reminder that sin has come and for a long time dwelt with us, with its attendant sufferings. [illegible] but the sufferings of the present, incorporated in various form into the experience of every child of mortality, and intended no doubt for reformatory discipline, is premonitory of the retribution to be endured by the incorrigible sinner, when mercy's work shall be consummated. Hence, all we see and hear and feel in this vast world of suffering is but the warning cry of the Judge of all the earth to "flee the wrath to come." If suffering during the progressive stages of God's moral government since the fall is needful for admonition, correction and reformation, what may we conclude will be the retributive sufferings of those who have despised correction and refused reformation, when placed under the ban of eternal condemnation? But the last great judgment transaction will rid the earth of satan, sin and sinners; they will go to the place prepared for them. And when He who sitteth on the throne shall make all things new; and when we shall see the new creation rise wherein the righteous alone shall dwell, it is then the glad anthem will ring out from the great multitude of the redeemed host of God, and the distant spheres will catch the flying joy—"O Lord, our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth!"

THE GREAT DAY OF GOD.

BY EUGENE HOAR.

The events which are occurring in the world at the present time may be looked upon by the student of prophecy with great and thrilling interest. They are the tokens to him of the dawning of a bright day, and the realization of a grand hope, a hope which enables him to traverse life's burning sands and thorny pathway in the face of the cold winds of adversity with ever-increasing courage and strength. And while the earth rocks and surges and trembles in the throes of coming dissolution with the sea and the waves thereof roaring, and "men's hearts failing them with fear, in looking for those things which are coming upon the earth;" (Luke 31: 29), he lifts up his head and rejoices, for he knows that his Lord is just at the door, and with him the glorious crown of rejoicing which fadeth not away.

Yes, we live in eventful times. The end of all things is at hand. God is about to arise and shake terribly the earth. The storm cloud is gathering along the horizon, bearing upon its dark and massive front the "woe, woe, woe, to the inhabitants of the earth." Truly we live in troublous times; and the outlook for the future is anything but promising for the so-called "peaceable introduction of millennial glory," "which is to fill the earth with the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters fill the sea." No! rather does it promise to usher in that blessed reign with the most stupendous and fearful judgments. The cup of man's wickedness is full to overflowing. Soon will he have to drink to the dregs that which he hath prepared for himself. And oh, what a draught! For thus saith the Lord God of Israel unto me, "Take the wine-cup of this fury at my hand, and cause all the nations to whom I send thee to drink it. And they shall drink, and be moved, and be mad, because of the sword that I will send among them; then took I the cup at the Lord's hand, and made all the nations to drink unto whom the Lord hath sent me. Therefore, thou shalt say unto them, thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel. Drink ye and be drunken, and spew, and fall, and rise no more; because of the sword which I will send among you."

We may learn that for which this day of preparation is appointed by reading the first chapter of this prophet. That the sublime scenes of the second advent and the day of God are there portrayed, I think few will be disposed to deny. The day of God's preparation is, therefore, for this very event. Now it is evident that the "hour of God's judgment cannot precede "the day of God's preparation" for the judgment. Hence the day of God's preparation is the time for the warning respecting the judgment, and the associated proclamation to the inhabitants of the earth. And how strikingly have we seen which marks the day of God's preparation fulfilled before our eyes! Since the "time of the end" commenced, the prophecies have been fulfilled relative to the judgment. Men have "run to and fro," and knowledge has been increased; chariots running like the lightnings have made their appearance in every part of the civilized world. This shows us that we are in the day of God's preparation.

The storm-cloud of wrath is gathering in awful power. Truly the signs are ominous and portentous predictions of the second advent of Christ. These are perilous times, filled with calamity to all nations and peoples. Unusual events of a startling nature are taking place in all quarters of the globe, and the world is in that condition of unrest, disquietness and uneasiness, which indicate the working of a multitude of antagonistic elements, which will, sooner or later, by their action, heave upon mankind mountains of woe. The air is filled with rumor and foreboding of coming evil, and men's hearts are already failing them for fear, because of the things that are coming on the earth.

Cheer up, brother! Christ is soon coming. We shall soon see the King in his beauty coming in the clouds of heaven, and if faithful shall be made like him. Rejoice greatly; Jesus is soon coming. He will soon appear, "and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him." Let us be ready to meet him, that when he comes he will say unto us, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Waterloo.

THE FOOTSTEPS OF TIME, AND THE TESTIMONY OF THE WORD OF GOD.

BY ARTHUR F. MOORE.

"All facts known to us beyond the narrow circle of our own experience, must be learned from testimony. Testimony may be either oral, or recorded in historical writings, monuments, mementoes and tokens. The canons for distinguishing true testimony from false, and genuine from spurious, authentic from fictitious history, are manifold and easily accessible." So says Prof. Atwater, of the College of New Jersey. Nothing is more self-evident than that the most of the facts in which we place implicit confidene are obtained outside of our own experience or observation. Hence we must rely mostly on the testimony of others for our knowledge, and there is necessity for some rule by which to determine the trustworthiness of these sources of information.

Again I will quote, and this time from George Rawlinson M. A.; in the first place because he says just what is necessary to be said here, and secondly because he is supposed to be better authority than the writer for what he says in the quotation. He says: These laws (of the modern historical criticism, so far as they seem to be established) appear to me to be sound; and their natural and real bearing is to increase instead of diminishing the weight of the Christian evidences." But the learned Englishman differs from Prof. Atwater in the idea that they are easily accessible; and it would seem that he was right, for if they had been at hand and so easy of access, they would have formed a part of the common education of the people, inasmuch as there has been great inquiry of late on this very subject: viz., How shall we know what is reliable testimony in matters of history, especially in the Bible? Indeed, Mr. Rawlinson continues thus: "I am not aware that the laws in question have ever been distinctly laid down in a compendious, or in even an abstract form. They are assumed throughout the writings of our best historians, but they are involved in their criticisms rather than directly posited on their principles. I believe, however, that I shall not misrepresent them if I say, that, viewed on their positive side, they consist chiefly of the four following canons" (rules).

1. "When the record which we possess of an event is the writing of a contemporary, supposing that he is a credible witness, and had means of observing the fact to which he testifies, the fact is to be accepted, as possessing the first or highest degree of historical credibility. Such evidence is on a par with that of witnesses in a court of justice, with the drawback, on the one hand, that the man who gives it is not sworn to speak the truth, and with the advantage, on the other, that he is less likely than the legal witness to have a personal interest in the matter concerning which he testifies.

2. When the event recorded is one which the writer may be reasonably supposed to have obtained directly from those who witnessed it, we should accept it as probably true, unless it be in itself very improbable. Such evidence posses the second degree of credibility.

3. When the event recorded is removed considerably from the age of the recorder of it, and there is no reason to believe that he obtained it from a contemporary writing, but the probable source of his information was oral tradition; still, if the event be one of great importance and of public notoriety, if it affected the national life or prosperity,—especially if it be of a nature to have been at once commemorated by the establishment of any rite or practice,—then it has a claim to belief as probably true, at least in its general outline. This, however, is the third, and a comparatively low degree of historical credibility.

4. When the traditions of one race, which if unsupported, would have had but small claim to attention, and none to belief, are corroborated by the traditions of another, especially if a distant or hostile race, the event which has this double testimony obtains a high amount of probability, and, if not very unlikely in itself, thoroughly deserves acceptance. The degree of historical credibility in this case is not exactly commensurable with that in the others, since a new and distinct ground of likelihood comes into play. It may be as strong as the highest, and it may be almost as weak as the lowest, though this is not often the case in fact. In a general way we may say that the weight of this kind of evidence exceeds that which has been called the third degree of historical probability, and nearly approaches to the second." (George Rawlinson, M. D., late Fellow and Tutor of Exeter College, England; Editor of 'The History of Herodotus,' author of 'The Historical Evidences of the Truth of the Scripture Records,' etc.) Much more might be quoted with much profit from the above author if an exhaustive essay on historical criticism was intended, but the above is enough for the purpose intended at present, and is taken from his lectures delivered in 1859 before the University of Oxford, England.

So much for method and groundwork. Now what is the testimony of the most High God as to the march of time. Says one, "That is a mystery, sealed, and with it we have no business." Let us make a little examination of the book commonly reported to be sealed. The book of Daniel claims to be written by an eyewitness of the events related. "I, Daniel, am the man who saw,—to me the vision appeared." He writes prophecy and history, and was a participator in the scenes which transpired. Hence, if his character is good, that is if he did not lie or write a spurious, fictitious work, he is entitled to the highest rank of credibility, according to our first law of criticism. But his character must be held to be good until proved otherwise by the testimony of men, or evidence contained in his writings, and there is no evidence against him unless in his own writings.

Porphyry, A. D. 270, claimed that from its place in the Jewish Canon, between Esther and Ezra, it was written after the age of prophecy, and in the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, and hence was spurious. But it was written partly in Hebrew and partly in Chaldee, "which peculiarity may fairly be said to fix its date to the time of the Captivity" in Chaldea. It was translated into Greek in the reign of Ptolemy Philadelphus, more than seventy years before the accession of Antiochus Epiphanes. This rests on the authority of Aristeas, Philo, Justin Martyr (an eminent father in in the church), and Josephus and Epiphianus. Antiochus began to reign B. C. 175—Jesus the son of Sirach, "who must have written" B. C. 180, at least, refers to Daniel and quotes him, and Josephus says the "prophecies of Daniel were shown to Alexander the Great in the year B. C. 332, and inclined him to treat the Jews with special favor. Nearly all the arguments against the book of Daniel, it has been said, are based on the assumption that a miracle is an impossibility, but they are favorite arguments with the rationalists of Germany, from whom the "Bob Ingersols" of this country obtain the most of their religious stock in trade; although it can never be more than an assumption that miracles cannot be, for by what laws, chemical, mathematical or physical, shall we prove and and know that such laws cannot be set aside by other laws of which we do not know the nature. Indeed, we do see such laws set aside by others which we do understand, and if we find the great and minutely far-reaching prophecies of which Daniel had such grotesque visions, to be minutely fulfilled adown the vast highway of time, we may credit him with visions supernatural, and his character is not to be lightly impeached even upon the subject of miracles,—and prophecy—is a miracle.

Bearing in mind then the evidence that he must have written 180 to 332 years before Christ, and that he claims to have written at a period which, according to common chronology was 538 years before Christ, let us take up for a moment one item of his writings; the prophecy in the eleventh and twelfth chapters. "Behold, there shall stand up yet three kings in Persia, acknowledged to be Cambyses, Smerdis and Darius Hystaspes,—called by Ezra, Ahasuerus, Artaxerxes, and Darius. The true Persians worshiped the One Supreme Being under the name of the Great God Ormasd; hence when Cyrus found the Jews captives at Babylon, believing in the same God under the name of Jehovah, and possessing his lively oracles, he sent them home to build their temple and enjoy their religion. Isaiah prophesied of him as God's shepherd in the last verse of the 44th chapter, and in the 45th God claims to have raised him up in righteousness. All the Persian kings confirmed the Jews in their restoration except Artaxerxes, or Smerdis, the usurper, who was a magician, or believer in the religion of Sorcery; and he, according to Ezra 4: 7–24, calumniated them, and stopped their building, but under Darius, who was of the old stock, and a worshiper of God, the temple was finished.

"The fourth shall be far richer than they all," and was Xerxes the Great, no doubt the Ahasuerus of the book of Esther, eminently rich, proud and wilful. "He shall stir up all against the realm of Grecia," which Xerxes did, and came against that country with vast hordes from all parts, and numbering over five millions; but defeated at the battle of Salamis, he fled in haste to his own dominions. "And a mighty king shall stand up," who is admitted on all hands to have been Alexander the Great. His kingdom was broken, though he had "great dominion," and ruled over most of the world then known; and it was divided into four parts, none of "his posterity," however," getting a share. His four generals divided the territory among themselves. Ptolemy took Egypt, Lybia, Arabia and Palestine; Cassander took Macedonia and Greece; Lysimachus took Bithynia and Thrace; and Seleucus reigned over the remaining territories in Asia as far as the river Indus, which was called the kingdom of Syria. So much for the first four verses of this chapter. Please take your Bible and look the matter up.

The fifth to the twentieth verses give a prophecy of the mutual struggles, events and deceitful diplomacies of the kings of the North and South, or the kings of those divisions of Alexander's broken empire which lie respectively north and south of that land of all lands to the Jew, Palestine, according to the old commentators, such as Bagster, Jerome, Prideaux, Bishop Newton, etc. And, indeed, Seleucus in Syria reigned over the northern grand division of Alexander's empire, and Ptolemy in Egypt over the southern one, as any one can see by reference to a map of those times. Smith's Dictionary of the Bible gives the reigns of these kings as detailed in this prophecy under the heads Seleucus and Antiochus for Syria, and the Ptolemies and Cleopatras, etc., of Egypt,—and although some of the old commentators continue the wars and schemes of Syria and Egypt through the whole chapter, yet it is very evident that we come in contact with Rome as monarch of the world in verse twentieth, and Augustus Cæsar the first emperor; for it was during his reign that all the world was to be taxed, at the time of the birth of our Lord. Augustus was crafty, and his own daughter was so dissolute that he was obliged to banish her; but his kingdom was at the height of its glory, and from thence was at a decline. He was "destroyed neither in anger nor in battle," but died of dysentery caused by poison, it is said.

"I AM COMING. BE READY."

BY L. D. HARRINGTON.

"The Mahdi's emissaries are busy throughout the whole of Egypt. They go from village to village bearing the simple message: 'I AM COMING. BE READY.' This passes on from mouth to mouth, and the situation is becoming serious."—Extract from daily paper Feb. 26.

The above quotation from this morning's paper (Feb. 26th) is both interesting and suggestive. It is not the purpose of this article to canvass the Egyptian situation, or to attempt to foretell the hidden future, but rather to draw therefrom a practical lesson.

The truth is always counterfeited. Satan is the arch counterfeiter. One of his devices is to forestall and to pervert the truth as it is in Jesus by a counterfeit. Now, while the rallying notes of preparation for the True Prophet are ringing and reverberating, the enemy puts into the mouth of the (or of a) false prophet and his emissaries the cry, "I am coming; be ready." This is producing, at the present time, a wonderful influence over the unenlightened, fanatical Mussaelmen, and they are responding. Satan is the "strong man armed." Christ is the "stronger than the strong man armed." The false prophet must decrease, when his time comes, when his part in the world's history is fulfilled. Our True Prophet must increase. He is coming to reign as King, to fill the whole earth with the glory of God as the waters cover the sea.

Now, in the "time of his preparation," while the message from our True Prophet and soon coming King is being heralded by his messengers, who go before his face to prepare his way, the notes of preparation are ringing out loud and clear, "Behold, I come quickly." "Be ye, therefore, ready." His ministers go from place to place bearing his message, and his witnesses are busy giving the same testimony. Old men and young men, matrons, maidens and children pass along this watchword, and the prophetical situation is becoming more and more thrilling.

If, then, the agents of darkness are thus active, let us who are of the day, the children of light, be earnest, instant in season and out of season, proclaiming the glad tidings, "Lo, he cometh!" Let us each and all, who look for his second coming and love his appearing, be busy bearing the welcome message from him—"Behold I come; be ye ready." Let us watch the drying up of the symbolic Euphrates, or decadence of the Turkish power, which must come whatever the outcome of the false prophet El Mahdi's career in the Turkish dominions may be. Let us watch all the signs of the times, and wait for Him who has sent his church this inspiring word, "Surely I come quickly." Let us respond, "Amen; even so, come, Lord Jesus." Let us listen to the voice of the Holy Spirit in our hearts, the voice of our Lord, "I will come again, and receive you unto myself: that where I am, there ye may be also." John 14: 3.

"Behold, I quickly come—with love, and bliss, and light,
I come to take thee home, where faith is lost in sight.
"Behold, I quickly come"—I'm coming soon for thee,
Be holy, pure and clean. Oh, watch and wait for me.
"Behold, I quickly come"—I hear thy welcome voice;
My heart responsive sings; I now rejoice, rejoice!
"Behold, I quickly come"—all joy and gladness then!
"Yes, come!" All hail to thee, oh, Lord, Amen, amen!

No soul was ever lost because its fresh beginnings broke down; but thousands of souls have been lost because they would not make fresh beginnings.—F. W. Faber.

DOCTRINAL ARTICLES.—No. 5.

THE SECOND ADVENT PERSONAL AND VISIBLE.

We have already shown that the second coming of Christ is as specifically revealed in the Old Testament as in the New Testament; to which we wish now to add that the language applied by the Old Testament writers to the second coming is as literalistic as that applied to the first coming; and, therefore, the discrimination which accepts the Old Testament predictions of the first advent in their literal sense, but spiritualizes the predictions which relate to the second advent, does violence to the recognized laws of language, and subjects the Sacred Scriptures to a license of interpretation fatal to the integrity of their inspired significance. Let us illustrate by a passage from Job: "For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me." Job 19: 25–27.

Will any deny that Job's declaration—"For I know that my Redeemer liveth," was true in the really personal sense? Can Job's words imply less than the existence of a personal Redeemer? This being admitted, by what law of language can the concluding words of the sentence—"And that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth," be spiritualized? By the phrase "latter day," Job must have meant the time of Christ's second advent, for he associates it with the period of his own resurrection when in his "flesh" he shall "see God"; and the resurrection is everywhere in the Scriptures represented as occurring at the second advent.

With this single illustration out of many that might be adduced from the Old Testament scriptures, let us turn our attention to the New Testament.

To the disciples, sorrow-stricken in view of his departure, the Saviour said: "And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." John 14: 3. Now that Jesus went away personally and literally none will deny; that is a simple historic fact. Who can point out any law of language by which Jesus can be made to speak literally when he says, "If I go away," but figuratively when, in the same breath, and under precisely the same circumstances, he says, "I will come again"? Such an interpretation seems to us an inexcusable tampering with the Inspired Record.

And in Luke 12: 43, our Lord, in contrasting the conduct of the good and evil servant, says: "Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing." This text implies the personal appearing and presence of the Master to reckon with his servants when their work was finished, and not any spiritual blessing while discharging their trusts.

St. Paul surely expected a personal coming to occur subsequently to his own time. To the Thessalonian church he says: "For they themselves shew of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God; and to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come." 1 Thess. 1: 10. The Thessalonians had already turned from idols and were serving the living God, and were waiting for the Son of God from heaven; therefore they must have been waiting for a personal and not a spiritual coming.

And again in 2 Thess. 1: 6–10 the apostle employs language that can hardly be misunderstood by any careful reader who really desires to know the truth touching this all-important doctrine. He says: "Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them which trouble you; and to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe."

God has not yet "recompensed tribulation" to those who trouble his church. The blood of the martyrs still cries for avenging judgment against Nero, against the bloody Inquisition, against Rome, against the beast and the false prophet, against all who have crimsoned their hands in the blood of saints. The wicked have not yet been "punished with everlasting destruction," nor has the church been "recompensed" with "rest." But all this waits to be fulfilled "when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels," and "when he shall come to be glorified in his saints," [illegible] the "tribulation" [illegible] to the troublers of God's people must be figurative and not real. Shall we, in order to get rid of the doctrine of Christ's second personal coming, reduce God's punishment of all the wicked of the ages to a figure of speech? Into what appalling inconsistencies have modern interpreters been betrayed in their efforts to expunge from God's Word the glorious promise of our Lord's second personal advent, which is the last hope of the church.

How perfectly in accord with St. Paul's conception are the revelations given to St. John. Hear his sublime exclamation: "Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen." Rev. 1: 7. If Christ's second coming is to be impersonal and invisible, how can "every eye see him"? If his coming is only figurative, what occasion will there be for "all the kindreds of the earth to wail because of him"? Little will "they also which pierced him" care for an allegorical coming of Christ, which they cannot see, and therefore cannot know. Slight will be the "wailing" if the awful judgment scenes connected with the second advent, throughout the Scriptures, shall end in a figure of rhetoric. Is it not time for theological trifling with the solemn statements of Christ and all apostles to cease?

Another scripture occurs to us which so explicitly and forcibly proves the second coming of our Lord to be personal, that we beg to urge it upon the reader's special attention. "For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words." 1 Thess. 4: 15–18.

The great apostle, in this text, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, predicts a descent of the Lord himself from heaven which will produce the resurrection of the dead. This cannot be a spiritual resurrection at conversion, for at the same time the living saints are to be translated. And the divine affirmation is that the Lord—not a Roman army, not some great providence, not a judgment, but the LORD, will descend from heaven. The Lord himself; not his Spirit, not his gospel, but HIMSELF. Now if Paul's statement, as positively and explicitly made as it is possible for a proposition to be expressed in human language, is to be taken, then the second coming of Christ must be personal and visible. It would seem incredible that any one of ordinary intelligence should have any doubt as to the meaning of this scripture.

We will trouble the reader with but one text more—a text so conclusive of the manner of Christ's advent as to render any further evidences unnecessary. The saddened disciples were thrilled to ecstacy at the appearing in their midst of the resurrected Jesus. The joy seemed too great to be real. Their poor hearts quivered between gladness and fear, when the Saviour assured them it was no illusion but grand reality, and at once demonstrated to their physical senses that he was not a spirit, but an actual, living, literal, flesh and bones personality. And these were his wonderful words: "And as they thus spake, Jesus himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you. But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit. And he said unto them, Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts? Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have. And when he had thus spoken, he showed them his hands and his feet. And while they yet believed not for joy, and wondered, he said unto them, Have ye here any meat? And they gave him a piece of a broiled fish, and of a honeycomb. And he took it, and did eat before them." Luke 24: 36–43.

As they gazed enraptured on his recognized form—"scarred, but glorious"—and listened to the familiar tones of his inspiring voice, the mists lifted from their bewildered minds, and their happiness was complete. But their bliss was brief, for after repeating his promise to send the Holy Spirit to them, "he led them out as far as Bethany, and he lifted up his hands, and blessed them. And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven." Luke 24: 50–52. And now their fresh-born hopes are dashed to the ground, and, bewildered and saddened more than ever, they stand awe-struck, gazing at the ascending form of their beloved Master and Lord; when suddenly two shining messengers from the heavenly court emerged from amid the shadows and said: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 1: 11. What new and strange delight flooded their minds, and what holy joy swept their saddened hearts, they may tell us some time, amid the splendors of the restitution.

Now let us carefully consider the remarkable scriptures which we have quoted. The Saviour had demonstrated to his disciples that what they saw was no spectral form, but he himself—the very same Jesus, in form and feature, who hung and bled upon the cross, and who was laid by tender hands in Joseph's marble tomb. He subjected his person to the tests of their physical senses—showing them his wounded hands and feet—to convince them beyond a doubt that he had risen from the grave without the loss of a single attribute, and perfectly free from the touch of corruption. And to crown the evidences of his real, literal and identical personality, he asked for food and ate in their presence; and then, in the full gaze of all the disciples, he ascended to heaven. And as he went up, just when the clouds enfolded him from their view, the heavenly visitants revealed themselves to the disciples, and to their amazed hearts made, to them, new and wonderful revelations. Let us listen to their divinely dictated words: "This same Jesus."—This Jesus; not another; not the Spirit; not the word of grace; but THIS identical Jesus. "This SAME Jesus." Not a changed or transmuted body, but precisely the same person in every physical element which he had just before presented to them, and which they had seen and handled. "Shall so come in like MANNER as ye have seen him go into heaven." Is it possible for a case to be more conclusively stated?

But if it shall still be held that Christ did not "carry our flesh with him to heaven," but that some unknown change took place in his person after he passed beyond the sight of his disciples, then it follows: First, that the disciples were fearfully and purposely deceived by the angel messengers; for it were impossible to form a more misleading statement than their words convey if Christ is not to make a second personal and visible advent. And, second, if the assurance made to the disciples was fallacious, then we have no real personal "advocate" at the "right hand of God." But if the angelic statement was truthful, then Christ is now in heaven, in the very identical body which rose from the tomb; and his return must be as literal and visible as his ascension; for they did "see him go into heaven" visibly and literally; and the angels solemnly declared that he should "come in like manner as they had seen him go into heaven."

Now we aver, in the name of the Lord, that the reckless license of interpretation that would dare deny that this text teaches the personal and visible return of the blessed Christ, thereby destroys every rule of exegesis by which the Holy Word can be made to teach any doctrine with sufficient definiteness to command the respect of thinking minds. A NEW BOOK.

We are in receipt of a fresh contribution to biblical literature in a new work just published by Elder L. C. McKinstry, entitled "THE REDEMPTION." It is a neatly bound volume of one hundred pages, bearing evidences of careful scriptural research, made fresh and readable by a vein of original conception developed in new methods of reasonings, and impressed by illustrations quite unique.

The author has traversed the whole ground from man in Eden to man in the new earth, immortalized and glorified. We have rarely seen so much scriptural argument in so small a volume. The writer has spared no pains in furnishing the religious public with a great amount of important matter at very small cost. For sale by the author, and at the World's Crisis Office, 144 Hanover St., Boston. ED.

PERSONAL.

We are pained to learn that among the sufferers from the effects of the western floods is numbered our very highly esteemed Christian brother and fellow laborer in the gospel, Dr. N. Field, of Indiana, whose financial losses are very heavy.

Bro. Field has been an able and faithful preacher for many years, and is widely known among our people. He will have the sympathy and prayers of all who have had the pleasure of his acquaintance. The following note will explain itself: E. A. S.

"Jeffersonville, Ind., Feb. 28th, 1884.

Editor Crisis:—I send you a slip with some figures, showing the depth of water in the city. Bro. N. Field has been very badly damaged, and it is very hard on him in his declining years, being seventy-eight. He has spent over fifty years preaching the gospel without charge to any one, and the floods have almost ruined him. The tabernacle and members are all in the flooded district, which puts us all in a bad condition to help him, or one another. G. CUMMING."

THE WAR IN THE SOUDAN.

Since our last issue a long and bloody battle has been fought near Trinkitat, which resulted in a signal victory for the British forces under Gen. Graham. The following is the latest: E. A. S.

"SUAKIM, March 2. The British troops entered Tokar at noon Saturday. A few shots were exchanged with the enemy, when the 4,000 rebels holding the town fled. Osman Digna is encamped eight miles distant from Suakim. A battle with him is expected when the British troops return to Suakim from Tokar. All reports commend the steadiness with which the British moved on Teb. The square in which they advanced to the battle was never broken. The determination and bravery of the rebels were shown in the fact that when they were charged by the cavalry great numbers threw themselves upon their backs on the ground and speared the horses of the troopers as they dashed over them.

SUAKIM, March 2. The March to Tokar was accomplished in four hours from Teb. The hussars scoured the country and kept up desultory skirmishing with the enemy, who retired in disorganized masses in the direction of Tamanleb. The Arabs lost 1,100 men dead on the field at Teb, besides guns and other munitions. The whole camp, including 375 tents and many camels, was also taken. The condition of the camp showed that the Arabs had relied upon being victorious. Gen. Graham will send part of the Tokar garrison to Trinkitat, and will destroy the works of fortification. He will then march to Tamanleb, where he will convoke the sheikhs of the friendly tribes and those submitting to him to make arrangements to keep upon the route between Suakim and Berber.

SUAKIM, March 2. After the battle Baker Pasha and Admiral Hewitt returned to Trinkitat. The soldiers and sailors stationed there heartily cheered Baker Pasha, who had been so severely wounded that he was unable to walk. Veterans who took part in the battle say that they never met a more resolute foe. The enemy's trenches were found completely filled with corpses.

LONDON, March 6. Gen. Graham, with 3000 men will advance from Suakim on Monday against Osman Digna. His force will consist of 126 artillery men, with 7 seven-pounders, 10 mountain and four Krupp guns; 62 sailors, with two nine-pounders, three gatling and three gardner guns, and the Tenth and Nineteenth Hussars, the rest of the force being made up of infantry and marines. Osman Digna remains at Handoob, and is ready to accept battle.

Earl Granville, Foreign Secretary of State, announced in the House of Lords this afternoon that he had just received Egyptian dispatches which reported that a thousand men who were marching from El Obeid upon Khartoum had been defeated by tribes friendly to Gen. Gordon.

The Sultan of Morocco has declared El Mahdi an impostor.

Cairo, March 6. Gen. Gordon telegraphs that Slatin Bey, an Austrian officer in the Egyptian service, has defeated an expedition sent by El Mahdi from Darfour, and that the Kabbabish tribe have defeated the rebels north of El Obeid.

THE French government has decided to expel from France all suspected dynamiters, and the keenest detectives are continually employed.

RESURRECTION OF THE LIVING.

There are two theories concerning the resurrection, one of which cannot be correct, for the two are in conflict. One of these theories insists on a resurrection of the living from the dead, on the principle of a spirit elimination, leaving the dead man forever in the grave; while the other theory claims that the physical man shall awake from the sleep of death, and live again. In Paul's day, "When they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked" Acts 17: 32); but now they accept the theory in name, but make it mean a resurrection of the living spirit from the dead body; and surely if they had then understood that the apostles had preached a resurrrection consisting of a separation of the spirit from the body, nobody would have "mocked," for all believed that death would separate the spirit from the body. Even the friends were "grieved that they taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead" (Acts 4; 2); and they certainly could not have understood the apostles to preach that there was no separation of spirits from human bodies before Christ, for that notion would destroy the theory of soul-immortality for the entire race previous to the first advent, and also destroy it this side of that event so far as the wicked are concerned; for the resurrection which they preached was "through Jesus," whom the wicked do not accept, just as really as salvation is through him, and not to be obtained independent of him.

Paul distinctly affirms: "The dead shall be raised," and that cannot mean that the spirit shall be raised, unless the spirit dies, and if it dies, it is not immortal; so in setting up one prop to sustain this theory, another prop is thrown down. The Greek term anastasis, rendered resurrection, primarily signifies, according to Parkhurst, "To rise. A standing on the feet again, rising as opposed to falling." To rise from what? from life? How could that which had never fallen, stand on its feet again? If the spirit is to stand up again, what shall it stand up from, seeing it cannot fall in death? Did Paul mean to say to King Agrippa, who already believed in soul immortality, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should separate the spirit from the body?" That must have been his meaning if he taught a resurrection of a living spirit instead of a dead body.

If Christ preached a resurrection of the living spriit from the dead body, why did the Sadducees, after telling him about the woman's death who had previously had seven husbands, inquire: "In the resurrection therefore, when they shall rise [not when they did rise], whose wife shall she be of them?" If it should be said that they might have misunderstood his theory of the resurrection, the Saviour's reply will settle that question: "When they shall rise from the dead [not when they did rise] they neither marry nor are given in marriage." Mark 12: 23–25. Martha had the right view of the resurrection when she said, "I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day" (John 11: 24), for she had heard Jesus previously affirm: "I will raise him up at the last day." John 6: 40. Then "the earth shall cast out the dead" saints; "Neither can they die any more." W. S.

"MY SOUL."

The expression, "My soul," so often found in the Bible, is often quoted as proof that the soul must be a distinct personality that can outlive the body; but a careful perusal of the Word will make the fact apparent that its meaning is simply equivalent to myself, or my life, or my mind; as in the following texts: "And my soul shall live." Gen. 12: 13. "Let me escape thither . . . and my soul shall live." Gen. 19: 20. "Let my soul live, and it shall praise thee." Ps. 119: 175. "They have digged a pit for my soul." Jer. 18: 20. All are aware that these statements do not bring to view a deathless entity, but simply signify myself.

But if the claim that "my soul signifies that there are two distinct beings, the one being possessed by the other, is good, it proves too much; for we as really read of "my spirit" and my body," and that, too, in the same testimony. "His flesh upon him shall have pain, and his soul within him shall mourn." Job 14: 22. Who is the possessor? "Was grieved in my spirit, in the midst of my body." Daniel 7: 15. Who is the possessor? "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." Matt. 22; 37. Again we ask, Who is the possessor? If I talk of my soul, my body and my spirit, to whom do these three belong, and what is the name of the owner? W. S.

"SHALL CARRY NOTHING AWAY."

Inferences are often made the foundation of an argument where positive proof is wanting. When an attempt is made to show that men are to depart out of this world in the sense of making a journey to the so-called spirit-land, texts like the following are sometimes quoted: "For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out." 1 Tim. 6: 7. "For when he dieth he shall carry nothing away. Ps. 49: 17. And here they end the quotation; but David did not end his statement here: then an inference is unjustly deduced from the text that the soul is going off to another world to live there, but will carry nothing from this world to that; but the other part of David's statement spoils this inference. The full statement reads: "For when he dieth he shall carry nothing away: his glory shall not descend after him."

So when the saint dies, he leaves the world, not in the sense of ascending to heaven, but in the sense of descending. When he goes out of the world in this sense, he leaves his wealth behind—he goes to a "land of darkness," instead of going to an upper world, and awaits the promised resurrection. W. S.

MAPLEWOOD CHURCH.

At a business meeting of the Christian Church of Maplewood, held Feb. 29, 1884, it was voted to add to the name of the church by calling it the "Second Advent Christian Church of Maplewood." Bro. A. Fogg was elected pastor of the church. J. C. W[illegible], Clerk.

TRUTH glitters with a purer lustre the more it is loved and practised.

GO THOU AND DO LIKEWISE.

A good brother has just sent us two hundred dollars of the Lord's money for mission work, it being a tenth, which he sets apart from his income as belonging to the Lord. This money will preach at home and in foreign lands, while our brother continues to labor with his hands. What the harvest will be the day of the Lord will reveal. If it should result in saving a few souls, what a rejoicing there will be in heaven over the increase of one tenth; and our brother will find, we trust, that it was a good investment. God bless him, in basket and store, according to his promise. There are multitudes of the Lord's stewards that should follow the example of our brother. It would relieve them of dullness and indifference in the cause of truth, and fill their hearts with peace, and make them feel that they had a share in the heaven originated enterprise of redeeming a world lost in sin.

We hear the cry, "Come over and help us!" from all parts of the world. Shall we heed the call? The door is open for mission work as never before, and the message, "Behold he cometh!" is spreading in Africa, India, China, and Italy. Shall we, as a people, remain idle? We have our Mission Societies, but they must have means. We have three missionaries in the home department doing a good work, and the foreign department is sending publications to foreign lands, according to their means. We call upon the Lord's stewards in the name of Christ to stand by these societies and hold up their hands in the work. All means entrusted to them will be reported to the people. This is not a separate individual work, but the work of the Advent Body, which is governed by the people.

We are now making arrangements to send bundles of the Crisis weekly to foreign mission stations for distribution. It costs money to publish, but we trust in the Lord and the people, to furnish the means. Let us have a revival of the old-fashioned missionary spirit. Send in the tenths, and we shall not lack for funds. Who will respond with another two hundred dollars?

MISSION SPIRIT.

CHURCH NEWS.

Dear Bro. Stockman:—Thinking it might be of interest to the saints scattered abroad to hear how the Master's cause is prospering in this little quiet town, situated at the foot of Mount Lafayette, by your permission I will say a few words through the Crisis. There are three churches in this place, Free Baptist, Congregationalist and Adventist. The pastor of the Congregationalist church has been absent all winter holding revival meetings in Dacotah. About three weeks ago, Brother H. H. Tucker, of Sugar Hill, came by invitation and preached in the Congregational church. After preaching once he was engaged again until he had preached seven evenings. Quite a number sought the Lord in good earnest, and there was an intense desire on the part of the people to hear the truth. At this point Brother Miles Grant, of Boston, came by request of the Congregational and Adventist Churches, and commenced a series of union meetings in the Congregational house. The meeting commenced Monday, Feb. 25th, and held over Sunday, March 2nd, Bro. Tucker remaining most of the time. The Baptist preacher was gone most of the time. He came in a few times and took part in the service. The most perfect harmony existed through the entire meeting.

At the consecration meeting, held every afternoon, there was a good attendance, and all seemed to be anxious to be just right. About three hundred people attended every evening to listen to the word as spoken by Bro. Grant, both from the chart and practical Christianity. There were more than one hundred testimonies after the sermon every evening. As a result the church was wonderfully blessed, and from thirty to fifty reclaimed and converted. One man testified in the last meeting that he had lived in town fifty-four years, and had never seen a time like this. Bro. Grant said he had rarely ever seen so much accomplished in the same time in all his work in the ministry. To the good Lord be all the glory, praise and honor. Pray for us that we may have wisdom to lead the lambs of the flock, and hold the fort until Jesus comes, which we believe is very near at hand. Your brother in Christ. DANIEL GREGORY.

EXPERIENCE.—NO. 1.

BY L. BOUTELL.

Christian experience and that of a Christian minister or teacher differ widely. The experience of a preacher varies according to his work and by what he preaches as well as to whom he preaches. It is as natural as life for every man to love to have his work praised, whether deserving or otherwise, and if it is not he feels a little hesitation as to whether it is acceptable. This is emphatically so with a preacher, for "they are men of like passions," and love the praise of men. And I will venture the assertion that many ministers have been spoiled for the work of the Lord and the preaching of his truth by flattery. But if called of God to this holy self-denying work, it is only safe to hear his voice and do his bidding.

In my hasty call to the ministry of this gospel of the kingdom of heaven at hand, and declaring the soon coming of the Son of man from heaven, I had no time to confer with flesh and blood, nor to study Hebrew, Greek or Latin. The command from heaven was go, and go quickly, and study, as by the Spirit of inspiration, Daniel, Matthew, Luke, Mark, the epistles, and the Revelation of John on Patmos. These had to be looked over and proclaimed in three, six or nine month's time; and wisdom came by the spirit and power of God in the truth as fast as I was called to utter it, or had need for it. Wonderful outfit! Bible relating to Christ's coming literally and personally from heaven was the alpha and omega of our preaching. The tone of the watchman of this "message" so burdened him that it was a mighty relief to tell the good news and glad tidings. The one talent would soon gain other two. Enthusiasm and boldness characterized the epoch. Thus I commenced my public labor or ministry more than forty years since.

Various have been my experiences, trials, hardships, perils and blessings. I have found all the way that the Lord and the brethren have been so good that the promise has been more than realized that "all things work together for good." Bless the Lord for his goodness! And by his grace I continue to this time. I have had as much praise I presume as was for my good, and fault-finding enough to check and drive me to the only source of my strength, the God of my salvation. Certain utterances I well remember. When preaching in a certain place the best I knew, and thought things were going bravely, a woman came to me and said, "Your preaching sounded like scolding this forenoon." I said, "I presume so; and I'm sorry for it." I thought it over, and kept the truth going a little closer if possible, giving line upon line, and in the evening she came and confessed the fault was hers, and that the sound had become sweet and pleasant to her taste. So I was encouraged, and she blessed with peace in believing.

Again, when preaching once in the city of L. to a large congregation I thought I was doing blessed well, but as I came down from the pulpit and congratulated my brethren, I was touched on the shoulder with this telling remark, "I hope you will preach better in the afternoon." This was my meditation during intermission, and I resolved instead of getting vexed to try to better it. So in the afternoon in getting up to preach I rehearsed the occurrence at noon by the member, and said, "I am now going to do my best for you this afternoon, and hope to succeed in preaching better than in the morning; pray for me." And the effort was a success; blessings followed, and all participated in them. So this turned out to my good, and the furtherance of the gospel.

How often the preacher hears it said of himself, and others like himself, "he is a good man, but not much of a preacher." This is a touchstone to ministerial dignity; but after all it is often too truthful to be resented, and quite a eulogy as to your best outfit in the work of the Lord and success in his vineyard. Seek to please the Lord "whom we serve," loving yourself and all the rest with him.

IN MEMORIAM.

In Bristol, Ct., Dec. 24th, 1883, MRS. MARTHA LOWRY, widow of the late Luther Tuttle, aged about seventy-four years.

The subject of this notice was converted at the age of fourteen, and united with the Baptist church in Bristol, Ct., and in the early part of 1843 with her husband became identified with the Second Advent movement of that time. And truly may it be said, they were an honor to the cause, and a light to the world, not only when assembled with the saints, but in their well disciplined family, and in all their associations and business transactions.

Perhaps there never was a more perfect conjugal union than in the case of Bro. and Sr. Tuttle. They had six children, only two of which survive. Mrs. E. J. Morse, widow of the Rev. —— Morse, and Mrs. M. Gaylord, now living on the old homestead.

Sr. Tuttle was remarkable for her adherence to the command of "looking well to the ways of her household" in both temporal and spiritual matters. So calm and even, amid her many cares, and so free from the ebullitions of passion, in governing her household, and discreet in conversation, as to impart a sweet odor to the many pilgrims refreshed under this hospitable roof. I may add what Paul said of Phebe: "She hath been a succorer of many, and of myself also."

In parting with her four children, two of whom were married, she bore it with remarkable fortitude, but when her husband was so suddenly taken (by only twelve hours' sickness) it seemed like tearing herself asunder. She calmly submitted to this afflictive providence for about two years, when she was taken with a slow fever, which left her in a very sad mental condition, which I will call despondency. She took no interest in anything, and even desired her daughter not to tell her anything, good or bad. But some five years since her widowed daughter was very sick, and she, fearing a lack of care in her case, undertook to watch, and wait upon her, necessarily looking somewhat to her domestic matters, so far causing her to forget herself as to produce a semi-normal condition, which she ever after retained. But it is only about a year since she was roused to her religious life; first by means of Bro. Miles Grant, who called upon her, and cheerfully inquired, "Well, Sr. Tuttle, how is your hope?" She soliloquized thus: "I haven't any hope;" and then, as though recollecting, said, "Yes, I have got a hope;" and true enough, from that time she gradually returned to her religious life. Her daughter, perceiving the change, proposed to her to attend the house of worship; and though it was somewhat of a task for one so long absent, she consented, and the final cord of gloom was now broken, and she was desirous of attending every church service from this. Her voice was soon heard in prayer and testimony; in fine, she appeared like her former self, carrying happiness and sunshine wherever she went. She attended the Methodist Campmeeting with her daughter three days, and spent six at the Second Advent Campmeeting in Plainville, Ct. She seemed to be in haste to see and converse with old friends, and was spending a few days with her friend, Sr. Churchill, when taken ill, was brought home, never to leave until carried out. She suffered acutely at first, but finally fell into an insensible state. During her conscious suffering, her Saviour was exceedingly precious, his love seemed to be her last thought. Precious saint! rest in hope.

Her funeral was attended from the Second Advent Church in Bristol. The Methodist minister, who often called on and prayed with her during her sickness, prayed at the house, at the time of her funeral. Bro. Davis, of Southington, addressed the concourse of friends upon the occasion from Job 15: 11; "Are the consolations of God small to thee?" Bro. Starks, of Hartford, following in remark:

"Sleep, mother sleep, with your hands on your breast;
Poor weary hands! they needed their rest;
Well have we loved you, but God loved you best;
'Tis thy God giveth rest."

B. MATHEWSON.

THERE is no grander sight under heaven than to see a young man stand up for God, for truth, for right. He ought to have no higher ambition than to do valiant work for God. O young men, give yourselves to Christ, with your redeemed powers. He wants you to do so now. Christ asks you to take up your cross and follow him. May you all now make the beginning in God's name!

Household Edition, 12mo. Cloth, illustrated. Publisher's price $2.00. We can fill orders for $1.50 postpaid. AGENT.

"GODLINESS."

A neat little volume of 144 pages, bound in cloth, containing the Addresses of Mrs. Catherine Booth in London. It is devoted to a deeper work of grace among Christians. No Christian can read it without being inspired anew for a full baptism of the Spirit. Price 50 cts.

THE LAW, THE COVENANTS.

This work is just published, bound in cloth, containing 347 pages. It is one of the best expositions of the Sabbath question we ever read. The subjects discussed are treated in a candid, logical manner. It contains also an epitome of the GREAT SALVATION, that is worth more than the price of the book. If you want a thorough biblical work on important truths that will open the Scriptures in a clearer light, this is the work. Price $1.00.

LIFE EVERLASTING.

A volume of 762 pages, by J. H. Pettingell, bound in cloth. This is a rare work, by a scholar who understands the subject. He presents the truth in relation to immortality and future life in a clear light, embracing the history of the doctrine in the church, giving his readers a lucid exposition of Soul, Spirit, and Everlasting Life from a biblical foundation. It is a standard work of great ability and scholarship. It should have a large sale. Price $2.00 postpaid.

NEW EDITION OF YOUNG'S ANALYTICAL CONCORDANCE.

The old edition of this valuable work is exhausted. The publishers have issued a new and revised edition. The price is $5.00. But we intend that our patrons shall have the benefit of small margins. We will fill orders for the present at $3.00 by express; when sent by mail, 50 cts. extra.

All communications of business relating to the Quarterly Journal of Prophecy, and connected with the Foreign Board of Missions, should be directed to ELDER H. H. TUCKER, Crisis Office, Boston, Mass.

GOOD NEWS.—NO. 25.

FROM ITALY.

Our work will increase faster than we perform unless we are very active. The calls from all parts of our own and foreign countries for help in publishing "this gospel of the kingdom" constantly increases. The Lord's hand is in this work. Please read the following just from Italy. We have responded with one hundred dollars, and promise more in this line. The Lord sent me the money in answer to prayer.

I. C. WELLCOME.

ITALY, JAN. 16, 1884.

Dear Bro. Wellcome:—I have just received your good letter of Dec. 25th, 1883, and your two volumes, 'The History of the Second Advent Message,' and 'The plan of Redemption.' Many, many thanks for them, and for everything, also for your good words and explanations.

As you understand my difficulties here, and my ideas about publishing matters, so I understand your position. I hope you will be able, with God's help, to do something for Italy. I pray that the Lord may inspire the A. C. P. Society to start a paper in Italian language, which would be an important means for the work in my country. I notice that the Seventh-day Adventists Society have two or three publishing houses in Europe, and publish seven papers in German, Swedish, Danese, French and Italian languages. You speak of the organ of the A. C. P. Society—The World's Crisis. Could it be possible to have it? Would you be so kind as to pray them to send it to me regularly? It would be very useful, both for me and for a reading circle, I have promoted here. Please send me a full list of the denominations which hold the doctrine of immortality in Christ and Christ's second coming and kingdom.

This week I am lecturing in the town of Pinerolo on the conditional immortality; good place, large audience, pleasant impressions. Pray with me for good fruits. May our Lord lead many people to a sincere and direct inquiry of the living truth in Christ. Pray for me. Accept my best salutations. I wait with hopeful anxiety for your next letter. May our Lord bless our work for the full triumph of his blessed gospel Yours heartily in Jesus Christ.

O. COCORDA."

FROM HANNAH S. ADAMS.

Bro. Stockman:—My paper has been sent every week with all the good news to teach me of the holy Word of God, and the soon coming of Jesus. I am so glad that God has raised up men to explain the holy Word of our King, who is coming soon to deliver us out of this wicked world. I love the dear old Bible, with your blessed Crisis, a paper worthy of being in every family, and if we all follow their teachings, we shall be kept from the powers of darkness and the temptations of satan. We shall soon conquer [illegible] Redeemer.

Dover, N. H.

It is the busy people who are looking around for more to do. When men are lazy they do nothing; they can find no time for duties [illegible] to point them out to them.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

BY H. B. SEVEY.

At our State Conference, E. O. Dinsmore, H. B. Sevey and S. K. Partridge were appointed as State missionaries to collect money and spend it in missionary work in new places. We made the call in Crisis for help, which was continued nearly three months; also saying we would go ourselves.

Our first call was from Madrid, by Bro. Morrill, saying "some were starving for the bread of life, and no one to break it to them;" also saying, it being a new field could not promise me anything. I started the last of November with my team to meet the call, while the ground was frozen and roads rough. As I faced the north wind I soon came in sight of the snow-capped hills, reminding me that winter was just at hand. In Farmington I called on Bro. and Sr. Bean, who are waiting for the kingdom of God. My next call was on Bro. and Sr. John Taylor, in Phillips. Here I found one who is always ready to give a reason of his hope, being booked up on the signs of the times to the latest telegraph dispatch.

As the evening drew on, I found myself among the snow-covered hills in the little village of Madrid, with my horse and self nicely cared for at Bro. Morrill's home. The next day we gave out notice of meetings to be held each evening through the week and over Sunday. Our meetings were interesting and well attended, although the weather was very cold and stormy. The saints were encouraged, and sinners warned of the coming judgment at hand. Some questions were asked, which gave light, we trust, on the Bible. One was, "You say, Mr. Sevey, that the wicked will finally be destroyed and be no more; if so, will you please tell us what will become of the Devil?" I said, We will read Hebrews 2:14,—"Forasmuch then, as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself [Christ] likewise took part of the same, that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is the Devil." We thank the Lord that sin with all its evil effects will finally have an end through the promised seed, who will eventually bruise the serpent's head. The truth of the coming kingdom was introduced in Madrid by Brn. F. E. and A. H. Blaisdell one year ago. We trust seed was sown in some good ground.

As the snow was coming down we thought best to leave for home with our carriage, fearing we could not get through if we stopped longer. While the mercury was below zero we rode thirty-seven miles, thanking the Lord that his truth ever shone upon our pathway in this dark world. After returning home, we heard of the sickness of Sr. Clough and Sr. Tracey. We thought it duty to visit Sr. Clough. She will be remembered by those who attended Lakeside Campmeeting as an earnest worker; but she has fallen. Her husband died two years since, leaving her with two children and the care of a large farm, with business matters which pressed heavily upon her, and the anxiety she felt for her neighbors while laboring with a Freewill Baptist sister was more than she could bear. Being feeble in health her mind broke down, and in a few short weeks her sufferings ceased, and she fell asleep in Jesus. Thus another light has gone out; although dead her life speaks.

I next visited Sr. Tracey, who was suffering with consumption, but strong in hope. We held meetings in Rome a few Sabbaths. This has been an old place, but of late it has been destitute of meetings, as I am about the only one who goes there. They were comforted and somewhat encouraged. Some renewed their covenant, and some manifested a desire to be Christians. We hope they may follow on. Brn. Blaisdell gave good help in our meetings, also Bro. Wm. Blaisdell, a Sabbath-keeper, took part with us, who is beloved as a good man among his neighbors. We hoped to have continued the meetings longer, but was taken sick with a cold and obliged to stay at home with family a few weeks. Then we had a call from Southport, from a Bro Rand, who heard us ten years ago in Boothbay, when our Mission tent was there. Gladly we hastened to the call by railroad and steamboat. This is an island of some six hundred inhabitants, who make fishing their business. They have a large Methodist Church which cost about $9,000; their membership eighty-four—forty on probation. They have a hall for the accommodation of the public. Our first meeting was in the hall, where a goodly number listened as we spoke from the chart, showing that the dream was certain and the interpretation thereof was sure. We then joined in the vestry with the church on Sunday in the P. M. and evening; they gave me liberty to preach, and the Word was well received by some of their members. We were obliged to go into the schoolhouse, as the hall was engaged through the week. Our room was rather small, but owing to the slippery going it did very well. Here we met with a Christian worker, who tried to get the leaders of the church to unite in our meeting, of which they spoke well; but when we held meetings in the school-house they failed to be there. The real spiritual workers, however, were on hand to listen and also to help. Some were revived, and one gave evidence of her determination to follow the Lord. On the second Sunday, the vestry would not hold the congregation. We went into the audience room. In the afternoon I listened to some things which I think Paul would call "fables." The subject was on the judgment; not the one to come, but he said men were judged here. He spoke of Arnold, the traitor, and such ones, and Pilate, who gave sentence to the crucifixion of Christ. Then he spoke of the reformers; Luther, whose name we praised, and John Wesley, with others. Then, as he closed, he said, "We do not believe that men die; they only step out into another room," and that Pilate was hearing us say that he was the one who gave sentence that Christ might be crucified; and also Arnold likewise was hearing people say he was a traitor; and also the reformers were hearing us praise them for their good deeds. I thought that was Spiritualism nearly in full bloom. I wonder if our friends are so near us, if it would be wicked to ask them to pray for us as the Catholics do the Virgin Mary.

In the afternoon I spoke to them on the oneness of Christ's church, being laborers together. In the evening I spoke on the resurrection of the dead; what was lost in Adam and gained in Christ. The interest increased, and we continued meetings until Saturday; should even longer, but heard the Methodists were coming Sunday to carry on revival meetings, we thought it best to leave, hoping they would build upon the foundation which was laid. At our last meeting we asked those who believed what we preached to rise. It was nearly a unanimous vote on the side of truth. By what I saw I should judge nine-tenths were believers in the Bible doctrine of the coming of Christ and its kindred truths. We found marks which were made years ago by Brn. Wellcome, Partridge, and S. Hall. Thus the truth will have its effect after many years.

Saturday we bade them good bye, hoping to visit them again soon, if the Lord will. Brn. Taylor and Dinsmore came after me to go to the Conference in Georgetown; here we found a band of brethren and sisters striving to hold up the light along the coast of time in the darkness of the night, that the poor sailors on their voyage to the kingdom might know their danger amid the last-day perils. Only a few out from abroad, but those who were there had a mind to work, and we trust a good impression was left upon the community. Some of the brethren resolved to cleanse themselves from their filthy habits, to which they had long been slaves. Others were much stirred on the subject, and left the house because their idol, tobacco, was mentioned. We read, "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh, with the affections and lusts." One little girl made a full surrender to the Lord. Oh, how blessed to see the young giving their hearts to the Master. Brn. Dinsmore and A. H. Blaisdell with others, gave them good instruction. May He who gave the seed also give the increase, is our prayer. Thus we labor, working, watching, waiting for the coming of the Master.

Mt. Vernon, Me., Feb. 25, 1884.

FROM L. K. STODDARD.

Dear Bro. Stockman:—Seeing so many statements from the dear ones that are scattered so many miles apart, and their testimonies to the good hope, cheering and doing me so much good, it prompts me to write a few brief lines, thinking thereby I may do some good in the Master's cause. We are a few isolated children of the dear Saviour, waiting with patience for his return. Bro. Hurd has been pastor of the little flock here in our place for four years next month, but he has to leave in a few days, and then we are left without a shepherd. It makes us feel sad and lonely to part with him, but, dear brethren, Jesus is soon coming. Then if we are ready, with our lamps burning, we can have a home where we never will have to be parted.

I have received the dear Crisis since December, 1883, and value it very highly. I expect to have it continue as long as it comes running over with such precious good tidings. It fills my heart to an overflowing. I expect to get all I can to sign for it; I already have the promise of three subscriptions. When looking round, and seeing so many that are without the precious faith of the soon coming kingdom, and without Christ in the world, it shows plainly that indeed the harvest is plentiful, but the laborers are few. May the good Master send forth earnest workers into the fields to labor, is the prayer of your brother.

Meadville, Mo.

A CHINESE PREDICTION.

Just at the same time as the adventurer, who gives himself as the Mahdi, or new prophet, who, according to certain interpretations of some paragraphs of the Koran, is to appear at a fixed time, to exterminate the enemies of Islam, seems to shake the foundations of Egypt so violently, the inhabitants of the celestial empire are in the expectation of events of the greatest importance for their country.

In the Mahometisme en Chine, published by M. P. Dalry de Theirsaut, a work of much interest in the present time, we find a prediction said to have been made by Leou pe Wan, one of the astrologers of the Emperor Taitsang, of the Ming dynasty, stating that "towards the year 1878–80 (according to Chinese lunar years), the empire will be in a great state of agitation—a woman will then rule the country in the name of a child—the eight banners will be unable to protect the sun (the Emperor), and will return to the Leang Kiang. The south, east and west will be divided; some extraordinary men will arrive from the kingdom of Tson (Occident), after having traveled over considerable distances, and will settle in a quiet country (the Annam or southern peace), then the woman, the child and the dynasty will be in great danger. Two hundred and forty years will have elapsed from the foundation of the Ming dynasty to its end; great changes will take place in heaven and earth; water will rise and cover the mountains; in the spring, the Redmen (name given to the foreigners who are called Hung-mao, the red-haired men), will penetrate into the celestial empire. Woe then to the people! There will be terrible battles, etc.

The other events announced by Leou pe Wan cover a period of seventy-two years. There is certainly a very curious coincidence between the prediction and the present state of things in China.—Galignani's Messenger.

Obituaries.

DAILY. In Nevada, Ohio, Feb. 12th, 1884, of that terrible disease cancer, Sister Pluma, wife of Truman Daily, aged forty-five years.

Sister Daily was a real lady in the true sense of that term, and her natural endowments were embellished by the Christian religion. She has been for the past year a great sufferer, and especially so the last few months. It has been the privilege of the writer to visit her very often, and I can say I have seen another evidence of God's power to give peace, trust and faith amid calamity and sufferings untold. She leaves a husband, one son, an aged father and mother, with other relatives, who are truly sad, but rejoicing that they have had such an example of Christian character to beckon them onward to the land that knows no death or sorrow. A very large audience attended her funeral in the A. C. Church, Nevada, where the writer endeavored to present from Job 19:25, 26, the faith and hope that has so triumphantly carried her through all her trials and sufferings. God grant that the pledges that have been made to her may be carried out, and her loved ones meet her in the morn that knows no sorrow, all immortal. W. J. HOBBS.

WALKER. In Keene, N. H., Feb. 5th, 1884, Mrs. Mary S. Walker, aged eighty-four years.

Sister Walker has been in feeble health for a long time, and the last days of her life suffered a great deal, but was cheerful to the last, and died in hope of life in that world where the inhabitants will never be sick or grow feeble with age. She leaves a large circle of friends to mourn their loss, among them a son and daughter, Dr. J. B. Walker of Worcester, Mass., and Miss Minnie Walker of Keene, N. H. May God bless them in their affliction is my prayer. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, assisted by Eld. I. I. Leslie. M. A. POTTER.

GOULD. In Bolton, P. Q., Jan. 15th, 1884, Bro. Abram Gould, aged seventy-nine years.

Our deceased brother and father in the Christian profession, worn by passing years, burdened with care and toil, came most peacefully and without severe pain to sleep "the sleep of the ages," as the weary traveler quietly sinks to rest. His widow and children affectionately mourn his loss. Fifty years ago he was married to a Christian partner, who prayed for him, and he about that time heard William Miller, and embraced the "gospel of the kingdom" as nigh, and a little later the sublime and fundamental doctrine of no immortality out of Christ, and kindred truths, as set forth and maintained by the World's Crisis, which paper he has long taken and read. A quiet, unassuming, intelligent, well-established believer, whose memory is blessed, is sadly missed and deeply mourned. May his family be prepared to meet him when he "shall awake and sing." Sermon by the writer. Isa. 25:6-9. C. P. DOW.

EDDY. Fell on sleep, in Bennington, Vt., Jan. 4th, 1884, Sister Lydia Eddy, aged eighty-three years.

Sister Eddy was converted and united with the M. E. Church over forty years ago. She trusted in the Lord, and he sustained her to the end of life. A large circle of bereaved relatives mourn, but not without hope. At her request the writer tried to minister comfortingly at the funeral service. W. O. HIGLEY.

WARD. At Standish, Maine, Feb. 4th, 1884, Sister Mary M. Ward, aged sixty-one years.

Sister Ward leaves a good evidence behind that she was ready to meet the Judge at his coming. After long months of suffering she quietly fell asleep. May God's blessings surround the afflicted family, and bring them into his kingdom at last. Words of comfort by the writer. H. MAINS.

Special Notice.

The Lord willing, we will commence a Protracted Meeting with the church in Rye, N. H., Tuesday evening, March 25th, and continue every evening, and over Sunday, March 30th. We expect Bro. Henry M. Tourtlotte, of Putnam, Conn., to be with us to labor in the meeting, and we invite all Christian workers in the vicinity to come and help bring back the wanderers, lead sinners to Christ, and build up and strengthen the church.

ENOCH MORRILL.

Conference Notice.

The first Quarterly Session of the Advent Christian Conference of Northwestern Michigan will be held (the Lord willing) at the Olmsted schoolhouse, Georgetown, Ottawa County, Mich., commencing Friday evening, April 11th. We hope for a good representation of preachers and delegates, as business of importance will be brought before the Conference. Brethren, sisters and friends, the Lord has called us into his vineyard to labor. He has given to every man his work. Then let us manifest our faith by coming up to this meeting imbued with the Spirit and power of the living God, to labor for the salvation of the perishing and confirming of the saints. The place of holding this meeting is a new one, and we hope the brethren will earnestly pray for God's Holy and Divine Spirit to lead and direct to his own praise and glory. The place of holding this meeting is about five miles southwest of Grandville, which is on the C. & W. M. R. R., between Holland and Grand Rapids. Teams will meet the 4 P. M. train going east at Grandville, on the day of appointment. Also brethren coming on other roads, at the Rathbun House, Grand Rapids, at half past one o'clock sharp, on the day of appointment. Brethren coming other ways, please inquire at Grandville for A. L. Fox.

T. C. GRUNDY, President.
GEO. H. DE BOIS, Sec.

Quarterly Conference.

The Kennebec County Quarterly Conference will hold its next session at Litchfield, Me. (Baker school-house), commencing Thursday evening, March 20th, and hold over the following Sunday. A cordial invitation is given for all who can to come to this meeting. Strangers will call on Aaron Peacock, B. F. Berry, Thomas Lunt, and Bro. Small, who will see that all are provided with homes. Come, brethren, with a spirit to work for God, remembering that what is done to save the perishing must be done quickly.

F. E. BLAISDELL, President.
J. R. STURTEVANT, Secretary.

Minister's Conference.

There will be held a Minister's Conference of the St. Paul Quarterly District, Minn., to convene in the A. C. Chapel at Anoka, commencing Tuesday, March 11th, at 1.30 o'clock, and continuing three days. Essays will be read and criticised, and questions of vital importance discussed. All who are interested in the work and advancement of the church of Christ are invited to attend and participate. GEO. H. DEWING, Secretary.

NOTICE.—The Knox and Lincoln County Conference will hold its next session at Branch Mills (China, Me.), commencing Thursday evening, March 13th, and hold over the following Sunday. Visiting brethren and sisters will call on the following brethren, who will see that homes are provided: W. H. Worthing, G. F. Worthing, Rufus Crane, and J. S. Parmenter.

GEO. W. WEEKS, President.
H. M. YORK, Secretary.

Quarterly Conference.

Our next Quarterly Conference of District No. 1 of the Williamette Valley, Oregon, will be held at Pleasant Hill, Clackamas County, April 11th, 12th and 13th. We hope there will be a good turn out at this Conference. Would like to have all our preachers come, or report by letter. Pleasant Hill is situated sixteen miles east of Clackamas Station, in the Howlet neighborhood.

GEO. W. LEMON, Secretary.

NOTICE.—The first semi-annual meeting of the Advent Christian people of Southern California will be held at the A. C. Church of Tustin City, Cal., commencing May 6th, and hold over the following Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to all. C. I. BLACKMAN, Clerk.

Special Notice.

To the patrons of the Helper: Owing to my son disposing of the office where the Helper was printed, it will not be issued for a few weeks. As soon as I can secure type, it will be issued regularly from my own office in Glidden. Full numbers will be sent to subscribers.

H. G. MCCULLOCH.

NOTICE.—Churches in the Eastern District of Wisconsin wishing a Quarterly Meeting, will correspond with the undersigned at Mifflin, Iowa County, Wis., as the Eastern District is entitled to three meetings in the year. Any one wishing a meeting, there could be one in March.

AMASA M BARBER, District Evangelist for Eastern District, Wis.

NOTICE.—The post office address of Miss Lathera B. Weaver is North Dana, Mass. AGENT.

NOTICE.—Those wishing my lectures while I stop in Webster, can arrange to have four in a week. The chart is 76 feet long, and six feet wide, so you will know if you have room to put it up. I expect to close my work in Webster soon, then I shall be ready for the field. Address J. E. Cross, Webster, Mass.

ALONE WITH THEE, LORD.

BY LOTTIE VERON.

Alone with thee, O Lord; thou knowest all;
The heaving of each breast as it doth rise and fall;
The secret of each heart thou, Lord, dost know,
And thou alone canst heal each bitter woe.

Alone with thee, O Lord, who knowest all,
The burdens of the heart before thee fall;
For thou alone canst bear with human grief;
No other can be found to give relief.

Alone with thee, O Lord; how sweet the thought!
Alone with thee to have a little talk,
And know that thou art near to sympathize—
To check each fear and doubt when it arise.

Alone with thee, O Lord, thou dearest friend;
Thy friendship and thy love—they have no end;
Alone to be with thee, and thou art near
To whisper words of peace my heart to cheer.

Alone with thee, O Lord, let others fail,
The mask the heart doth wear thou can'st unvail;
Nothing is hid from thee, thou God of all,
And thou can'st help to drink the bitter gall.

Alone with thee, O Lord, thou knowest all,
For thou dost see the sparrows when they fall;
And thou dost feed the ravens when they cry;
Thy works, O Lord, shall praise thee "by and by."

Alone with thee, O Lord, no matter where;
On rugged mountains, or in valleys fair;
On stormy billows—joy my heart doth fill,
Saying all the way, "Oh, peace! be still!"

Alone with thee, O Lord, my friend and guide;
Keep me, O keep me ever near thy side;
Help me, dear Lord, that I may win the race;
That I with joy may see thee face to face.

THE NEW FAITH—Part I.

BY T. L. DRURY.

What is this new faith about which there is so much said and writttn? Of what is it an outgrowth? What is its effect upon society and church generally speaking? These are all pertinent questions. Our faith certainly allows us to examine into a system or creed in order that we might try its spirit, to see whether or not, it is of God. The new faith, therefore, to my mind, is a grand modification of the old church creeds and forms of long standing. Of course, the old creeds have become more or less stale, and indeed, horrifying, as this enlightened age advances.

Both the pulpit and pews are being thoroughly aroused to the fact that the teachings of the old church, either Catholic or Protestant, are neither, to say the least of them, logical nor scientific; and hence, probably not scriptural. In this way, however, it is how doubt originates regarding them. Press hard enough, and truth will spring forth like a mayflower in spite of the cold and sleet of theological ages. Nor can there be any reformation without a pressure. A winter thaw alone will not produce summer. Summer is the offspring of three changes, each being gradual, yet radical in their effect. So is it with any marked manifestation of truth. Jesus Christ was the sacrifice of Judaism, and Calvary its destruction. In other words, society or church will not, any more than bees, seek for honey among dry leaves as long as there is any clover to be found. In fine, the upshot of it all is, there is a struggle for deliverance from the theological world. Now, honest men must be freed from the bondage of a church devil as they would from any other kind. And such is the spirit and soul of the new faith. That is, it is new in contradistinction to the old. I do not, however, mean by that that it is meant to be contrary to the gospel, notwithstanding ~~however much it~~ may be. In short, it is more than a step of a century long toward liberty and salvation, and for that reason I welcome it.

The church has been long enough all creed and no religion. She has lived long enough in the valley of dry bones, without producing an exceeding great army. But some people always worry themselves about the truth whenever there is any mention made of "a new light." Now such people should learn that THE truth is capable of preserving itself, while they themselves are the real objects of danger. By the truth we shall either stand or fall. Ignorance is not to be winked at any longer if I read correctly. Then let us be wise, and the new theology will not annoy us.

But concerning the effect of this new faith. What is it? Is it good or bad? In any case, why should it be a cause for an alarm? Are ministers not capable of knowing the right from the wrong? Will the church gather grapes from thorns? God pity us all if there is no true discernment to be found in either pew or pulpit. Something ought to happen to us as an incentive to bring us to our senses. But I trust it is otherwise with the people of God. Then we should fear no evil from the new faith; for it is not an attack on the Bible in any sense as it is on the creeds of the churches. That is to say, it makes religion for man instead of exclusively for the church. Nor is there anything wrong in that doctrine, allowing free will to a fact; otherwise it would be false. Nevertheless, its tendency would be to carry an unbalanced mind too far in the direction of liberalism. No man has a right to be so liberal as to allow himself to give his brother a stone for a loaf of bread, nor a scorpion for an egg.

The first thing that the new faith will effect, it seems to me, is a more thorough investigation than there has been any time previous among the more thoughtful, of a biblical and scientific literature. The ministry of the past have been certainly derelict in that direction. Hence, the benefit of such investigations cannot be estimated at the present time. They may preserve seven thousand souls, somehow, somewhere, some day. Is it not at all times the purpose of God to work good out of the ways and means of the world? We should, therefore, be careful not to occupy the position of Christ in giving our estimate of things. We should remember that we are as yet only disciples, and not masters, and in that station only seeing through a glass darkly.

But further, the effect of the new faith will be seen in the revolution produced by it in church life and teaching. Modern evangelicalism will undoubtedly suffer from it; and I say it ought to suffer. Who wants metaphysics for a soulical argument, and a terror for an idea of a God placed before them any longer. I am sure I do not. Do you? The sooner, therefore, we have such matters substituted by what is true and tangible, the better it will be for both church and world. We should all strive after the good, better, best. Purity and truth have no mixtures. Love knows no hate where mercy is possible. Nor will any true God or man follow any poor, sinful woman into the temple with stones. Only church hypocrites and creed lovers do that sort of thing. No plant can grow in the shade; it requires all the sunshine and shower that nature affords; so does the soul which pants after God require a freedom to all the blessings that are so bountifully bestowed. The ceremonial law of types and shadows is done away since Christ has been the substance; then why let ritualism and church formality take its place. In other words, if the real can be had at any cost, why not obtain it? We should not follow so much that which we have been taught, as we should avail ourselves of what is actually and divinely manifest. That is, our creed should be religion for the needy, hope for the lost, sight for the blind, a physician for the sick, and life for all. Nor is this idea strange to the new faith, but rather its peculiarity.

By glancing over the pages of Freemantle's book on the "Gospel of Secular Life," this IDEA, above stated, will be found prominent throughout the entire volume. In fact, men must worship God without a temple in order to do it effectually. Nor is this view of it contrary to the gospel of Christ: "God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." Our daily life should be the temple through which should ascend our incense and offering from the altar of being. Creeds are good enough for past time, and that should be the least concern of our life. Man has to work to earn his livelihood in this world; nor can he be less active regarding his welfare in the next. Life is too short to allow us to spend our time with sacred oralism of modern years. Hence, the more thoughtful ones of all our pews and pulpits are seeking for relief. Herein, then, is found the origin of this new faith. That is, it is an outgrowth of an honest struggle for liberty and a more healthful religious existence.

NEW JERUSALEM.

IS IT LITERAL, OR IS IT A FIGURE?

BY O. D. GIBSON.

My attention has often been called to this thought, but an article from Bro. Pease in Crisis of Jan. 30th has stirred me up to write a few thoughts for our paper on the subject.

It seems to me to be a dangerous step to take when we depart from the literal understanding of the Scriptures. Not but what there are figures used in the Scriptures, but we should never look for figures so long as the literal makes good sense. But if the literal understanding involves something of absurd, it is then time enough to look for a figure. John 4: 14, I grant, is a passage of this nature. But when we turn the New Jerusalem into a figure, we do it from choice, and not to avoid absurdity. If we are to be literal, personal beings in the future life, which every Adventist believes, and if that life is to be on a literal earth, where is the absurdity of a literal city, and literal trees and water?

The word "New," prefigured to Jerusalem, involves a contrast with Old Jerusalem, and is not it a literal city? Were there no references to a future city but in the book of Revelation, some might have some doubts as to its literality; but with so many plain statements elsewhere, I see no absurdity; yea, I am compelled to understand it literally. For myself, the language of Revelation alone would compel me to literality, for John saw it "come down from God out of heaven" upon the new earth. He then hears it called God's "tabernacle," or dwelling place; and it is not to be in men, but with men. Now the church never was in heaven, so can never "come down from God out of heaven"; but she is the men on earth to whom this "tabernacle" comes, and with whom the Lord is to "dwell and be their God."

John, after minutely describing the city, says, "The nations of them which are saved [who are the church] shall walk in the light of it," and also go into it with their "glory and honor." "Blessed are they which do his commandments [surely, these are the church], that they may have right to the tree of life, and enter through the gates into the city." Shall we spiritualize the presence of Christ with his people? or will he be really and personally present? Will he not have a "throne"? or is this a figure? If we begin to figure on these points, where is the stopping place? More anon.

FAITH.

BY J. C. WHEELER.

This is one of the most important characteristics of the Christian church, for "without faith it is impossible to please God." If the professed church of God strove to meet the great end of God's purpose, their earnest prayer and labor would be to please him. No man can be, or will be moved in the direction of holiness and truth without faith. No man calls for a physician unless he is sick; also, no man will call for help until he feels himself helpless. Just so in the things of God.

When a man or woman is satisfied that eternal life depends on Christ alone, then, and not till then, will they submit to God's requirements to ask for help. Faith moves them to this act. Then God is pleased, and blesses in the act. Then comes the blessed promise, "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

Faith has ever moved the church in all past ages, and will until Jesus comes. We need not be in doubt as to how much faith a man has, for he will live out all he has. Peter, when he lost his, went fishing, or to his former pursuits; so it is at the present time; human nature is the same. Inasmuch as our faith slackens, we yield to our former nature and desires. If this be so, and our eternal life depends on faith in the Son of God, so fully brought forth in the gospel to redeem man, how earnestly we should study to know and keep those facts before us in this day of infidelity, for Jesus speaks as though there would be but little faith when he comes the second time.

To the Jews he said, "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they that testify of me." So, if they had the Scriptures, and had them read before them every Sabbath day, and mistook the prophecy of his first advent, may there not be danger of our professing to be his children, and we like them be unbelieving? If so, how important that we heed every admonition of the Saviour and apostles. "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." So God's Word is able to make us wise unto salvation.

Knowledge is one thing, and wisdom is another. A man may have knowledge of facts which, if lived out, might lead him to honor and riches in the present time. So men may know God's will, but not be wise. It needs wisdom to get salvation. Wisdom says, if ye know these things and so live in harmony with them, salvation is the result. Therefore let us be wise men and women, study to know for ourselves, and use wisdom, for wisdom's "ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace." Faith in harmony works by love, or produces lovely works, which if developed in a man's life will not only please God, but open to him God's door of mercy through his Son. May this be our lot, one and all, is my prayer.

Haverhill, Mass.

THE MAN AFTER GOD'S OWN HEART.

"I have found David a man after mine own heart, who shall fulfil all my will." What a commendation! And from God's own lips! Does it not remind us of "the disciple whom Jesus loved?" Who would not covet such a distinction from among his fellows? But wherein consisted this being after God's own heart? Whatever else may have been included therein, it is here distinctly stated that one concomitant or consequence of such a condition of heart was "the fulfilment of all the divine will." And this agrees with Christ's declaration when the crowd was pressing him, and it was stated to him, "Behold thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee;" how quickly he responded, "Whosoever shall do the will of my Father in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister and mother."

Would we then share in the divine commendation passed upon David? Would we be men and women after God's own heart? Would we be beloved disciples above our fellows? Would we press into the inner circle of those who stand around the Lord and Master, and learn the secrets of his kingdom and of his love? We are here informed of one way in which this may be brought about, and that is—fulfilling all God's righteous will.

Indeed, this "doing of the will of our heavenly Father" is the touchstone that tries our fitness for entrance into the kingdom of heaven. We may prophesy in Christ's name. We may be learned, eloquent, orthodox preachers. Our ministry may be attended with some success. In Christ's name we may cast out devils and do many wonderful works. But the question is whether our names are written in heaven? Whether Christ really knows us? Whether he has received us into his high, and holy, and heavenly intimacy? Whether we have ceased to work iniquity and are fulfilling all his will? Whether we are not only hearing but doing his sayings? Whether we are founded on the Rock of Ages? Do any inquire "What shall we do that we might work the works of God?" Jesus himself replies, "This is the work of God that ye believe on him whom he hath sent." Believe on Christ with the faith that works by love and overcomes the world. And let us be deeply in earnest in this thing. Let us say with Christ "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work." And let us not delay so momentous a matter. Each one may well say with Christ, "I must work the works of Him that sent me, while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work." "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave, whither thou goest."—Christian Standard.

THE PRINCIPAL THING.

BY C. E. COFF.

"Wisdom is the principal thing," says Solomon, but most people act as though worldly honor, wealth, or "a good time," was the principal thing. What is wiser than the wisdom of God, which he "giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not?" What is wiser or more important than to attend to wisdom's voice in the correction of your ways, that you may abide in the day when the wicked are cut off?

Are you a nominal professor, carrying a mere profession of religion on your back, as a battery carries a spare wheel tied on behind to be used in case of a break-down? If so, your coldness and indifference is a standing reproach to the faith you nominally represent. In the army of the Lord you count one same as a hat stuck on a pole might count one in the distance; but there is no joint in your knees at prayer time; no bone in your back to stand against evil; no life in you to do battle for the Lord. A stuffed "scare-crow" may do on a farmer's corn patch to frighten away the uninitiated evil birds; but it takes a live man—a man who moves—to make the devil stand back in these days.

After much persuasion, people "get religion" now-a-days pretty much the same as they do a life-insurance policy, only with perhaps less concern. To get insured, certain preliminaries are gone through with, a policy is made out with their name on it, put into the desk drawer, and they are all right by paying a certain annual stipend. So of their "getting religion." Sundry ceremonies are gone through with, their names are on the church book, and they are ticketed for glory as long as they don't swear old-fashionedly, and lie and steal ditto—though much modern meandering savors strongly of all these things. But they are Christians till they formally withdraw! Fudge! The church books are full of the names of people who are of no more account in the Lord's service than the multitudes of models in the patent office would be of use in clearing a swamp. They are cumberers of the ground, and that is all.

O, for pews full of people who have been saved "from their sins!" who consequently feel a decent degree of gratitude to Jesus for doing that work; and who feel the spirit of labor for others that they may share the same blessing. Such folks as these do not undertake to do what no man can successfully do—"serve two masters." With David they can say: "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to inquire in his temple." Ps. 27: 4. Or with Paul, again, "This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Phil. 3: 13, 14. This one thing forms the principal thing with them; it is their main business; it is their meat and drink.

One day I went into the picture store of a friend in Boston. It was pictures, pictures, from top to bottom, and all the way through. We were down cellar creeping around, and everything we turned over was a picture. It was their business to deal in pictures. Well, we thought, it is our business to serve the living God; and oh, we want to be filled with this business—for it pays—"filled with the spirit" from the crown of our head to the sole of our foot; then we may teach transgressors God's ways, and sinners shall be converted unto him; then what spare time we have above the labor of our hands or minds in temporal matters we can cheerfully give to the contemplation of eternal things, instead of running after the glittering bauble of this world; and instead of wasting midnight energies in satan's service, we can consecrate them to God's work. "For so he giveth his beloved sleep." Instead then of "holding on to the hope" while we serve self and the world, the hope will hold on to us, and keep us from these things.

What will it avail in the day of accounts "that thou hast a name that thou livest and art dead?" Rev. 3: 1. "I know thy works," God will say as he did to the church in Sardis. What will human appearances amount to then? What shams there are in piety as well as everything else. I have seen a pretentious business opened in a certain place. A casual observer would think that a large business was being carried on; but the truth is there are a lot of empty boxes with showy labels grandly arrayed upon the shelves, and tea chests filled with saw dust are fast arriving! O, the day cometh that will try men's hearts. Then shall we know as we are known of God. What say you? Are you guilty, or not guilty? Are you empty of divine grace, though there is an outward show? "Be ye filled with the Spirit."

A TRIBUTE

To the Memory of Terzie Spencer, who died at Scitico Jan. 13, 1884, aged eighteen years.

BY C. A. T.

Weep not! come view her as she lies
In this calm, placid rest;
Deep sleep hath sealed her weary eyes,
And stilled her heaving breast.

Weep not for her, thus early called,
Though your fond hopes are crushed;
Breathe not one sigh of vain regret
Above this precious dust.

Weep not that she has left your side
In life's young rosy morn,
Though the dear home be lone and dim,
Whence her sweet smile hath gone.

Weep not when in yon hallowed fane
Ye bow in solemn prayer—
When in praise songs sweet voices blend,
And her's is wanting there.

Weep not as to the silent tomb
Her dear remains ye bear,
In its cold bosom Jesus lay—
Fear not to leave her there.

Let this blest hope assuage your woes—
Soon she'll come forth, for Jesus rose,
And then, amid the ransomed throng,
She'll sweetly chant the "new, new song."

EASTERN NOTES.—NO. 5.

BY GEO. E. FULLEN.

On Sunday, Feb. 17, I preached twice at Attleboro Falls, Mass. There is a small church in this place, lately organized, consisting of earnest praying, working members. May God bless them, and add to their number such as shall be saved. On Sunday morning, Feb. 24, I enjoyed an excellent social meeting with the church in Chelsea. In the afternoon I visited Morgan Chapel, in Boston, and listened to an interesting discourse from Bro. D. T. Taylor, from Num. 14: 21. He showed that the glory here mentioned was the brightness, the splendor emanating from the person of the Deity; that it would fill the whole earth after Christ's second coming, and that the saints should themselves be glorified, and dwell in scenes of glory evermore.

In the evening of the same day I attended the services at the Heard St. Chapel in Chelsea. Bro. J. Hemenway preached a stirring discourse from Job 19: 25. The assurance that our Redeemer ever lives, and that his heart of compassion is stirred by the wants of his people, should be to us a tower of strength. We are living near the time when our Redeemer shall stand upon the earth, and we shall see him, together with Job and the pure ones of all ages.

On Tuesday, Feb. 26, I took the cars for New Bedford to attend the annual meeting of the Plymouth and Bristol Counties A. C. Conference. This meeting began on the evening of the 26th, and continued over the evening of the 29th. The spirit that pervaded this gathering was heavenly, and our social meetings were seasons of great rejoicing. The preaching was done by Brn. C. H. Sweet, G. F. Haines, J. S. White, C. W. Rathbun, and A. A. Fowler. It was with regret that we parted with the brethren and sisters at the close of the Conference, but it was with the assurance that we shall meet again, if not in this life of fleeting shadows, in the kingdom that cannot be moved.

On Sunday, March 2, I preached twice in Lowell, and enjoyed a spiritual feast at the social meeting in the evening. We showed the Lord was coming soon to reward his people, and to complete in glorious triumph the work of redemption. This is the hope that cheers our hearts when earthly joys depart and foes are pressing hard. We can rejoice in the prospect of speedy redemption, for we have seen the signs that mark the soon coming of Him whose right it is to reign.

"The plague, the dearth, the din of war,
The Saviour's swift approach declare."

We have seen the distress of nations with perplexity that Christ said should precede his coming. In the language of the poet we can say:

"The storm has surely well-nigh reached its height.
Oh! come, thou Prince of Peace, and still the waves.
Amid the fearful fight for earthly thrones, oh! come,
Thou King of kings, and reign supreme.
Amid the desolating darkness here,
We look, O Sun of Righteousness!
For thee; we wait, and long to hear thy
Chariot wheels; thy lightning-flash of glory
Shall proclaim to all, from north to south,
The day of joy, of vengeance, come."

That day is surely coming. The prayers, and tears, and groans of the saints will then come up in remembrance before God. Jesus is coming to establish his kingdom, and to reign on the earth.

"Where the crown of anguish stood,
Where thy life distilled in blood,
Where they mocked thy dying groan,
King of nations, plant thy throne."

When this is brought about, earth's dark night shall be forever past, and in its place shall be the glorious light of the eternal day. Hasten, oh! Lord, the time, is our prayer.

Lowell, Mass., March 4, 1884.

NOW AND THEN.—No. 2.

BY S. S. BREWER.

O how frail we mortals are! Our life's a span, and full of care; Soon as we gasp our earliest breath, The germ is there the cause of death. Do the best, do all we can, We are a race of mortal men. Is this sad state doomed to remain?—The whole creation groan in pain? No, earth will blossom pure and fair, And God with man his image there. He will, for that immortal state, New heavens and new earth create. The city, New Jerusalem, The new creation's diadem, Beaming with effulgence bright, Home of the Bride attired in white, With jasper walls and streets of gold, Its glory cannot now be told. Faith often does transport us there, And hope inspires us to be there. There, where unending bliss remains, God and the Lamb forever reigns. There, where the immortal saints shall come, And worship 'neath its brilliant dome. There, where evermore is seen, From out the throne, life's gushing stream, Meandering far through landscapes green, Where fadeless flowers are ever seen.

O realm of light, how calm, supernal! Where the plains are ever vernal, Will be mounts of observation, For God's holy, ransomed nation; Who will range their beauteous heights, And gaze afar in rapt delights. There oft by streams, in smiling vales, They'll walk to scent the fragrant gales, Where crystal rills forever glide, And floral beauties deck their side. O, what a pure and happy race! Transport beams on every face. O realm of life, divinely fair! Our longing heart by faith is there. Every atom there will be, Instinct with immortality.

But here are crosses now to bear, For all who will that glory share. Lord, help us now some souls to win, To save them from the paths of sin; For darkness broods o'er all the earth, With omens of approaching wrath. Earth groans heavily 'neath the curse; Tares are going from bad to worse; Iniquity and crimes abound, And perils do our path surround; Myriads to truth are reprobate; To sin the masses gravitate; To God and truth have done despite. O earth, thy harvest seems now ripe. Filled with unrest and discontent, Its day of grace is almost spent.

As lengthening shadows of the sun, Proclaim the day its course hath run; Thus tokens o'er the earth abroad, Proclaim the coming of the Lord. Time's last sands are falling fast: How quick they speed to drop the last! Then intercession will be o'er, The Master rise and shut the door. Then man's destiny is sealed, And can never be repealed. Dear wanderer, I pray attend; O heed the warning of your friend. Flee, flee for refuge to the Lord. Repent, believe, obey his word. A crown of glory you can wear, And with his saints God's kingdom share.

THE UNIVERSAL DOXOLOGY.

Then, when the fiery's ordeal's o'er, And all will live to die no more; Saints gathered with their living Head, The earth made new, and satan dead; Then God's ransomed sons and daughters, As the sound of many waters, With angelic hosts are singing; All creation then is ringing; Then the ransomed hosts terrestrial, Mingling with the choir celestial, Peal their sweet unearthly strains, That float o'er all the ambrosial plains. Then while their pæans far are swelling, Heaven and earth the joy is telling. Dear reader, may I there greet thee, And join CREATION'S JUBILEE. Amen!

LOOK TO JESUS.

BY H. S. WEBSTER.

This is very important in the commencement of a Christian life, and also through its course to follow closely our Pattern, which is Jesus. One reason, because he is perfect. In following him, we are fitted for every sphere in life. He is the model. We can go by no other and have success. To depart from the standard may seem to do for a season, and all may appear well; but when brought to the test, what a failure! Truly there is no other way to reach the goal but to look to Jesus.

Ofttimes this imperfect nature of ours is found looking to humanity, and "worshiping the creature more than the Creator"; and, alas! how is our idol shattered. Perhaps the heart's fondest affections are blighted, and sorrow the result of misplaced confidence. It may be best for us that this is so. So then if in our distrust of humanity, poor erring creatures of a day, we can only look to Jesus, how grand and glorious the sight! This is our privilege. Blessed privilege, "to be near and like my Lord"; to feel warmth and strength, enlightenment to the eyes, understanding to the mind, courage to the heart, "strong in the Lord and in the power of his might."

In looking to Jesus you cannot go wrong, but walking in the right way, in the light of his countenance, then shall your righteousness be brought forth as the light, and others, seeing your good works, may be led to glorify your Father which is in heaven.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Northern Indiana and Michigan Union State Conference met according to appointment with the church in East Gilead, Branch Co., Mich., Feb. 7th, and closed up with the communion service in the evening of Feb. 10th. The business meeting was opened by prayer by Eld. A. N. Seymour. Then the report of last Conference was read. Then some deeply interesting letters were read from Geo. E. Pullen, now in the East, Bro. John Watkins of Bangor, Mich., also one from Bro. J. Holler of Nashville, Mich., and one from John McQueen of Hillsdale, Mich. All these letters flowed from warm and earnest hearts devoted to the truth of the speedy coming of our great High Priest and Chief Shepherd.

The devotional and business committees as usual were chosen. In consequence of the weather, badness of roads and sickness, but few of our dear brethren and sisters were out from our various churches, but those that were there seemed to enjoy it much. Our congregations from the surrounding community were generally good, and very attentive. Brn. James Ferris and John Carver filled the desk, and spoke words of comfort and encouragement to their congregations.

The churches in Gilead and Woodbridge united with the Conference, and we hope the time will soon come when the church in Algansee will do the same thing. They are with us in faith and hope fully. The Conference needs their influence, prayers and counsel, and we sincerely hope that the cause of their holding back will speedily be removed, so that we can join heart and hand in spreading the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, shed on us from the face of Jesus, upon the society in which we move. The Algansee church is troubled somewhat with secret society influence. If all or each member of the church will fully consecrate themselves to God and his truth, that influence will be laid aside, and the Holy Spirit will take its place, and souls will be brought into the fold of Christ. As the result, taking all things into consideration, we had a good meeting. A. N. SEYMOUR, Sec.

STEP BY STEP.

Step by step the Saviour leads us,
Walking closely at our side;
By the "littles" we are learning
As our moments swiftly glide.

Line by line he marks the lesson,
Never is the task too long;
He apportions in his wisdom
To the weak and to the strong.

One by one we grasp the import
Of the promises divine;
Learn to claim them as we need them,
And to say all thine are mine.

Day by day its passing moments
Leave us nearer home when flown,
Where no more in part discerning,
We shall know as we are known.

IMPORTANCE OF TRUTH.

BY T. L. WAUGH.

Jesus says, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth." Again the apostle says, "Let your loins be girt about with truth." We see from the above passages that truth is important; hence we are told to cease "from the instruction that causeth to err from the words of knowledge." While it is true that men may hold the truth in unrighteousness, that does not argue that error will answer just as well, for it will not. To be sure we must be upright and pure in heart, which, together with a correct doctrinal belief, will fit the Christian for usefulness, and make him a symmetrical man of God.

We are living in an age when the doctrines and commandments of men are being taught instead of the pure Word of God. A cold rationalism has taken the place of divine revelation, and multitudes are being led away into modern infidelity. How sad to see some who adopt as their standard, "to the law and to the testimony," while at the same time they reject both. Blind leaders of the blind! May God open their eyes to see their danger before it is too late.

There are a few who are holding up the light before a gainsaying world, in spite of the opposition they have to encounter. Brethren, let us hold fast the faithful Word.

Morris, Ct.

FROM F. A. CHENEY.

Bro. Stockman:—Thinking perhaps a few words from me may interest some of the readers of the Crisis, I wish to say I am still trying to serve our blessed Master, and as my health is such that I am not able to go from home much this winter, I have commenced meetings in my own house every Sunday eve in the district called Nineveh, two miles from Tyson Furnace. My meetings commenced with eight hearers, and have increased to thirty attentive listeners. We are nearly surrounded by Spiritualists and Catholics. May the Lord send the truth to some hearts is my prayer. I feel that what is done must be done quickly, for the Master standeth before the door.

Dear brethren and sisters, will you not pray for us, that when Jesus comes we may hear him say, "Well-done," and have a home in the new earth, where there will be no parting with loved ones? Our hearts are sad, and we are led to exclaim,

"How long will death, the tyrant, reign?"

Your brother, looking for redemption soon.

INTERESTING PARAGRAPHS.

WHAT A BLIND WOMAN SAW.—One day a gentleman was walking along a quiet street in London, when he met a poor old woman who was quite blind. She was led by the hand of a little girl. The gentleman stopped and spoke to her, and tried to comfort her under the loss of her sight; but she replied, very earnestly, "Oh, sir, you need not pity me, for until I became blind I could never see." The gentleman understood what she meant by this striking answer; but he wished to hear more of her history, so he asked her to explain what she said. She replied: "Oh, sir, I lived more than seventy years in the ways of folly, carelessness, and sin. This world was my rest; and, though I saw many persons around me die, I never felt thoughtful or cared about God and heaven, and I saw no beauty in the Saviour that I should desire him. At length it pleased God that I should lose my sight; then I began to think of another world, and to remember my sins. Things appeared very differently to what they had once done, for 'God shined into my heart, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.' This, sir, is what I meant by saying, 'till I became blind I never could see.'" May the Saviour shine into our minds as he did into the mind of this poor blind woman!—Ex.

TRIFLES make or spoil perfection. A thread of silk across a telescope will hide a star of the twelfth magnitude. So a mere thread of worldliness over the telescope of faith will hide much of heaven. A slight spider's web will keep the dew from falling on the ground beneath, so that it will be dry, while all around is moistened. How slight a thing will prevent the dews of grace from falling upon your dry and parched soul! Brush away the thread that you may have a clearer vision? Sweep down the spider's web and receive the dews of grace, and "the showers of blessing" from on high? Let nothing, no matter how slight, come between your soul and heaven.—Ex.

WISDOM—HEAVENLY.—Heavenly wisdom creates heavenly utterance. There is something in preaching the gospel with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven I long to get at. If we deal with divine realities, we ought to feel them such, and then the people will in general feel with us, and acknowledge the power that does wonders on the heart; while dry, formal, discussional preaching leaves the hearers just where it found them. Still, they who are this favored have need to be blessed with a deal of humility. We are too apt to be proud of that which is not our own. O humility, humility, humility!—Rowland Hill.

MR. F. H. TEBBETTS, one of the survivors of the City of Columbus disaster, relates the following incident of a "stout man" near him in the rigging who was terribly afraid to die: "I told him to pray, but he said he couldn't. I told him that there was little chance for life, and he should take the opportunity to make his peace with God. I prayed with him, and he did so, and said he felt better. A young man near me was in great mental distress. He told me he didn't know how to pray and couldn't, he had led such a wicked life. At last he said: 'I will not go before my Maker with a pack of cards in my pocket, and he threw his cards overboard, but he perished with the wreck."—Exchange.

WHAT are the things that set your whole souls on fire? Is it reputation? money? pleasure? power? self-gratification? promotion? the world in any or all of its forms? Or are you interested in the deep things of God? What concerns you most? A few paltry ceremonies, or a living, indwelling, abiding Christ? What do you most think about and talk about? Where do you put your money? What do you consider the safest and most profitable investment? Where does your heart find its treasure? By such questions as these can you gauge your personal piety and your faith in spiritual and eternal things?—Exchange.

OUR perplexities and griefs are never alleviated by complaints and murmurings. By dwelling on our sorrows we only magnify them, and make their burden seem heavier still. "When the flail of affliction is upon me," says a thoughtful writer, "let me not be the chaff that flies in thy face, but let me be the corn that lies at thy feet." Our Lord has taught us, by his own patient humiliation and suffering, that even the greatest hardships, the severest trials, and the keenest griefs are to be borne in meekness and uncomplaining silence.—Ex.

THE glittering sword with its keen edge and jeweled hilt is an object of beauty as a work of art, yet it is harmless; but in the muscular grip of a soldier's hand and swung with a purpose and an aim, it is a dreaded weapon. So with truth wielded with skill and power by the consecrated preacher.—Exchange.

TEMPERANCE.

PROHIBITION IN MAINE.

Mr. D. R. Locke, who has been looking into prohibition in Maine, dives into history back to the time when Portland had a population of 30,000 and 400 saloons, and Neal Dow was mayor. He had made a fortune as a tanner, and was bent on ridding Maine of the rule of rum. He went to Augusta and fought through his famous Maine liquor law. Then, as Mayor of Portland, he published his proclamation. The liquor dealers laughed at him. A law so sweeping in its provisions could never be enforced in Maine, and they did not propose to pay any attention to it. They went right along buying and selling just the same as if there had been no law passed and no Neal Dow to see its enforcement.

The date fixed for the removal of the liquor arrived, and found the business in the same condition as when the proclamation was issued. They did not believe that he dared to attempt the execution of the law. They did not know the man. Promptly at the time, he moved not upon the obscure doggeries, but upon the largest and most influential concern of the city, a vast wholesale grocery and liquor house. It must be understood that at that time groceries and liquor were inseparable. The wholesale grocery houses were also liquor houses, and ninety per cent of their trade, and by far the most profitable end of it was liquor. He deliberately seized the entire stock of liquors, and, under the law, burst in the heads of the barrels and emptied them all into the gutter. That gutter never carried away so costly a flood, or one that wrought more good for the people. It was never before so useful a gutter. It had been built to carry to the great purifier, the sea, the filth of the city. It carried more death to the harbor that morning than it had ever before. It was a good one for Portland and a very bad one for the fish.

The trade was astonished at this bold action. Another and another of the great houses were attacked, and in all cases with the same result. And, when the leviathans were exhausted, the minnows were gobbled up. He moved upon the small bars and the small groceries just as he had upon the great ones, and in a week he had shown the liquor dealers that there was vitality in the law, and that it could be executed.—Chicago News.

A STRIKING result of the prohibition of the importation and sale of intoxicating drinks in the northwest territories of Canada has recently been brought to light, as the construction of the Canada Pacific Railway has been pushed westward across the prairies to the Rocky mountains. In marked contrast with the anarchy and drunkenness that arose in the frontier towns along the lines, when under construction, of the Union Pacific, Central Pacific, Denver and Rio Grande, Northern Pacific, and the other great lines in the United States, peace and order have invariably accompanied the construction of the Canada Pacific Railway, owing to the absence of the great incentives to violence and crime—drinking saloons and gambling dens. The remarkable rapidity of construction, reaching at times three or four miles per day, may in some degree be attributed to the entire prohibition of intoxicating drink to the workmen.—Ex.

AN old negro at Weldon, North Carolina, at a recent lecture said: "When I sees a man going home with a gallon of whiskey and a half a pound of meat, dat's temperance lecture enuff for me, and I sees it ebery day! I knows that every ting in his home is on de same scale—gallon of misery to ebery half pound of comfort."

THE communities in the United States which use the most whisky will be found to be those that use the most lager beer, ale and wine. The Anglo-Saxon parents who teach their boys to use lager beer, ale and wine as a beverage, will sooner or later find their boys have passed beyond the instructions.—Ex.

WHO are the drunkards of to-day? In most cases they are the men who were respectable and sober half a dozen years ago.

From wailing lips a triumph song
Shall surely soon be coming.

Brows bowed so long lift up to light,
Not moist with unrequited labor,
And hands are clasped—the dark and white—
The bondman is the friend and neighbor;
And his own brother hath forborne
To make his bruised manhood mourn,
For traveling through the shadowy years
The Just, the Merciful, appears,
Behold! the Lord is coming!

CHRIST OUR SACRIFICE.

BY J. S. WHITE.

"For even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us." Rom. 5: 7.

As the wages of sin is death, justice demands the death of the sinner, as the wages of his sin. The law requires perfect obedience. The subject of the law, who fails to keep the law, comes under the penalty of the law. The law cannot save the transgressor. "If there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law." Gal. 3: 21. "If righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain." Gal. 2: 21. If the law could have saved men, Christ need not have died. "By the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight; for by the law is the knowledge of sin." Rom. 3: 20. As the law cannot save the sinner, and as the sinner cannot save himself, it follows that, for him to be saved, some one who has not sinned must take his place, and meet the demands of the law—must suffer and die in his stead. Jesus came into the world to suffer and die, that God "might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus." Rom. 3: 26. This supposes that God will not save men, and be just, except by the suffering and death of his Son. If he could save men without so great a sacrifice, why need Christ suffer and die as he did?

The law has a claim on its subjects. If men obey, they are justified by the law. If they disobey they are by the law condemned. It is, with the subject, do and live, or, not do and die. The law is a system of justice; its claims are just. The transgressor is indebted to the law. "The wages of sin is death." For the sins which men commit they must die. The law in justice holds this claim over them. It verily says, "Pay me what thou owest." As the transgressor cannot pay the debt, and at the same time be saved, it follows that, for him to be saved, he must have a Saviour, one who is "without spot and blameless"; one who is "mighty to save to the uttermost" all who will apply to him.

God, in his infinite mercy and in his wonderful plan of salvation, "so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish [might not have the wages of sin], but have everlasting life." "For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be saved." John 3: 16, 17.

The Son of God, descending from heaven, took not on him the nature of angels, but took on him the seed of the woman, in which he suffered and died, the just for the unjust. 1 Pet. 3: 18. "Jesus died for the ungodly." Rom. 5: 6. Christ "came into the world to save sinners." 1 Tim. 1: 15. To save the sinner is to save him from sin and the wages of sin, which is death. "For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin." 2 Cor. 5: 21. "Christ our passover is sacrificed for us." 2 Cor. 5: 7. "He hath ap eared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." Heb. 9: 26. "For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." 2 Cor. 5: 21. Christ once appeared to bear the sins of many. Heb. 9: 28. "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us." Gal. 2: 13. Jesus was "a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief." "Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows." He was "stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed." "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all. He was oppressed, and he was afflicted." "For the transgression of my people was he stricken." "Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief: when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin." "My righteous servant shall justify many; for he shall bear their iniquities." See Isaiah chap. 53.

Jesus suffered and died a substitute for us—in our place, that we might not die for our sins. He tasted death for every man. The iniquity of us all was laid on him. "Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." Rom. 10: 4. Jesus bore the penalty of the law in its full sense; which is a life of suffering, ending in death. As Jesus did [illegible] suffer and die to save man from suffering and dying in this life, he did suffer and die to save him from suffering and dying in a life beyond this life. Jesus, in mercy, took on man's condition; suffered and died; went to the end of the law in its penalty. He stood in the place of the sinner; met the claim which the law had on the sinner, and paid the debt, which the law in justice demanded to be done. "And ye are not your own? for ye are bought with a price." 1 Cor. 6: 20. Christ has paid the sinner's indebtedness to the law; so God can be just and justify him that believes in Jesus. Rom. 3: 26. Christ's people are his by purchase. "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." Rom. 8: 1.

If the scriptures to which we have referred, with others of like import, do not very plainly show that Christ has become our substitute, then it is impossible to prove it by any words that can be employed, without using the word itself. Jesus has taken the place of the sinner; he has suffered [illegible] "He is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." 1 John 2: 2.

How could Christ taste death for every man? If he were only a man, though perfect as he was, how could he take the place of more than one sinner? If he were but a man, how could he, by laying down his life, make atonement for more than one sinner? We read that it was not possible for the blood of beasts to take away sins. It requires a great sacrifice to take away the sins of one sinner; much more to make a sacrifice for the sins of the world. Jesus was more than a man. He was the only begotten Son of God. He was far above the angels. He was the beginning of the creation of God. "Who is the image of the invisible God, the first born of every creature." Col. 1: 15. "His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of peace." Isa. 9: 6. The Father has given to his Son the same honor he has taken to himself. "When he bringeth in the first begotten into the world, he saith, And let all the angels of God worship him." Heb. 1: 6. "It is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God; and him only shalt thou serve." The wise men of the east, being directed of God to the place where they found Jesus, "fell down and worshiped him." Matt. 2: 11. "For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son; that all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. He that honoreth not the Son [even as he should honor the Father], honoreth not the Father which hath sent him." Jesus said, "I and my Father are one." The Father has spoken of his Son as one with him in the creation, and upholder of all things. Hebrews 1st chapter.

God's Son, in the dignity of his character and elevation of his being, is beyond man's comprehension. Well might the apostle say, "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift"; and, "Great is the mystery of godliness; God manifest in the flesh." This is the being who "tasted death" for every man, and who is able to save to the uttermost all who will receive him.

THE COVENANT.

BY MILES GRANT.

In Dan. 9: 26, 27, we read, "After threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself; and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary. . . . And he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week, and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease." Three questions arise: (1) What covenant was confirmed for one week? (2) What "prince" confirmed it? (3) How was it confirmed?

1. What covenant? It could not have been the one made with Abraham, or that was confirmed many hundred years before Christ. It was not the one made with the children of Israel at Mt. Horeb or Sinai; because that was not confirmed by "the prince"; but the evidence is very clear to show that it was the one made between the Lord and the children of Israel, after they left Mt. Horeb. This remarkable covenant is recorded in the 28th chapter of Deuteronomy. The first fifteen verses contain a list of blessings that should be enjoyed by the children of Israel, if they kept their part of the covenant; and the remaining fifty-three verses the curses that should come upon them if they did not keep the covenant. The following are some of the curses: "Thou shalt become an astonishment, a proverb, and a byword, among all nations whither the Lord shall lead thee." Deut. 28: 37. "Thou shalt come down very low." Ver. 43. "A nation of fierce countenance . . . shall besiege thee in all thy gates, until thy high and fenced walls come down wherein thou trustedst." This was B. C. 1451, before they built any walls, or possessed Jerusalem. "And thou shalt eat the fruit of thine own body, the flesh of thy sons and of thy daughters, which the Lord thy God hath given thee, in the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee. . . . The tender and delicate woman among you . . . shall eat them for want of all things secretly in the siege and straitness wherewith thine enemy shall distress thee in thy gates (vs. 50–57). . . . And ye shall be plucked from off the land whither thou goest to possess it. And the Lord shall scatter thee among all people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other." vs. 63, 64. After specifying these conditions of the covenant, the next verse reads, "These are the words of the covenant which the Lord commanded Moses to make with the children of Israel in the land of Moab, beside the covenant which he made with them in Horeb." He goes on to say, "All the curses of the covenant" shall come upon them "if they keep not the covenant . . . which the Lord thy God maketh with thee this day." Deut 29: 12–21.

It is certain that they broke the covenant on their part. Did the Lord keep it on his part? It would require human agency to confirm his part of the covenant. There must be a "siege," during which "the tender and delicate woman" would eat human flesh. This was literally accomplished in A. D. 70, when the Romans besieged Jerusalem. Josephus says:

"I am going to relate a matter of fact, the like to which no histories relate, either among the Greeks or barbarians. There was a certain woman that dwelt beyond Jordan—her name was Mary. . . . She was eminent for her family and her wealth, and fled away to Jerusalem with the rest of the multitude, and was with them besieged. [illegible] She then attempted a most unnatural thing; and snatching up her son, . . . she said, 'O thou miserable infant! [illegible] Come on, be thou my food, [illegible] and a byword to the world, [illegible] to complete the calamities of us Jews.' As soon as she had said this she slew her son, and then roasted him, and ate the one half of him, and kept the other half concealed. Upon this the seditious came in presently, and smelling the horrid scent of the food, they threatened her that they would cut her throat immediately if she did not show them what food she had gotten ready. . . . She uncovered what was left of her son. Hereupon, they were seized with horror and amazement of mind, and stood astonished at the sight."—Josephus' Wars, Book 6, chap. 3, sec. 4.

Thus the Lord confirmed his part of the covenant recorded in Deut. 28. Observe: the covenant in Dan. 9: 27 must be confirmed by a certain "prince," who would "destroy the city and the sanctuary"; hence this covenant could not be confirmed till the time arrived to destroy the city of Jerusalem.

2. Who was the "prince" that did the work of confirming "the covenant for one week"? But one answer is at hand—Titus, the son of Vespasian, the emperor of Rome. He besieged the city, and during that siege and seven years' war the Lord fully confirmed his part of the covenant, and since A. D. 74, when the war ended, Jerusalem has been trodden down by the Gentiles, and the Jews have been scattered among all nations, as declared in the covenant.

3. It is now plain as to how the covenant was confirmed, as well as by whom it was done. In the midst, or half part, of the confirmation week, the sacrifice and oblation ceased, as declared by the angel Gabriel, more than five hundred years before it was accomplished. When the Lord makes a covenant, either for blessings or curses, he is faithful to confirm, or perform, his part. He employs whoever he chooses to execute his purposes. In this case, a certain "prince" was named in the prophecy, who should "destroy the city and the sanctuary." Titus did all the work specified to be done by "the prince." He destroyed "the city and the sanctuary," and took away the daily sacrifice in the midst of the midst of the war week.

SEARCH THE CAMP.

BY JOHN JEFFREY.

"Up, sanctify the people."—Josh. 7: 13.

Holiness is required now as much as it ever was. In ancient times the Lord required his people to be holy when they appeared before him for to worship. "I am the Lord your God; ye shall be holy, for I am holy." Lev. 11: 45.

The words, "Search the camp," came to my mind very forcibly after learning by sad experience the condition of things at a certain campmeeting. To this campmeeting I had a free pass, and an invitation for which I was thankful. I was very much pleased to see the notice given: "All ministers that can work as the Lord directs, keeping self behind the cross, are invited to attend." I wish to say right here for the glory of God and the cause of my dear Master, that I neither want a free pass nor an invitation to any campmeeting again, unless ice cream and candy stands are kept with the ministers, behind the cross on Sundays.

Brethren, we must search the camp, for somebody has coveted the wedge of gold, and the Babylonish garment. There is sin in the camp. God cannot work. Search, find out the Achan. Sanctify yourselves, consecrate all to the Lord. Get right, confess, examine yourselves, and see if you are in the faith. You can take Ai and conquer the devil if you have the Almighty to fight your battles. Look over Israel to-day. See what conformity to the world, to its maxims, its follies, its fashions. The spirit of covetousness is eating out the life and power of the church. Is it any wonder that there are no more revivals of religion? No more cities captured for God? Is it any wonder that ministers pray and preach and labor until they faint, and their hearts melt as water when Israel does not come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty?

When Joshua was to lead the conquering hosts across Jordan, to take possession of the goodly land, he said unto them, "Sanctify yourselves; for to-morrow the Lord will do wonders among you." Josh 3: 5. We as a people are looking for Jesus soon to come, and we cannot afford to be mixing in with the maxims and follies of the world. Purity was essential to the divine guidance, and their triumphant entrance into the promised Canaan. With holiness in their steps, and floating on their banners, they could throw down the walls of Jericho with rams' horns and trumpets; but with an Achan in the camp they were compelled to flee before their enemies. In their unsuccessful attempt to capture Ai, do we not see a parallel in the church at the present time? When ministers try to rally Israel's hosts to overcome the world, they too often find their arm paralyzed, their strength gone, and their enemies too strong for them. Why is it? There is an Achan in the camp.

Nearness of life to the Saviour will necessarily involve greatness of love to him. As nearness to the sun increases the temperature of the various planets, so near and intimate communion with Jesus raises the heat of the soul's affections toward him.—Ex.

God's people are sure of final victory.

MERCY DESIRED AND SOUGHT.

BY W. KELLAWAY.

Every heart not utterly senseless to its true condition must realize at times its imperative need of mercy from on high. It is well, when by the Spirit's working, that same heart is led to desire the salvation of the Lord, and through an implanted or aroused hope seek it with the whole heart.

To feel to need mercy is one and the first hopeful sign in the progress of being at peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. How many there are who are obdurate, whose hearts are hearts of stone, who have no feeling as to their need of divine pardon. But if to us has been granted the feeling expressed in the little stanza

"I need thee, precious Jesus,"

let us rejoice and take courage, for this is surely the first step to acquaintance with God, that shall be to us peace, and in the end eternal life.

But the next step is to desire—"covet," if you will. We may covet to have an injured party make no account of the wrong done to him, his rights, or that which is his. We may covet necessaries of the bounty of him in whose power it is to bestow them. "I want," is a legitimate state when it is within lawful limits. Blessed is he who has progressed toward peace with God from "I need" to "I want," from necessity to desire. To feel "I want" is proof that the thing we would have has come to have value in our eyes. Desire is a variable quantity; in some more than in others. But when the heart comes to the thirst, the engrossing desire, for a thing expressed by David when he said, "As the hart panteth after the water-brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God"—when it even appears to outsiders that naught else will satisfy us, and that we are truly sick with desire,—then indeed that thing, if not altogether impossible to realization, will soon be obtained. So if the Spirit has led to a desire for God's mercy that regards nothing else as pleasant or attractive, we may know we have come far on in the way of having. But, reader, if there is but a weak desire in your heart for His favor, thank God even for that, encourage it, feed it with meditation upon the object desired, it will lead you on at the last to the enjoyment of the blessing.

But now if in addition to a perception of our need of the remission and bestowments of divine mercy, and a living desire to have them for our own, we are so aroused as to seek them in repentance and humility of the God of heaven, we may be sure we have almost reached the goal; for, did not our Saviour say, "He that seeketh, findeth"? And has not God pledged himself that "in the day when we seek him with all the heart, he will be found of us"? we shall realize his existence, we shall make his acquaintance, he will be to us henceforth "God our Saviour"! Seeking, when it commences in need and desire, cannot fail. There are those who "seek" and who obtain nothing, nor at the last are they able to enter in; but they are not those whose eyelashes have lifted, and who, having seen their peril, have desired a place of safety, and have fled to security. Such "find" every time. Seeking tells the seeker has a hope, sometimes well-founded, sometimes not. When it is "hope toward God" then it is well-grounded; for Jesus, the divine executive, has directly said: "Come . . . and I will give you rest." That word alone would be sufficient for a wishing heart to act upon, in the way of seeking, or applying for the boon wanted. So then needy, desiring soul, seek; for "every one"—it is Jesus' own word—"that asketh receiveth." From need pass on to desire, from desire pass on to seeking; and I will warrant you that from seeking you shall go on to obtaining. And then, "How happy is the man whose transgressions are forgiven, whose sin is covered, unto whom the Lord imputeth not iniquity, and in whose spirit there is no guile"! O, know this happiness; and it is to be experienced by taking the path we have traced.

"But," says one, needy and desirous of salvation, "tell me how to act." Seeking, beloved, takes all manner of directions, according to the moral state or place occupied by the seeker; but it always has one ultimate object—He who is able and generous to save sinners, Jesus. Just as at the last the ransomed from among men gather from north, south, east and west, to the kingdom of God, so in seeking God as the God ready to pardon, the God of all grace, the God of much mercy, sinners come to him from the various ways in which they have wandered—leaving their old practices, of course—as it is written, "we have wandered every one in his own way." They come, too, some with little hope, and some with great confidence. There are persons who are naturally diffident, and there are others smitten and oppressed by a deep sense of their depravity and the sinfulness of their lives,—these, oftentimes, though they have the true and acceptable spirit of seeking, have not courage equal to a direct approach to the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world. True, he, and he alone, is their ultimate object, and it is in his love and might they repose their faint hope. Hence, they say to those who are his professed people, and whom they regard as in a state of grace, in the favor of the Lord Jesus and close intimacy with him, "Pray for me;" "Speak to the Lord Jesus; mention my case to him; ask him to be merciful to wretched me." Nor is even this intermediate way of approach fruitless of blessing, although of course it is the Great Physician, and not the kindness of friends who works the cure.

I remember reading in the gospel by Luke of a Roman officer's servant who was made well primarily by the intercession of others. This Roman official was captain over a hundred men and lived at Capernaum. He was not a callous, blood-thirsty man, though a soldier, but had social virtues and withal a benevolent disposition. He had for a servant a man who had attended him faithfully, and to whom he became greatly attached. We read, his servant "was dear unto him." He heard of the Lord Jesus, and faith came by hearing. But how could he go to Jesus—he who was a Roman, while Jesus was a Jew, for aught he knew with all the prejudices of a Jew, who disdained to transact business with Gentiles. But he was equal to the circumstances. Said he, in his heart, "Although Jesus will have nothing to say to me, if I can interest those of his own faith and kin, I shall obtain my desire;" so he sent one to seek the elders of the Jews. He was known to them; for he [illegible] proved that he loved them. They consented to speak for him; and departed to where Jesus was. They besought the Good Master that he would come and heal the centurion's servant, and they mentioned the favorable points in his spirit and character; saying, "That he was worthy for whom he should do this: for he loveth our nation, and hath built us a synagogue." They saw good qualities, kind traits in the centurion; and they named these to ingratiate him into the Master's favor. Jesus heard them through, and went with them. But when Jesus was coming the Roman officer sent friends to him, saying, "Lord, trouble not thyself; for I am not worthy that thou shouldest come under my roof; wherefore, neither thought I myself worthy to come unto thee: but say in a word, and my servant shall be healed."

More was added, so much so that he who was astonished at men's unbelief, it was so great, was for once astonished at this Gentile's faith. Jesus certainly could not refuse to bless, after so much honor had been done him; and the friends of the centurion went back to find the sick man well. Here is the case of one who desired a blessing, and who felt he was not "worthy" to go personally to Jesus, and so engaged others in his behalf to intercede with the Healer. And those who are of this humble state of mind to-day, may they not confidently say to those who are not simply his kith and kin after the flesh, but "one spirit with the Lord," "Pray for us;" and believe that "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much?" So, let not the faintly hoping despair.

And for the further encouragement of such—for those who have courage enough to come immediately to Christ do not need to be heartened—I call to remembrance what friends through their zeal and faith have obtained for those dear unto them of the Saviour of the world. Jesus is at Capernaum—the same place as the centurion's home. He was discoursing in a house, and many gathered to listen to him. The rooms were filled; the house was crowded to the doors. A litter is borne along, and a poor palsied man lies upon it. The bearers are bent on coming at Jesus. But they could not "come nigh" unto him. Obstacles stood in their way. However, they are of the class who are determined to approach. So going on to the flat roof of the house they removed part of the roof, and "let down the bed wherein the sick of the palsy lay." Jesus takes notice. And we read: "When Jesus saw their faith, he said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy sins be forgiven thee." "Their faith." O what encouragement for the sin-sick! If in our diffidence or impotence we cannot go unto the Sin-bearer, we can be brought to him, and thus "come nigh" unto him, and "find" him in the way our hearts pine for—as our Saviour and Life-giver.

Come, sinner, then, you who need and desire, and seek the Lord while he may be found. O, cry out to him while he is near. The steps are—need—desire—seeking; and the end is—acquaintance.

PROPHECIES CONCERNING CHRIST AND THE CHURCH.

BY J. F. CLOTHEY.

"Come and let us return unto the Lord: for he hath torn, and he will heal us; he hath smitten, and he will bind us up. After two days will he revive us: in the third day he will raise us up, and we shall live in his sight." Hosea 6: 1, 2.

Christ is the head of the church. "For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church: and he is the saviour of the body." Eph. 5: 23. "And he (Christ) is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead; that in all things he might have the pre-eminence." Col. 1: 18.

The church is the body of Christ. "And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all." Eph. 1: 22, 23. See also Col. 1: 24, and Rom. 12: 5.

Christ is separated from the church by crucifixion and death, and is raised the third day. 1 Cor. 15; 4. The days spoken of in Hosea are typical. God made the world in six days, and rested on the seventh. Each day is therefore a type of a thousand years. "Adam lived nine hundred and thirty years and he died." God had said "in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Therefore Adam died in a day of a thousand years.

Peter alludes to a thousand years-day in his second epistle, third chapter, seventh and eighth verses. John the revelator in the twentieth chapter speaks of the reign of Christ, and those that come up in the first resurrection, "and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years."

The world has stood nearly six thousand years, or six days. Our Lord Jesus made his first advent on the fifth day, or when the world was a little over four thousand years old; consequently there remained two days more, or nearly two thousand years, at the expiration of which this prophecy must be fulfilled by the raising of the church, or the body of Christ from the dead. In other words, after the expiration of two days, during which time the church, the body, is separated from the head, the two must be united by the coming of Christ and a resurrection from the dead. Thus as Christ was raised from the dead on the third day according to the Scriptures, so on the third day the church will be made alive.

The body has suffered with the head. If we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him. The church has suffered. Her great tribulation is in the past. "He hath torn, and he will heal us." Hosea 6: 1. Isaiah 53: 4. The head still lives—the body must live also. John 11: 25; John 14: 19. "Christ the first fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." 1 Cor. 15: 23. "There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God." Heb. 4: 9—(margin—keeping of a Sabbath).

God rested on the seventh day. This is a type of the seventh thousand years, when Christ and the church shall reign on the earth. Rev. 20: 4, 5, 6. According to the best chronology the six thousand years have almost expired. Therefore we may confidently look for the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ.

CRUCIFIED WITH HIM.

BY H. B. SAYEY.

"And they that are of Christ Jesus have crucified the flesh with the passions and the lusts thereof."—(N. V.) Gal. 5: 24.

The gospel of Christ proposes a change in man who by nature is in opposition to the divine will of his Creator. Mankind are all alike by nature. As the Lord looked down upon man after his disobedience, he saw that the imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil every day. Jesus says, "For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies, these are the things which defileth a man." This is the condition in which by nature man finds himself, alike in kind, but not in degree. Yet all alike need and must have a divine power to raise him from this fallen and sinful condition, and this power God has invested in his Son, who was made sin for us, that our righteousness might be found in him by being partakers of his Spirit, which he has sent into the world, to reprove the world of sin, and to change the hearts of men into the likeness of his Son by that Spirit which he freely gives to all. Thus all are without an excuse. Not one can say, "I never felt the reproving Spirit, who has come to the years of accountability. This Spirit is not only a reproving but a cleansing agent when received fully into the heart. It subdues all sinful passions, takes possession and controls our entire being; holds in check every member, so we can say, "All things are become new." This change may be all at once, or it may be a gradual one; but when the change has taken place, all know it; all know when they have crucified the flesh with the passions and "lusts," for they that are Christ's have crucified these, and no one can claim that he is of Christ Jesus until he has thus submitted to Christ Jesus.

Being led by his Spirit, we become his sons. "Now are we the sons of God"—in the present tense—not always going to be, and never attain to it; but his Spirit witnesses with our spirit that we are his children: old things are past away—the lusts of the flesh and the passions thereof, and all things are become new. The lust of the eye and the pride of life no more control us. We are controlled by a more noble influence, a divine one; yet we have a continual warfare; the world, flesh and the devil are our enemies. But our warfare is not an uncertain one. We are more than conquerers through Christ, and are enabled to keep all these adversaries beneath our feet, being kept by God's power (not our own), through faith. The act of the creature, the keeping power of the Creator in exercise, and no fear of falling while the everlasting arms are underneath. Satan's power is limited; God's grace is sufficient. No thorns too sharp; no temptation too severe. "My grace is all you need. I am your strength; be still in weakness; I will manifest my power in your lack of knowledge; I will be your wisdom; I am your Saviour; I will never leave you, fear not; I will be with you to hold you from falling; only believe; all things are possible to him that believeth."

I believe, blessed be God, he saves me now. I am crucified with him. I live, yet not I, but Christ lives in me.

"To God I'm reconciled;
His pardoning voice I hear;
He owns me for his child;
I do no longer fear."

Dear reader, have you this experience? Have you crucified the flesh with the passions and lusts thereof? If not, you are in a lost condition. Yet there is hope in your case. Jesus is now all ready to plead your case. You can come to the fountain and be made clean. Will you just now? Say, will you come and become the child of God?

THE SACRED LETTERS.

BY C. F. DOW.

We have seen mention made of the sacred number 7, and have seen the letter G made prominent without an explanation; and surely an Atheist would have no use for the expressive capital G as meaning God; nor would an ignoramus need it to indicate a knowledge of the mathematical science of geometry. "Progression" in that department is somewhat laborious. In Catholic churches, and some copying, and perhaps truly evangelical churches, may be seen made conspicuous the letters I. H. S., and many that see them do not know why they are there, or what they signify. They are the initials of the Latin phrase or sentiment: "Jesus Hominum Salvator" Jesus the Saviour of men. Or, "In Hoc Salus"—In Him is Salvation. Facts to be remembered. St. Bernardine was the author of this. It was thus: "A maker of playing-cards, which, like missals, were illuminated in those times, was one day remonstrated with by St. Bernardine upon the sinfulness of his business. The card-maker plead the wants of his family. "Well, I will help you," said the saint; and he wrote the letters I. H. S., which he advised the card-maker to paint and gild. The new card, under saintly patronage and authorization, took well, and St. Bernardine travelled about the country to post these Sacred Letters of the church. It is said that after the termination of "the plague of 1347 the saint put them in a circle over the principal door of the church of the Holy Cross in Florence, the "City of Flowers;" after which, and ever since they have been [illegible]

THE RECKONING OF OLYMPIADS.

BY L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

Josephus says (Ant., B. 14, ch. 14, s. 5)—"Antony also feasted Herod the first day of his reign. And thus did this man receive the kingdom, having obtained it on the 184th Olympiad, when Caius Domitius Calvinus was consul the second time, and Caius Asinius Pollio [the first time]."

S. Bliss says (p. 19 of his Anal. of Sac. Chron.)—"This era (of the Olympiads) dates from July 19, B. C. 776, from which time the Olympic games were celebrated by the Grecians once in four years without interruption. An OLYMPIAD is a cycle of four years." Now if the first Olympiad was celebrated B. C. 776, the second Olympiad would fall B. C. 772, and the third B. C. 768, thus making but eight years from the first to the third Olympiad; consequently Herod's reign, according to Josephus, began 732 years from the first Olympiad; synchronizing with B. C. 44, or 44 years before A. D. 1.

Again, says Josephus (Ant., B. 14, c. 16, s. 1), after speaking of the taking of Jerusalem by Sosius and Herod—"This destruction befell the city of Jerusalem when Marcus Agrippa and Caninius Gallus were consuls of Rome, on the 185th Olympiad, on the third month," etc. This was when Antigonus (who was made king of Judea by the Parthians) was taken captive, and soon after put to death. This 185th Olympiad also fell B. C. 40, if the first Olympiad is correctly fixed to B. C. 776.

If our computation of the Olympiads is correct, as applied to the reign of Herod, what becomes of the claim that Herod was made king by the Romans, B. C. 37, and [illegible] the death of Antigonus, B. C. 34? Also, will some of the discerning ones tell the readers of the Crisis how such facts stand related to, or can be reconciled with, the claim that the birth of Christ was in B. C. 5? or that Herod "reigned 34 years from the death of Antigonus"? Ant., B. 17, ch. 8, sec. 1. Figures correctly computed will not deceive; therefore, if B. C. 776 is the correct date for the first Olympiad, then Josephus' dates as to the length of Herod's reign are contradictory.

WOUNDS.

BY L. M. ANDREWS.

There are two kinds of wounds, wounds of the flesh, and wounds of the spirit. Solomon speaks of a wounded spirit thus: "A wounded spirit who can bear?" It is a great deal easier bearing fleshly wounds than it is the wounds of the spirit. David speaks of his "heart wounded within him." The heart is a tender organ, and heart wounds are hard to heal; therefore, we ought to be careful, lest we wound the spirit of each other. The instruments used to inflict spiritual wounds are the words of a talebearer, which are described by Solomon as "deep wounds." O, how many spirits have been wounded by the cruel words of the talebearer! Persons sometimes wound the hearts of others unmeaningly; and yet an accidental wound is just as sore as one inflicted purposely, and it takes the same kind of medicine to heal it.

How many hearts have been wounded; how many spirits have been crushed; how many lives have been blighted by the cruel words of the talebearer, and they all unconscious of doing harm to any. How we need to learn the lesson, "Be swift to hear, slow to speak."

A little word hastily spoken sometimes causes so deep a wound in the heart of others as to turn the whole current of their lives. Truly the apostle was right in saying, "Even so the tongue is a little member, and boasteth great things. Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth. And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity; so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature; and is set on fire of hell" (Ge-henna). The sorest wounds and those hardest to heal, are those made by fire; and when we consider the comparison made by the apostle of the tongue to the fires of the valley of Hinnom, we do not wonder that wounds caused by the evil tongue are so painful and hard to cure.

It is recorded of the good Samaritan, when he found the man wounded, that he "bound up his wounds,"—did not tear them open more; and that he "poured in oil and wine;" the most soothing mixture for wounds, especially for burns. He did not delight to administer an irritating application to the wounds already made so, nor inflict new ones; but to bind up, and soothe and comfort him in his wounded condition. O how many wounded spirits long for a soothing word. How cheap the remedy—only a word—but how it soothes, when mixed with the oil, the loving spirit. How many broken hearts need binding up; hearts that have been wounded by unkind words.

How sweet to know that Jesus feels
The pain of every wound;
That he the wounded spirit heals—
In him is comfort found.

They are never alone that are accompanied with noble thoughts.

SAFE AT HOME.

Those of our Eastern company who left Amboy Thursday morning, arrived at Boston Saturday about noon. Our return trip was very pleasant, although we missed very much many of our outward bound company.

The writer very deeply regretted being obliged, on account of illness caused by the extremely hot weather, to leave Amboy before the Campmeeting closed. Up to the time when we left the meetings were very excellent in tone and fruitful in results. A number had sought the Lord, and several baptisms had occurred.

The Association finished its business before we left, closing very harmoniously. We have space to say only this much before the paper goes to press, but will speak more at length in our next issue. E. A. S.

APOCALYPTIC IMAGERY.

BIDDEFORD, DEC. 16, 1883.

Rev. Wm. Sheldon:—Dear Sir,—Will you please give through the Crisis an exposition of Rev. 13, beginning at the 11th verse, and thus give me some light on this subject?

Very respectfully yours,

CONSTANT READER.

Reply.

In response to the above, we append an extract from our book entitled Apocalyptic Symbols, published several years ago, and now out of print.

We will now briefly glance at the two-horned beast, and the image of the beast. "And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon. And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him [or, 'in his presence.'—Am. Bib. Un. Trans.]: and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast [Rome], whose deadly wound was healed. And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down out of heaven on the earth in the sight of men, and deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by the sword, and did live. And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed. And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads: and that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name. Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is six hundred threescore and six." (Rev. 13: 11–18.)

While the leopard beast is described as rising "out of the sea," like Daniel's four beasts, which arose by a military commotion, this two-horned beast comes up in a quiet manner, not from the tempestuous sea, nor by a military struggle, but "out of the earth," the Roman earth. Its rise is not subsequent to the career of the leopard beast, but though he rises at a little later date, they exist contemporaneously, for in v. 12 we read, "He exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him," or as the Bible Union version reads, "He exercises all the authority of the first beast in his presence." The Greek term here rendered "before" has not the sense of priority, but, "in the presence of," or "in the sight of," and is so rendered in our version about thirty times; and when rendered "before" it has the same meaning as in the following instance, "Righteous before God." Thus these two beasts exist together, and the two-horned beast does miracles "in the sight of the beast" (v. 14) to deceive men. As the two-horned beast "exercises all the power of the" leopard beast "in his presence," they are not antagonistic powers, but are on harmonious terms.

What power lamb-like in appearance, arose during the history of the leopard beast, or Papal Rome, exercising all the power and authority of Rome in its presence? Facts answer a corrupt church power, headed by the papal priesthood, with the "man of sin" as a priestly Potentate. Its two horns of power, spiritual power and temporal power, looked quite lamb-like at first, but in process of time they were so developed that the beast was enabled to "speak as a dragon." By his cunning priestcraft he palmed off numerous miracles upon men, and kept an influence over the leopard beast by doing these miracles in his sight even to the deceptive pretense of calling "holy fire" down from heaven, once a year. The following description of the ceremony is copied from an article in the National Intelligencer:

"During the ceremony of holy fire, which takes place once a year, the scenes of ferocity and violence that occur are indescribable. Religious insanity, and all the horrors of blood-thirsty fanaticism, destroy many of the devotees. Crimes of the darkest character are committed with impunity. Half-naked men and half-frantic women struggle madly through the crowd with live coals of fire pressed to their breasts. Bodies of the stabbed and maimed are dragged out dead; the chanting of the priests, the howling of the burnt, the groaning of the crushed fill the thick suffocating air; and from the swaying mass arise dying shrieks of 'Immanuel! Glory to God!' Sickened with the disgusting and humiliating spectacle, the beholder turns away with the startling words of Ferdinand upon his lips—'Hell is empty, and all the devils are here!'"

This two-horned beast [the Papal church power, or Popedom] began to act in concert with the leopard beast [Papal Rome] as early as A. D. 533, at which epoch the emperor addressed a letter "to John, the most holy Archbishop of our city of Rome," saying, "We hasten to subject and unite to your Holiness all the priests of the whole East;" adding, you "are the HEAD of all the holy churches."

The same emperor, in the same year, styles him, "HEAD OF ALL BISHOPS, and the true and effective CORRECTOR OF HERETICS." But it was not until A. D. 754 that its horn of temporal power was matured, it having previously exercised temporal power through the rulers of the land, and not strictly on an independent basis. O'Conner, a Catholic priest, speaks as follows concerning the events of A. D. 754.

"In the depth of winter the aged Pope crossed the Alps, and, almost perishing, reached the Court of Pepin, where he was received on bended knees; the king begged his blessing for himself and two sons, one of whom was afterwards the celebrated Charlemange. The Pope claimed the protection of the powerful monarch, and begged him to come to the rescue of his people. The king did so, and twice before the walls of Pavia compelled the Lombards to sign a peace, by which the present territory was assigned to the Pope forever. The territory embraced the territory which has ever since belonged to the Holy See."

The fact that Popedom has palmed off numerous spurious miracles, and various restrictions upon its dupes, just as the two-horned beast was to do, is undeniable. And the fact that it has had two lamb-like horns of power—spiritual and temporal—is an incontrovertable fact. It is said that the harlot "woman" (Rev. 17: 18) "reigneth over the kings of the earth;" or, as the Union translation reads, "Has a KINGDOM over the kings of the earth." Here is the horn of spiritual power; and the horn of temporal power makes the second horn of this church beast, or Popedom. This beast, or church power, bids the men of earth "make an image to the beast"—to the leopard beast. Much has been said and written about an "image beast," and numerous attempts have been made to hunt up some power to resemble the leopard beast, as the power symbolized by the image beast. But the truth is, the image beast is simply a creature of imagination. Not a word is said about such a beast in prophecy. The Bible, no where mentions such a beast. It simply speaks of an "image to the beast"—an image for the beast to worship"—elsewhere styled the "image of the beast," and "his image." Not the likeness of the beast—but the idol of the beast—something to be "worshiped" by the beast. When Rome became a Papal kingdom, the old system of the idol worship was discountenanced, and the images of wood, stone, and metal passed away.

So a new system of image worship was devised, the "Virgin Mary," the "Mother of God," being made the most prominent, and being placed in every house of worship. This system of image worship is doubtless the image of the beast—the image long worshiped by the beast (or Papal Rome), introduced by the priesthood — the apostate church power, or two-horned beast. This miracle-working two-horned beast "had power to give life unto the image of the beast [in the same deceptive sense in which he caused fire to come down from heaven], that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed." How numerous are the instances in which the image of the Virgin Mary, and other appendages of this system of image worship, have been shown alive by the priesthood, the eyes of the Virgin being made to roll to and fro, and lips to move, by some invisible wire work, while thousands of stupid dupes regarded it a genuine miracle. At other times the image of Christ has been made to bleed for day after day, by some ingenious arrangement, and these remarkable miracles have fired the hearts of deluded men with such zeal in favor of this system of image worship, that those who stood out against it were deemed deserving of death, and thus many have fallen.

This two-horned beast "causeth all" of his dupes "to receive a MARK in their right hand, or in their foreheads"—just as a shepherd would mark a flock of sheep; some men would use one mark, and some another; but this church beast resorts to the cross (†), which is the "mark" used at various stages in this Papal worship. This mark, on certain occasions, is received in the "right hand," and at other times in the "forehead." Every dupe of Papacy must receive this "mark," or sign of the (†). This mark was devised while Papacy was in its incipient stage, during the reign of Constantine, and received the official sanction of the Popedom after this church beast, or two-horned beast arose, and was enjoined upon all by the priesthood.

This Latin church, or two-horned beast, is to be known by his "number"—"the number of his NAME," just as easily as a man's name could be told by the Greek numerals composing it: "for it is the number of a man," not some system of numerals never employed by man. Here let it be remembered, that John wrote in Greek, and that the Greeks employed their letters as numerals, so that every man's name had a number, which was simply the sum total of the numeral values of the letters employed in spelling his name. So this two-horned beast's name may be learned by the "number of his name," or the numerals employed in giving his name, which number is given by the angel as 666.

Says Dr. Clarke: "The Greek words, signifying Latin Kingdom, do contain the exact number six hundred threescore and six; and no other kingdom on earth can be found that does contain the above number." The exact number is contained in name LATEINOS:

The Greek	L	is a numeral for	30
" "	A	" "	1
" "	T	" "	300
" "	E	" "	5
" "	I	" "	10
" "	N	" "	50
" "	O	" "	70
" "	S	" "	200
			666

The Latin church power is thus easily designated as the two-horned beast. Says Barnes in his notes on Revelation: "It was the Latin world, the Latin kingdom, the Latin church, the Latin patriarch, the Latin clergy, the Latin councils. To use Dr. More's words: 'They Latinize everything. Mass, prayers, hymns, litanies, canons, decretals, bulls, are conceived in Latin. The Papal Council speak in Latin. The Scriptures are read in no other language under Papacy than Latin. In short, all things are Latin.' With what propriety, then, might John under the influence of inspiration speak in this enigmatical manner of the new power that was symbolized by the beast as Latin."

The Papal church has filled the prophecy in name and work, while reigning over the kings of the earth. There were really two Latin kingdoms—the civil empire, and the ecclesiastical kingdom. Dr. Clarke applies the number 666 to the spiritual or ecclesiastical kingdom, and [illegible] it thus:

THE LATIN KINGDOM.

E	8	E
Latine	30	L
	1	A
	300	T
	10	I
	50	N
	8	E
Basileia	2	B
	1	A
	200	S
	10	I
	30	L
	5	E
	10	I
	1	A
	666

The Greek "E Latine Basileia" means THE LATIN KINGDOM. The eastern and western sections of the Roman territory contained respectively the Greek and Latin churches—the Latin church being now recognized under the name of Roman Catholic church.

1. We have found that this two-horned beast was to exist cotemporary with the leopard beast, and work miracles in his sight.

2. The Latin church has done this very work, at just the right time, and the "number of its name" is found to be just 666—thus its name is found by its number.

THE SCARLET BEAST AND HARLOT WOMAN.

"I will show unto thee the judgment of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters, with whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication. So he carried me away in the spirit into the wilderness: and I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet colored beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns. And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet color, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication: and upon her forehead was a name written, MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH. And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus: and when I saw her I wondered with great admiration. And the angel said unto me, "Wherefore didst thou marvel? I will tell thee the mystery of the woman, and of the beast that carrieth her, which hath the seven heads and ten horns." Rev. 17: 1-7)

In examining the thirteenth chapter of Revelation we discover that Papal Rome was symbolized by a beast having seven heads and ten horns, and that the Papal church [or the Popedom] was symbolized by a beast having two horns like a lamb, working spurious miracles in the sight of the ten-horned beast, to deceive men; and Rome was thus kept under the influence of the Papal Church. But in the prophesy now under consideration, instead of having a two-horned beast connected with the ten-horned beast, to symbolize the church of Rome, a harlot woman is presented, intoxicated with the blood of saints.

In the thirteenth chapter, the ten-horned beast was to make war with the saints forty-two months, and the two-horned beast, by his miracles, (through his image, and otherwise,) was to "cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed" so that both the ten-horned beast, and the two-horned beast, were to have a hand in killing the saints. In this chapter John is carried further down the stream of time, and sees the symbol of Papal Rome [the ten-horned beast] already scarlet color, or stained with blood; and the harlot woman (representing the same as the two-horned beast in the other vision) is seen "drunken with the blood of saints."

Lest we make this article too lengthy, the foregoing quotation will suffice. We are aware that others hold a different view, but we are not now contrasting views, but simply presenting our own convictions.

THE SANCTUARY.

When Daniel had seen the vision recorded in the eighth chapter, he heard two holy ones talking on the subject, and, among other things said, was the question, "How long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice and the transgression of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot? And he said unto me, Unto two thousand and three hundred days; then shall the sanctuary be cleansed" (margin, "justified"). The marginal reading has the preference in this case.

The object of this article is to show the meaning of the word sanctuary in Dan. 8: 13, 14, and in other portions of Daniel's prophecy. The case is so clear, it produces surprise that any careful Bible reader should be in doubt on the subject; yet it often happens that human reason is brought to bear against a plain thus saith the Lord, thus producing doubts and darkness. The people living in Daniel's time knew the meaning of the word "sanctuary" and "the daily" as well as we know the meaning of Jerusalem. After the temple was built by Solomon, about one thousand years before Christ, the sanctuary was that part of it where God was worshiped; the place, or room, in which the high priest officiated. This is certain. Why should it be said now that it meant something in the Christian dispensation, two thousand years after Daniel's time? Because the Christian is a temple for the abiding of the Holy Spirit, that does not constitute him a part of the sanctuary in Daniel's prophecy, which was to be trodden under foot for a long period. The sanctuary in Daniel's time was a place, not a people. "The host" were the people who worshiped in the sanctuary. They both have been trodden down by the Gentiles since the ending of the seventy weeks. But when the great prophetic period of 2300 days ends, "then shall the sanctuary be cleansed," or justified.

It has been condemned to be trodden down, in connection with "the host," because of "the transgression" of Israel, "until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Luke 21: 24.

Let us now turn to the Scriptures for proof that the sanctuary in Daniel's prophecy invariably means the temple where they worshiped the Lord of hosts. The word rendered temple in the old version is rendered sanctuary in the new version of the New Testament. In the Septuagint version of Dan. 9: 27, it reads: "And on the temple shall be the abomination of desolation." The Arabic reads: "And upon the sanctuary there shall be the abomination of ruin." When referring to the building of the temple, David said, "Arise therefore, and build ye the sanctuary of the Lord God, to bring the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and the holy vessels of God, into the house that is to be built to the name of the Lord." 1 Chron. 22: 19. Here we learn that "the sanctuary" was something to be built by the people, and when built it would be the place to put "the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and the holy vessels of God." The meaning of the word sanctuary here is so plain, that there is no room for a single doubt.

The sanctuary was built on Mt. Moriah, where the mosque of Omar now stands. No Jew is allowed to visit the spot. Every Friday he may go to "the Jews' wailing place," on the west side of the wall that encloses the Mosque of Omar. When will there be a change? Not till the end of the 2300 days; "then shall the sanctuary be justified." We must be very near the time for the commencement of this important work.

"THE GREAT QUESTION."

A telegram from Berlin, dated Aug. 27th, 1884, states that the three emperors of Europe are about to meet, (1) to devise "measures to suppress anarchists"; (2) to consider "the Egyptian Question", (3) "the settlement of the Congo Question." The telegram further says, "A general Congress, in which the three Imperial powers will act as one, will probably be held in the course of the autumn to regulate all pending questions." The telegram closes by saying, "The great question" relates "to Egypt."

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

BY L. BOUTELL.

Dear Editor:—This is the twenty-first year that I have been permitted by the goodness of God to attend this holy convocation of saints looking for their Lord's coming. From its infancy it has been a growing institution. But as it grew in size, so it grew more difficult to keep the influence of worldly ambition out of its management. As years pass on, the conformity to the world is more visible, in spite of all the remonstrances of the more godlike and spiritual of the body. This is plainly seen in the cottages built from year to year. While comfort and economy are the grand Christian principles to which we should steadily adhere in all our individual and collective acts of life, still these principles are overlooked and departed from by those who should be examples to the flock.

The first cottages built were expected to be needed but a little while, and were put up in harmony with this faith, and to shadow forth our "expectation sweet" and soon. But every new cottage shows a departure from this original idea, and so are built for a long continuance, with an improved finish, which certainly does not indicate a stronger faith in our soon coming redemption.

And while the cottages show somewhat our status in passing on with time's changes, still it has been the unflinching aim of the managers, under God, to keep the great head-light of the soon coming Lord, with the signs of its speedy fulfillment, before the people who come to this consecrated spot. Yet, with this present truth made the Alpha and Omega at every gathering since the meeting was commenced, and while every year brings us nearer the grand crisis, one thing is plainly visible: saving truth, blessed truth, Bible truth, with the power of the Holy Spirit and the prayer of faith, have less [illegible] upon the hearers each year. There are [illegible] that have ears to hear, and eyes that see—a dreadful state of heedless indifference, darkness and ruin. Yea, under the searching, burning eloquence of the preaching of this gospel, professors sleep on, others hear unmoved and go on in sin, while the cry comes spontaneously, O Lord, what can be done? But it is no time to slacken our hand, nor grieve that so little can be accomplished. We will keep at this specific work, "knowing that our labor is not in vain in the Lord."

Thus our Campmeetings have had a salutary influence—a savor of life to some, and of death to others. The Campmeeting just finished at Alton Bay did not vary materially from those of other years. We enjoyed excellent, timely preaching from the Stand, and it was listened to with marked attention. Some of the love-feasts and prayer-meetings were blessed, and many were comforted with this "blessed hope" and evidences of soon realizing it. A few were really converted, and more reclaimed from a backslidden state. So it was a matter of thanksgiving to God for his goodness. As the meeting did not embrace two Sundays, and the cars did not run on Sunday, it was a very quiet season, which all enjoyed.

But with all our discouragement and trials, that so few heed the calls of mercy and the sound of Christ's soon coming to judgment, our faith is increased, and we grow stronger; for we find it as Jesus said it would be just prior to his second coming—they would "not take heed to themselves"; they would "not endure sound doctrine"; "Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?"—indicating that but little of this belief, or faith, would be in existence at Christ's coming. Is it not verily so? What may we expect?

The last days of the meeting were very rainy. This gave it a gloomy aspect, and a tapering off that we had not been used to at Alton Bay. Many will thank God for these Campmeetings, where they put on Christ by baptism in that baptismal font.

THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF THE NATIONS.

The prophet Isaiah said of his nation: "We are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags." What he said of his nation then, can be well said of all nations to-day. If Israel, the nation chosen of God, and to which his law was directly given, with the outward and visible manifestation of his power; and after being led into covenant with God and thereby into the way of righteousness; if then Israel was destitute of righteousness, what can be said of the nations of the earth to-day in this respect? If the righteousness of the Hebrew nation, with all their appointed worship, was as filthy rags, who can say that any of the Gentile nations are now in a better condition, morally and spiritually? Where is there one to-day nearer the standard of righteousness than the prophet's nation?

But while the prophet spoke thus of his nation, he did not affirm that there were no righteous persons therein. Not long before this God told another prophet that there were then in the nation seven thousand who had not bowed the knee to the image of Baal. There might have been as many in the days of Isaiah as in those of Elijah, who were righteous, not having departed from God. But this number was small when compared with that composing the nation.

The declarations of Christian teachers to-day are greatly in contrast with the language of the great prophet of Israel respecting the moral condition of his people. They speak of the Christian world as being far in advance in righteousness of any former nation or age. They each impute righteousness to their own nation as a nation, not feeling as the ancient prophet did when he uttered the words we have quoted respecting Israel.

The inquiry may be made: Are the so-called Christian nations of to-day regarding God and his laws with more reverence and filial obedience than did the Jews? If the righteousness of that nation was as filthy rags, what is the righteousness of our own nation to be compared to? What law of God did the Israelites violate that is not at this time disregarded? They broke the Sabbath, but not more than it is now disregarded by even the people of New England, the former home of a class of men and women who hallowed the day as it is now nowhere done in the land. Nor did the nation of Israel break other laws of God more than they are now violated by the Christian nations of the earth. Covetousness, fraud, theft, robbery, murder—crimes of every degree, are as prevalent now as they were in the darkest days of the Jewish nation. Surely, then, we may say with the good prophet: "We are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags."

But when will the opposite of this be said as truthfully as this can now be uttered with regard to our nation and people? Can we reasonably look for a national righteousness—a time when this language of the prophet will not be applicable to the American nation? Where are the indications of the approach of such a day?

"COME UNTO ME."

BY C. PIKE.

The voice of Jesus has been heard for centuries through his Word, his spirit, and his church. Invitations have been sent into all the world, inviting all classes of every age and clime to the supper of the great King. Every inducement has been held out by him to come, that in the great day of his coming his house might be filled. The splendors of the "Palace of the King," and the joy of that nuptial hour, when the Bride and the Bridegroom shall sit together around the table, have been described by angel's lips. Holy men of God, with tongues touched by the divine fire have, in the most wonderful manner, contrasted the condition of those who accept the call with those who reject it. The many promises to those who will accept the invitation, have been repeated again and again. Thousands come and go from the places where the Gospel is preached, heedless and thoughtless; not considering that every time they do so, they reject a special request to attend the marriage supper of the Lamb. How long the Saviour has borne with the children of men, and how many reasons he will have for not saving them in the great day of final decision. One reason assigned is, "Because I have called and ye refused, I have stretched out my hand all the day long, and no man regarded." Impenitent multitude! Once invited, now rejected! They refuse to hearken, set at naught all his counsel, and would none of his reproof. The terrors of that awful hour who can describe them. It will be the parting hour; the final parting. Human friendship, human love then shattered, and its victims violently hurled into eternal ruin. Divine love will be the only element that will abide that day. This will characterize the Bride the Lamb's wife," and give her an entrance into the presence of the great King. Many composing that number will be from the highways and hedges, the maimed, the halt, and the blind, who then will mingle their voices with the angels of God. But the great mass, the rich, the learned, the great of earth will witness with terror the grand and awful scene. Oh, for one more invitation! How soon would they respond. But alas—

"Too late, too late will be the cry, Jesus of Nazareth has passed by."

The house is now being filled. The nuptial ceremony will soon take place, and the Bridegroom and the Bride be at home. It has been a long, weary journey, but it will soon be over. Many tears have been shed along the way, but they will all be wiped away soon. Many have suffered pain as they have toiled day by day here, but soon no more pain. Hearts that have borne secret grief these many years will lay it down forever, for then there will be no sorrow. Will you go to the marriage of the Lamb? Oh, that I could hear some sinner say, "I will go."

NOW READY,
"OUR HOPE, OR, WHY ARE WE ADVENTISTS?"

This book supplies a long-felt need—that of presenting within a readable compass the special truths believed and taught by Adventists. That it does this fully, ably, grandly, we feel sure will be the verdict of every reader. It is a book that brethren may [illegible] lend to inquiring friends, being a [illegible] dium of reasons. All expressions of an offensive or insinuating character are forbidden an appearance upon its pages. Its [illegible] is to convince; but where it fails to work a change, it must command respect as the product of an intelligent and reasonable mind.

Buy it right off, and exhaust the first edition without delay. We would like to put six editions upon the market by the end of the year. You can help us do this.

The history of "Our Hope" is as follows: We desired the Editor of the Crisis to prepare a series of clear, strong articles upon the matters in which we differ from some to more accord with Scripture. This he did. These articles have been carefully revised, and new matter added, and they now appear in the form of the book presented.

Do not overlook this book; it is not a common production. Price 75 cts.

To be had at all the camp-grounds, or by mail from the Crisis Office, 144 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

J. HEMENWAY, Agent.

THE INSCRIPTION ON THE CROSS.

The inscription placed upon the cross by Pilate is recorded by all the four evangelists, and by each of them in a different form. Matthew puts it (27: 37), "This is Jesus, the King of the Jews;" Mark (15:26), "The King of the Jews;" Luke (23; 38), "This is the King of the Jews;" John (19: 19), "Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews." The question is often often asked, "Whence this difference?"

The difference in these statements has often been urged against the evangelists as an inconsistency. But it is far otherwise; each statement is in harmony with truth and fact. It is to be accounted for from the fact that the inscription was in three different languages; in Hebrew, that it might be read and understood by the Jews; in Greek, for the strangers in Jerusalem at the time of the great feast, who generally spoke Greek; and in Latin, as the language of the court by which Jesus was condemned; and the evangelists give it to us as they read it in the different languages.

Matthew, formerly an officer of the Roman Government, and therefore familiar with Latin, plainly gives us the translation of the inscription in Latin,—Hic est Jesus, rex Judaeorum"—This is Jesus, the King of the Jews." Mark, who wrote especially for Gentile Christians, translates also the Latin inscription, putting it briefly, as comprehending the whole, "The King of the Jews." "Luke was a Greek by birth, and of heathen origin. He was therefore familiar with the Greek language, and it was natural that he should translate the Greek form of the inscription, "This is the King of the Jews." John, a Hebrew by birth, gives us the inscription in Hebrew, his mother-tongue—"Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews."

Hence the apparent difference between the evangelists arises from the difference of the original form which each translated. If the inscription in each case was different, being in different languages, and each of the evangelists translates a different original, then the translation must in each case be different. It is wholly natural that it should be so, and would be unnatural if it were otherwise. Hence this difference, which may seem to the unlearned as inconsistency, is, on the contrary, a proof of the genuineness of the gospels. It is also noticeable that, notwithstanding the difference in their translations, the evangelists agree as to the substance of the record, and are wholly consistent one with another.

The inscription itself is of great importance and significancy. It reveals Jesus in his humility and his exaltation, in his humanity, and his divinity. It describes him as "Jesus," the Saviour of sinners and the true Messiah; as to his human nature, the Nazarene, despised for our sakes, who bore our sin and shame; but at the same time also "the King of the Jews," that is, of the people of God, given him by the Father—a king, as he confessed himself before Pilate. So the inscription proclaims him the true Messiah, and the King of the Jews.

While Jews and Gentiles by this inscription sought to brand the Lord Jesus with guilt and shame, God employed it at the same time to proclaim his righteousness and his honor and the guilt of those who crucified him.

The fact that the inscription was in the three languages most prevalent at that period seems to foreshadow the fact that not only should all nations hear of the death of Jesus Christ and have an interest in it, but also that he should in the future reign over all nations. While other kings in dying lay down their power, Jesus Christ in dying triumphed over all his enemies, and therein, as never before, entered upon his universal reign.—Translated from the German of Moritz Geissler.—Watchman.

FROM ELDER B. FORESTER.

Bro. Stockman:—I am now at Gravity, Iowa, holding a tent meeting. This is the home of Elder F. C. Watkins. I find him to be an intelligent and earnest workman. He is much beloved by the people here, and is doing a noble work. Our meeting has been running but three days, yet it is well attended. It was estimated that one thousand people were present on Sunday night. Our prayer and hope is that the people may fall in love with God, believe on Jesus, and obey his word. Yours in hope.

THERE is inestimable blessing in a cheerful spirit. When a soul throws its windows wide open, letting in the sunshine, and presenting to all the evidence of its gladness, it is not only happy, but has an unspeakable power of doing good.

RELIGION ALL IMPORTANT.

The following, from a sermon recently preached by Dr. J. L. Withrow, pastor of the Park Street Congregational Church of this city, is worthy, at this time, of a place in every paper published in the land. We commend it to the readers of the Crisis.

TEXT: "And he said unto them, set your hearts unto all the words which I testify among you this day, which ye shall command your children to observe to do, all the words of this law. For it is not a vain thing for you, because it is your life."—Deut. 32: 46, 47.

Moses was a great man, one eminently fitted to lead two millions of people out of bondage. Then what a scholar he was! He wrote a history of the world that shows more and more that he knew more than the greatest scientists of the present day. He knew geology before it was dreamed of in its present form. Moses was also a great lawgiver. Great as Michael Angelo was, his greatest achievement was the putting of Moses into marble. In that statue is expressed the idea of Moses to a constant reader of the Bible. When it is recalled what a man Michael Angelo was, you must realize that Moses was indeed a great man to thus be reproduced in art. Moses held the relations of man to God and the demands of religion to be supreme. Moses was more than a man of science; he was a man of God, that being one of the titles he bears. So Moses wrote this text with all his heart. He had brought the children of Israel to the borders of the Promised Land. There he reviewed all he had done for and with them, and drew the conclusion that for them the service of the Lord was their life; that the obligations of religion were matters of life and death. And so they are. Human nature never has and never did sufficiently consider these things; it never did [illegible]. Men may easily be brought to worship [illegible] or some absurd idol; even the Israelites could scarcely be kept for a year from worshipping heathen gods. Think how easy it is to get service for any other god than the God who punishes sin and rewards virtue. In each man there is something that does not desire to obey the God of virtue and of supreme power. If that something has not been overcome the struggle is still to take place. Let some one say that the God of nature is not the God of the Bible, and the unbeliever will readily accept the idea. Thus is it that Mohammedanism and Mormonism and other isms come up. But the matter of religion is not a choice. All the Bible writers and prophets speak in the same way, demanding the same obedience. The Bible is a book of dead earnestness from first to last; its words are uncompromising, that there shall be belief in God and obedience in him. Nothing, according to the Scripture, is supreme except duty to God. "Acquaint yourselves with him and be at peace;" that is the whole of it. The Bible calls for the abandonment of everything that stands between man and his duty. Whatever the hindrance, be it friends or sin, or the hand or the eye, or daily bread, it must go. God must be first and everything else afterward. The Son of Man and his disciples not only taught but acted up to this idea. Paul's motto was "Diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord," not serving himself or his fellows. Christ said to the young man who came to him that the service of the Lord, was the one thing, and in the houseof Martha and Mary he set a seal of special approval on the soul of one who seeks to find his work. If Christ be indeed our teacher, if Moses is right, is it wrong to say that these religious obligations are our life? Further, it is important to make this impression, as there is an effort to reverse this idea. It is with this present that we are concerned, and the drift is away from any deep sense of responsibility of man to God. Men are leaving the idea of such responsibility or are wholly denying it to such an extent that it is asked, is there any Providence? Joseph once said, "How can I do this thing and sin against God?" Will you find that spirit to-day? Will you not find rather that men go on sinning with the hope that they will not be found out? If it were not so, would there be so many disclosures of hidden sins? Serious earnestness is not in power. In scores of churches pastors would not be tolerated if they talked of other than general topics, and by them these great and glorious matters are overlooked. None deny that it is a proper thing to be religious; in this way much outward respect is shown for religion, and it is admirable. But that is not enough; there is a disposition to hold these things as ornamental appendages. But they are not so, they are all important. It is not a matter what you believe; it is not safe to consult a man's preferences in matters of religion. He has a Leader, and that Leader he must follow, especially in this time when there are efforts to cast doubts upon the most essential truths, upon the atonement, upon the redemption, upon the necessity of repentance. Consequently there is apathy where there should be energy. Boston not long ago closed her theatres on Saturday nights; now, while they are not open on Sunday night, other things quite as diverting are offered.

REPORT OF QUARTERLY MEETING.

The last Quarterly Meeting of District No. 1, State of Kansas, for the year 1884 now ending, met according to appointment at Eagle School House, in Leavenworth County, Aug. 31, 1884, at four o'clock P. M. The meeting was called to order by the President, John Henderson. Opened by singing, reading of Scripture and prayer.

Minutes of last Conference were read by the Secretary, and were called in question by Elder Hubbel; but after some discussion were accepted and approved by the Conference. There were only three churches represented at the Conference, which shows a very great lack of interest in our Conference meetings. These churches were represented as generally standing firm, and pressing on to the kingdom.

The officers for the coming year were elected as follows: Elder E. Hubbel, President; John Henderson, Vice-President; S. K. Gibson, Secretary; J. A. Courtney, Treasurer. The Conference voted to dispense with the District Evangelist the coming year. Delegates to the Annual Conference of this District were elected as follows: U. M. Morgan and Wm. Corlett from the Eagle and Valley; John Kaub, Centropolis; Sister Miner, Sarcoxie; Fred. Smith, Hamlin, and W. W. Davis of Mission Creek.

Voted, that a report of this meeting be sent to the World's Crisis and Bible Banner for publication. Also a request that the State Committee, appointed to locate the annual meeting, report the result of their action. Adjourned.

S. K. Gibson, Secretary.

Conference Notice.

The third Quarterly Session of the Penobscot Valley A. C. Conference will be held with the church at Milo, Me., commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 2nd, and continue over the following Sunday. All are cordially invited, and homes will be provided for all. Call on Brn. W. T. and D. F. Livermore and Wm. Dolan. It is desired by the church at Milo that there be a grand rally to this meeting. Come to work for the Master.

O. S. French, President.
G. W. Bean, Secretary.

Darien Annual Meeting.

The twenty-second Annual Meeting of the Church of God in Darien, Genesee Co., N. Y., will begin Oct. 3d, and hold over Sunday. All true lovers of Christ and his work are invited, and will be heartily welcomed. Conveyance will be at Croft's Station, on N. Y. Central R. R., mornings and evenings. Brn. M. Dillon, C. W. Frink and Geo. Strong, Church Committee.

H. H. Brown, Pastor.

Quarterly Meeting.

The first Quarterly Meeting of the North East Iowa A. C. Conference will be held with the church on the Little Cedar, Floyd County, commencing Saturday, Sept. 27th, and holding over Sunday. Elder Wm. C. Stewart, of Anoka, Minn., is expected to be in attendance. If not, other ministers [illegible] desire of those interested that Bro. Stewart's services be secured in a series of meetings at Floyd, Iowa, and that the brethren of adjacent churches be present to help in the meeting and to make arrangements to get the assistance of Bro. Stewart. Time is short. Per order of Conference.

E. A. Marsh.

Notice.—The next session of the Knox and Lincoln Quarterly Conference will be held at Collamore Ridge, Washington, Me., commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 25th, and continuing over the following Sabbath. We hope the brethren and sisters will come filled with the Spirit to work for the salvation of the perishing. Those coming from abroad will please call on Brethren Thomas Deering, Wm. Jackson, Israel Levett, or Joseph Levett. Geo. W. Weeks, President.

M. M. Stevenson, Secretary.

Notice.—To the Advent Christian Churches of Ohio: At the last annual meeting of the A. C. Conference of Ohio Oct. 11th, 1883, the Secretary was instructed to give notice through the Crisis that collections be solicited in all the churches for defraying the traveling expenses of one delegate to the next National Convention. Brethren will please take immediate notice and act accordingly, as the time is short. Forward to S. D. Welsh, Bucyrus, or W. J. Hobbs, Nevada.

Notice.—Bro. A. J. Wheeler will, by the help of the Lord, commence a Protracted Meeting at Union Chapel, Northfield Depot, Monday afternoon, Sept. 22nd, and continue over the following Sunday. All are cordially invited to come and help gather in the precious sheaves.

S. A. Dow.

Notice.—The Lord willing, the next Annual Session of the New Hampshire A. C. Conference will be held with the church at Lake Village, commencing Oct. 22nd, and holding over the following Sabbath. Particulars hereafter.

T. W. Piper, President.
C. H. Fletcher, Secretary.

Notice.—Any minister of good standing within Advent Conferences must, if they should at any time desire to preach from my desk, correspond with me personally, and by thus complying will save any misunderstanding.

T. L. Drury, Rutland, Vt.

Beebe Plain Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, the Campmeeting will commence at Beebe Plain, P. Q., Saturday, Sept. 13th, and close Sept. 19th. This will be the second Campmeeting held on the beautiful ground this year; but we feel sure that all who have ever attended these fall meetings will want to come again; and to those who have not, we would say that they are usually our very best meetings, and they are all good. Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the boarding-house on the ground; also good stabling for horses. These departments are under the charge of the Committee, and any profits from the same will go to the support of the meeting. Let all who come to the meeting come with a two-fold determination: First, to do all they can by their example, their conversation and prayers, to help save the perishing; and secondly, to wipe out the last [illegible] on the ground. We fully expect this will [illegible], but simply mention it so that the brethren and sisters will not forget to come prepared. Ministers are cordially invited, and will receive free passes over the Passumpsic R. R. by sending their names at once to the Secretary, G. W. Clark, Stanstead, P. Q.

Passumpsic R. R. Tickets will be sold, good to go and return, at a trifle over half fare.

Boston, Concord and Montreal R. R. Tickets to be purchased of the conductors for full fare one way. Cross over to Wells River, and purchase Passumpsic Campmeeting tickets to Stanstead Junction.

Central Vermont R. R. Purchase tickets to points of junction with Passumpsic R. R.; then purchase Campmeeting ticket, and receive of the Secretary on the ground return checks on the Central Vermont.

Grand Trunk R. R. Fare will be one and one third for round trip. Tickets on this R. R. should only be purchased to points of junction with the Passumpsic, and then purchase Campmeeting tickets to Stanstead Junction.

South Eastern R. R. Purchase tickets to Newport, and then purchase Campmeeting tickets to Stanstead Junction, and receive of the Secretary on the ground return checks over the South Eastern.

St. Johnsbury and Lake Champlain R. R. Purchase tickets at different points on this road to St. Johnsbury, and then Campmeeting tickets to Stanstead Junction. Return checks will be furnished by the Secretary on the ground to those coming over St. J. and Lake Champlain R. R.

S. G. Mathewson, President.
G. W. Clark, Secretary and Treas.

Maine Conference.

The Annual Session of the Maine A. C. Conference will be held with the church at Cape Elizabeth, at their chapel, commencing Wednesday evening, Oct. 8th, and holding over the following Sunday. The business meetings will be held forenoons of Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the remainder of the time will be devoted to devotional exercises. A cordial invitation is extended by the church, and assurance of ample provision for all who come. As this place is easy of access from all parts of the State, we hope to see a large gathering of delegates and preachers. Sec. 2, Art. 3 of Constitution reads: "Each church or society shall be allowed one delegate, and one additional delegate for every twenty actual members, said delegates to be elected by the church or society which they represent, and to be provided with a certificate of election, attested by the recording officer of the same. The recording officer shall also, with the certificate of election, certify to the actual membership of the church or society. These delegates shall hold their membership till the next annual session of Conference."

Those coming from the West via Eastern R. R. will stop at Cape Elizabeth station. Those coming by Maine Central or Ogdensburg R. R. should stop at the transfer station, as the distance from there is about one and one-half miles. If those unable to walk will write to Albert Pratt, No. 25 Temple St., Portland, Me., stating what train they will come on, a team will be provided for them. Half fare on K. & L. and M. C. R. R. Buy tickets to Portland and return, good from Oct. 7th to 13th. We trust this meeting will redound to the glory of God and the upbuilding of his cause.

E. O. Dinsmore, Secretary.

Conference Notice.

The Lord willing, the Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan A. C. Conference will hold their Annual Session at Buchanan, Mich., commencing Wednesday evening, Oct. 1st, and holding over the following Sunday, Oct. 5th. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the Lord Jesus and his coming to be present. Come, and let us join heart and hand in this great conflict for truth. Truly we are living in the perilous times of the last days. Many are being offended and are betraying one another, and hating one another, and many false prophets are rising and deceiving many; and because iniquity abounds, the love of many is waxing cold. O, ye faithful ones, come with double energy. Let your earnest prayers ascend to God for more zeal, more faith, and a disposition to do, that this meeting may be a success. Again I say, Come! "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."

Eld. B. Finney, President.
Geo. J. French, Secretary.

Campmeeting.

The Annual Conference and Campmeeting of Oregon and Washington Territory will be held at the Dalles, Wasco Co., Oregon, on the Columbia River, commencing Sept. 24th, on the first quarter of the new moon, and continue over two Lord's days till Oct. 7th. Have just received notice from the Superintendent of the O. R. & N. Co. that all coming to the meeting will pay full fare in coming, and on their return will receive a certificate, signed by the Secretary of Conference, paying only a fifth fare rate. Meeting will be held a short distance from the depot. Let all that can bring tents, blankets and warm clothing. Straw for beds may be obtained free on the ground. Board, pasture and hay at reasonable rates. The large mission tent will accommodate many. Preaching brethren from California and Michigan are expected. Brethren and sisters in Oregon and Washington Territory, rally to this meeting. Come filled with the Spirit of Christ and humble prayer to labor and work for the perishing. It may be our last meeting. Should it be so, let us have our work done, and well done, that we may enter the joy of our Lord.

Any coming to the Amboy Campmeeting, and feel the Lord would have them come to the great Northwest Campmeeting, we would be glad to welcome them, as the time is appointed for the 24th, thus giving time to attend both meetings.

J. C. & S. E. Smith.

Fast.—We will appoint Sept. 19th as a day of fasting and prayer for the Campmeeting for Oregon and Washington Territory. J. C. & S. E. S.

Annual Conference and Campmeeting.

The twelfth Annual Meeting of the A. C. Conference of the State of Kansas will be held near Carbon, Jackson Co., commencing Sept. 19. The large tent will be there. Carbon is on the Kansas Central Narrow Guage R. R., nine miles northeast of Holton, four miles northwest of Larkin, and six miles south of Whiting, on the M. P. Central Branch. Those coming from the West, over that road, will stop off at Whiting. Those coming by the A. T. and S. F. R. R., will change cars at Valley Falls, and stop off at Larkin. Any one getting off at Whiting will please write to Notice.—A series of meetings will be held at South Abington, Mass., commencing Monday evening, Sept. 22d, and continuing as long as the interest may demand. Brethren and sisters residing in the surrounding country are especially invited to come and assist us.

Hoosick, N. Y.

The good Lord willing, there will be a Protracted Meeting at the Chapel of the A. C. Church in Hoosick, N. Y., commencing Tuesday evening, Sept. 23d, at seven o'clock P. M., and continue over Sunday, the 28th. Bro. Hiram Munger will be present to assist, and carry forward the work of salvation. God will help us to make one more effort to save the backslidden ones. Brethren and sisters, come to the rescue.

Geo. A. Streeter, Pastor.

Conference Notice.

The next session of Sagadahoc County Conference will be held at the Reed meeting-house, Richmond, Me., commencing Thursday, Sept. 25th, at seven o'clock P. M. The brethren and sisters of Richmond hope to see a goodly number of the saints gather in with them to enjoy another season of blessing and profit, who will be cared for with their usual hospitality. If those coming by rail will write to Bro. Orin Shepard, they will be met at the depot at any time during Conference. Teams will be at the depot on arrival of trains at Richmond about 3 and 3.30 o'clock P. M. Thursday—the first from Boston, the last from Augusta.

Southern Wisconsin Campmeeting.

The Southern Wisconsin Advent Campmeeting will be held at Mifflin, Iowa Co., Wis., to begin Sept. 21st, and close Sunday the 28th. Mifflin is three miles from Rewey, a station on the Chicago and N. W. R. R. of the Madison division; also we are twelve miles from Mineral Point, the terminus of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R. Any one wishing to come on either of these roads will be furnished conveyance to the Campmeeting by sending word to the Committee. The church extends an invitation to every one to come, and especially every brother and sister in the ministry, as we are anxious to save the wandering ones. There will be tent poles and straw furnished free, also hay and oats for those who wish to buy. Homes free for all the preachers and families. Now do not pray for an excuse, but for the Lord to open the way, then walk in it. We want the best meeting we ever had, and we can have it if all will be as earnest as when they first believed. Elder Wm. C. Stewart has promised to stop with us on his return from Amboy. This may be the last united effort before the judgment, and may it be said of all who read this, "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter in to the joy of thy Lord."

D. Deitzman, S. Nolan, A. M. Barber, } Committee.

Notice.—The Oxford and Androscoggin Co. Conference will hold its next session at the Union House, No. Windham, Me., commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 25th, to hold over the following Sunday. Strangers may inquire for Brn. Colby, Shaw, or Seward Manchester. Let us have a good delegation to work for the salvation of the perishing.

Jared Whitman, President.
Joshua Howard, Secretary.

Notice.—The next session of the Northern Indiana and Michigan State Union Conference will be held with the church at Bangor, Mich., Sept. 25th, and hold over Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended. We expect to see a good turnout to this meeting, both of ministers and others, who will come to work for the salvation of the perishing. These golden opportunities will soon come to an end.

Jas. Ferris, President.
A. N. Seymour, Sec.

Notice.—The next Quarterly Session of York Co. (Me.) A. C. Conference will be held with the church at East Wakefield (Woodman's Mills), commencing at two o'clock Thursday, Sept. 25th. Ample accommodations for all who may come to get good or do good. We hope all will come prepared to work for those who need help, as time looks to be short, and what we do must be done soon.

T. J. Carle, Secretary.

Notice.—Will those persons who subscribed to aid the Mission work in Western New York at the Conference held in Rochester, N. Y., last June, please send in their subscriptions as soon as possible, and by so doing help the good work along?

George E. Waugh, Treas. of the N. Y. State A. C. Conference.

Notice.—The next session of the Kennebec County Advent Quarterly Conference will be held at Sawyer's Mills, Stark, Me. Time and particulars hereafter.

F. E. Blaisdell, Pres.
J. R. Sturtevant, Sec.

Notice.—There will be a Protracted Meeting at Newark, Vt., commencing Oct. 17th, at 7.30 P. M., to continue as long as may be thought best.

WATCHING.

BY ELLA C. D. PAGE.

I said, when the early dawning
  With its rose-tints flushed the sky,
"I must set my house in order,
  For the Master comes by and by.
I must garnish it, swept and ready
  With spices and odors sweet,
For perhaps in the early dawning
  I shall hear his coming feet."
But dawn passed into morning,
  The rose-tints died away,
And the Master came not for me;
  I sighed, "Where doth he stay?"

I said once more, in the morning,
  "My house must be sweet and fair,
No spot nor stain to defile it,
  And bedecked with blossoms rare.
Cool, shaded, calm and quiet,
  From dust and tumult free,
For it may be in the morning
  That the Master comes for me."
But morning slipped into noontide,
  And more sultry grew the day,
And the Master came not for me;
  I wailed, "Where doth he stay?"

I spake again at the noontide:
  "I will deck my house once more,
I will draw the curtain coolly,
  And half open set the door;
In doubt and in anxious longing
  I have waited all the day,
Perhaps in the sultry noontide
  The Master will come this way."
But noon stretched to quiet evening,
  And died in its calm, still gray,
And the Master's foot still lingered:
  I sighed, "Where doth he stay?"

Again in the dusk of evening
  I lighted my lamp with care,
So that all might see I waited
  For a Guest expected there.
I threw my shutters wide open,
  And I said, "This livelong day
I've watched. Sure, now in the gloaming
  The Master will come this way!"
But evening gave place to midnight,
  The stars twinkled far away,
And still did the Master tarry:
  I cried, "Will he always stay?"

The midnight came, and it found me
  Still listening to hear His feet;
And I wept, "The Master tarries,"
  When lo! far adown my street
Came an angel, tall and stately,
  Passed beneath my threshold free,
Where in despair I waiting cried,
  "Will the Master ne'er come for me?
In doubt have I looked and waited,
  And watched all the night and day;
Yet the Master come not for me;
  Oh, why doth his coming stay?"

And the angel spake to me gently,
  "Dear child, watch a little while;
Keep fair and garnished thy dwelling,
  Pray and labor with a smile,
For the Master cometh to thee
  At an hour thou dost not know."
So I labor, and watch contented,
  Though his coming may be slow;
Some time in the midst of my labor,
  A voice will sound on my ear,
"Thou hast wrought and hast had patience,
  My beloved, I am here!"

—Zion's Herald.

OMINOUS PHENOMENA.

The following, taken from The Christian Herald and Signs of Our Times, is interesting. Speaking of the recent earthquake in New England it says:

Science has as yet failed to account for these alarming motions of the earth's crust. The popular notion is that they are due to the contraction going on as the earth continues to cool, and the increasing tension following, when every difference of atmospheric or astronomical phenomena may have an influence. Another theory advanced is that they are caused by the movement of gases generated in the world's interior. But so complex is the phenomenon of earthquakes, that it has not yet been mastered.

To the Christian observer of the signs of the times, the earthquake recalls the preeminently the thought of the nearing approach of Christ's Second Advent. True, the earthquakes since his ascension have been numerous, and in the past immeasurably more disastrous than in our times; but as we never sit down to the Lord's Supper without remembering the night of its institution, so the recurrence of these inexplicable and ominous phenemona bring again to the mind the solemn words of the Saviour: "There shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places. And these are the beginnings of sorrows" (Matt. 24: 7). All these have come and passed in the interval since those words were spoken; men have looked for his coming, and have died without the sight; but we know that that day will surely come, and that when it does come, it will be preceded by such phenomena. It is ever our duty to be ever waiting and watching. As rain must have fallen many a day while the ark was building, and have ceased, yet on one day the flood came, and only Noah and his family were saved. So that day will probably find men concerned in speculating on the scientific causes of some recent earthquake, and calculating its direction and its speed, paying no heed to the warning it was sent to convey.

Earthquakes will play an important part in the troubles that will come on the world after the watchful church has been withdrawn—caught up to meet her Lord in the air. Zechariah speaks (14: 4) of a reft in the Mount of Olives, which, when it occurs, will doubtless be attributed to an earthquake, and men will flee as they "fled from before the earthquake in the days of Uzziah." In Revelation also the seer of Patmos, writing of his visions, is careful to note that the woes were in many cases heralded or accompanied by an earthquake. As the sixth seal is opened, an earthquake takes place, which, in its appalling accompaniments, dwarfs all phenomona of the kind in the previous history of the world (Rev. 6: 12). The sun will turn black and the moon crimson; stars will fall, and every mountain and island will be moved out of their places. Cyclones will be threatened, but will be held back by the four angels at the command of the angel ascending from the east bearing the seal of the living God. In a later chapter (Rev. 11: 13) the same earthquake is again refered to, with the further information that the tenth part of the city will fall, and seven thousand men will be killed. But the greatest of all the earthquakes the world has ever seen will take place at the close of this dispensation, immediately prior to the ushering in of the Millennium. That will be the day of Armageddon, when the Antichrist and his forces will be overwhelmed, and when Christ himself will manifestly appear in glory with the angels. Then there will be "an earthquake such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake and so great." (Rev. 16: 18).

How near those appalling days may be none can say, but there are signs which indicate that they cannot be far removed from our time. Gradually but surely the nations of the world are being ranged in the lines in which they will stand—like pieces on the world's chess-board—at that time. The old Roman world is being constituted, and statesmen, with no design to fulfill prophecy, are making treaties and alliances which will realize the very combinations the prophets saw in their visions. Looking beneath the surface, we see, too, the spirit at work which will attain its culmination in those days of trouble. The spirit of impatience, of restraint, of frantic longing for the form of liberty which is license, of hatred of the rich and resistance to constituted authority, the increase of communistic socialism, and the desperate schemes of plotters who are working to produce anarchy—all indicate the approach of the predicted era. They are the forces gathering strength, which will ultimately blaze forth with frightful horror.

We are told in the Bible what they will do; we see with our own eyes that they are preparing for their work. They are called social problems now, and the philosophers try to solve them; but solved they never will be. They will grow more and more ominous, more and more intricate, until in the last great earthquake they and those who have hatched them are overwhelmed the coming of the Prince of Peace.

Let not the memory of this earthquake pass into forgetfulness. It has a voice for the watchful Christian, reminding him of the signs of his deliverance. Unlike the earthquake Elijah felt, God is in the earthquake. Blessed are they who have recognized him in "the still small voice" in in which he speaks to those who love him and have made full surrender of themselves to him. They and only they have confidence in looking for his appearing, and can say with joyful hope, "Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

BELIEVE.

BY A. F. F.

What a power this! How important to us! Simple, yet wonderful; little to do, yet great in results. Small of itself, yet mighty to effect. It is simply to exercise faith, and the work is done.

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." No great exploit must be undertaken; no deed of daring must be performed; no dangers to encounter; simply believe. Christ has done all; believe on him, trust in him, confide in him; that is all. From the Adamic age down to the present faith has been the star to direct fallen man to a Savior to come, and one that has been here. Thanks be to God that it still points with sevenfold brightness to a King that shall reign in righteousness, and that speedily. Geologists may argue and dig to earth's very center. Scientists in vain may speculate, and astronomers make their telescopes far more powerful than ever before; they may score the heavens and traverse unlimited space, telling their stories, till we are dizzy with their heights. Anthropologists may search for their ancestors among the tadpoles and monkeys; cosmologists may tell of ages upon ages in which the world was being prepared for the home of man; yea, legions may write and rewrite, argue and contradict—all try to overthrow faith in the Word of God, still its foundations will stand; they cannot be shaken. They cannot weaken the everlasting arms that save; nor the grandest of all, prevent the consummation of all things, the restoration of all things, the perfection of all things.

How important that we have a right belief, a belief founded on the firm, unchangeable Word of the Lord. Were we to spiritualize and interpret the Word of God to suit our own belief, where should we stop? Rather let us be satisfied with the "thus saith the Lord." Let us believe what he says; trust him as he is; expect him as he said he would come, and be like him as he should himself be. How often we hear it said, "It matters not what you believe, but how you act." What saith the Scriptures? "But the fearful and unbelieving . . . shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone; which is the second death" (Rev. 21: 8).

Is it not unbelief to change the days of creation into geological eras? Is it not unbelief to turn and twist the grand truths of the Bible into man's unfounded notions? Is not willful ignorance the same as unbelief? Will not the wrath of God fall upon those who disregard the prophecies, and declare them to be sealed books? Be careful, my brother. Search the Scriptures; believe the words of Christ; trust his promises as they are. If he says, "I will come again," believe it. If he tells how he will come, look for him as he said he would come. If he has promised to raise the dead at the last day, expect it then. If he says, "death is to be swallowed up in victory," and, he that hath the power of it is to be destroyed, believe it.

May the Lord help us to read understandingly; to live righteously; to walk uprightly; to believe without doubting, and at last to find a home in the kingdom, soon to be established upon the earth.

DISTRACTION IN WORSHIP.

The following paragraphs are from a sermon lately preached by De Witt Talmage on "The Folly of Fashion."

You know very well there are a good many people who come to church just as they go to races, to see who will come out ahead. What a flutter it makes in church when some woman with extraordinary display of fashion comes in! "What a love of a bonnet!" says some one. "What a perfect fright!" say five hundred. For the most merciless critics in the world are fashion-critics. Men and women with souls to be saved passing the hour in wondering where that man got his flamboyant cravat or what store that woman patronizes. In many of our churches the preliminary exercises are taken up with the discussion of wardrobes. It is pitiable. Is it not wonderful that the Lord does not strike the meeting-houses with lightning?

What distraction of public worship! Dying men and women, whose bodies are soon to be turned into dust, yet before three worlds strutting like peacocks, the awful question of the soul's destiny submerged by the question of Creedmoor polonaise and navy blue velvet with long fan train skirt, long enough to drag up the church aisle, the husband's store, office, shop, factory, fortune, and the admiration of half the people in the building. Men and women come late to church to show their clothes. People sitting down in a pew, taking up a hymn book, all absorbed at the same time in personal array, to sing:

"Rise, my soul, and stretch thy wings,
  Thy better portion trace;
Rise from transitory things
  Toward heaven, thy native place!"

I have seen men and women of fashion die, and I never saw them die well. The trappings off, there they lay on the tumbled pillow, and there were just two things that bothered them—a wasted life and a coming eternity. I could not pacify them, for their body, mind, and soul had been exhausted in the worship of fashion, and they could not appreciate the Gospel. When I knelt by their bedside they were mumbling out their regrets, and saying, "O God! O God!" Their garments hung up in the wardrobe, never again to be seen by them. Their God cast them off. Without any exception, so far as my memory serves me, they died without hope, and went into eternity unprepared.

The two most ghastly death-beds on earth are the one where a man dies of delirium tremens and the other where a woman dies after having sacrificed all her faculties of body, mind, and soul in the worship of fashion. My friends, we must appear in judgment to answer for what we have worn on our bodies, as well as for what repentances we have exercised with our souls. Christ announced who would make up the royal family of heaven when he said, "Whosoever doeth the will of God, the same is my brother, my sister, my mother."

THANKS.

Having passed through a remarkable experience at Camp Springfield, and realized wonderfully the loving-kindness of the Lord. I desire to return thanks: First to the Lord, whose eye watched over me, and whose ear was open to the prayer of faith; who proved faithful and true to his promises; who gave me an experience which I shall never forget, and taught me many lessons. "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits."

Secondly, I wish to return thanks to those whom the Lord used as instruments to do his will; as channels through whom he conveyed his loving-kindness; especially to Dr. I. I. Leslie and Dr. B. St. John, who gave me the most faithful and skillful medical treatment which it seems to me possible to give, also faithful, watchful care.

Thanks also to those who at different times came and prayed by my bedside. I remember seven or more prayers. The Lord heard and answered those petitions of faith wonderfully. Thanks also to the watcher, who sat by me during the sleepless hours of the night, when the greatest danger was feared. Thanks to the family who so kindly took me into their tent home, and cared for me. Thanks to those who came in to see me again and again, with words of sympathy, some with sweet songs of cheer, also to those who took my hand, leaving money in it. The Lord has shown me very clearly and plainly how I am to use that money to please him, who himself was really the Giver.

Thanks also to those who ministered to me in various other ways—to the writers of letters, which have reached me since my return to Ware, containing medical advice and kind words of sympathy. To one and all my heart goes out in thankfulness and gratitude. May the Lord himself reward you all, and may you when Jesus comes hear him say, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me." Verily you will have your reward, for the Master has said, "Whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward."

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE REPORT.

The second quarterly session of the Bristol and Plymouth Counties Conference for the present year was held at Mattapoisett, Mass., Sept. 2d to 5th. The attendance of preachers and delegates came far short of what was desired, but those who did come seemed to have their hearts filled to overflowing with love for God and his people. A spirit of harmony and of earnest labor prevailed from the first service to the last.

The President and Secretary were the only preachers in attendance. To them it seemed quite impossible to keep up an interest in the pulpit ministrations, as the people were expecting more of a variety than they could give them. But the brethren and sisters so sustained us by their prayers and sympathies that we were enabled to speak with unusual freedom, and the interest increased instead of diminishing.

The social meetings were among the best we ever attended. The churches represented and reported were: New Bedford, Fairhaven, North Carver, Mattipoisett, New Boston, and Middleboro. One noticeable feature of these reports was a growing unitiy upon the great issue and grand purpose of our work, and an increas- spirit of labor and sacrifice.

The report of our Treasurer showed that one hundred and forty-three dollars had been raised for Home Mission Work during the past six months, and that one hundred and four dollars had been expended. The report of the Conference Evangelist was of an encouraging nature, and called forth remarks which indicated a growing interest in this department of our work. After considerable informal talk upon both mission and tract work it was Voted, That the Tract Society be merged into the Home Mission Society, with the understanding that we will not lose sight of our original purpose of organizing local tract societies in each of our churches.

Voted, That the money in the treasury of the Tract Society be placed in the hands of a committee who shall use it to purchase a quantity of the book entitled "Our Hope," and that this committee shall place these books in the hands of our churches to be loaned to such persons as may wish to read them. Voted, that the Executive Board be that Committee. Voted, That the Conference increase this fund by the donation of ten dollars from its treasury.

Thus we are broadening our work as time passes. We feel prompted to this (1) by the conviction that our time to labor is nearly past; (2) by the facts brought to our attention from time to time, which show conclusively that our efforts are resulting in much good. The light of present truth is spreading, and sinners are being converted.

The church at Fairhaven invited us to hold our next session with them. Their invitation was accepted. After extending a hearty vote of thanks to the Mattapoisett church for their kind and generous hospitality, the Conference adjourned to the call of the Chair.

G. F. HAINES, President.
C. H. SWEET, Secretary.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The A. C. Conference of Northwest Michigan convened, pursuant to notice, at the village of Croton, Newaygo County, Friday, Aug. 1st. Eld. Joseph Satterlee conducted the opening exercises.

The following morning, at 9.30 A. M., Conference convened in business session. At the request of the President, Eld. John Bower occupied the chair, and appointed committees as follows: On credentials—Elders Crum, Fox and Satterlee. On devotion—Elders Crum, English and Miller. On business—Elders Leslie Bower, L. J. Crawford and A. L. Fox. Committee on credentials reported ten ministers, two ruling Elders, one member of Board of Directors present, making thirteen members of Conference present. The churches of Bridgeton and of Sherman sent delegates to this meeting. The church of Bridgeton recommended George H. De Bois for ordination. The Chair appointed committee as follows: Elders T. C. Grundy, L. J. Crawford and Leslie Bower. They, on examination, reported favorably. The Conference elected as delegates to the Amboy Convention, Elders John Bower, T. C. Grundy and A. L. Fox.

The Business Committee presented the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted.

Whereas, our much esteemed and dearly beloved Bro. Grundy has been sorely afflicted in the loss of a kind and devoted wife; therefore,

Resolved, That the brethren and sisters now in Conference assembled do tender to our afflicted brother our sincere and heartfelt sympathy in his irreparable loss. And be it further

Resolved, That this Conference has lost an amiable and exemplary Christian sister, one that was loved and esteemed by all who knew her, and that we will endeavor by the grace of God to emulate her example.

Resolved, Thats these resolutions be recorded by the Secretary of the Conference, and a copy be sent to the World's Crisis and Bible Banner for publication.

Conference adjourned to meet at Ashland, some time in the month of October, the writer to preach the opening sermon.

The business exercises were conducted with promptness and dispatch. It had been given out that the meetings would be held in the grove, but owing to cold weather and rains, only two or three sermons were preached there. The meetings were held in the hall in the village.

Sunday morning, after a sermon by Eld. T. C. Grundy, the writer was ordained to the work of the ministry. Prayer by Elder Grundy; charge by Eld. John Bower; right hand of fellowship by Eld Leslie Bower. It was announced at this meeting that the pastor of the Congregationalist Church had kindly offered the use of their church, and that the remaining exercises would be held there. In the afternoon a large congregation assembled in the church and listened to a powerful sermon from Eld. Jas. Ferris of Kalamazoo, Mich., after which the congregation repaired to the water to witness the baptism of a sister in Christ from Rodney, Mich. Baptism performed by Elder Grundy. It was a beautiful and impressive scene, and one long to be remembered. The concluding sermon was preached by Elder John Bower, after which a goodly number surrounded the table to partake of the emblems of the broken body and spilled blood of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; after which we sang a hymn and went out. The parting time had come.

We have reason to be thankful and hopeful over the visible results of this meeting. We are assured that much prejudice has been removed, and a good interest and impression felt. As a whole, we feel assured that all who were present felt that it was good to be there. May the Lord bless all the efforts put forth at that place for the advancement of his cause. Let us all, brethren, work to the extent of our ability, and as we never have before, for Christ standeth at the door.

GEO. H. DE BOIS, Secretary.

QUAR. CONFERENCE REPORT.

The brethren and sisters of the Church of Christ, and also of the Advent Christian Church, came together at the Waterloo Meeting-House, Oregon, July 4th, at two P. M. Preaching brethren present at different times during the meeting—Aaron Preston, District Evangelist, Elders M. M. Norton, James Fitzwater of the Church of Christ, L. H. Little of Cornelius, Washington County, Nelson Mathews of Harrisburg, Linu County, of the Adv. Chris. Church.

Reports from the churches were good and indicated a growing [illegible]. There were many cheering [illegible] given at this meeting. Three joined our Conference. Two made a confession of the Lord Jesus Christ, and others desired the prayers of the church. The Lord's supper was celebrated. We gathered around the table—the "vacant chair" reminding us of our absent Lord, whom we expect soon to see for ourselves, and not another. Our meeting closed July 7th. This meeting was a success in every respect.

The following resolution was adopted at the meeting:

Resolved, That we, known as the Advent Christian Church of the Willamette District No. 1, of the State of Oregon, do declare ourselves in favor of entire prohibition of all alcoholic liquors as a beverage.

This resolution passed unanimously in the Conference.

ASHER F. HAMILTON, President.

BURIED TALENT.

There is enough buried talent in the church to perform all the work God has given her to do. But this great work of evangelizing the world and saving the people is held back by the dead weight of this mass of idle talent. It has been computed that "not more than about fifteen per cent. of the energy entrusted to the church to be expended in plans and labors to save men and build up the kingdom of Christ is utilized and expended for this purpose. The remaining eighty-five per cent. is either buried and not put to use, or used to set up the kingdom of darkness and sin." "The Word of God," continues this unnamed writer, "is by no means silent on this subject. The Revised Version throws new light upon it, and shows that Christ's ascension gifts—the gift of apostles and prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers—were for the express purpose of utilizing the whole energy and making every member of the body of Christ an active and efficient worker: 'And he gave some to be apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, unto the work of ministering, unto the building up of the body of Christ: till we all attain unto the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a full-grown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ.' (Eph. 4: 11-13.) This Scripture is also suggestive of the way in which the hidden energy of the Church is to be called out. It puts forward the pastors and teachers of the church. Upon them lies the responsibility of calling out the energy that lies hidden, and directing the gifts of those to whom they minister." Words cannot exaggerate the importance of this subject.—Evangelical Messenger.

BEHOLD THE BRIDEGROOM!

BY LUCY D. HARRINGTON.

Behold the Bridegroom cometh!
  Go out your Lord to meet;
Be ready now, ye virgins,
  Your King with joy to greet.

Behold, behold the Bridegroom!
  Hear ye the midnight cry!
Let all your lamps be burning,
  Lo! He is drawing nigh!

Put on the wedding garment;
  Trim, trim your lamps anew,
And watch for Him who cometh,
  The Faithful and the True.

With oil, and lamp bright burning,
  Ye virgins loyal, wise,
Stand ready, waiting, praising—
  Let songs of joy arise.

Give Him your service cheerful,
  Your Friend, Redeemer, Lord,
With rapture hail his coming—
  Praise him with sweet accord.

Ware, Mass.

FROM J. S. DU BOSE.

Bro. Stockman.—Will you allow me a little space in our good paper, the Crisis? I would let the dear saints know what the Lord has done for us lately in this part of his vineyard.

On the 26th of July we commenced a meeting at Savannah Chapel, and closed the 30th. The Lord poured his Spirit abundantly upon us. The house was filled almost from the beginning to the end of the meeting. The church was blest and made to rejoice in the blessed hope of soon joining the great multitude that no man can number. We all re-consecrated ourselves, and vowed to live nearer the Lord than we ever had done. One brother said it was the best meeting that he ever attended. Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians united with us. We had all things common.

August 3d, we commenced at Lisbon. The Holy Ghost was with us and blessed the word. On Monday night we preached from Luke 19: 10—"For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." At the close we asked all of those out of Christ who wanted Christians to pray for them, and were willing to take the position of lost sinners, to manifest it by kneeling at their seats. Nearly every one knelt. The church at this place were thus encouraged, and their faith strengthened.

The second Sunday I was with Bro. B. F. Parrott, a Baptist minister. The Spirit gave us liberty to preach the Word. Many wept during the services. I came home on Monday the 11th. Tuesday, Bro. Hill, another Baptist minister, sent for me to come and help him. I preached that night to a large audience, from Acts 26: 16-18. At the close many came forward for prayers. On the 16th we commenced at Andrews' Mill Chapel, and closed Tuesday night. The Lord blest his people at this place. Five started for the kingdom by joining the church, and will be buried in baptism next Sunday if the Lord will. We received one by letter from the Baptist church. At this church the Baptists, Methodists and Presbyterians united with us, and helped us much. If we could have had some preachers to assist in preaching, much more good might have been accomplished. My strength failed, and we had to close. Last week I assisted Bro. Jackson in one of his churches (Methodist) in a revival. He is the first Methodist minister who encouraged me to preach. I preached for him on Tuesday night, from Matt. 27: 22. At the close he made a few appropriate remarks, inviting all out of Christ, who were willing to accept of Jesus as their Saviour, to come forward for prayers. When there was no more room at the altar, he gave the invitation to kneel at their seats. All knelt but four. The house was full. Prejudice is giving way against us as a church. Others begin to realize the fact, that we are here as a church until the Master comes and takes us all to our glorified home.

I mention these things to let all know, who contributed to help build our church, that their money was not thrown away. We still live. Praise the Lord for it. There are many who believe as we do, and would unite with us, but they fear that if I should fall asleep in death they would then be broken up as a church. They ought not to stay back on that account. If they were willing to trust the Lord fully, he would raise up or send some one to feed them.

Dear brethren, pray for us down here. I long to see you all in the flesh.

Cartersville, S. C., Sept. 1st.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Annual Session of the Union Conference of Northern Indiana and Michigan State met with the church at Maple Grove, Coldwater, according to appointment, June 6th. (It was not then reported because of the sickness and death of my wife.)

Election of officers: President, Jas. Ferris; Vice President, John Watkins; Clerk, A. N. Seymour. Directors: P. Hollis, A. Brenneman, H. Hadsell, W. Smith.

The meeting was well represented from abroad—Woodbridge, Reading, Alganesee, Gilead, Coldwater, Sumption Prairie, Bangor, Howardsville, Galesburgh, Burlington.

Ministers present: James Ferris, A. N. and M. A. Seymour, P. Hollis, Jas. Perrin, G. Pullen, E. Tinker, Bro. Swick. Bro. Swick was licensed for six months, to improve his gifts. Miner Buck was required to clear himself from censure or return his credentials to the Conference.

The preaching was good and timely. The Spirit of the Master was with us, and the meeting was a good one; the result of which can only be known in the eternal beyond.

A. N. SEYMOUR, Secretary.

HOLINESS.

This blessed doctrine is not the patrimony of any one denomination. It is the common heritage of all God's people. It is the idea of Christ redeeming love. It is the experience of one who has turned his back on the devil and sin, repented of and confessed all his sins to God, has been forgiven and has the fact asserted in his consciousness by the testimony of the Spirit of God, has devoted himself body and soul to God and has accepted Jesus as his uttermost salvation, trusting in the precious blood of Jesus for cleansing from all sin, or depravity, and has experienced the cleansing from all sin, and has this fact certified by the witness of the Holy Ghost who, now having a holy temple in which to dwell, consents to stay as an abiding comforter, teacher, guide and empowerer, through the extent to which he doth these blessed offices is the measure we by faith make for him. Not that he doeth these things in a measure for all men, and especially for those who are converted to God. But the fulness of the dispensation of the Holy Ghost is only realized by the believer has also been sanctified. Dear reader, are you justified? Have you the witness of God's Holy Spirit to the fact just now? Are you wholly sancified? And does the Holy Ghost testify this to you? Does the Holy Ghost dwell in you?—India Watchman.

"SUCH AS I HAVE GIVE I THEE."

Here is a lame Jewish beggar lying at the beautiful gate of the temple; and here is a Galilean fisherman, quite as poor as the beggar, walking into the temple court. The beggar asks alms, and the fisherman stops a moment. He cannot refuse to give; but what has he? No silver or gold, nor anything that the man was begging for. But he bethinks himself. He is not, after all, so poor. He has something that the beggar knows nothing of—a divine power, but lately lodged in him by the coming down of the Holy Ghost. This divine power, and divine usefulness he may use, and now for the first time the fisherman puts forth his God-given strength—his divine fulness. He says, "Look on me." The beggar looks, expecting gold. The fisherman takes him by the hand, and speaks the word—power flows out, healing flows in—the man is cured. Ah! here is the display of a wondrous possession, in comparison with which silver and gold are nothing. Here is a man with whom God has put himself in connection; here is a man who has a whole magazine of heavenly blessing at his disposal, whose resources are beyond all human measure, though wholly unlike all that man values or cares for. The man I speak of is simply a believing man; not a man of learning, or genius, or position, or culture, but simply a believing man. Such was the fisherman of Capernaum. It is the believing man that wields the sceptre, who has access to the stores of the kingdom. Not many rich, not many wise, not many noble are called.—Anon.

THE TEACHER'S MODEL.

Christ is your model. Christ had not the happiness of teaching such a class as yours. He only had twelve in his class, but one of them had a devil. That is more, I hope, than can be said concerning yours. There were some awkward ways about them. None could have trained them as he did. The Master did not try to teach that class without prayer. If anyone could have dispensed with prayer in his work, surely it was the Lord Jesus, but he continually anointed his teaching with prayer. Then I notice he taught them by degrees. "I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now." I have known teachers to try to teach too much at once, and the children have learned but little in consequence. They cannot learn much at a time.

The Lord Jesus condescended to teach by littles, and how tenderly he did it. Find a snappish word, if you can, in all Christ's teachings. He says, "Have I been so long time with you and yet hast thou not known me, Philip?" He did not know his own teacher, you see. That was a dull child to be in the class. Your children are not quite so dull as that. Although they do not know their lessons sometimes, they do know their teachers. Christ had to teach precept upon precept, line upon line, here a little and there a little. Take Jesus as your model teacher. When you have your children round you, and they are uneasy and inattentive, think to yourselves, "Now, what would Jesus say to these boys and girls if he were sitting at the head of this class? for that is the thing I should say." You cannot excel him in knowledge, and consequently, may not choose so wise a theme as he; therefore your best wisdom will be to follow in his track as close as you can. Christ then is your subject. Christ then is your model.—C. H. Spurgeon.

TRUE LIFE AND WALK.

Our power in drawing men to Christ springs chiefly from the fulness of our personal communion with him. The countenance that reflects most of Christ, and shines most with his love and grace, is most fitted to attract the gaze of the careless, giddy world, and win their restless souls from the fascinations of creature love and creature beauty.

A ministry of the gospel must be the fruit of a holy, peaceful, loving intimacy with the Lord. Oh, how much depends on the holiness of our lives, the consistency of our characters, the heavenliness of our walk and conversation! Our life cannot be one of harmless obscurity. We must either repel or attract—save or ruin souls! How loud, then, the call; how strong the motive to spirituality of soul and circumspectness of life. How solemn the warning against worldly-mindedness and vanity, against levity and frivolity, against negligence, sloth, formality and sin.

Of all men, a minister of Christ is especially called to walk with God. Everything depends on this: his own peace and joy, his own future reward at the coming of the Lord. This is the grand secret of ministerial success. One who walks with God carries in his very air and countenance a sweet serenity and holy joy that [illegible] tranquillity around. One who walks with God receives and imparts life whithersoever he goes; as it is written, "Out of him shall flow rivers of living water." He is not merely the world's light, but the world's fountain, dispensing the water of life on every side, and making the barren to blossom as the rose. His life is blessed, his example is blessed, his intercourse is blessed; his words are blessed, his ministry is blessed! Souls are saved, sinners are converted, and many are turned from their iniquity—Horatius Bonar.

CALMNESS OF SPIRIT.

Calmness and equaminity ought to be a part of one's religion. "I dare no more fret," said John Wesley, "than to curse and swear." One who knew him well said he never saw him low-spirited or fretted in his life. He could not endure the society of people who were of this habit. He says of them: "To have persons at my ears, murmuring and fretting at everything, is like tearing the flesh from my bones. By the grace of God, I am discontented at nothing. I see God sitting at the throne and ruling all things."

If every one was of this spirit, it would wonderfully improve the world. Christians lose their wayside comforts, and dishonor the Master, by their fretfulness over little troubles. Some who can bear the great sorrows of life with a martyr's faith and patience, will even show anger over the loss of a button, the mislaying of a cane, or fifteen minutes delay of dinner, though they have stood calmly by the graves of dear ones gone, and comforted others whose hearts were breaking with grief.

Doubtless physical infirmity is a cause of much of the agitation and fretfulness which many good people exhibit; but they must guard against this. Not only must they watch against yielding to such things, but they must watch against the overwork, the stimulation, the excess, the gluttony, and the dyspepsia, which rob men of peace, and which leave them nervous, fretful and impatient. God would have us well. It is small credit to a watchmaker to have his watches continually out of order, even though it may wholly be the fault of those who carry them; and the perpetual sickness and fretfulness of Christians does not honor him whose apostle has said, "Glorify God in your body."—Christian Progress.

THE GREAT EARTHQUAKE.—Did you ever hear of the awful calamity that came to the City of Lisbon in November, 1755? It was a sweet autumnal day. Very suddenly was heard a sound as of rumbling thunder. In a single moment came a fearful upheaving, and churches and houses were overthrown, burying in their ruins thirty-thousand human beings. The groans of the dying were indeed heartrending, as they writhed in agony, under the weight of fallen stones and walls. Sir Henry Falkland was lying in the ruins of a house, but was rescued by the heroism of his beautiful servant girl. After he married her, and she became Lady Agnes Falkland. The earthquake only lasted about three minutes. The church services were being held at the time, and so very many were entombed in the ruins of the churches. The calamity was not confined to the city—and so in all sixty thousand perished. The Setubal seaport disappeared entirely. Even old ocean heaved terribly, and noble ships were swallowed up. The mountains of Portugal quaked. Some of them broke asunder, and many volcanoes in Southern Europe again opened their fires. It was a fearful visitation, truly, but "My ways are not as your ways, nor as your thoughts [illegible]"

A GOOD WELCOME.—An old minister had advised the people of a certain neighborhood in Wales to hold "cottage prayer-meetings" taking the houses in regular order up the mountainside. One day a poor woman went to a store and asked for two penny candles. The store-keeper said to her, "Why, Nancy, what do you want with penny candles? Is not rush-light good enough for you?" Her answer was, "Oh, yes, rush-light is good enough for me, but the prayer-meeting will soon be coming to my house, and I want to give the Lord Jesus Christ a good welcome." Is there not a lesson here for each Christian? Are we always careful to give the Lord Jesus a good welcome?" Or do we not too often keep the candles for self, and give the rush-light to him?—Ex.

DON'T live a single hour of your life without doing exactly what is to be done in it, and going straight through it from beginning to end. Work, play, study, whatever it is, take hold at once and finish it up squarely and cleanly. Then do the next thing, without letting any moments drop between. It is wonderful to see how many hours those prompt people contrive to make in a day. It is as if they picked up the moments that the drawlers lost. And if you find yourself where you have so many things pressing you that you hardly know how to begin, let me tell you a secret: take hold of the first one that comes to hand, and you will find the rest all fall into file and follow after like a company of well-drilled soldiers.—Christian Witness.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post office—whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the pay.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether it is taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

WHEN WILL HE COME?

BY C. PATTERSON.

Ah! when shall the reign of Messiah begin?
When earth shall be cleansed from the last stain of sin?
When man shall no longer his Maker profane,
Nor hold in derision the Lamb that was slain?

Oh! when shall the dawn of the morning arise,
When Christ shall descend from the gray eastern skies?
When the light of his throne shall drive back the gloom,
And many shall wake from the dust of the tomb?

The saints have believed that the day draweth near;
All down through the ages have waited to hear
The voice of the Bridegroom, inviting the bride
To come to his banquet—to stand by his side.

And so I am waiting, not knowing how soon;
It may be at morn, and it may be at noon;
When the sound of the loom has ceased at the mill,
When the din of the forge and anvil is still.

It may be at eve when the sunbeams are pale;
When the shadows of night are seen in the vale;
When the fowls of the farm are seeking their rest,
And the robin again returns to her nest.

It may be in the night, 'mid darkness profound,
The world shall awake at the trumpet's dread sound;
While nations shall tremble in awe to behold
His form as the heavens his glory unfold.

Oh! yes, he is coming, the very same form!
His vestments the lightning, his mantle the storm;
To execute judgment on those who transgressed,
To gather his chosen to mansions of rest.

THOUGHTS ON THE TIME QUESTION.

BY G. W. GILLESPIE.

The fact that the prophetic periods and prophetic events clearly indicate the end and limit the time of Gentile rule has led many to declare that "time is in the Bible" and will yet be understood. Others, taking the words of Jesus as recorded in Matt. Mark and Luke, saying, "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only;" and, "For in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh," and all other passages of like import, have concluded that time is not revealed in the Bible, and all efforts in that direction will prove abortive, and result in naught but mischief and bad work.

We do not endorse all the time arguments that have been preached and published, but evidently it has been God's purpose that time should be preached, both to warn the world, and wake up the church. The great Advent movement that has stirred the world and revolutionized theology for these forty years, seems to be in harmony with prophecy and the divine plan.

Inspiration is stamped upon prophecy and the prophetic periods. They cannot lie. They will not fail, in due time they will all be understood by those who are in harmony with the grand event, when our Lord shall come. The appointed time was declared, but not revealed at the time our Lord made the statement; "But of that day and hour knoweth no man." Jesus knew all that was to be known about Daniel's vision and the angel's visit; and when he said, "No, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father," it is plain to be seen that no possible clue of the "time appointed" was to be had up to that time. Although Jesus did not know "the day or hour," he did know that his kingdom was not to be established at that time, but that a long period of tribulation was to come upon the church, and that the vision of Daniel reached beyond the tribulation. The disciples not knowing these things, and supposing that the kingdom was about to be established, asked the question, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" Acts 1:6. Jesus answered them saying, "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons which the Father hath put in his own power. Acts 1:7. The knowledge of the time when the restitution should take place and the kingdom of God be established could be of no possible benefit to the early Christians, as there was a great work for them and their posterity to do covering a long period of time. The church must bear witness of Jesus both in Jerusalem, Judea, Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth. We can now see that it was right and proper for Jesus to forestall the expectations and silence all the questionings of his disciples, with reference to his coming and the end of the world.

They were not to know the "Day or the hour," nor, the "times or the seasons," That information belonged to the church after the tribulation had ended, and the "signs" had been seen. All those passages of Scripture or sayings of Jesus about not knowing the time were spoken in the present tense, and had their application then and there at the time spoken; and could not apply down here, in the time of the end, when we have "Seen all these things come to pass." Surely we can now "Look up and lift up our heads for our redemption draweth nigh." And we do well to heed our Lord's admonition to "watch!" For if we do not watch, we shall not know what hour our Lord will come; for he declares in Rev. 3: 3, "If therefore thou shalt not watch I will come on thee as a thief and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee."

PROV. 20: 14.

"It is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer; but when he is gone his way, then he boasteth." The wise man was well acquainted with the business affairs of this life, and how people would talk in trading, saying the buyer would say, "It is naught; it is not worth so much as the seller would ask"; but when the bargain is closed, and he is gone his way, then he boasteth of his good bargain, telling his friends what a good trade he made out of the seller. "It is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer; but when he is gone his way, then he boasteth."

There is nothing that so convinces a man that there is truth in religion as to see true religion in Christians.

REPORT OF THE NINETEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE AMER. ADVENT MISSION SOCIETY,

The Business Agent's Report of the Foreign Board was read and approved.

The Secretary's and Treasurer's Report of the Western Board was read and approved.

The following is the Report of the Eastern Board as read by the Secretary.

REPORT OF THE EASTERN BOARD OF THE American Advent Missionary Society.

With thankfulness to the Giver of every good and perfect gift, who has called us into his vineyard to labor, for the numerous blessings with which he has favored us during another current year, we come before you with a brief statement concerning our work, and submit it to you as our annual report, covering a period of a little more than eleven months time. Although we cannot report as much accomplished during the past year as we wish, yet we are glad to say that earnest and decided work has been wrought for the Master, and that God has in a marvelous manner indicated his goodness and love to his servants in aiding and blessing the efforts put forth, however humble they may have been, in reaching the unsaved and bringing them to behold the beauties there are in Christ, and causing them to be rescued from the thraldom of sin and brought into the glorious liberty of the sons of God.

From a close observation and years experience we are thoroughly convinced that very much more can be accomplished by a systematic and well devised course of effort concentrated in one field, than by general and promiscuous labor. This is seen in the work of our missionary in the State of Maine the present season. By a long continued and persistent effort grand results were reached, which could not have been if a different course of action had been adopted.

The work of the Eastern Board for the past year has been largely confined to the Eastern States; something however has been done in other sections, and we trust many have heard the glad tidings of salvation and eternal redemption through our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming through the instrumentalities employed by the Eastern Board of the A. A. Mission Society.

While some hearts have been made glad in the reception of truth, others doubtless have been brought under condemnation in not yielding to the gospel in its claims, and are still pursuing the path that leads to destruction.

While it is the duty of the missionary to sow seed beside all waters and care for the tender plants springing therefrom, it cannot be known of the amount of good accomplished till the Lord of the harvest shall have garnered in the sheaves and the mist shall have cleared away. From the various reports sent the Board by missionaries employed during the year, we learn that the aggregate number of days in which earnest work has been done for the Master, inclusive of those taken for travel to and from fields of labor, and exclusive of those employed at home or elsewhere in secular business, is 280.

In the accomplishment of the above work there have been about 3000 miles traveled by cars, stage coaches, on foot and otherwise, at a cash expense not exceeding sixty dollars. One hundred and thirteen preaching services have been held, besides numerous meetings for prayer and social worship. From five to ten hundred families have been visited for religious conversation and prayer, besides hundreds of persons called upon and tracts or reading matter put into their hands. Thirty-one thousand pages of tracts have been distributed where there seemed to be any inclination to read on the themes of man's salvation, human destiny, the personal coming of our Lord, and the preparation of heart necessary to meet him in peace.

The following results from missionary effort in the various fields as reported are, 105 conversions, 20 backsliders reclaimed. There have been 42 persons baptized, besides others which are to follow soon. Three churches have been organized in new fields, with an aggregate membership of seventy-six. Mention should be made in this connection of the organization of a Sunday School at Princeton, Maine, of between 70 and 80 scholars; also that a new church edifice is in process of erection at that place. There are in this school 45 copies of the Blessed Hope Quarterly taken already, and 30 Young Pilgrim; all of which exhibit a determination to live and do a work for God. The present membership of the church recently organized there is forty-six, and more to follow.

Another feature of our work for a few months past has been the visiting of hundreds of vessels coming in and going out of the port of Boston; the scattering of thousands of pages of tracts, and numerous copies of the Quarterly Journal of Prophecy, kindly donated by the Foreign Board, and fifty copies weekly of the World's Crisis; placing before and reaching thousands of persons with the great truths relating to the coming of Christ and the establishment of his kingdom, and the grand era that is so soon to succeed the present economy in which blessings immortal, a tearless world, and unfading glories will ever be enjoyed.

On looking over the mission field and hearing the cry coming from various quarters, "Come over and help us"; and in view of our proximity to the day of God, at which our work for the Master will close, a question of awful moment presses itself upon our hearts, Are we diligently and faithfully doing what we can to save the perishing by our words, acts, money, and all the available means given us of God? A golden opportunity is now before us to put in effective blows and telling work in the direction of spreading truth and advancing the interests of the cause to which our hearts have become endeared, and for which our Master laid down his life. The hour has fully come when all the faithful of the dear Redeemer should with renewed energy and zeal press the claims of the gospel as never before, and bring to bear on the minds and consciences of men the great truths of divine revelation, and especially those which relate to the closing up of the gospel economy and coming of the King of kings and Lord of lords.

Let us, brethren of the American Advent Mission Society, during the coming year take hold of this work with a will and zeal characteristic of those who really believe that the consummation of the ages is at hand. While the tide of infidelity is coming in like a flood upon the people of God, let us make every possible effort to save some from its dark waters ere they are engulfed in the pool of irrecoverable ruin.

Come, brethren East and West, let us rally as never before, unfurling our banner to the breeze, and with firm step and united effort charge upon the enemy's strongholds and drive him from his entrenchments, and in the name of our soon coming King demand an unconditional surrender, that a glorious triumph and victory may be achieved by Immanuel's friends, and the standard of truth reared upon the soil that has been crimsoned by the blood of martyred millions all along the path of human history. There never has been in the history of the church such facilities and favored opportunities as now for the spread of gospel truth. It seems that the time has been especially prepared of God for the missionary of the cross, the gateway of the world being opened before him.

"Shall we whose souls are lighted
With wisdom from on high—
Shall we to men benighted
The lamp of life deny?"

We say no, emphatically. Let us sound out the cry, "Behold He cometh!" from the hill-top to the valley, from the densely populated cities to the rural districts, from the lakes to the gulf, from the northern boundaries of American soil to the far-off shores of China and Japan, from the rivers to the ends of the earth. Respectfully submitted.

A. W. SIBLEY, Sec. of Eastern Board.

The following is the Report of the Western Board, as read by the Secretary of that Board.

AMERICAN ADVENT MISSIONARY SOCIETY—WESTERN BOARD.

Third Annual Report.

After another season of loving labor in the sweet service of King Immanuel, we meet once more at our joyous and Heaven-blessed "Feast of Tabernacles." Like tired and hungry vine-dressers of the Orient, we gather toward the close of day to rest a little, inquire each other's welfare, and refresh our souls with bread from Heaven, and living water from the stricken Rock, and now and then a few grapes of Eschol (since the fruitage of our vineyard has not yet come), brought back by faithful spies from

"Canaan's fair and happy land,
Where our possessions lie."

While thus delightfully employed, permit your Western Board the privilege of reporting to you the progress of the past year in Western home mission work. Three eventful years have passed since the Foreston Convention created this Board and assigned its field and work. As explained in a former report, the first of these years was almost wholly occupied in discussing by mail, and under great disadvantages, various plans and details of our work—a very tedious but indispensable prelude to successful effort.

The year's labor closed at our former Amboy Campmeeting two years since, when many generous donations and pledges from noble and self-sacrificing hearts supplied our treasury with more abundant means, and enabled us to make during our second year what was deemed a creditable beginning of systematic Home Mission work in our Southern and Western States and Territories. Of this a report was offered at our Eastern meetings last year, both at Springfield and at Alton Bay. Your Board would here gratefully acknowledge the marked favor and very substantial tokens of approbation with which our Eastern brethren welcomed our report as a harbinger of better days and more efficiency, because of better system, in our mission service in the wide West.

It was our confident hope to submit a similar report at a general Western Campmeeting last year, by which means to secure donations and arouse if possible some enthusiasm for missionary effort and support among our Western brethren and churches. Of this privilege, as all are aware, we were deprived to our great disappointment, as we thereby not only lost the coveted opportunity, but our Mission treasury was seriously crippled, and our work much hindered and curtailed in extent for that year. Simple justice requires us to confess that had it not been for prompt and liberal benefactions from Eastern friends, and especially from the Eastern division of our Mission Society, our Western work must have stopped entirely. On this account we have not dared either to extend our field of labor or to enlarge our corps of workers during the past year. We have been able with God's blessing to respond to every worthy call for aid, but with this we have been forced to be content, much as we have desired to assume the vigorous aggressive in this most Christian warfare.

We are happy to submit the following statistical report of the results and progress of the year just past, disclaiming all boastfulness of a work in all success is due, and all praise belongs, to God alone. Yet we would acquit ourselves as faithful almoners of your bounty, and we especially desire to show what heart-cheering results will surely follow the prudent use of even a comparatively trifling sum of money expended in the cause of our Western Home Missions. Dear Adventist brethren, both East and West, could we but arouse your missionary zeal to a fervor commensurate and consistent with our "blessed hope," it is positively certain that great and glorious results would speedily follow.

Since July, 1883, which month was included in our last annual report, your Western Board reckon one year's work to this present month of September, 1884, during which time we have aided by mission funds twenty mission workers and evangelists located or laboring in eleven Southern or Western States. Sixty-four applications for such aid have been received and approved, and sixty-four reports of mission labor have been placed on file for inspection and permanent preservation.

These reports aggregate as follows: 14,027 miles of missionary travel, by rail, boat, horse, or on foot, at an actual outlay of $320.16; 788 preaching services held; 70,250 pages of tracts freely distributed; 1,538 family visits made; 187 professed conversions; 109 professed reclaimants from backsliding; 76 baptisms; 8 churches newly organized, with a total membership of 145 souls; also 76 subscriptions for the World's Crisis. This work has occupied 947 days of actual labor, and has cost, for actual traveling and incidental expense, $376.41, a large share of which was paid by donations in the field, amounting to $233.65. Its actual cost to mission funds has been $1,019.55. With very trifling exceptions all has been done in wholly new fields, and often in the very teeth of intense prejudice and bitter opposition. Yet with this to encounter and to overcome, we have during the past year set in gospel order a church of Christ, with an average membership of eighteen, for every $127.44 expended. Surely this is encouraging. At this comparatively trifling cost we should have many churches, yes, many individual brethren and sisters even, who could well afford themselves the inestimable privilege of founding, through their benefactions, a church of Christ in some new mission field this coming year. Why not every year?

Permit your Board the further privilege of presenting a summary of our work and results during the two years now past since our former Amboy Campmeeting, for the especial benefit of those Western friends who did not hear or read our last year's report.

SUMMARY OF TWO YEARS' WORK.

141 applications received and approved. 132 reports of labor filed for inspection. 30 evangelists and mission workers, of known good character and ability, aided to preach the "gospel of the kingdom" in fourteen Southern or Western States or Territories, aggregating in their reports 25,011 miles traveled in mission service, at an actual outlay of $692.54. 1541 preaching services held. 142,234 pages of tracts freely scattered. 3072 visits from house to house. 372 professed conversions. 234 professed reclaimants. 135 baptisms. 18 churches organized in new fields, with a total of 293 members; also 164 subscribers for the World's Crisis. Days of actual labor, 2132. Actual traveling and incidental expense, $824.86. Donations received in the field, $511.45. Actual cost to mission funds, $2,518.19, or an average cost of $139.89 for each church organized. Surely all will acknowledge this a trifling outlay for a magnificent return.

It is understood, we hope, that a large share of this work was done and funds were expended where no churches were organized. Thousands have heard the message of the kingdom, have received tracts, have been visited in their homes for private conversation and prayer, and have become more or less awakened, and we hope benefitted, by the labors of our Western evangelists, aside from any results which we can report or even know.

Your Board would also distinctly and emphatically disclaim all pretension of conducting, or reporting, all the mission work done by our brethren of the Adventist faith in the great West. We doubt not that many are constantly at work, of whose sacrifice and labor of love we are not informed by any report, formal or otherwise. We cheerfully concede that such brethren are doing much good. We bid them God-speed in all good works. Our aim is simply to keep track of the money entrusted to us, and to make as sure as possible that it is faithfully used, and to show what it accomplishes in visible labor and results, for the encouragement of donors and friends in systematic and liberal giving.

We close by calling attention to our wondrous opportunities. Great and momentous truths are entrusted to us. Our Master has bid us give them to the world. God gives us property, goods, lands, money, not to be consumed in last-day flames, but to freely proclaim his truth in our own and other lands. Never were there such facilities for this work as now. Latter day inventions give us power to crowd the work of years into months if we will. Open doors abound. Colorado, Dakota, Montana and other fertile mission fields are calling us. With both hands they beckon us to bring them men with tents to tell their people the true "old story," unmixed with ancient or modern fable. Men of God are ready, willing, eager to go. They love the work. They feel the burden. They ask not for fat salaries, but they cannot go at their own charges. Wives and little ones must be fed, housed and clothed, while the husband and father bears a free gospel to a thankless world. Shall such men go? Then you must send them, and for this purpose you have created your Mission Society, with its Eastern, Western and Foreign Boards, to attend to this work in these respective fields. We have shown you how prudently and economically this can be done. Men and brethren, help us! Give us your prayers, your sympathy, your active interest, your means. Help us every way you can, and every dollar shall tell you what work it has done. Respectfully submitted.

HENRY POLLARD,
Secretary and Treas. Western Board.

By vote the Reports of the Eastern and Western Boards were referred to the committee on publications, with the recommendation to have them published in pamphlet form.

The following brethren were appointed a committee on church extension: H. Pollard, F. Burr, C. Goodrich, E. A. Stockman and W. Sheldon. At this stage of the meeting Brn. A. S. Calkins and M. Wellcome made some very excellent remarks relative to the importance of earnest and decided action in the missionary field.

Proceeded to the election of officers for the ensuing year. The tellers who had been previously appointed collected the ballots, which showed the election of the following for the ensuing year:

President—Eld. J. Couch.
Vice President—Eld. D. R. Mansfield.
Secretary—Eld. A. W. Sibley.
Treasurer—Eld. J. Hemenway.

Adjourned till 1½ o'clock.

Met as adjourned. The President, Eld. John Couch, in the chair. Prayer by Bro. H. Pollard. After listening to some remarks by the President elect relative to the responsible position to which he had been called by their votes, proceeded to ballot for an Auditor, which resulted in the election of Eld. F. Burr. The Chair appointed the following a nominating committee to nominate members for the Eastern, Western and Foreign Boards: E. G. Higgins, H. Pollard and A. S. Calkins. This committee having done the duty assigned them, the following are the persons chosen for the different Boards the ensuing year:

Eastern Board—J. Couch, A. W. Sibley, J. Hemenway, B. Young, E. Cox, E. G. Higgins.

Western Board—H. Pollard, W. J. Bursell, A. P. Moore, J. Bower, D. Webster.

Foreign Board—John Couch, L. Boutell, D. Webster, I. I. Leslie, E. K. Smith, B. Young, J. Hemenway.

It was voted, that the members of the different Boards living over ten miles from the place of meetings of said Boards (when attending) shall have their traveling expenses paid.

The Secretary was instructed to cast a ballot for John Couch as Editor of the Quarterly Journal of Prophecy the ensuing year.

The Vice President, D. R. Mansfield, was instructed to cast a ballot for the Business Agent of the A. C. P. Society, Bro. J. Hemenway, to be Business Agent of the Foreign Board of Missions the coming year.

It was voted, that Bro. H. H. Tucker be the Corresponding Secretary of the Foreign Board the ensuing year.

The thanks of the Society were extended to Bro. Miles Grant for the efficient manner in which he has officiated as President of the Society for a number of years.

The matter of the worn-out and indigent ministers' fund was referred to the S. A. C. Association.

Bro. J. Hemenway, as Treasurer of the A. A. Mission Society was instructed to publish in the Crisis, That persons when sending money to the Mission Society state to whom or for what they wish it appropriated; and that all funds received shall be appropriated as directed by the donors.

A verbal report of the Committee on Home Missions was made and adopted by the Society. No reports from the other standing committees have been received as yet, consequently there are none here given.

No further business coming before the Society, it adjourned to the call of the Chair.

A. W. SIBLEY,
Secretary A. A. Mission Society.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN MISSIONS.

Missionary work is labor gratuitously performed by one party for the benefit of another party. The work is performed through love for the benefited class. God stands at the head of all true missionaries. His infinite love for the lost of our race has caused him to institute a glorious plan for their salvation. Jesus Christ stands next in the list of the loving class, and gave himself to labor and die for the benefit of those who could never repay him. Next in order are the angels, who lovingly become ministering spirits to minister unto those who shall be heirs of salvation. Behind these stands the church of God, each member of which, when admitted to the holy fraternity, covenants to labor without hope of earthly reward for the salvation of perishing sinners. Every Christian is under positive obligation to do what he can in the sacred cause. God has allotted to believers of each generation their special work, and he has been faithful to furnish each generation with all necessary means, and removed every barrier to the accomplishment of their appointed work.

Brethren of the Association, your Committee devoutly believe that God has called his people of the present period to do a special mission work, and that it is the last on the page of revealments to be done for a perishing world. The call to this work is from the Supreme Head of all sacred missions. It cannot be disregarded with impunity. The message is the most responsible and grand ever delivered to mortals, and the most effectual door has been opened, and the most ample supplies furnished for its promulgation that were ever offered to the church.

We earnestly exhort the lovers of Christ to do all in their power to rescue the perishing, by liberal donations to the funds of our Mission Society, and by their prayers, exhortations, preaching and publications, for the warning of a perishing world of the speedily approaching judgment.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. COUCH,
W. J. HOBBS, } Committee.
C. H. WILLEY,

FAITH believes God's word. Patience waits God's time. Hope expects all God has promised. Love urges to obey all God's commands. Humility bows low before God's throne. Submission shuts the mouth in trying times. Resignation cheerfully surrenders all to God's disposal. When these graces are found together, the character is complete.—Ex.

GOOD THOUGHTS.

The following excellent thoughts on "successful work" are from Bro. "G. W. D." in the Christian Witness. They are too valuable to be lost or forgotten. M. G.

SUCCESSFUL WORK.

In order to make Christian work successful, there must be a direct effort to lead souls to salvation, or build them up in spirituality here and now. There is often a lamentable distance between sermons and soul-saving; even at campmeetings and during revival efforts, it so frequently happens that there is a great gap between the sermon and the altar work.

The minister descants on his favorite theme, and when he is done, it requires a very skillful exhorter to construct a bridge between the sermon and the work of immediate soul-saving. The saddest of it is that many preachers think their work is done with the sermon; and when they have fired off their peroration, retire from the scene of action, and leave a few humble holiness people, or devoted unobtrusive sisters, to do the most important of all work, that of immediate personal salvation.

It is lamentable that many of our so-called great preachers, act as if the altar work was far beneath their dignity. At many of our large campmeetings where the platform is full of preachers, it is sadly noticeable, that when the prayer-meeting begins and the most important of all work is to be undertaken, the great majority of preachers are seen to retire as if they had no part or lot in such exercises. All Christian work will be a failure in proportion as it recedes from the aim for immediate personal results. The most successful way in teaching a Bible lesson, or preaching a sermon, or leading a prayer-meeting, is to definitely aim at having somebody justified or sanctified or built up in the love of God immediately.

The spirit of a Christian worker is contagious, and any vagueness or postponement of results on the part of the preacher or Sunday-school teacher, will certainly carry the contagion of vagueness and procrastination to the hearer. He may feebly exhort them to present surrender and faith, but if he does not really mean it in earnest, the result will be according to his spirit more than according to his word. If all Christian workers were to aim at direct and immediate salvation, how much superfluous and irrelevant matter would be dropped out of sermons and songs. What a vast waste of time and talent there is in the indefinite and aimless efforts of so many religious workers. So many aim at nothing, and hit it. Let us preach, pray and sing, expecting results while we speak.

"BE YE ALSO READY."

BY J. MORRISON.

Christ says, "Therefore be ye also ready." Matt. 24: 44. The solemn injunction to us, who stand face to face with the closing scenes of earth is, "Be ye also ready."

But what is readiness for the coming of Christ? First, there must be a hearty consent to, and delight in, the object of his coming. Readiness to meet Christ, implies moral likeness to him. He is holy. We must have clean hearts. He was separate from sinners. We must come out from among them and stand apart from the spirit and manners of worldly society. "Walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless."

Grace, love and power must abound more and more, and the heart must ripen daily for the golden harvest of the Lamb. Soon, very soon his mediatorial work will cease, and the door of mercy and hope will be closed forever. But to the loving bride, the swelling note of speedy deliverance thrills the devout heart with heavenly joy. The time for the marriage is the last thing made known, that the bride may make herself ready. Says Paul, "We which are alive, and remain to the coming of the Lord, are not in darkness, of the times and the seasons, that that day should overtake us as a thief."

We have come to the dispensation of the fullness of the times when God will gather together in one all things in Christ. And by all that can be seen from prophecy, the times of the Gentiles is fulfilled. Soon the great antitypical feast of tabernacles will be fulfilled "in the end of the year," when the trump of the Jubilee will sound, bringing Christ from heaven, and the saints from the grave, and change the living.

LACK OF CHARITY.

The lack of charity can be detected not only in the world and in the church, but in religious exercises and even in holiness meetings. It often happens in religious meetings that persons make unkind allusions to others' testimony, and make invidious comparisons between the Lord's children. For example: one person happens to speak of being in a fiery furnace, and another gets up and says, "I never speak of fiery furnaces—I am not in the furnace business; I believe in praising God"; and similar remarks. Now, however holy and joyous such a person may be, they certainly lack charity. Another person alludes to the case of their children, and how their heart is burdened for them. Then somebody comments: "If we train our children right and trust fully in the Lord, we need not be burdened." Another speaks of having to live on naked faith, or dry faith, for long periods of time. One replies, he does "not understand any such faith as that"; with him "salvation is a conscious joy and power in the soul." I need not enumerate examples. You are all familiar with what I am alluding to.—Christian Witness.

A SEASONABLE word to one in trouble is often like a switch on a railroad track—but one inch between wreck and smooth-rolling prosperity.

THE CHOICE OF MOSES.

Men become great partly by inborn elements of power, and partly by the circumstances which combine to develop the innate forces within them. Dazzled by the splendors of grand achievements, we overlook the procuring causes, and so honor and glory are often bestowed where they are but partially deserved. The interest which centers in the character and career of Moses is a striking example.

Back of the great Israelitish statesman stands a figure marvelously antecedent of all his successes. In sublime discernment of coming historic changes; in clear and ample comprehension of the trend of divine providence; in that keen sagacity which grasps offered conditions and wields them into the accomplishment of desired ends; in the faith which recognizes the footsteps of God, and follows in them; in the patient waiting which augurs certain success, the character and career of the mother of Moses were scarcely less remarkable than the statesmanship and aggrandizement of her son.

Very adroit and terribly cruel was Pharaoh's edict for the destruction of all the male children of Hebrew birth. But the ready skill of our Hebrew slave woman and mother was quite adequate to an emergency so heart-rending and threatening. She knew that Pharaoh's daughter possessed a woman's heart, and that the palace of the king was cheered by the prattle of no infant voices; and she deemed that a boy so fair as hers, who should seem to come to the royal hearthstone by a special providence, would be no unwelcome guest. But how should her precious treasure be conveyed to the palace without discovering his parentage and thus insuring his instant destruction?

At the close of many a weary day had she sat on the banks of the Nile, mingling her bitter tears with its silent waters; for its dark bosom was the tomb of her people's offspring. Tall and graceful and tough grew the papyrus, or rushes, from its muddy bed. Her woman's ingenuity, quickened by a sense of deadly peril to her strangely beautiful babe, conceived a plan at once novel and touching.

Of the flexile rushes she tenderly wove a little boat-like basket, making it waterproof with bitumen, and sanctifying it with her tears; and in it, with struggling emotions, she laid her fair-browed boy. With her own trembling hand she pushed the little ark with its precious freight out among the flags to the river's brink, and left it to the care of the Hebrew's God. As she had divined and prayed, the object of her love and faith was soon nestling in the bosom of Pharaoh's daughter; and that night the infant law-giver of Israel slept right royally in the palace of the king, with his own mother for nurse. Splendid triumph of a helpless woman's skill and a slave-mother's faith!

We may suppose that as Moses grew to years his watchful mother did not fail to infuse into his very life that deep and ardent love of the Hebrew nationality and the Jewish religion which laid the foundation for his great and grand career, and made it easy for him, when the moment came, to refuse to be called and enrolled the son of Pharaoh's daughter, and to espouse the forlorn cause of his own people. There is a legend that so beautiful was Moses in his childhood, that the people in their admiration would follow him through the streets; and that one day a crown was placed upon his head by his playfellows, which he indignantly dashed to the ground; as if he felt the insult offered to his enslaved race by placing on his brow the symbol of Egyptian royalty.

So the MOTHER, grasping with one hand the promise of Jacob's God, and with the other holding her well-favored boy to her heart, shaped the course of Israel's history, and made possible the deliverance of her people—by the stretched out hand of God—from the cruel oppression of the Egyptian throne.

What an example is here of the scope of the divine providence in developing and combining forces and characters in the accomplishment of pre-determined ends. Israel was to be delivered; Pharaoh was to be overthrown. A leader of no ordinary character and qualifications would be needed to lead God's people from Egypt to Canaan. Where should he be found, and how should he be qualified? He must be of Israelitish blood. God does not put his people under foreign princes—unless for punishment. As the time for the emancipation drew near, there was born of Jewish parentage a child marked at its birth for distinction and leadership. But how should he be educated? The Israelites in their servitude had little means of culture. But God had a way, and this Hebrew mother was quick to discern it. The very government that was to be overthrown and punished was made, unwittingly, to prepare the instrument of its own chastisement and ruin. The Court that fattened on the rich products of the brutally enforced hardships of Joseph's kindred, while reveling in wanton forgetfulness of justice and of God, was educating, after its highest standards of culture, the typical deliverer of Abraham's seed; the person who should stand face to face with the king and demand, in the name of the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the manumission of his race, backed in his demand by divine, miraculous power.

How galling to Pharaoh that the boy, plucked from death on the brink of the Nile by his kind-hearted daughter; that the young man reared and cultured in his court, and offered heirship to his throne—that this man, the object of his lavished charity and the hope of his kingdom, should betray his kingly confidence and head the revolt of six hundred thousand of his subjects. But such is the way of the great God; and so he makes the wrath of man to praise him.

In the background of this picture there stands, silent but grand, the womanly figure of the MOTHER of Moses—that glowing, fertile brain, and deep, pure heart, in whose foresight and faith the great Exodus—on the human side—had its birth. Saintly motherhood will hold high rank in heaven.

We took our pen to write of Moses, and so we will—in our next.

"WARS AND RUMORS OF WARS."

We look for no universal war till Michael stands up. Dan. 12:1. But upon the authority of the Saviour's prediction we do expect "wars and rumors of wars" more and more, until the end. The "last days" were to be especially characterized by the unrest of the nations, breaking out here and there in hostile and bloody collisions. As the hour of Satan's dethronement approaches, he will use to the utmost his vast power in stirring up the warlike passions of earthly rulers, and so keep all the world in a ferment, thus turning away the popular attention from God's last message to the nations.

The national skies will never be cleared of "war clouds" until the "Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in his wings." But the scenes of conflict will be constantly shifting. Our Lord's words—"There shall be wars and rumors of wars," imply this.

At this moment a bloody struggle is in progress between France and China. Victory, thus far, is with the French; but the popular sympathy is with the Chinese. We append the following:

"An official dispatch from Hanoi, dated Oct. 8th, states that Col. Donnier, with two battalions of the foreign legion, two companies of infantry and a section of mountain artillery, had an engagement with Chinese troops in the valley of the Loo Chuan river, which lasted six hours. The Chinese made a stubborn resistance, but were finally completely routed. Four gunboats assisted the French forces. Four of the French including a captain were killed, and twenty were wounded. A dispatch, received the following day, stated that Gen. Negrier's column had an engagement at the village of Kep with 6000 Chinese regulars, who occupied intrenchments around a central redoubt. The Chinese began the attack at nine o'clock in the morning by trying to surround the French, and the fighting lasted until two o'clock in the afternoon, when the retreat of the Chinese toward the frontier of China was cut off. The Chinese troops then fled in the direction of Daoguan, pursued by the French. The Chinese loss, in the village alone, was six hundred killed. A French captain and twenty men were killed, and eight officers and twenty men were wounded. Gen. Negrier was slightly wounded, but was not deterred from pursuing the Chinese toward the village of Yeutke. It is stated that the French Government is negotiating with the owners of several large English steamships with the object of chartering vessels to convey more troops to China."

THE FUTURE FIRE.

Josephus affirms that the first man, Adam, predicted that the world was to be destroyed at one time by the force of fire, and at another time by the violence of water." Whether this tradition is genuine, or spurious, we have no means of determining. Be that as it may, it clearly proves that the theory of a coming fiery deluge is not a new notion, for as far back as Josephus' day it was believed that a burning day was divinely foretold, on the strength of tradition, to say nothing about Bible evidence. So Peter uttered nothing incredible or new, in saying that our earth is "reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men."

That our earth contains internal fires is a fact forced upon our attention by active volcanoes; and that these fires are liable to submerge the earth at a future day is rendered probable, even without the testimony of inspiration; and certainly when the two sources of faith are blended, all doubts should be silenced. As water from above met water from beneath at the deluge, so doubtless at the coming flood of fire, when again the fountains of the great deep shall be broken up, fire from above will meet fire from beneath, thus producing "the perdition of ungodly men," while the saints will be safely housed in their celestial chambers, till the indignation is past.

OUR PAPERS.

We shall need them till the Lord comes, be that sooner or later; and more than that, they also need us. Let no one think I can get along without this aid, and so rob God and self. It costs money to publish the truth, and we should not cripple the cause by withholding it, nor starve self to save money to perish soon.

1st. The Crisis. It has been a great aid both in proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom, and in encouraging the weary watchers for the coming King. It has not deserted the cause—let us not desert such a potent friend in its important work, but rather stand by it in its efforts to enlarge its sphere of usefulness by augmenting its subscription list.

2. The Quarterly Journal is doing a noble work at home and abroad. Do not desert it, but rather help it, and help the cause, by increasing its list of subscribers.

3rd. The Blessed Hope Quarterly is richly worthy of a wider circulation among Sunday School workers. Do not neglect the young, even if the Lord is near, but "feed the lambs" in this way, with truth.

4th. The Young Pilgrim should be helped into a wider field. Do not think that it will not pay to look after the children. If they are left to seek reading matter, the lovers of poison error will supply them with that kind of reading.

TIME.

Prophetic time is of no value only as it brings the prophetic event. To compute time incorrectly, and after it passes to insist that the time was right, but that the event was wrong, is a shocking error. Better, a thousand times, be mistaken in the time than in the event. Time reaching to "the glory that is to follow" cannot be made to end with any trivial event; nothing but the glory will fill the sacred bill. Time is of no worth only as it brings the predicted event, and if not understood at first is not to be discarded; and if foolishly dealt with by some, is not to be repudiated. It cannot be frowned down by fearful friends, nor be scoffed down by ferocious foes—it is the property of the church, not to be fooled with, of course, as some will do, nor to be ridiculed by others, but to be candidly investigated while knowledge is being increased.

We care nothing for time except as it brings the King, the kingdom, the gathering and the glory. From our best light, it is almost due. We have said so a long time, it is true, and the evidence increases. The days of Noah, or similar ones, are here; the signs cannot be mistaken, and the time is about out. How can we doubt? It must be true. It is true. "Be ye also ready."

A WATCHMAN VERY SICK.

We are sorry to learn that Eld. B. Finney is very seriously ill at his home in Buchanan, Mich. Let him be ESPECIALLY remembered in prayer. He is stricken down in the midst of his successful labors with the church at Buchanan. May the gracious Lord raise him up.—ED.

CHURCH NEWS.

We are pleased to learn that quite a revival interest is in progress at Haverhill, Mass., under the labors of the pastor, Eld. A. W. Sibley. A number have been baptized recently, followed by an encouraging accession to the church. The church is enjoying general prosperity.—ED.

PRAY FOR THE CONVENTION.

The Convention appointed for ministerial improvement, commencing in Worcester Tuesday evening, Nov. 4th, to continue over Sunday, Nov. 9th, will be one of no ordinary interest. Let special prayer be offered that it may result in great good to all who may be present, and that it may spread a holy influence that shall be felt till Jesus comes.

A FRIENDLY HINT.

BY C. P. DOW.

"Variety is the spice of life." In religious exercises there is liable to appear a sameness of language, and sometimes a sameness of tone, that becomes at length rather stale, poor, distasteful, and really unpleasant. I am aware that Paul charged Timothy among other things to "hold fast the form of sound words;" and he adds, "which thou hast heard of me." This language of Paul (2 Tim. 1: 13) has been quoted to prove the propriety of a liturgy, and that the same form should be used by the whole church at a given time; and such persons ask how it is possible to pray in union and harmony unless the form to be used be known by each? They say, if one leads in an extemporaneous prayer, all the other worshippers or petitioners, must wait to hear the prayer, sentence by sentence, petition by petition; criticise, accept or reject it, as they at the moment may decide; and all this requires a mental effort inconsistent with faith and devotion. The weight of argument here is more apparent than real. If persons are really devout, and ask according to the will and Word of God, the Spirit will help their infirmities (Rom. 8: 26) and fervent prayer varied in its utterance will reach the ear of God, through our divine advocate.

Then I would advise varied language. This may require a little effort, but it will amply repay, for we may so become accustomed to a form of words as to repeat them mechanically, habitually, and make our practice resemble another, who, to save the labor of repetition, had a beautiful prayer written out and placed upon the head board of his bed; so that on retiring he had only to point to his prayer and simply say, "Lord, those are my sentiments, my petitions."

A most convenient mode of praying, the beads, regulating the Ave Maria's in due proportion to the Paternosters, is very much on the same plan. So is the water wheel praying of some heathen lands. Careless praying is not acceptable praying. When the church in a certain place in a time of severe drouth met at the church, by previous appointment to pray for copious showers of rain to save their crops and otherwise bless them, the man—the only man that was seen coming to the church on that dry, hot summer day, a cloudless sky overhead, bringing an umbrella, in hope and faith of the God given rain fall, was about right in the premises, even though he might have had no prepared form of prayer, only the pressing need, he, and many others felt.

DR. BUSHNELL, of Vermont, used to say that the best criticism he ever received on his preaching, was from a little boy who sat right at his feet, looking up into his face, as he was preaching in a crowded room of a private house. As he was going on very earnestly, the little fellow spoke out, "You said that afore." I fancy that an honest critic would find in many a sermon an hour long a good many sentences, "said afore," on almost every Sabbath day. A word to the wise ought to be sufficient. Vain repetitions, in prayers or sermons ought to be avoided as much as possible. The store house of God's word is full, and we may get our supplies there. "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth," (2 Tim. 2: 15), was Paul's counsel. We ought to profit by it, and take a well intended hint, and be able to vary the language of our prayers and sermons, so as not to have them appear to be stereotyped. The essential—the fundamental truths of a God given faith are, like God, unchangeable; but there is a beautiful richness in the language we use, and a wealth of doctrines we have to present, that we need not always to pray the same prayer, or preach the same sermon as some seem to do, no matter what text they use.

These "Hints," are to whom they may concern. The writer will try and profit by them, and has penned them in hope they may do good. There is a great chance of improvement in us all. We ought to grow wiser and better as life itself wears away, and the decisive judgment hour comes on and is nearing. The next, and onward ages of our earth will be periods of perfection. We are not "already perfect." But we have perfection in view, and toward it press with an inward, earnest longing. It will be a better day.

HAPPILY SURPRISED.

That wonderful book, called "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," written by Henry Drummond, which I saw noticed in the Crisis, I was anxious to obtain, hoping (but faintly) that it was possible that the antagonism heretofore existing between science and religion, as set forth by each class of writers, might be made to meet tamely, doing honor to both.

I was convinced by reading the writers on science, and those on theology that their differences were more in the abstract than in the concrete. The great chasm that was most influential in separating the two schools was: scientists contended that life was generated by matter, which has been the battle ground of the age; but recently scientists have given up this mistake, and now admit that it is a mystery; and right here Mr. Drummond sets the origin of life in a clear and undeniable light, that life only comes from antecedent life, thus burying that relic of barbarism so deep, and seals the entrance so completely with truth, that all life is derived from God.

I was happily surprised in reading this book, and would commend it to every candid and thoughtful reader. I count it a valuable addition to my library, and would not do without it for twice its cost. However, it is open to honest criticism. I shall only note one point, hoping that abler pens will more fully review the whole work. It contains so much truth, it will not be injured by criticism.

Where he applies John 3. 4–8 to conversion, it is a departure from any known law in nature. She utterly refuses a birth before a begetment. This is scientific, and so well understood, there is no need of defending it, and we think spiritual law is equally as pronounced. We are first begotten. James 1: 18, John 1: 13. The Emphatic gives begotten in this text; and the Revised gives begotten in the margin, and John 3: 9, is rendered begotten in Rev. According to analogy this is the order of divine arrangement: first begotten, then born.

Many things may occur after begetment to prevent us from being born, so in conversions many things may occur (for we live by faith) which will prevent us sharing a spiritual body in the resurrection. Why not? Our King was the first born from the dead, among many brethren. Rom. 8: 29.

The beginning of the new creation, Rev. 3: 14. I have penned this brief article to show I fully believe that natural law is as fully represented in the spiritual world as in the natural.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM R. C. JACKMAN.

Dear Editor:—I wish to say through the Crisis, to the glory of God, that he has done and is doing a good work here in Littleton. Eighteen months ago this October, 1884, I moved here. There was then a little band of Advent brethren and sisters that had been brought into the blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus in his glory, by the labors of Brn. Little, Brown, Magoon and others.

About one year ago we had a series of meetings. Brn. Little, Magoon and Brown were here to preach the Word. They labored some two weeks or more without seeing much of any visible fruits of their labors, but the Spirit of the Lord had sent the truth home to some poor sinners hearts, and after they had all gone away those that had been pricked in the heart began to cry out, "What must we do to be saved?" So Bro. Little was sent for to come back and point out the way to them. Some five or six came out on the Lord's side. We could say from the bottom of our hearts, Praise the Lord for his wonderful salvation to the children of men. Last winter we got Bro. Grant to come here with his big chart. He gave a course of lectures and some of his good, practical sermons. He stayed here three weeks, and there was some good done; some were brought to see the light, and some received it, but there was not so much good done as we hoped or expected to have seen, but we thanked the Lord for what was done.

Last winter Bro. Magoon moved here to be our pastor. He has labored to keep the standard of piety at mast-head. Good has been done, and souls have been brought in under his labors. Three weeks ago the Coos Co. tent was pitched on the old Fair grounds, Brn. Magoon and Gordon having charge of the tent. Brn. Little, Brown and Holt of Vermont were here to preach the Word; also brethren and sisters came in from other towns to help. Brn. Tucker and Bowles from Sugar Hill came over and gave us a lift. All went in for purity of heart and a complete preparation for the coming of the Lord right here, and the salvation of the lost ones. The results are that many have broken away from the ranks of the enemy and have come over on the Lord's side. It makes Satan mad, and quite a number of Roman Catholics have come out from the old "mother of harlots," accepted salvation through Jesus, and have put on Christ by baptism. That makes the priest and some of his subjects growl and threaten some. They have burned one Bible that one of his subjects had after he had embraced the Protestant faith and had been baptized. But we have no fears; the God of heaven is for us, and is more than all that can be against us. Praise God forever!

Eleven put on Christ by baptism last Sunday the 5th. In the evening ten more came forward for prayers. The Lord did bless wonderfully. Glory to his name! Friday evening, the 3d, Bro. Magoon preached. In his discourse he brought in baptism, spoke of Paul and Silas in the Philippian jail, and of the jailor and his house being converted and baptized that night. After he got done preaching, three men that had started rose up and said they wanted to be baptized; they did not dare put it off; so after the meeting all went to the river, between nine and ten o'clock at night, and Bro. Magoon buried them in the liquid grave. They came out of the water happy in the Lord. Others we expect will follow. Ten came forward for prayers Monday night the 6th. Some forty or more have started for the kingdom since the tent has been pitched.

We do rejoice that salvation has come to a goodly number in Littleton. Praise God for a salvation that will take men and women from the gutter and the lowest depths of sin and degradation and make them pure and clean, fit subjects for the kingdom. Jesus has done it here. Glory to his name! And still the work goes on, and we humbly pray that the good work may continue till Jesus comes, which I sincerely believe is right at hand. We long to see Him who has saved us from sin and given us the fulness of the Spirit and joy everlasting.

Littleton, N. H.

FROM SISTER J. A. GOODRICH.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—While reading the blessed Word of God I experience a profit and pleasure in it which cannot be found elsewhere. I seek sincerely there, and only there, for saving truth. When I compare the calm, sweet peace which the Word of God brings to me with all that the world can give of joy, or happiness, or glory, I feel that the least of God's children is a hundred times more blessed than the greatest of earth's monarchs. I know that without divine grace I can do nothing; but grace is given me; it supports and comforts me. What a blessed thought that God orders all things; that not a hair of our head falls without his permission, and that he will control every circumstance for our welfare. It gives me a joy and peace which nothing else could afford. My heart is full of love and praise to God. I know the Lord is leading me, and I can trust him, for he is good. I will confide in him with all my heart forever.

When I reflect on the many changing scenes of life I have been called to pass through, the comfort and consolation God bestows in the hour of trouble, which have enabled me to rejoice even in the midst of affliction, it comes upon my heart with force, and I find by experience that to fully know what Jesus is, we must be tried, tempted and oppressed; we must taste the bitterness of sorrow, feel the pressure of want, tread the path of solitude, and be brought to the end of our own strength, and that of human sympathy and counsel. Jesus shines the brightest to faith's eye when all things are dark and dreary; he speaks peace to our troubled hearts, soothes our sorrows, and says, Fear not; for I will never leave nor forsake thee.

O how blessed is that one who learns by the things which he suffers to glorify God and trust him more implicitly. How many such suffering ones we have in our midst. How often I think of and pray for the poor invalid, tossed upon a couch of pain, counting the slow march of hours through sleepless days and nights, and yet amidst it all their fainting spirits are revived when they think that soon Jesus is coming, and they shall be where there is no more pain, for the former things will have passed away. O, what a glorious position is that to which we are called, to be waiting, watching, anxiously expecting and longing for the coming of the precious Lifegiver. Loved ones are continually being borne away, which fills our world with sighs. Here are fountains of tears welling up from deep places because of sad changes, and yet if we look at them in the light of God's Word, they will work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

How blessed is the assurance that "all things work togther for good to them that love God." So we can say amid it all, Blessed affliction! how much it has accomplished for the saints of God; yet soon it will be forever ended; "weeping endureth for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." I am so glad that only a little while, and we shall have done with trials; loved ones shall live again, sorrow will give place to joy, and the shadows of time to the unfading glories of eternity.

Dear suffering and lonely ones, cheer up. Though death may leave you desolate, yet Christ will come to you and cheer you with the promise of a future reunion. I praise the Lord with all my heart for such a blessed hope. May the blessings of the Lord ever be with you all.

FROM ELD. C. P. DOW.

Bro. Stockman:—I welcome you to the Editorial chair. But I wonder at and regret the vanity that desires a western issue of the Crisis, which must increase the expense, with no commensurate good. Better put the paper in the form of the Christian Cynosure, on as good paper, all ready and most convenient to read and put in binding, and all done at Boston. Let Boston be the "hub"; what does it matter? A western Editor we have, and western correspondents whose articles appear on the editorial page.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The fifteenth Annual Conference of the Advent Christian Church of West Virginia and Southern Ohio, convened with the Round Knob church Aug. 21st, 1884.

Conference was opened by reading of the 91st Psalm, and prayer by Bro. Silas P. Whitney. The following committees were appointed: On business, B. S. Young, Wm. Snyder, D. G. Looney. On devotion, Wm. Snyder, James Vinyard, M. J. Low. On finance, B. S. Young, John Allen, D. N. Foster. On ordination, A. B. Pawley, D. G. Looney, D. Foster. On nominations, M. J. Low, D. N. Foster, John Lanham.

License was granted to Bro. John G. Jarrett to preach the gospel. A vote of thanks to Round Knob church was passed for their kind treatment to the members of this Conference.

Voted, to meet with the Hayes Fork church the first Thursday in September, 1885. Voted, to change the time of the Conference to the first Thursday in September. Voted, to ordain Brn. James Thompson and John Allen.

S. P. WHITNEY, President.
M. H. FRAME, Secretary.

THE Moravian messengers, Messrs. Hartmann and Weinland, who were sent on an exploring tour among the Esquimaux in Alaska, have returned to Bethlehem. Their report will probably lead to the establishment of a mission in that territory.—Ex.

NOW READY,
"OUR HOPE, OR, WHY ARE WE ADVENTISTS?"

This book supplies a long-felt need—that of presenting within a readable compass the special truths believed and taught by Adventists. That it does this fully, ably, grandly, we feel sure will be the verdict of every reader. It is a book that brethren may safely lend to inquiring friends, being a compendium of reasons. All expressions of an offensive or insinuating character are forbidden an appearance upon its pages. Its mission is to convince; but where it fails to work a change, it must command respect as the product of an intelligent and reasonable mind.

Buy it right off, and exhaust the first edition without delay. We would like to put six editions upon the market by the end of the year. You can help us do this.

The history of "Our Hope" is as follows: We desired the Editor of the Crisis to prepare a series of clear, strong articles upon the matters in which we differ from some to more accord with Scripture. This he did. These articles have been carefully revised, and new matter added, and they now appear in the form of the book presented.

Do not overlook this book; it is not a common production. Price 75 cts.

PILATE WASHING HIS HANDS.

About eight o'clock in the morning, up the marble stairs of a palace and across floors of richest mosaic, and under a ceiling dyed with all the splendors of color and along snowbanks of white and glittering sculptures passes a pale, poor, sick young man of thirty-three, condemned to death by one court and on his way to be condemned by another. Jesus of Nazareth is his name. To meet him on the tesselated pavement comes out an unscrupulous, cowardly, time-serving, compromising man, with some few traces of sympathy and fair dealing left in his composition. Governor Pontius Pilate. Did ever two such opposites meet? Luxury and pain, selfishness and generosity, sin and holiness, arrogance and humility, midnight and noon, Pilate and Christ. The bloated-lipped governor takes a cushioned seat and leans back at his ease. The prisoner stands, his wrists manacled. In semi-circle around him are the fiery Sanhedrists, their eyes flashing and their fists brandished, prosecuting the case for the sake of religion; for in all ages religious persecutors are the fiercest of all persecutors, and when the devil does get possession of good men he makes up by intensity for brevity of occupation. And if you have never been in an ecclesiastical court where they had some one on trial you cannot understand the foaming infernalism of those old Jewish Sanhedrists. Governor Pilate begins to cross-question the prisoner and finds him innocent and wants to let him go. To add to his caution in the matter some one comes up and whispers in his ear. "What's that?" says the governor, his hand behind his ear to catch the words almost inaudible. It is a message from Claudia Procula, his wife, who has had a dream about the prisoner's innocence, and the danger of executing him, and has just awakened from this morning dream to send news of it to the governor, at that very moment on the judicial bench. And what, with the protest of his wife and the voice of his own conscience and the entire failure of the Sanhedrists to make a case, he resolves to discharge the prisoner from custody.

But that announcement let loose on the governor an equinoctial storm of indignation. They would get him recalled by the Emperor Tiberius at Rome, and he should no more be Governor of Judea, and how would he feel then in disgrace, and perhaps be hanged for treason. He had already excited the old Emperor's suspicion, which rested not until it finally did effect his banishment and suicide. So Governor Pilate, to compromise the matter, proposes the whipping of Christ instead of his assassination. He was tied to a pillar near the ground, and on his bent and bare back came the thongs of leather with chunks of lead and bone intertwisted to augment the force and horror of the stroke, and when he was led up from that with flushed cheek and torn and quivering and bleeding flesh, he presented a spectacle of suffering in which Rubens, the painter, found the theme for his great masterpiece. But the Sanhedrists were still unsatisfied. They wanted not only part of his nerves lacerated—they wanted all of them lacerated. They did not want a part of his blood; they wanted all of it, down to the last corpuscle. So, after all his merciful hesitation, Pilate surrenders to the demoniacal cry of "Crucify him!" But Governor Pilate, seated in the presence of the people, sends a slave to fetch him something. The constables are impatient to lead out the criminal to execution, and the mob are waiting to glare on their victim. But a pause is necessitated for a few moments. Yonder comes a wash-basin. The clean, bright water is poured into it, and Governor Pontius Pilate puts back the sleeves of his robe and thrusts his soft, delicate hands into the water, and rubs them together, and then lifts them dripping for the towel fastened to the slave's girdle, and said practically: 'I wash my hands of this whole homicidal transaction. I will take none of the responsibility of this prisoner's death. You must assume all of it." My friends, that is the meaning of the text when it says: "He took water and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, 'I am innocent of blood of this just person, see ye to it!'"

Behold how ceremonies amount to nothing without correspondencies of heart. It it well that the hands be washed. When God made three-quarters of the world water, he commanded cleanliness, and, as the ancients did not take the hint, he put a whole world under water. The Jewish religion made hand-washing a law. By minute direction the hands must be plunged three times up to the wrist and the palm of one hand rubbed by the closed fist of the other. The Jewish Mishna gives elaborate rule on this subject. All well as a symbol! But here in my text Governor Pilate proposes to wash off guilt which he does not quit and of which he makes no repentance. Pilate's wash-basin is a failure. Ceremonies grand and good in themselves may mean no more than this hypocritical ablution. We may be sprinkled in childhood at baptismal fountains, and in manhood may wade into solemn immersions and never reach moral purification. We may kneel without prayer and bow the head without reverence and sing without acceptance. All the creeds, and all the liturgies, and all the genuflections, and all the religious convocations amount to nothing unless the heart and the life go into them. When the bronze slave of the palace carried out Pilate's wash-basin, he carried out none of Pilate's cruelty or cowardice or wickedness. . . . Ceremonies are only the sheath of the sword, only the shell of the kernel, only the lamp of the flame, only the body of the spirit. But the outward must be only typical of the inward. Most surely wash your hands, but more surely wash your heart.—De Witt Talmage, D. D., in Evangelical Messenger.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

Our Quarterly Meeting passed off very pleasantly, and we trust good was done. It was not a Conference quarterly but a Church quarterly. In this western country our churches are frequently so far apart that we cannot have Conferences as we would if they were much nearer together.

Here, for instance, is an Advent, Christian Church, but there is no other church, with the exception of a small one lately organized at Bluffton, within fifty miles; and the members of this church are widely scattered so that some can seldom get out to the regular weekly meetings. There are also some adventists in the surrounding country who are isolated from those of like faith. We therefore have a two days meeting about once in three months, when the scattered ones gather in and enjoy a reunion; that is our "Quarterly Meeting."

We usually obtain some one to come and preach to us. We were expecting Bro. Baker at our last meeting, but shortly before the time for the meeting we got word from him that he could not come. So there was only Bro. Mitson (who is also a member of the Burr Oak church) and myself to do the preaching. Nevertheless we had good congregations, and all seemed interested. One sister, a stranger to us, came twenty-five miles with horse and buggy to meet with us. She had been living in the State about two years, having moved from Union Mills, Indiana, and during that time had not heard an Advent sermon. She got another lady to come with her who was not an Adventist. They enjoyed the meeting very much. Sunday afternoon 45 gathered around the table of the Lord.

J. RIDLEY.

DISHONESTY, the abuse of trust and defalcation, as the sins of the times, were pressed on the attention of an assembly of clergymen at Saratoga, N. Y., recently by several clergymen and laymen, who urged the preachers to deal earnestly with those in danger of falling into those sins. Dr. G. H. Smyth, of New York, in considering the question why this epidemic of dishonesty prevails, said the chief cause was loss of faith in the old doctrines of the gospel as they were preached by the Puritans and believed by the people. The pulpit has largely ceased to preach them. Skepticism has spread over the land, and with it men have ceased to have fear of God and a sense of the evil nature of sin. Moses is disbelieved in and Darwin is the prophet. Men who cannot understand Isaiah believe in Spencer. Thus the conscience is annihilated, and the law of God has lost its power over the life and conduct of men.—Sel.

THE SPECIAL CONVENTION.

To those interested in the Special Convention to be held in the Advent Hall, Clark's Block, Worcester, Mass., commencing Tuesday evening, Nov. 4th, the Committee would offer the following list of topics to be considered during the Convention. Others may be added, or these may be changed, as the Convention may think best.

Tuesday Evening, "Why we are a people."—E. A. Stockman.

Wednesday Morning, Nov. 5th.—Devotional exercises from 8.30 to 9; and the same every morning, at the same hour.

Topic 9 to 10 A. M.—Hermeneutics; or, the proper interpretation of the Sacred Scriptures.

Topic 10 to 11.—Is the Holy Spirit of God a power, or a person?

Topic 11 to 12.—How know when we are filled with the Spirit?

Wednesday, P. M. From 1.30 to 2 devotional exercises, and the same every day at the same hour.

Topic 2 to 3.—Homiletics, or the best methods for securing an effective ministry.

Topic 3 to 4.—Prophetic periods.

Topic 4 to 5.—The best methods of conducting prayer meetings.

Devotional exercises from 6.30 to 7.30.

Preaching at 7.30. Subject—Holiness.

Thursday, Nov. 6th. Topic 9 to 10—Is "the law of sin" destroyed in the Christian; or only made inactive, so long as he abides in Christ?

Topic 10 to 11.—Prophetic periods.

Topic 11 to 12.—Objections to the resurrection of the dead considered.

Thursday, P. M. 2 to 3. Topic—Evangelistic work. The best means to secure success.

Topic 3 to 4.—The two houses of Israel. May we expect any special favors to Israel before or after the coming of Christ, which will not be enjoyed by Gentile Christians?

Topic 4 to 5.—Uttermost Salvation; or what are the Christian possibilities in this life?

Preaching at 7.30. Subject—Importance of prophecy.

Friday, Nov. 7th. Topic 9 to 10.—Advice to preachers.

Topic 10 to 11.—Revival work. Be[...] to secure success.

Topic 11 to 12.—The Seventh-day Sabbath. Is it now binding?

Friday, P. M., 2 to 3. Topic.—Paralellism, as a rule of interpretation.

Topic 3 to 4.—Prophetic periods.

Topic 4 to 5.—Evolution, is it scientific or biblical?

Preaching at 7.30. Subject—"The coming of Christ essential for the consummation of the Christian hope."

Saturday, Nov. 8th. Topic 9 to 10.—Objections to conditional immortality.

Topic 10 to 11.—Faith cures.

Topic 11 to 12.—The best means of reaching the unconverted.

Saturday, P. M., 2 to 3. Topic.—Answers to questions from the Question Drawer.

Topic 3 to 4.—The limits of holiness; or what does it include?

Topic 4 to 5.—The basis of Christian union. What are the Scriptural boundaries?

Preaching at 7.30. Subject—"Signs of the times."

The Convention will continue over the Lord's day, Nov. 9th.

The Committee, in behalf of the Association, most cordially invite all our ministers in the East to attend this Convention. And we especially request every preacher, young and old, to come prepared to speak on one or more of the topics proposed. Let us meet in the name of the Lord, for mutual enlightenment and encouragement, and for closer unification of our views and methods, and more efficient utilization of our talents and resources in proclaiming the evidences of the second advent of Christ at hand, and the imperative need of immediate and entire personal preparation to meet our Lord at his coming.

The Worcester church has, with its accustomed kindness and cordiality, offered to entertain the Convention; and of its ability to do so in the most satisfactory manner, past occasions give abundant proof.

We request the prayers of our people that the blessing of God may rest upon our meeting, that the Holy Spirit may direct in all the exercises, and that it may result in great good to our ministry, our churches, and the cause of truth and holiness at large.

The hours remaining for the consummation of our grand and glorious message and work are few. We have need to gird ourselves afresh and re-light our torches at the Pentecostal fires.

M. GRANT, } Committee.

EBAL AND GERIZIM.—Says the London Globe: "In a work just issued from the press—'The Past and Present in the East,—the author describes a recent visit to those once famous mountains, Ebal and Gerizim, on which he spent a day. He states that he and a fellow-traveller ascended the latter, and they afterward proceeded to test the acoustic property of the valley between. To do that his fellow-traveller rode down Gerizim, across the valley, and began to ascend Ebal, 'his horse looking the size of an ant.' After ascending a considerable distance, until he appeared but a faint dot on the hill-side, he stopped. It had been arranged that they two should signal to each other when ready to speak, but that was now seen to be hopeless, so, waiting until the dot appeared to have ceased to move, the author, Rev. H. Jones, commenced to read aloud from a book, feeling that he might just as well have thought of addressing the House of Commons from Lambeth palace.' After awhile he paused to hear the result. Great was his surprise when from the little dot on the hill-side he heard the words of the twenty-third Psalm, and this in spite of the conversation carried on by some Turkish soldiers near. On the two meeting they found that each had heard the other with perfect distinctness."

FOREIGN.

PARIS, Oct. 15. General De L'Isle telegraphs from Chu, on the upper Loochuan River, under date of Monday, as follows: "Colonel Donnier, after a brilliant engagement, on Friday carried the heights commanding the fortress of Chu, forming the point d'appier of a large entrenched Chinese camp, which was defended by five casemated forts. The Chinese forces were very large. Their losses during the engagement were very heavy. On Saturday they attempted to assume the offensive, but our artillery strewed the ground with Chinese bodies.

After losing all their positions the Chinese fled toward Langson. They halted near Phutruong and Khanh. The French loss was 20 killed, including one officer, and 90 wounded. Two officers received slight wounds. Our troops were animated with the greatest ardor. The Chinese in this engagement were a part of the best troops of the empire. They were perfectly armed and manœuvred in European style. The Chinese losses were 3000 killed, including the chief commander. The Chinese invasion of Tonquin has been arrested in the direction of Langson.

WHILE England is discussing the abolition of the House of Lords, Japan is rehabilitating her nobility, and admitting to its ranks the most distinguished civil and military officials who took part in the work of the restoration. By an imperial decree of July 7 the old titles of the nobles are abolished, and replaced by the five new titles of prince (Ko), marquis (Ko), count (Haku), viscount (Shi) and baron (Dan). The total number of nobles is five hundred.

THE Paris Temps says that in the latter part of November there will be an International Conference at Berlin on the west African question, at which the United States, England, Germany, France, Spain, Holland, Portugal, and Belgium will be represented. It is said that France and Germany have agreed to submit proposals to this conference securing freedom of commerce to all nations in the Congo country and upon the River Niger.

GEN. WOLSELEY has sent dispatches to the war office in London complaining that his advance has been paralyzed by the failure of the commissariat and transport service. The railways have broken down, the camel corps has been without camels, the equipments are rotten, and the stores utterly inadequate.

IT is reported that the British Governmen will send 8,000 troops to South Africa to suppress the Boer insubordination. A message has been sent to the bellicose Dutchmen that they must observe their treaty with Great Britian or suffer the consequences.

CAIRO, Sept. 22. Two fresh messages have been received from Gen. Gordon, in which he still insists upon Turkey's occupation of the Soudan.

THE Austrian Government has threatened to adopt measures of retaliation against the Porte unless the latter fulfills the terms of the treaty relating to the junction of the Turkish and Austro-Servian Railroad.

DOMESTIC.

LAWRENCE, Oct. 16. At 8:15 o'clock this evening the city was shaken by an explosion occurring at the naptha house of the Central Pacific mills, blowing the house into fragments and shattering the larger portion of the windows on the east side of the mill. Patrick Hart and John Malcolm were in the building when the explosion occurred, the former being thrown out of the building and covered with debris. Malcolm was removed from the ruins, after being buried fifteen minutes. After the explosion fire broke out, but the flames were promptly quelled by the mill fire brigade.

ITALIANS at work on the Wellesley Water Works seized the contractor, Cornelius F. Dacey, recently, while on board a Boston and Albany train, and gave him a pretty tough handling, stabbing him, it is said, and otherwise maltreating him. He was taken a prisoner, and is held as a hostage by the men, who complain that he has not paid the wages due them. A posse of police left Boston in carriages to rescue the unfortunate Dacey.

THE most cold-blooded murder of recent date was committed at La Crosse, Wis. The Blaine and Logan Club was forming on the street for a torchlight procession, when a scoundrel, known in the city as "Scotty," deliberately shot dead the President of the club, Mr. F. A. Burton, who received seven bullets from the assassin's revolver. The murderer was taken to jail, and soon after removed by a mob and hanged to a tree.

THE first snow of the season in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont fell recently. In Boston there was only a little squall.

New Hampshire Conference.

The Lord will, the next Annual Session of the New Hampshire A. C. Conference will be held with the church at Lake Village, commencing Oct. 22d, and holding over the following Sabbath. The church very kindly extend an invitation to all to come to the feast. As the place is quite central, it is hoped that all who can, will make a special effort to attend. Dear brethren and sisters, it is more than probable that this will be our last annual Conference. The shadows lengthen very fast. The angles of all prophetic lines show unmistakably that they must all meet in the near future. The Lord help us not to sleep as do others, but to be watching, working and waiting till he come. It is hoped that every church will see to it in season, and send their delegates, as there is business of importance to attend to, and we wish your hearty co-operation. All churches are entitled to one delegate, and an additional one to every additional twenty-five members. Brethren in the ministry, do not fail to come, and come praying for the Lord's blessing on the meeting. T. W. PIPER, President.

THE LAW, THE COVENANTS, ETC.
BY DR. L. C. THOMAS.

This work is just published, bound in cloth, containing 347 pages. It is one of the best expositions of all three of its main divisions, the Law, the Covenants, and the Sabbath question we ever read. The subjects discussed are treated in a candid, logical manner. It contains also an epitome of the GREAT SALVATION, that is worth more than the price of the book. It also embraces many other interesting subjects. If you want a thorough biblical work on important truths that will open the Scriptures in a clearer light, this is the work. Price $1.00. For sale at Crisis Office.

SHALL I CEASE TO WRITE?

Must I cease to write,
While my thoughts indite,
And matter in never ceasing flow,
Linked up to my view,
The old and the new,
And lingers as most unwilling to go.
E'er comes the death sleep,
And a few may weep,
Shall my right hand refuse more to write;
'Tis painful to think,
And from it I shrink,
Until compelled to desist I am quite.
Some kind friends abroad,
Wish me to record
The gospel truths I do so plainly see;
And shall I forbear
To do my full share,
That many others may enlightened be?
But my trembling hand
Would me quite withstand,
And make my writing illegible all;
My pencil is moved,
In order approved,
By my steady left hand—at my own call.
My wife says desist;
'Tis hard to resist
One who has only and ever been kind;
But what shall I do?
Shall I prove most true
To God's leadings and promptings of my mind?

ONLY IN THE LORD.

BY WM. A. BURCH.

Mr. H. Grattan Guinness, director of the East London Institute for Home and Foreign missions, and author of the book entitled "The Approaching End of the Age," in an article contributed to the London Christian, most earnestly sets forth the responsibilities of the married relation. His words are especially timely, since so many professors of religion in these days see fit to disregard the important command, "Only in the Lord." (1 Cor. 7: 39.) His article relates especially to the care and training of children for Christ, and is entitled "A Godly Seed." I quote a few paragraphs:

"Our Lord has said: 'Make the tree good, and its fruit shall be good.' Have you ever pondered the answer which God gives to the question, which he himself proposes in Malachi, Wherefore did he make both one? 'That he might seek a godly seed?' In order that children should be godly, their parents must be so; and hence the New Testament rule which admits of no exception, 'Only in the Lord.' Four memorable and decisive words. They are a standing direction to all who fear God and love Christ, in connection with that most important step and relationship in life—marriage.

"I suppose that next to conversion there is nothing more important than marriage; and it is in this connection that the precept is laid down for the guidance of the Church which admits of no departure,—'Only in the Lord.' The Christian must not vary his practice from this. The union must not be between the living and the dead; between the divine and the undivine; between that which is born of God and that which is of the flesh, and passes away, and is of the wicked one. It must be a union of the godly with the godly; and, in order to have God's blessing resting upon it, it must be only in the Lord.

"In taking a retrospect of a ministry extending over thirty years, I have not spoken on this subject more than once or twice; and yet it has been often present in my thoughts, and has had an immense influence in regulating my conduct as of course it ought to have. As one getting on in life, I would press this point on two classes—on Christian parents, who have so much to do in guiding the choice of their grown-up children in this matter, and on the young people themselves who are concerned, that they be directed by this divine motto: 'Only in the Lord.'

"What numberless instances we could refer to, had we time and opportunity, of the evil results which have followed the transgression of this apostolic injunction! I have before my mind one particular family—and I might allude to many, for it has been my lot to mingle with a great number in thirty years, and to see behind the scenes, in which there was a wrong step taken at the outset, and which has continued to bear disastrous fruit to this day.

"And then, on the other hand, how richly has the blessing of God descended upon such marriages as have been entered into in conformity with his mind and will! I urge upon Christian parents to use all their influence in this direction, and I admonish the unmarried to resolve, by the grace of God, that they will never transgress this precept.

Says Talmage in a sermon on divorce, that increasing evil which so threatens society: "Romance and impulse rule the day. Perhaps the only ground for the marriage compact is that she likes his looks, and he admires the graceful way she passes around the ice cream at the picnic! It is all they know about each other. It is all the preparation for life. A man not able to pay his own board bill, with not a sovereign in his possession, will stand at the altar and say, 'With all my worldly goods I thee endow!' A woman that could not make a loaf of bread to save her life will swear to cherish and obey. A Christian will marry an atheist, and that always makes conjoined wretchedness; for if a man does not believe there is a God, he is neither to be trusted with the money of other people, nor with your lifelong happiness. . . . Runaway matches and elopements, nine hundred and ninety-nine out of one thousand of which mean death and hell, multiply on all hands. You see the records of them in every-day's newspapers. . . .

"Let me say to the hundreds of young people in this house this morning, before you give your heart and hand in holy alliance, use all caution; inquire outside as to habits, explore the disposition, scrutinize the taste, question the ancestry, and find out the ambitions. Do not take the heroes and the heroines of cheap novels for a model. Do not put your lifetime happiness in the keeping of a man who has a reputation for being a little loose in morals, or in the keeping of a woman who dresses fast. Remember that while good looks are a kindly gift of God, wrinkles or accident may despoil them. Remember that Byron was no more celebrated for his beauty than for his depravity. Remember that Absalom's hair was not more splendid than his habits were despicable. Hear it, hear it!

"The only foundation for happy marriage that ever has been in the world, or ever will be, is good character; ask father and mother's counsel in this most important step of your life. They are generally good advisers. They are the best friends you ever had. They made more sacrifices for you than any one else ever did, and they will do far more to-day for your happiness than any other people. Ask them, and, above all, ask God. I used to smile at John Brown, of Haddington, because when he was about to offer his hand and heart in marriage to one who became his lifelong companion, he opened the conversation by saying, 'Let us pray.' But I have seen so many shipwrecks on the sea of matrimony, that I have made up my mind that John Brown was quite right. A union formed in prayer will be a happy union, though sickness pale the cheek, and poverty empty the bread tray, and death open the small graves, and all the path of life be strewn with thorns, from the marriage altar with its wedding march and orange blossoms, clear on down to the last farewell at that gate where Isaac and Rebecca, Abraham and Sarah, Adam and Eve parted."

Amen.—EDITOR.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

On the morning of August 30th, I started from my home with my wife and two of my children, for Rockford, Minn., where our State Campmeeting and Conference was to commence the next day. We arrived in safety, and found kind friends ready to greet us. The next morning proved to be a beautiful one, and by ten o'clock a large congregation had gathered on the old campground. It fell to my lot to preach to them and it was easy to speak to those intelligent, upturned faces, with their eyes glistening with tears of holy joy as they heard of the Friend and Redeemer of man. In the afternoon we spoke again to a much larger gathering of people, and we think both hearers and speaker were benefitted by the occasion.

Minnesota has some grand people, but none better than those that gather from year to year on the old camp ground at Rockford. May God's divine blessing ever be with them. In the evening, after listening to an earnest and effective discourse delivered by Bro. John Ridley, we bade wife, children and friends farewell for a time, and drove to Armstrong where after sleeping four hours, we took the train for Manchester, Iowa, reaching there the next night at twelve o'clock. With heavy baggage I walked one and one fourth miles to the S. A. Campground. A beautiful sight greeted my eyes, on my arrival. Nestling among the green trees were a goodly number of clean white tents with the full moon shining down upon them. Not a voice or a sound to break the silence of the hour or disturb the peaceful slumbers of the gathered saints. Could I break the spell of that peaceful hour? No. In my youth I had been a soldier and had found rest in natures great bed many a night, and I said to myself, I can do it again. By the light of the moon I saw a newly made stack of straw in one corner of the ground, and I at once went to it, and made me a nice nest in its side, said my prayers and laid myself down for a sweet sleep. I awoke the next morning refreshed and happy. The brethren chided me a little for what they considered my folly, but I forgave them and we were all happy in the reunion of that bright morning hour. I preached to them twice that day, and baptized Bro. Hubble's son at night. The next day I again preached twice to them, and took the evening train for Amboy, Ill., promising to return as soon as the business was finished that called me hence. Reached Amboy Thursday morning in time for the first meeting of the Association. For two days I tried to do my duty as a delegate for my adopted state; how much was accomplished time will tell.

Friday evening I again took the train reaching Manchester at ten Saturday morning where I found the work going well. Preached to them in the evening. The next day, Sunday, proving to be a beautiful day the people at an early hour began to gather upon the ground, so that when the hour arrived for the morning service the large tabernacle tent was filled to overflowing with an expectant congregation. It was our privilege to speak to them. God blessed in speaking and hearing. At two in the afternoon there was a much larger congregation, when we spoke again, subject, Resurrection of the Dead. There was much rejoicing on the part of the saints, and sinners were sobered into peaceful silence. The evening hour brought another crowd and we spoke again. At the close of the sermon we repaired to the boarding tent where that dear old saint Father Hough served a large number with the emblems of our Lord's body and blood. Then came the farewell shake of the hand and the promise of living so as to meet in the soon coming kingdom. Thus closed the Manchester Campmeeting. It was pronounced one of the best ever held in the State. Quite a number started to serve the Lord, and seven were baptized.

The Advent people of Iowa are a noble and intelligent class. They have one fault; that is, they know how to work a willing laborer; but for this they make some amends. They feed him well. I have attended a great many campmeetings, and I must say that I never sat down to such tables as they spread at Manchester. God bless the brethren of Iowa.

On Monday morning, Sept. 18th, in company with Bro. Spencer, I started for Amboy to attend the general campmeeting then in session; reached there in safety and found the meeting progressing well. Had the privilege of greeting many of my Eastern friends, some of whom I have known for years, and listened to many able and stirring discourses from different brethren, and had the privilege of speaking twice myself. The meeting as a whole was a success. Quite a goodly number started to serve the Lord, and twenty-four were baptized; quite a number were new converts, and I am told by the committee that there was no deficiency in finance, but rather a little surplus. Thus closed the Amboy meeting. Its records are on high. We leave it and turn to other fields.

On Monday the fifteenth, we went with some of the brethren to their home in De Kalb where we preached two evenings. Then to Aurora, Ill., where we spent two days and preached to the few of like precious faith. Friday morning started for Mifflin, Wis., by the way of Chicago; reached there Saturday afternoon, and found the brethren busy in their preparations for their campmeeting which was to commence the next day. It fell to our lot to speak ten times during the meeting, which held eight days. We had an excellent meeting. Sinners were convicted and converted; some hard cases were gloriously saved. It was surprising to see the number which congregated there from day to day, especially in the evening; but if you, my dear readers, had been there, and at about six in the evening had walked in the rear of the camp-ground, you would have seen large deep holes, whose dark depths you could not fathom with the naked eye, and as you wondered what it meant the murmur of human voices would greet your ear, and then a human head would appear in sight, followed by another and still another until you would almost think the earth was casting forth its dead. What does it all mean? Simply this. You are in a mining district, and those holes lead down into the mines, and those men are the miners, whole souled, warm-hearted fellows who love a red-hot gospel, and are as easy a class of people to speak to as I ever met. The S. A. ministry of Wisconsin were quite well represented at this meeting. They are a genial class to labor with.

On monday morning, before we parted, we all repaired to the waters where Bro. Barber, the pastor of the Mifflin church, baptized sixteen happy souls, and there are more to follow. Monday evening, I spoke at Baraboo, Wis.; had a pleasant time with the brethren there, but being too weary to remain longer, I started for home the next morning, arriving home in safety, having been gone just one month.

During the time, I travelled some twelve hundred miles and spoke twenty-seven times. I have tried to do my best and leave the results with God. After a brief respite we purpose to start again for Iowa, where we have several engagements for revival work.

WILLING SERVICE.

BY HELEN L. DYER.

Jesus, Master, yes I love thee,
And to prove my love would bring
My poor self, a willing off'ring,
To my Saviour, Lord and King.
I can never, never pay thee
For thy wondrous love to me,
But with fervor may I gladly
Do whate'er I can for thee.
In thy service working ever,
With glad heart and willing feet,
Prompt in every word and action,
Thy approval I shall meet.
Then at last, oh, glorious promise!
When my earthly race is run,
From thy lips I'll hear the greeting—
"Faithful child, well done, well done."

IN MEMORIA.

The adage that "Death loves a shining mark" seems wonderfully verified in the death of our dear sister, Mrs. Helen Emily, wife of Bro. Eber E. Gridley, who died Aug. 18th, 1884, aged forty-one years.

In her death the church in Westfield have lost an efficient and prudent helper; a kind and provident husband is bereft of a wise and affectionate wife who builded her house by heavenly discretion (Prov. 14); and a son of seven years has lost a mother ever deeply solicitous for his moral well being and religious training. Especially was this careful concern manifested when sure the summons for her departure had come. With her it was settled that a few hours would end her mortal career. Though not expecting so hasty a call, she could say, "I am all ready, but there's my boy!" At her instance he stood by her side to receive such counsel as only a Christian mother can give, relative to loving and serving Christ the Saviour. Suiting her earnest words to the child's capacity, she warned him to beware of this and that bad habit incident to youth, firmative. Who that knew her could doubt it?

Being naturally a person of great energy and perseverance, the most difficult thing for her to conquer was impatience, when witnessing apathy and slackness. But the grace of God was sufficient in perfecting this point. Ostensibly this precious sister has been growing in grace these years until made ripe for the kingdom. She is resting only a little while, never more to experience and not forget these precepts of his dying mother.

She then called for her three brothers and other friends and acquaintance, to urge upon their attention the "one thing needful." Meanwhile she was not forgetful that the nearest and dearest tie of human affection was about to be severed; but feeling assured his "heart was fixed trusting in the Lord," she spent her time and strength for those of whom she entertained some fear. Her pastor having just returned from Camp in Springfield learned of her serious illness, and hastened to her bedside, when she recognized him, but was past speaking; but when the question was put, "Do you feel all ready?" she bowed her head in the affirmative [sic: af-] pain or sorrow. Faithful in her attendance at the house of God, and faithful in bearing testimony to the work wrought upon her heart by the Spirit's power, by her private counsel and prayers she has helped many a weak one along who now thanks God on her behalf.

The subject of this notice was converted about eighteen years since and united with the Methodist Church in Westfield; and some five or six years later, when the sound of the coming Bridegroom was heralded here by Elder J. Hemenway, she listened, was persuaded, then embraced, to hold them tenaciously while she had any being. Her social qualities were surpassed by few. Manifesting a proper conviviality, she at once made her guests at home, prepared for profitable converse. Though suffering much for over two years with what proved to be consumption of the bowels, she already appeared hopeful when receiving the calls of her numerous friends. Often did she occupy her seat in the house of God and testify to his power and mercy during these two and a half years, though many would have thought themselves too feeble in her position to have done so. None thought her disease particularly dangerous until a few days before her death. But her work is done. Peace to her ashes.

The very large gathering, composed of different denominations, which assembled at her funeral to pay their last tribute of respect, showed the esteem in which she was held in life and regretted in death. Her pastor, S. G. Mathewson, officiated, speaking from 1 Cor. 15: 26, comforting the bereaved hearts with the hope of re-living and reunion "beyond the weeping." Then we laid her away amid a profusion of flowers.

MISSION WORK IN DAKOTA.

BY PHILO HITCHCOCK.

Having resided in this beautiful and healthful territory for one year and a half, I am convinced that no section of the West presents a more hopeful prospect in a religious point of view than Dakota. This fact is readily seen by Christians of all denominations, and they are taking measures to spread the banner of their faith over this country. Some in the East have evidently imagined that the West particularly this far-off land, was only the playground of prairie wolves, jack rabbits and possibly cannibals, and that God and the gospel were almost entirely ignored. But this is not the case. Being settled up quickly and easily, the very same class of citizens that bless the Eastern States make up the population here. Only this difference, we have a younger class as a rule and generally more thrift and diligence. To be sure this may result in excessive worldliness, which indeed I consider the greatest danger that lies at our door. The grosser sins of intemperance and other evils are strongly fortified against.

In point of educational advantages Dakota stands in the front ranks. Of course the prevailing sin of scepticism and doubt are not without their votaries here. But this must be met by the faithful proclamation of the ancient gospel with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. So far as our cause is concerned, "The pure testimony put forth in the Spirit is like a sharp two-edged sword."

I believe that only two things are necessary to make "this gospel of the kingdom" touch with healing power every county in this territory. First, the spirit of a John Knox, who in wrestling prayer said, "Lord, save Scotland or I die." And second, which is implied in the first, the divine anointing to qualify us for the work. But are there no severe trials there and hardships? Yes, there are many deep, often cutting to the heart. Sometimes loneliness and want. But ringing down through many centuries I hear the cry, "The servant is not greater than his Lord."

So far as my own personal work is concerned I have no occasion for boasting as to results, but everywhere I find an ear to hear when we can find ways to reach their homes and towns. During my short stay here through the blessing of God two A. C. churches have been planted and set in gospel order with proper officers to push the work in the absence of regular pastoral help. They will average at least twenty members each, I think more. They are a class of people who will be an honor to any community or institution. Beside this, the wants of a faithful family have compelled me to labor at least six months of the time out of the territory among the churches farther east. But the calls are numerous from various quarters of the territory. We have isolated brethren scattered all through Dakota who pine for the word of the Lord, and might and would in many instances form the germ for the growth of a large and useful membership. May the Lord bless the work is my prayer.

I have scattered as judiciously as possible tracts, papers, quarterlies and our various publications as opportunity offered. Each of the above churches have flourishing Sabbath-schools, using our Blessed Hope Quarterly. Any scattered saint who desires that gospel meetings be held in their town or neighborhood I should be pleased to hear from and by all means pray that God may bless our work to the good of many souls and the glory of our soon-coming Lord. Any who may desire missionary meetings held in their localities may address us at Frankfort, Spink Co., Dakota.

I would further say as an encouragement to those who have contributed of their substance to help on this pioneer work, that only for the assistance they have thus rendered through our mission board and the blessing of our dear Lord has this work been done. May a kind Providence bless them all and grant them a home in the kingdom.

GOOD NEWS.—No. 43.

FROM INDIA.

Constant, persevering and faithful sowing of the Word of God must be rewarded with the production of good fruits in due time. The Lord has said, "My word shall not return unto me void, but shall accomplish the thing for which I sent it." The news we are frequently getting from India assures us that the Lord is owning our work. Bro. Spence writes as follows:

I. C. WELLCOME.

"MADRAS, EAST INDIA, Aug. 23, 1884.

My Dear Bro. Wellcome:—Your letter of July 10th is received with much pleasure. I have also just received from Massillamani the complete translation of your article—'Our King is Coming'; and yesterday I ordered 2000 copies of it printed in tract form.

I have but little news, beyond that I sent Paul out this month on the South India Railway. He was out twenty-one days; he received bad treatment from the religious sects, but the heathen treated him well and gladly listened to his message. The results are with the Master, as the work is done in faith.

Col. Armstrong writes encouraging letters from Bangalore, saying that he has good meetings there, and that he thinks the Lord is owning his word. Here in Madras we get no quarter. The feeling is as bitter as ever. Dr. Jewett, who told Daniel that he knew you, classed us with infidels at one of their meetings for the consideration of the best way to counteract the effect of the infidel literature that is being scattered abroad. And he there stated that they had 'to contend also against conditional immortality literature.' It is true that our literature is telling on the young heathen, who go to their orthodox teachers with questions regarding the nature and destiny of man, that the teachers are unable to solve.

Your letter of May 29th, and your money order for fifty dollars, have been received. I should be glad to send you a report from Daniel, but I have not yet received it. I shall be glad to see Bro. Pettingell's new book you are publishing, and promise to send me. Please send plenty of gospel tracts. I remain your affectionate brother in the Lord Jesus Christ, J. SPENCE."

HE who thinks too much of himself will be in danger of being forgotten by the rest of the world.

GOD'S CARE.

BY WM. ELDEN.

The article by E. M. Andrews in the Crisis of Oct 8th concerning God's care for his children suggests the experience of Elijah when fleeing for his life from Jezebel. Particularly worthy of note is the circumstance of the failure of her prediction that by to-morrow at that time he should be as one of the prophets of Baal whom he had slain; and also the fulfillment of all of Elijah's sayings concerning Jezebel and her husband Ahab and his sons, showing as it does the utter folly of fighting against God by making war on his children.

Doubtless Elijah was not aware that an angel was journeying with him, as body guard and cook, as he fled into the wilderness until the angel had got supper and called him from under the juniper tree, where he lay sleeping, to eat of it. However Elijah might have felt while being hunted as he was, the narrative should afford great encouragement to God's children who are being hunted by such characters as well as a solemn warning to those who engage in such work.

No doubt God gave direction to all the minute circumstances connected with the destruction of the house of Ahab, even to raising up Jehu who would be sure to drive fast enough to overtake every one of his sons, and destroy them, that they might never appear to claim the throne of Israel; and, also, to get back to Jezreel in time to see to it that Jezebel was thrown from an upper window that she might be eaten of dogs as spoken by Elijah.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM D. D. REED.

We have just closed our Conference and campmeeting held with the Napa Church; the best and largest meeting ever held by our people in this State. The mighty power of God was among the people, and a cloud of glory rested down on the entire encampment. We pitched the large tent near the church for services, and closely around was nearly two dozen smaller ones, making quite an encampment,, with the large boarding tent down the bank in a retired spot where a free table was bounteously spread three times a day. A wave of God's salvation rolled over the ground, from the commencement to the close. And blest and happy in God, we parted on the high seas of God's full salvation.

All of the Conference business moved in order, and perfect harmony.

We had a large gathering, some coming four hundred miles to attend the meeting, and feeling well paid at its close. God sent us Bro. Hunt, from Lower California. Also Bro. Bronaugh who lately came from Portland, Oregon, who has been a very successful lawyer for thirty years, and has now given up that profession and is an able minister of Jesus Christ. He and Bro. Young, a young man, was set apart for the work of the ministry, by the laying on of hands.

We have a class of ministers on this coast, who cannot be bought, or sold. I think if called for, they would go to the block or to prison, or to the stake if called upon to give up the great Advent doctrines, or the principles of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Myself and companion came to this coast fifteen years ago, strangers and in a strange land, After being here awhile we found here and there an Advent believer, but few and far between, and now we have a grand company that our blessed God has raised up through our Lord Jesus Christ. To his name be all the glory.

A nobler hearted company of saints of the most high God, never met together. It was peace on earth and glory in the highest. Sound in the faith, we do not believe we have to keep the law of Moses to be saved, but the law of Jesus Christ, which is love. And Jesus says, 'If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments. Nor do we believe in the so-called, Age-to-come doctrine.

All hail that grand and glorious day! We had a foretaste of its joys in the camp. Saints were greatly blest and strengthened, and felt like giving all for Jesus, and being wholly his. One sinner was brought to Christ, and many must have been convicted of sin under the powerful preaching sent home by the Holy Spirit. O that they may yet come to Jesus, and accept of offered salvation while mercy lingers.

Beloved in Christ Jesus, let us put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to stand in the evil day, and having done all to stand complete in Christ at last. This completeness must be obtained here, and now is the time, the accepted time. The bride made herself ready; to be presented without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing. The pure in heart shall see God. May the good Lord help us to be made every whit whole. Then can we truly, and sincerely cry, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

Santa Clara, Cal.

FROM A. G. GORDON.

Brothers and sisters of the Crisis, I will say by permission of the Editor that I am yet alive and have a hope of future glory, provided I am faithful and keep the faith. Paul said he had fought a good fight and kept the faith. I cannot say that I have fought very valiantly much of the time but I can say the Lord has been very gracious to me.

I returned home from Lakeside Campmeeting to see my father die in less than a fortnight. He was a man that had enjoyed good health the most of his life. He was seventy-four years of age. He was sick but a short time, and a man of few words, but methodical in his habits, maintaining family worship many years; not forward in religious conversation. We did not know his views on many questions, neither the state of his mind. But when he came to his last hour as we were gathered about his bed as death had commenced its work and his tongue was partially palsied, apparently he seemed to have a view of something, and he commenced to talk as near as we could understand of angels and that "Great day." We think he saw angels; and his dying testimony as far as we could understand was concerning the great goodness of God, and his last message to us. Unexpected as this message was he being unaccustomed to talking in that way a great impression is made upon our minds, and great consolation it is to know that our father's last words were not concerning earthly things but heavenly things. There are three children of us without father or mother now, but we have had the satisfaction of knowing that they both died in the faith of the "gospel of the blessed God." Sad and lonely we feel at times I at we know all things work together for good to those that love God.

Leeds, Maine.

FROM ELDER F. C. WATKINS.

Bro. Stockman:—Thinking that perhaps the many readers of our much loved Crisis would like to hear how the cause of the blessed Master is prospering in these parts, I will write you a few lines.

Five weeks ago we commenced a series of meetings at this place, assisted by Bro. B. Forester, of Etna, Iowa, who remained with us two weeks. We found him a true yoke fellow. We closed our meetings on last Sunday night by forming an organization here with twenty members, and more to follow. Six were baptized and twelve new ones, in all, were made to lift up their heads and rejoice as they see their redemption drawing nigh. And many more were made to see the difference between the Word of God and the fables of these last days. It was very noticeable that the ministers of other denominations in our little town gave us a complete letting alone. The weather throughout the meeting was fine, and the attendance and deportment was good. The few scattering ones of like precious faith, who reside in Gravity and vicinity gave us the aid of their presence and prayers; among whom were Bro. and Sr. I. N. Tomlinson, Bro. and Sr. Swanders, and Sr. S. D. Brown. May the good Master bless and save them. Our heartfelt thanks are also due Eld. Wm. Pattan, of Villisoa, Iowa, for his aid during the meeting. We find him a "workman that needeth not to be ashamed." May the Lord bless him.

To my brethren in the ministry I would say, be faithful; let your light shine; preach the coming of the Master; preach holiness of heart; preach the restitution of all things which God has spoken. To God be all the glory through our Lord and Master Jesus Christ. Amen.

Gravity, Iowa.

FROM ELDER D. R. MANSFIELD.

Bro. Stockman:—A good work is going on in the church at Buchanan, Mich. Just before the Conference convened, on the first of October, a tent meeting was held in the town, which resulted in seriously impressing the minds of many of their duty to God. It was a favorable time for a more aggressive work. It seemed sad that our dear Bro. Finney, the pastor of the church, should be stricken down to a bed of sickness at the commencement of the Conference. But God has helped us to do what we could, and the work of reformation went on.

Last Lord's day we led nineteen intelligent young people into the waters of St. Joseph River, and there buried them in the likeness of his death, who said, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. The large number of Christian people present wept for joy to see such boldness for Christ.

The meetings still continue with increasing interest. Next Lord's day we expect to baptize others. Rejoice all ye people of the Lord, that prayer has been answered, and sinners are being saved. We ask prayers for Bro. Finney who is still confined to his bed, that he may soon be restored to his people in health. Among the number converted, is Bro. Finney's son and daughter.

Buchanan, Mich.

FROM MRS. L. O. ROBINSON.

Bro. Stockman:—You will be glad to learn that the Lord is prospering our little church in Attleboro Falls. Our meetings are increasing in interest and numbers. Yesterday two were added to our membership—one by baptism and one by letter, both heads of families. Our members are all workers. We have three services every Sunday, well attended, whether we have preaching or not. We have a weekly prayer meeting, the average attendance from fifteen to twenty. We feel like praising God for what he has done for us, and we are praying and looking for still greater blessings. Pray for us.

Attleboro Falls, Mass., Oct. 13th.

INTERESTING PARAGRAPHS.

THE HIGHEST JOY.—Do you wish to feel the highest joy which God has given as the reward of work well done? Just go and perform that neglected task which you know you ought to perform, and which you can perform, but for which you have an apparently unconquerable aversion. It is pleasant to do work which one delights in doing; but that pleasure pales into insignificance before the greater joy which comes to a person who has manfully taken up a work which he does not like, but which he has carried out faithfully in spite of his dislike for it. In that case all the bitterness of its doing becomes changed, through God's alchemy, into the sweetness of conscious accomplishment.—Sunday-School Times.

"I WOULD not come that near missing heaven." So said Mrs. Pheobe Palmer to an unconverted man as he sprang breathless upon a train just moving from the station. It went like an arrow to his heart. "A word in due season how good is it." Sister Palmer never failed to improve an opportunity, and her readiness and skill were marvellous. But she spoke out of the abundance of a good heart. Her sanctified mind instantly, intuitively, and savingly connected the secular with the spiritual, and the temporal with the eternal. She naturally availed herself of every possible opportunity. And if our thoughts ran in the same channel as hers, if we were always on the lookout to save sinners, how many words calculated to alienate them from Christ would never be uttered, while we would invariably, lovingly, and skillfully speak to their present salvation.

CHRIST, our High Priest, has his throne in the highest heaven, whence he shines on human hearts as the "light of the world." His person is not in, but out of, his disciples. Nevertheless, he is also truly within them by the light and warmth which he communicates through his Holy Spirit to their understandings and affections. When they take his sayings into their hearts, and ponder them trustfully and lovingly, he demonstrates his presence by giving those precious words the same power to comfort, to strengthen, and to purify as they imparted when his lips uttered them in the days of his flesh. "Say not in thine heart, who shall ascend into heaven? That is to bring Christ down. . . . The word of faith" by which "man believeth unto righteousness," "is nigh thee, even in thy heart." Steadfastly believe that word, and, whosoever thou art, thou shalt surely be saved!—Ex.

A YOUNG GIRL in South Africa was seized in a wood by a savage enemy of her father's who cut off both her hands and sent her bleeding home. Many years passed, and the poor girl recovered from her wounds, and the stumps healed. One day there came to her father's door a poor, worn-out, gray-headed man, who asked for alms. The girl knew him at once as the cruel man who cut off her hands. She went into the hut, ordered a servant to take him bread and milk, and sat and watched him eating it. When he had done she dropped the covering that hid her handless wrists from view, and holding them up before him, uttered a sentence, meaning, "I have had my revenge." The very sentence he had uttered when he cruelly maimed her. The secret of it was, the girl meantime had become converted, and had learned that lovely Scripture, "If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink."—Bible Rec., Sept. 1868.

THE folly of the fabled dog, who lost his meat by leaping after its shadow in the stream, is not to be compared with the folly of that man who studies to prolong his present life while neglecting to secure his interests in the life eternal. His utmost care cannot add much to the length of the former; but his neglect of the latter, if continued, must involve him in endless, irremediable ruin. Thus by his eagerness to secure the pleasant things of this life, which is but as a shadow of the future, he loses the life everlasting, which contains the only substantial things on which souls can feed, grow, be truly satisfied, and really happy. Is there any folly to which such folly can be more fitly compared? Surely, the dog in the fable was wise in comparison with him who, to do his own pleasure in the life that now is, dooms himself to toil forever on the treadmill of retribution!—Ex.

TEMPERANCE.

SMOKING.

Please read carefully the following eight reasons for giving up smoking; and if the reader is among the smokers, do as did the one who gives these eight reasons, and the same blessed results will follow. M. G.

1. When I saw church members paying from six to ten dollars for tobacco, and only two to four for the gospel per year, I thought that if a man will rob God of his tithes and offerings from love of his pipe, it was high time to cast to the moles and bats "idols" that claimed such a supremacy.

2. It often seemed to me that smoking clouded the light of God's countenance in Christian experience, and dampened the fire of love and zeal in God's cause.

3. When I saw preachers seeking a secret place to "puff," I would think if the deed is justifiable, why not do it publicly, or was it that they felt guilty and ashamed to be seen?

4. When I saw boys and young men and women too smoking the pipe, I felt that I could not say anything against it.

5. When I saw the drunkard and profane likewise, I would say: "I am a companion with those characters, in the pipe at least," then my conscience would smite me.

6. That for the church wholly to abstain from both smoking and drinking, and set an example of total abstinence to the world, would remove two great hindrances to a more general outpouring of the Spirit of God, and hasten the latter day glory.

7. Then when at devotion I smelled my own breath, so smoky, I wondered if God would accept the incense of tobacco.

8. That if it be as hard for the drunkard to give up drinking as for me to give up smoking then I should have more feeling for the poor drunkard, and how can I consistently advocate total abstinence while I am intemperate in smoking?

After duly weighing all these facts and arguments, I determined to try to abandon the pipe. After I got the victory I could not help praising God for the deliverance I had often wished for, but never thought I could obtain; and now I feel better in health, more lively in spirits, less peevish and fretful—have a clearer intellect and better memory, a peaceful conscience, a brighter and sweeter evidence, and nearer communion with God and his church. And I now say to all: If I have conquered, so may you; only rely on divine strength; for you will need it, if smoking is as hard a habit for you to give up as it was for me. The victory will be yours and the result the same.—Selected.

We read on a theatre bill, this suggestive title to the play: "Dollars and Sense." It occurred to us immediately that no one who had any "sense" would spend either his "dollars" or cents in "adventuring himself into the theatre." Certain it is that whoever keeps away from theatres, circuses, saloons, all kindred places of questionable resort, will, other things being equal, have the most dollars, cents, and sense. A word to the wise is sufficient. If you have no higher motive in turning away from the "wide gate" and "broad road" that leads to destruction, heed this. We have found that one bad passion will counteract another. Shall your avarice correct your passion for the play-house?—Ex.

The "Popular Science News" (formerly the "Boston Journal of Chemistry") says of alcohol: "It would be better for the world if the art of producing it should certainly be lost, and the process forever be classed among the lost arts. We do not need it in any of its forms; neither the physician, chemist, nor artesian absolutely need it in any department of his calling; and this statement we make advisedly, after full deliberation, taking into view our present knowledge of medicine and the arts."

THE temperance reform is making rapid headway in Germany. It is enlisting the earnest co-operation of many of the most influential men—physicians, ministers, lawyers, State attorneys, judges, and men of all stations in life.—Ex.

IS HE AT THE DOOR?

Oh! great Master, are thy footsteps
Even now upon the mountains?
Art thou walking in thy wheat field?
Are the snowy-winged reapers
Gathering, in the silent air?
Are thy signs abroad—the glowing
Of the distant sky blood-reddened,
And the near fields trodden, blighted,
Choked by gaudy tares triumphant?
Sure it must be harvest time!

Who shall know the Master's coming?
Whether it be dawn or sunset,
When night dews weigh down the wheat ears,
Or while noon rides high in heaven,
Sleeping lies the yellow field?
Only may thy voice, good Master,
Peal above the reaper's chorus,
And dull sounds of sheaves slow falling,
"Gather all into my garner,
For it is my harvest time."

THE SECRET OF A SUCCESSFUL MINISTRY.

A LETTER TO A YOUNG MINISTER ON CLOSET PRAYER.

REVISED BY W. A. B.

The following earnest letter should be carefully pondered, not only by ministers, but by all who are interested in the work of God. "Knee-work," "knee-work" is everywhere neglected. Not merely "saying prayers," but "prevailing prayer" is the need of the age. Some one was complaining to Professor Finney of his coldness and lack of power, when the man of God turned to him with these words, uttered in thrilling tones, "You don't pray enough! You don't pray enough!" Brother, sister, do you pray enough? The times are perilous; iniquity abounds; are you much in communion with God? "People are hard to reach now," 'tis said, but so they always have been. Try more prayer, brother! Eph. 6: 18, 19.

My Dear Brother:—In your last letter you express a strong desire that I would give you my opinion respecting success in your ministry in connection with prayer. You ask—"If I pray for sinners constantly and faithfully in my closet, and confess and mourn over the sinfulness of my people before God, will a greater power and action attend my ministry? And will souls be converted in proportion as I thus act, provided I do it in faith? Do, my brother, speak out on these subjects with all plainness, as a father in the gospel to his son. I do not ask the above questions with any other design than to enable me to see my [illegible] ful to receive such inquiries from you, and look to God to enable me to answer them according to his word.

All the mighty men of God, since the foundation of the world, who have shaken the kingdom of darkness, have been men of prayer. Moses pleaded until he had power to turn aside Heaven's thunderbolt of wrath, although God said, "Let me alone, that I may destroy them, and blot out their name from under heaven." Elijah, after long and powerful pleading, shut and opened heaven. But I will not speak of what prophets, apostles, and other inspired men have done through faith and prayer, lest you should be discouraged, although they were men "subject to like passions as we are." James 5: 17.

Look, then, at a Baxter, who stained his study walls with praying breath; and, after he received a rich anointing of the Holy Ghost, sent a river of living water over Kidderminster, and was the means of converting hundreds. Luther and his coadjutors were men of such mighty pleadings with God, that they broke the spell of ages, and laid nations subdued at the foot of the cross. John Knox grasped in his strong arms of faith all Scotland. His prayers terrified tyrants. Whitfield, after much holy, faithful, closet pleading, went to the devil's fair, and took more than a thousand souls out of the paw of the lion in one day. See a praying Wesley, a pleading Bramwell, Stoner, Smith, and Carvosso, each of whom led thousands to Jesus; Anne Outler and Mrs. Fletcher, whose breath was prayer, and who had souls in every place. In 1820 and 1821, a few plain, holy, praying Christians were instrumental in leading seventeen thousand souls from Satan to Christ. John Oxtoby, with his one talent, sighed, wept, fasted and groaned, and prayed for sinners for hours, pleading the atonement, and casting them on it by faith's strong arms; then entering the pulpit and speaking words of flame, so that hundreds were saved by his means.

It is to be deplored that there are not more soul-saving evangelists in the present day; I mean men who are blessed in the conversion of souls at every place. . . . I take it for granted that God has saved you from pride, the love of money, the fear of man, and especially from mere party zeal. If you want sinners converted to gain a great name in the church, to swell your party, or to show what great feats you can do, God will not use you. Your state of soul is poor indeed. But if you can and do rejoice when you hear of souls being saved in any other church, then all hail! and take the following counsel, which is the best I can give you on the subject of your inquiries. If your heart be burdened and ready to break for the salvation of souls, and you feel willing to be anything—even a fool in the eyes of a God-dishonoring world and of a sleepy church—so that souls may be saved; then, if I know anything of the matter, you are in a proper state of soul to begin to work for God. And if you have none of this yearning of heart for souls, alas! how are you anything better than a hireling shepherd? But I can give you credit for an earnest desire for the salvation of the lost. To strengthen that desire look at the multitudes around you hurrying on to destruction. How many thousands there are within the pale of the professing church, who have nothing of religion but the name; and how many who have renounced even the name! How sad the thought! You are moving through time to eternity in the midst of a vast mass of perishing souls. They surround you on every side. Go out, like Nehemiah, by night, and survey the desolations of the city. See the dram-shops, and the pawn-shops, and the dens of infamy, and the gambling-houses, and the many places of sinful amusement. Count, if you can, the number of their victims, or realize the amount of evil which, unitedly, they produce. Look, my brother, at the whole mass of sinners, trampling under foot the redeeming blood of Christ, and steeling their consciences against the Holy Ghost. Look at them—look at them—look at them! Do you see them? Then you see them on a slippery hill, going down to death! Think how they dishonor God. Think how they pierce the Saviour. Think how they grieve the Holy Spirit. Think how they influence the rising race! See how they hasten off the stage of life! Death, the second advent, the judgment, the lake of fire, the second death, are realities.

O brother! will you not use the weapon which God himself has placed in your hands, and go and wrestle with him to save this people. . . . Think of Gethsemane, Calvary, and the blood-bought mercy-seat! Think what Jesus has done and is willing to do for them! Think of what he has done for thousands as bad as they, when they repented, forsook sin, and believed. Nay, think until your soul is harrowed up within you, and melts into pity, or flames into burning charity. Then, with your full, love-stricken heart, enter your closet, and bewail the sins of the people before the Lord. Make their sins your own, so to speak; that is, feel for them, and pray for them, as though you were in their lost condition. Yoke yourself in with them. Be particular in confessing their sins. Do not cloak them. Like Moses, Daniel, Jeremiah, Nehemiah, Paul, and other holy ones, confess them again and again. Plead with God to convict them and empower you to reach them. Don't plead to make God willing to save them, for he is already infinitely willing. But plead because God does and always will answer the pleadings of bold, holy faith. You need not spend your time studying the philosophy of the thing. It is so. The book of God and every page of church history says—It is so. The success which has always attended such closet prayers sets it beyond all doubt. Christ says, "He that believeth, out of his belly shall flow [illegible] flood your district, no matter what stands in the way. If, while you are pleading, you only believe, something great will be effected. Oh, for a few like Moses, Jeremiah, or Paul, to stand in the gap! My brother, be the man. Do something. Do it—do it—do it; but do it at once.

Yours, as ever, A Lover of Souls.

P. S.—If you attend to this holy closet-work, you will be anointed with fresh oil for the pulpit, and then you will bring down God's blessing every time you preach. Take up the cross, despise the shame; and then, when the Chief Shepherd shall appear, instead of getting a portion with the hypocrites, you shall appear with the children whom he hath given you, and receive a crown in which you shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and as the stars forever and ever. Dan. 12: 3.

EARTH! EARTH! EARTH!—No. 1.

BY A. W. SIBLEY.

It is a grand truth of divine revelation and one around which there is no theological mist or clouds of darkness that our earth is to be made new—reconstructed and clothed again with its pristine grandeur and Edenic loveliness.

The pious and much venerated Martin Luther once said, "God will make not the earth only but the heavens also much more beautiful than they are at present. At present we see the world in its working clothes, but hereafter it will be arrayed in its Easter and White suntide robes." Peter in his epistle says, "But the heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." 2 Pet. 3: 7.

The Rev. E. B. Elliot, author of the able work entitled the "Horæ Apocalypticæ," remarks that these words of Peter ought thus to be literally translated: "The heavens and earth which are now, are by the same word stored with fire being reserved unto judgment and perdition of ungodly men."

Just as the earth of old was stored with the waters whose fountains broken up overflowed the earth, so by the same word the earth now stored, treasured up or charged with fire, is ready when the repressive force is withdrawn to burst forth.

A very eminent Christian geologist, Prof. Hitchcock, makes the following remark: "Whenever in Europe or America the temperature of the air, water, rocks in deep excavations has been ascertained it has been found higher than the temperature of the climate at the surface and experiments have been made in hundreds of places; and it is found that the heat of the earth increases rapidly as we descend below that point in the earth's crust to which the sun's heat extends. The mean rate of increase of heat has been stated by the British Association to be one degree of Fahrenheit's thermometer for every forty-five feet; at this rate all the known rocks in the earth would be melted at a depth of sixty-nine miles."

Gibbons says, "In the opinion of a general conflagration the faith of the early church coincided with the philosophy of the Stoics and the analogies of nature, and even the country which from religious motives had been chosen for the origin and principle scene of the conflagration was the best adapted for that purpose by natural and physical causes; by its deep caverns, beds of sulphur and numerous volcanoes, of which those of Aetna, of Vesuvius, and Lipari, exhibit a very imperfect representation.

The calmest and most intrepid skeptic could not refuse to acknowledge that the destruction of the present system of the world by fire, was in itself extremely probable.

The Christian who founded his belief much less on the fallacious arguments of reason than on the authority of tradition and the interpretation of Scripture expected it with terror and confidence as a certain and approaching event.

Dr. Burnet, in his Theory of the Earth says, "We find little in antiquity contrary to this doctrine." Among the Greeks not only the Stoics but Heraclitus and Empedocles also, more ancient than Zeno, the master of the Stoics, taught the final conflagration." Says Ovid the poet,

"A time decreed by fate at length will come,
When heavens and earth and sea shall have their doom,
A fiery doom; and nature's mighty frame
Shall break and be dissolved into a flame."

The eastern nations, "the Egyptians, the Persians and Phœnicians all taught the final catastrophe of the world by fire." Prof. Hitchcock says, "The ancient notions about the existence of fire within the earth were almost entirely conjectural, but within the present century the matter has been put to the test by experiment.

MISINFORMATION.

BY C. H. C.

There is nothing more in the way of information on a given topic than misinformation. The child who has learned to play the piano wrong, is worse off than if she had never seen a piano. The boy who has learned his printed A. B. C. before going to school is no better off; because in city schools they do not commence that way, but commence to write first. And so in a thousand other ways it is better not to begin at all than to begin wrong.

Many have learned much about Christianity, but they never learned it of Christ; and they are worse off than if they never had learned it. "Take my yoke upon you," says Jesus, "and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls."

It is more work to enlighten people with the truth who have been misinformed [illegible] it is to inform the totally ignorant [illegible] fact. You can go right at work buil[illegible] house in a clear spot; but if others have been carting and tipping up rubbish on that spot you have got a job on hand to get ready to build. But in getting people established in the present truth you do not go to work the same way [illegible] preparatory to building a house. In the latter case he must clear away the debris first; but to clear up misinformation all you have to do is to bring along true information. If a stranger is coming to town and is misrepresented and lied about, folks will hold on to the lie till they know the truth. And in every other way people will cling to error till they know the truth. It is natural. A man will not let go a rope in a perilous position till he can get hold of another. So the prettiest way to get folks to embrace the truth is to show it to them before you undertake to fight them out of error. Moody said he got the scissors easily away from his child when he showed it an orange.

But many teachers are unwise in their methods by simply keeping up a fight with people to make them give up first what they think is truth, but what the teacher knows to be error, before he attempts to show them the truth. A man is only getting himself into trouble when he tells another man he lies, or is simply believing a lie. Let him kindly show him the truth, then the fault is his own if he does not accept it.

The condemnation is not that men are in darkness, but "because that light hath entered into the world" and they "choose darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil." In that case reprove and rebuke and leave them alone, for they are joined to their idols.

CHRIST'S CARE FOR THE BODY.

BY DR. BLAKIE.

How beautiful in this, as in every other aspect, is the example of our blessed Lord! He, too, was impressed by the fact—"A body hast thou prepared for me." His body was God's handiwork, and prepared by God for him. It was therefore sacred in Christ's eyes. He would protect it as far as possible from hurt and harm; would strive to keep it pure, clean, wholesome; clean physically and clean morally; and to use it, and every part of it in the service of God and man. How ready would his hands ever be for all useful labor and holy service! Under what perfect control would those members be kept whose irregularities and excesses in ill-trained men and women give rise to so much guilt and misery! How clean and holy was his tongue—never polluted by one evil word! And his whole demeanor—so calm and self-possessed, so benign and loving, so patient, humble, yet majestic—what witness it bore to the spotless within!

If men and women but felt, like Christ, that their bodies are God's workmanship and God's property, how differently they would often treat them! How careful they would be against pampering and gorging the flesh with luxurious fare! against decking it out in extravagant dress, as if God had made it merely for men to gaze at and admire? Against defiling it with polluting pleasure, thus rolling God's property in the mire! What a rebuke the very thought of Christ's body would bring to such—so pure, so fresh, so holy, so like the flesh of a little child!

And yet, while Christ thus honored his body, he was ready to give it up to every indignity, to suffering, and even to a horrid death. The care of it was a duty, but not the highest duty. The body was sacred, but there were things more sacred than it. There were interests for the sake of which the body was to be held of no account whatever. Comely and fair were the bodies of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego; they certainly had learned to honor them as the workmanship and property of the Most High; yet the burning, fiery furnace was not to be feared when fidelity to God's claims exposed them to that ordeal of fire. And with all our Lord's care for his body, the time came when it had to be given up, to be buffeted and spat upon, torn by the lash, lacerated by the thorns, pierced by the nails, and gashed by the soldier's spear. A due care of the body. The p[illegible] that breathes infected air, the nu[illegible] petrid sores, the missionary [illegible] the humors of savages, have neal[illegible] this body care and carelessness [illegible] higher duties come in, the b[illegible] utterly disregarded. Is th[illegible] worship? Surely not for the [illegible] As he was, so are we in [illegible] disciple is not above his m[illegible] servant above his lord."—Sel. [illegible] Advocate.

GO[illegible]

[illegible]

Our "spiritual advi[illegible] would give good advice; and in this [illegible] lawyers, when such legal gentlemen [illegible] million, more or less, who are so[illegible] used of promoting judicial [illegible] contests, and really are suppo[illegible] way to live in affluence [illegible] such work to do, [illegible] solicitation—if w[illegible] counsel, would say [illegible] your out of the meshes of [illegible] est dues; collect it [illegible] by patiently, weekly asking ma[illegible] and perhaps then taking a small [illegible] cent, or dividend, but do not go to law. If a man sue thee at the law, and take[illegible] thy coat, let him have thy cloak also, [illegible] out of "limbo" as soon and as easily [illegible]ible. Soberly, and in a money point of view, the Italian proverb is not far fro[illegible] truth—"Going to law is selling a cow [illegible] cat."

Among other thing[illegible] in an old Almanac before me, [illegible] in 1800, the following: "A caution against going to Law. He that would go to law must have a good cause, a heavy purse, a skillful attorney, an able advocate, good [illegible] an intelligent jury, an upright [illegible] judge; and having all these, unless he has very good luck, he will stand [illegible] small chance of succeeding in his suit. The man who wins is beaten by the la[illegible] and so the conundrum "Why is a la[illegible] a sawyer?" has pith and point; [illegible] whichever way he moves, down [illegible] dust." [illegible] smith was summoned to County Court as witness in a dispute between two of his workmen. The judge, after hearing the testimony, asked him why he did not advise them to settle, as the costs had already amounted to three times the disputed sum. He replied, 'I told the fools to settle; for I said the clerk would take their coats, the lawyers their shirts, and if they got into your Honor's court you'd skin 'em!'"

Some years ago I read of a venerable lawsuit, then at the end of its 21st year, about a boundary question, and not apparently near to settlement. Lawsuits are vexatious things—hard bits to wear. Costly luxuries truly. The reliability of legal advice may be thus illustrated: "Now, then, state your case," said a Detroit lawyer the other day, as he put a $5 bill away in his vest pocket. "Well," began his client, "suppose the man living next door wants to put a barn right up against my line, coming within two feet of my house." "He can't do it, sir; can't do any such thing," replied the lawyer. "But I want to put my barn right up against his line," remarked the client. "Oh! ah! yes; I see. Well, sir, go right ahead and put your barn there. All the law in your case is on your side." Of course that was all, and perhaps rational to the client who had paid the $5 bill to replenish the pocket of the lawyer. But there was some ground for fear of how the undertaking might end. The lawyers know how to blow hot or cold; they have the power to make "the worse appear the better reason." They know how to deplete the pockets of those that have money, and those that have none will have a poor case. The law will not be on his side."

Let a fable illustrate. "A wolf who had a dispute with a hyena determined to destroy him, and therefore went to a lion for advice. "Set a trap for him," was the reply; "and when you have caught him, eat him." The wolf went away and laid a snare beside the path often traversed by his enemy; but just as he was cackling with satisfaction he blundered into the trap himself, and was held fast. In this emergency along came the lion, who called out, "By George! but what's all this?" "I'm fast in my own trap," humbly replied the wolf. "So I see; I came out here expecting to help you eat the hyena; but as the case now stands, I shall help the hyena eat you." "But I set this trap by your advice," protested the wolf. "True, you did; and I advised your enemy to set one for you as well. Odds is the difference to me whether I eat wolf or hyena."

Moral—The lawyer gets his pay, no matter how the suit goes. And some of them get large pay, as for instance: J. B. Felton, of San Francisco, Cal., having gained a tedious mining suit, was paid as a fee one million dollars in 1870. This was the largest fee I ever read of.

Another item on this point. "I understood you to say that your charge for services would be light," complained the client, when his lawyer handed him a tremendous bill. "I believe I said my fee would be nominal," was the reply; "but"—"Oh! I see," interrupted the client, "phenomenal."

Magog, P. Q.

Promptness in meeting religious obligations, and discharging religious duty, is one of the cardinal necessities in successful Christian labor.

UNPROMISING CONDITIONS.

The great Teacher called attention to the discouragements which those engaged in his service would encounter. Comparing his servants to sowers, he reminded them that there is the highway, the stony ground, and the thorny places, into which the precious contents of the sower's hand often fall. The fitness of these representations is recognized by all who would beneficially influence human hearts. They know full well that there is much to interfere with the success of their endeavors as the sowers of good seed, and all the more when that which they disseminate is gospel truth, for the reception of which there is found a deplorable want of adaptedness in human nature and its environments.

Alas! there are too many highway hearts which are, as it were, a common road for evil thoughts and sinful temptations. On such ground the seed is liable to be utterly lost. It is unreceptive and so unproductive. Careless hearers are profitless hearers. Indifference is exceedingly obstructive to impressibleness. To be unconcerned is to be unmoved. "Wayside" hardness does not receive the falling seed, and so the seed is lost. Upon many gospel hearers the most vital and stirring truths produce no effect, being as if they were not heard at all. Too many in Christian congregations are represented by the idols of old concerning whom [illegible] they, but they see [illegible] they hear not." [illegible] power persuasively [illegible] none effect."

Hardly more promising is the stony ground. It may afford some little opportunity for the reception of the seed sown, but [illegible] taking root so as to admit of availing growth in which there is no speedy withering away. The religious impressions of multitudes are so slight as to produce no suitable results. There is most lamentable shallowness in the thought and feeling produced. Only the surface of the heart is affected, and though for a season these slightly moved hearers may promise more than those represented by the "wayside," yet hopes thus awakened are quite likely to be disappointed. The seed has no root in their hearts. Their views and emotions are all superficial, and liable to be transitory. There is nothing in their religious experience that is deep and abiding.

Scarcely less unproductive of good is the thorny ground, where the seed may take root and seem to grow well for a season; but it brings no fruit to perfection, because of the [illegible] cares and pleasures of this life. Preoccupation prevents needful and useful reception. If lodgment is secured, it is followed by displacement. Fruitfulness is prevented by the ranker growth of that which is adverse or noxious. Earthly-mindedness leaves no room for heavenly-mindedness. Rev. J. C. Ryle, rector of Hemingham, Suffolk, Eng., says: "Thousands of things, which in themselves are innocent, become, when followed to excess, little better than soul-poisons and helps to hell. Open sin is not the only thing that ruins souls. In the midst of our families, and in the pursuit of our lawful callings, we have need to be on our guard. Except we watch and pray, these temporal things may rob us of heaven, and smother every sermon we hear. We may live and die thorny-ground hearers."

Thus, much of the seed which is sown is lost upon careless hearts. Much more is lost upon those who do not think seriously and feel deeply enough to be essentially benefited. Still more is lost upon those who, though they are susceptible to religious feeling, yet are actually, if not easily, diverted from thinking and acting religiously. These are truly deplorable circumstances in connection with godly sowing, by reason of which there is much sowing in tears. All who faithfully labor for the spiritual welfare of their fellow mortals know something of the tears thus caused, and which cannot be restrained in consideration of the unpromising nature of the soil in which they sow, and unavoidably sow in tears.—The Watchman.

THE NEED.

It is easy to moralize; easier it is to philosophize; to make excuses, to explain and apologize for failures. The changing times; lack of impressibility; these and many other things come in to relieve the case and ease our consciences.

A true ministry is always successful; always impressive and positive; always has marked results; under it men grow better, or worse; increase in holiness, or sin. There is one important and divine element in success in the ministry, and that element is the Holy Ghost; his presence carries the assurance of success. The preacher anointed with the Holy Ghost cannot fail; without him, vanity and barrenness will attend the most active and laborious pastorate, of the most cultured and eloquent preacher; his energy is as potent as in apostolic days; his anointing is the necessary and full qualification now as then. We greatly need humble men who have learned this lesson of need; simple-minded men who know no better and no wiser lesson than to spend much time always, many days and nights, earnestly seeking this fulness of the Holy Ghost.

Mr. Spurgeon speaks to the point thus: "The Holy Spirit is able to make the Word as successful now as in the days of the apostles. He can bring in by hundreds and thousands, as well as by ones or twos. The reason why we are not more prosperous is, that we have not the Holy Spirit with us in might and power, as in early times. If we had the Spirit sealing our ministry with power, it would signify very little about our talent. Men might be poor and uneducated, there words might be broken and ungrammatical; there might be none of the polished periods of Hall, or glorious thunders of Chalmers; but if the might of the Spirit attends them, the humblest evangelist would be more successful than the most learned of divines, or the most eloquent of preachers. It is extraordinary spiritual power, not extraordinary mental power, that we need. Mental power may fill a chapel, but spiritual power fills the church. Mental power may gather a congregation; spiritual power will save souls.

We want spiritual power! Oh! we know some before whom we shrink into nothing as to talent, but who have no spiritual power; but when they speak, they have not the Holy Spirit with them; but we know others, simple-hearted, worthy men, who speak their country dialect, and who stand up to preach in their country-place, and the Spirit of God clothes every word with power. Hearts are broken, souls are saved, and sinners are born again. O Spirit of the living God! we want THEE. Thou art the life, the soul, the source of thy people's success. Without thee, they can do nothing; with thee they can do everything."—Banner of Holiness.

JOURNEYINGS.

BY A. ROSS.

(Concluded.)

Monday, Aug. 18th, came to Hebron Campmeeting, and was welcomed by brethren "of like precious faith." Stopped till Thursday noon and much regretted I could stay no longer. To me it was a season of much interest. I listened to preaching, sound and refreshing to my thirsty spirit, from Elders Josiah Litch and his son, Lemuel Ostler. Bro. D. B[illegible] my whole being with the remembrance of the preaching I listened to in the early days of my experience.

Thursday, Aug. 21st, came to Alton Bay Campmeeting, and was greeted with many old familiar faces and lifetime friends and acquaintances. As I walked up from the depot to the camp-ground under the deepening shadows of the evening, a home-like feeling came stealing over me, followed by a wave of emotion that swelled my bosom, as memory flew back to the first meeting held upon the ground, and the first sermon from the stand. It was from the text, "Ask of me and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession," followed in the afternoon by Elder H. L. Hastings, from the words of Jesus recorded in Matt. 2: 7, and onward: "But what [illegible] reed shaken with the wind?" The meeting was one of marked success; the hearts of God's children were welded in love, and sinners were converted. But what a change! Has it been for the better? I fear not; and if there have been changes for the worse is not reform demanded? When, and by whom, shall it begin? Can we expect the days of past blessing to return until we "love one another with pure hearts fervently?"

Friday evening I preached under the mission tent while the rain was falling in torrents, and the thunders rolling through the concave to a respectable number of solemn listeners. Left early Saturday morning for New Bedford, where I had engaged to preach in Dr. Higgins' church on Sunday following. I enjoyed the season much, and only regretted I could not spend days there in visiting all my old friends for whose spiritual welfare I am still praying. Monday, left early for Bethel Camp in Vermont; reached the station at the village about seven o'clock, and walked to the camp-ground, arriving in season to hear a part of the evening sermon. The meetings throughout were good and spiritual; but had there been a greater harmony of feeling, I think better results would have been realized.

By a train of singular providences, I attended the Mechanic Falls and Lakeside campmeetings, which I have not time nor space to mention. Suffice it to say, my heart was burdened for the unsaved, and I did what I thought was my duty. Monday, Sept. 15th, left Lakeside and came to Skowhegan, the town of my spiritual nativity. Visited my niece, then lying at the point of death, and my oldest brother who is a member of the Methodist church. I was much cheered when he told me he had experienced a strong desire for Christ to come, and come speedily. It seemed to me like the awakened prayer in the heart of pious men all over the world: "Even so come Lord Jesus." During my few days tarry in S., I preached in the old Red Schoolhouse at Dudley's Corner where I was "born from above." Fri[illegible] came to Fairfield to fill an engagement I made with Brother Clark when I left Lakeside, to preach in the Hall at Kendall's mills that evening. Though I felt weary enough to have lain down on the curb-stones, and asked to be relieved from preaching, yet I did the best I could, and the people seemed solemn and interested. A number of good exhortations followed which seemed quite old fashioned. Saturday, was brought up as far as Somerset by Bro. W. Clark, and preached the gospel of salvation to a small company of Sabbath brethren. After the service, returned to Skowhegan, where I was engaged to preach Sabbath afternoon to the Christian Church; that church not holding any service in the morning. I was waited on Saturday evening by the pastor of the Methodist church and invited, without questioning on doctrine, to preach to his people in the morning, to which I consented. Sabbath morning, spoke on the tokens of spiritual change from the old man to the new; in the afternoon, upon the waiting attitude of the church for the Second Advent. Monday, P. M., met the fragments of two long family lines at the residence of my deceased niece, to pay our last respects to one beloved and respected by all. Bro. Bean, the pastor of the Methodist Church, conducted the service by prayer, Scripture reading and appropriate remarks; after which, by request of the husband of the deceased, I spoke to my kindred, former neighbors, and townsmen, on the subject of the gospel doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, and then I prayed with them all. Such an occasion I shall never enjoy again; and notwithstanding the mournful circumstances, I could but thank God for the privilege.

Tuesday morning, left Skowhegan and came again to Somerset Mills, and enjoyed much liberty in speaking to a small assembly who met to hear the Word of God. Wednesday, came to Brunswick via Lewiston; did not reach Brunswick until dark, and [illegible] from Bro. Storer's. Started through the darkness and mist for Bro. S., and reached his place about eight o'clock in the evening, where I found, as many have before, a pillow to rest a weary head upon. Tarried Thursday with Bro. S. through the day, and visited Bro. R. R. York, who is suffering affliction with his eyes. They are so impaired that he can read but little, but the same tender, sympathetic and hopeful heart, throbs in his bosom. His pathetic repetition of David's lamentation on the campground at Lakeside, as his tears blended with our own: "O Absalom! my son, my son, would God I had died for thee," still lingers with me. May God bless, sanctify and save our children. In the evening I preached to a small congregation, assembled at the yellow school-house, where Bro. Munger has preached so many times in years past, to a much larger company of interested hearers. [illegible] preached in the evening. Was brought on my way Saturday morning by Bro. Umberhind, to the Quarterly Conference then being held at the Red Meeting-house in Richmond. The meeting was one of union and profit to those who attended. Monday, 29th, came to School District No. 6, and held a preaching service in the evening. There were thirty out to hear, all of which except one, gave the best of attention; and he, as I afterward learned, was a stranger in the place, as he was to good manners.

Tuesday, 30th, came to Bath and preached to the church under the charge of Elder E. S. Moulton. The effort, I trust, will prove beneficial. From Bath I came, Wednesday, Oct. 1st, to Friendship, where I expect to preach the word of the Kingdom instead of Bro. J. H. Hall, while he is called to attend a special conference in Jackson, N. B.

And now in conclusion, I wish to say to my friends, who complain of having lost sight of me through the paper, because they have seen no appointment of mine in the Crisis, I am still laboring night and day to advance the interests of the precious advent cause, which, I humbly trust, is dearer to my heart than riches or renown; and I trust, by the assistance of heavenly grace, to continue this way, till the Master shall say, "It is enough." And I ask only to be known as the itinerant Advent minister, in full fellowship with all who can say,

"I am waiting for the Master,
Who will rise and bid me come
To the glory of his presence,
To the gladness of his home."

SEVEN REWARDS TO OVERCOMERS.

To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God. Rev. 2. 7.

2. He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death. Rev. 2. 11.

3. To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that received it. Rev. 2. 17.

4. He that overcometh, and keepeth my words unto the end, to Him will I give power over the nations . . . . even as I received of my Father. And I will give him the morning star. Rev. 2. 26-28.

5. He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before the Father, and before His angels. Rev. 3. 5.

6. Him that overcometh, will I make a pillar in the temple of God, and he shall go no more out: and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is New Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God; and I will write upon him my new name. Rev. 3. 12.

7. To him that overcometh, will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne. Rev. 3. 21.—Selected.

GOD'S DESIGNS.

We are quite certain that what we are cannot be the end of God's design. When I see a block of marble half chiselled, with just, perhaps, a hand peeping out from the rock, no man can make me believe that that is what the artist meant it should be. And I know I am not what God would have me to be, because I feel yearnings and longings within myself to be infinitely better, infinitely holier and purer than I am now. And so it is with you; you are not what God meant you to be; you have only just begun to be what he wants you to be. He will go on with his chisel of affliction, using wisdom and the graving tool together, till by-and-by it shall appear what you shall be; for you shall be like him, and you shall see him as he is. Oh, what comfort this is for our faith, that from the fact that our vitality and the fact that God is at work with us, it is clear and true and certain that our latter end shall be increased. I do not think that any man yet has ever any idea of what man is to be. We are only the chalk crayon rough drawings of men, yet when we come to be filled up in eternity, we shall be marvellous pictures, and our latter end, indeed, shall be greatly increased.—Spurgeon.

I am sure you WILL aid us in these ways. It will save us much PERPLEXING LABOR. We will do OUR best to have your communications appear well in the paper.

IN LOVE, ED.

SCOFFERS, OR CHRIST NOT WANTED.

From the commencement of the Saviour's ministry on earth until this hour, the bitter tones of derision have not ceased to mingle with the prayers and anthems of the church. Christ's earliest teachings were met by the sarcastic criticism: "Is not this the carpenter's son? Is not his mother called Mary? and his brethren James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas? And they were offended in him." And when he was expiating the world's guilt in the blood and agony of a tragical death, they that passed by reviled him, wagging their heads." Nor did our Lord's personal exit from among his enemies abate at all the relentless hatred which his ministry of love and sacrifice had awakened. The early church was made to drink of the cup, mingled with gall, that had been pressed to the lips of her crucified Lord. For nearly three hundred years, wading in the blood of her martyrs, she was the object of universal scorn. During the medieval period, the real followers of the Nazarene were swept away by popular contempt—through fiery torture and death—as fast as they sprung up. The opening of the Reformation was hailed by a storm of insolent ridicule and mockery. And the great Advent movement—the proclamation of Christ's personal and imminent appearing—has provoked afresh the old spirit of jealousy, hatred and reproach which sent the Son of God to a felon's death, and has reddened the path of the church, through the ages, with Christian blood.

But the scoffers and the scoffing of to-day are peculiar. Adventists and Adventism constitute, chiefly, the butt of ridicule. And this derision of our Lord's appearing is, in itself, a sign of the advent near. The Holy Ghost, in the words of St. Peter, long ago predicted just this kind of criticism; "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." 2 Peter 3: 3, 4.

This language is very suggestive as well as descriptive. Who are these scoffers of "the last days?" Not the common masses of wicked men. They do not reason—as in the language quoted—from the stability of nature "since the fathers fell asleep" to the conclusion that the "promise of his coming" is a failure. They do not reason upon this class of subjects at all. They may jeer and persecute, but they do not reason. Nor are St. Peter's scoffers the learned skeptics of this age. They regard the whole matter with scientific contempt; holding, as Mr. Darwin said, that "Christ and science have no relation to each other, except in as far as the habit of scientific investigation makes a man cautious about accepting any proof."

But these "last day" scoffers are persons somewhat familiar with the Scriptures, and know that Christ's return is promised; and their reasoning is that the stability of nature "since the fathers fell asleep" is evidence that the "promise of his coming," in any sense that would disturb the present physical order of things, has failed; and their words are pointed with a tone of contempt and ridicule, as though some class of people had been ignorantly looking for the promised coming, in a visible manner and for literal purposes, and had been disappointed. And, moreover, their argument seems to have been drawn out by some proclamation of "His coming," the force of which they desire to controvert. We conclude, therefore, that St. Peter's prediction describes a class of men who stand at the head of religious society, and dictate religious sentiment.

How exactly and strikingly the prediction of the apostle characterizes the present time! About half a century ago a world-wide proclamation began to be made of Christ's personal, literal appearing at hand, based on the fulfillment of prophecy and the occurring New Testament "signs." The first effect upon the popular mind was profound and startling. Hundreds of ministers in the different denominations accepted the message as from God, and went forth with the cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" Many pulpits were thrown open, and the people everywhere were anxious to hear the evidences of the immediately approaching judgment. The Holy Spirit's power attended the preaching of the word in a wonderful manner. The pentecostal unction rested on all who believed. Thousands and tens of thousands of wicked men "exceedingly feared and quaked," and many were converted. It seemed for a time that the grand proclamation would sweep around the world. Of Mr. Miller's preaching in Lansingburg, N. Y., it was written by one who was present: "I have never witnessed so powerful an effect in any place, as in this, on all who heard. I am of the opinion that not less than one hundred persons who held infidel sentiments are brought to believe in the Bible. Infidelity is dumb, as if frightened, and converts are many."—History Advent Message, p. 66.

And so it was in hundreds of other places. But, as concerning the first advent, so now, bitter and relentless opposition soon arose, having its origin in and drawing its chief strength from the hostile criticism of the pulpit. The message was denounced as essentially fanatical, a disturbance of the peace of the church, and every way injurious to Christian society. The pulpit was seconded, largely, by the religious press; and opposition became general, violent, and sometimes scandalous. This, we believe, was the beginning of the scoffing described in 2 Pet. 3: 3, 4. And from that time to the present the doctrine of Christ's personal advent at hand has not ceased to be the subject of popular religious contempt.

Are not these "scoffers" the same class that Christ denounced in Matt. 24: 48–51: "But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to smite his fellow-servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken; the lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of, and shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion and gnashing of teeth."

These "evil servants" only say, "My lord delayeth his coming." But it is very clear that their wish is father to their words, for they "smite their fellow servants"—those servants who believe and teach the Lord's coming at hand—"and eat and drink with the drunken." And it is remarkable that Christ predicts the appearance of these "evil servants" in the period of the special signs of his immediate coming; and Peter locates them in the "last days." We think their identity is as certain as their doom is terrible.

The truth is—sad and painful truth—Christ is not wanted in this world. When he came in his first advent he was regarded as an intruder, and put away as quickly as possible—by bloody hands. The dominant religious sentiment of that time acknowledged the need of no such Christ as he. And great Christendom of to-day is fond of a Christ afar off; but with a personal Jesus coming soon to reign literally on earth they will have nothing to do. Of such a Christ the cry still is, "Away with him!" Nevertheless, "Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation."

Awfully will the doom of the judgment day fall on many classes of unsaved men; but none will wail with deeper anguish than the "EVIL SERVANTS" who seek to smother the awakened apprehensions of the world with contemptuous scoffing at the "promise of his coming."

WARS AND RUMORS OF WARS.

Once more the war-clouds of the East are heading up over Khartoum. The popular belief that the British forces would make an easy advance, and form an uncontested connection with Gen. Gordon is likely to be dispelled. The present indications are that much hard fighting will be experienced before Khartoum is reached. The latest advices are to the effect that a hundred thousand rebels are concentrating at that point; and that the False Prophet is not intimidated, but rather aroused by the advance of an English army.

What bloody struggles may yet be witnessed in that land of ancient prophecy no one can tell. But this we know, that "wars and rumors of wars" will not cease to agitate the nations until the Prince of life shall come and conquer a universal peace.

Since writing the above the report comes that Khartoum has fallen and Gen. Gordon is in the hands of the rebels. If this prove to be true, the event will make a profound sensation throughout Europe, and be likely to result in the overthrow of the Gladstone ministry. So the end hastens.

THE ERA OF PERFECTION.

Said the apostle: "When that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away." This is an era of imperfection in many respects, but is to be succeeded by a perfect age. Redemption is due the church—"redemption of our body," "redemption of the purchased possession," so long promised to the faithful. Then death shall be succeeded by life unending, sorrow be exchanged for sacred gladness, weeping be turned into rejoicing, trouble give place to peace, and sickness surrender to health. Here we have friends, but are not free from enemies. Here we may have righteousness, but be surrounded by sin. Here we have pleasure, but mingled with pain. Here ecstacy is often bedimmed by tears. Yes, this fallen world is full of imperfections in spite of the righteousness within its limits.

But "the world to come" will be one of perfection—tearless, painless, sorrowless, graveless, and deathless, as well as sinless; and the now death-bound saints, then liberated by Almighty power, will all be there as real intelligences, alive and happy forever. The meetings, the greetings, the rejoicings to be experienced on that radiant shore of immortality, will surpass human imagination. It will be a scene of absolute perfection and of perpetual satisfaction. And it is so soon to be realized. May we be sharers. W. S.

CONTENTIOUS DEVOTION.

Meetings of devotion can, by a display of blind zeal, be turned into a channel of contention, with detrimental results. A prayer meeting should never be perverted by transforming it into a debating school. Some of our brethren are so enthused with the spirit of Bible theology in conflict with the prevailing opinions of the various churches in our land, that when they attend one of their prayer meetings, and hear remarks dropped that are not in harmony with the truth, deem it their duty then and there to combat the error, and thus turn the meeting out of its channel, and render themselves obnoxious, and thus forestall the good that they might otherwise have accomplished at a proper time. While it is not right either to countenance error, or to smother the truth, it is possible to possess a zeal not tempered with wisdom.

There is a right time as well as a right way in which to let our light shine on matters of contested faith; and certainly an effort to inaugurate a theological warfare in a prayer meeting under the supervision of those opposed to our faith, is not the wisest way to reach the desired result; not even if they seem to provoke a controversy by making us a target in their meetings. It is often better to receive their shots and reserve our fire till we can do execution; and it is sometimes a greater proof of bravery to reserve our fire than to waste our powder prematurely. In such a meeting devotion should be the object, and we can act in that department there, and at a proper time call attention to the errors we wish to rectify. Contentious devotion is not productive of the greatest benefit, either to those who inaugurate it or those who witness it. You can generally let your light shine in such meetings without direct antagonism, at least to some extent; but if repelled, better absent yourselves than to be the author of contentious devotion. W. SIGNS OF BABYLON'S FALL.

In the 13th chapter of Isaiah, the prophet presents the "burden of Babylon," saying among other things, "The sun shall be darkened in his going forth, and the moon shall not cause her light to shine. . . . Behold, I will stir up the Medes against them. . . . And Babylon, the glory of kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency, shall be as when God overthrew Sodom." Vs. 1, 10, 17, 19. [illegible] sun and moon here specified were predicted solar and lunar eclipses to precede the campaign of the Medes against Babylon. We do not know whether this is the true solution, or whether the language is poetic; but if the prophet meant to affirm that the harbingers of this Medo-Persian campaign against Babylon, should be a solar and lunar eclipse, it would have a bearing on chronology.

The siege of Babylon, according to history, lasted about two years. Usher places its fall in B. C. 538, and the beginning of the campaign B. C. 540; while we place its fall B. C. 488, and the beginning of the siege B. C. 490. But in B. C. 540 Babylon saw no eclipses, when they should then have been seen by Usher's count, if indeed ordinary eclipses are meant; but in 490 both the sun and the moon were eclipsed at Babylon, the former about 7 digits on the 29th of April, and the latter, [illegible] Oct. [illegible]. This was about the beginning of the two years' siege—just the time for the signs of the coming of the Medes, to be given, who should cause its fall. W. S.

LETTER FROM INDIA.

Nagercoil, Aug. 26th, 1884.

To H. H. TUCKER, Cor. Sec. A. A. Mission Society:—My Dear Bro. in Christ,—Your kind letters dated April 9th and July 9th safely reached my hands, and I feel very sorry, as I could not answer them earlier. I regularly receive all the packets of the Quarterly Journal of Prophecy and the World's Crisis, which are sent to my address by the Adv. Chris. Pub. Society in Boston, and most of them have been scattered over various places in South India and Ceylon. Both Christians and Hindus take much interest in reading the Quarterly Journal and other English pamphlets and tracts.

Yesterday I had a conversation with a Christian friend who came from Trevandrum. In the course of his conversation he related the following report: "Mr. B. D. (one of my tract distributors) is very busily engaged in circulating the Quarterly Journal and other tracts among the educated Hindus and Euraseans who are numerous there. Some of the Roman Catholic Euraseans and Protestants, and even some Hindus, read no other books on Sundays but the Quarterly Journal. Every day when the office is open the clerks crowd before Mr. B. D.'s house to get these pamphlets. There is much stir about the doctrines taught in them and the tracts, and chiefly of the second coming of Christ. The demand for the Journal is daily increasing.

When I left Trevandrum some of them wished me to get from you the No. 8 of the Journal, and other tracts you have got newly. I gave them a packet of Bro. I. C. Wellcome's tracts, to be delivered to Mr. B. D. The Quarterly Journal No. 8 is not yet come to my hands. The enclosed letter received from Mr. B. D. a few months ago will prove how these pamphlets and tracts are made use of in Trevandrum and other places. Arrangements have been made with Bro. J. Spence for republishing the Quarterly Journal in Tamil. I have completed the translation of No. 6, January, 1884, and sent the manuscript to him, and I hope the printed Tamil copies will be soon out for circulation. The next number also will before long be put into Tamil. May God bless them for the eternal benefit of many in the Tamil country.

You will ask me, "Do you publish the Bible Banner?" I am thankful to state that God, in spite of all oppositions and difficulties, has helped us to continue the publication of the Tamil Bible Banner monthly. It is just two years since the first number of the Bible Banner on the Life and Advent truths was printed and sent out. During this short time 31 Tamil tracts have been prepared, of which 30,500 copies of 216,200 pages have been published and extensively circulated. Again, I feel very thankful to say that during the same time 17,670 copies of English pamphlets, tracts, etc., were received from the Life and Advent believers in America and England, most of them being sent by Bro. I. C. Wellcome of Yarmouth and the A. C. P. Society in Boston, Mass., U. S., for free circulation.

Our monthly, the Bible Banner, and some other tracts have been published in Tamil and Telugu. I am now trying to get them put into Malayalam, for the benefit of the numerous people who speak that language four hundred miles along the western coast. This is the language of the inhabitants of Travancore, Cochin, and the Malabar districts, among whom there are more than 400,000 Syrian Christians and numerous Roman Catholic and Protestant churches. Now only a few of them are benefited by our English Tamil tracts, and if they be published in that dialect they will be spread more extensively and will reach the hands of thousands of Christians and heathens, and may be the means of enlightening their benighted minds with the glorious truths of the gospel. I have got competent friends at Trevandrum who are quite willing to publish them in Malayalam if I could send them means to do it. Unless some kind friends whom God has made the stewards of his gold and silver in America and England come forward to help us in this most important and noble cause, our anxious desires and attempts will have to be abandoned.

Friends of the Advent Christian Publication Society, I appeal to you for aid. God is blessing our work here. May he stir your [illegible] inclined to help us. [illegible] to [illegible] for restoring me to my [illegible] has enabled me with his [illegible] work with more energy and zeal. [illegible] thank you for taking so much interest in our work by your prayers, sympathies, and attempts to help us. May God bless you abundantly now and hereafter. [illegible] brother in hope of eternal [illegible], C. MASILLAMANI.
